1955, December — Henry Holt publishes Donald Keyhoe's Flying Saucer Conspiracy, which continues to criticize the "silence group" within the US military for its conspiracy to cover up knowledge of UFOs. Keyhoe argues that 'the United States has developed protocols in dealing with UFOs and actively undertakes measures to silence critics and hide the existence of extraterrestrial life. (Keyhoe, FS Conspiracy, Henry Holt, 1955; Powell, Keyhoe, 153)

1955, December 5 — Life magazine publishes an article that contains the UFO shapes from Project Blue Book Special Report No. 14. ("The Strange Shapes Seen in the Sky," Life, December 5, 1955, pp. 177–178; Loren E. Gross, UFOs: A History, 1955, September 16th–December 31st, The Author, 1993, pp. 104–106)

1955, December 11 — 9:00 p.m. Near Jacksonville, Florida, two airline pilots and ground observers see a fast-maneuvering, orange-red, round object, with ground radar tracking. Two USN jets on a practice night-flying mission are vectored to the object by a Naval Air Station Jacksonville controller. On approach the object suddenly rises up to 30,000 feet then dives back down in a circle, buzzing the jets. (Sparks, p. 232; UFO Ev, p. 32; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, A History, 1955, September 15th–December 31st, The Author, 1993, p. 110)

1955, December 11 — Wilbert Smith writes to Keyhoe, saying he has not been in touch with him for a long time "at the request of the saucer people themselves." (Powell, Keyhoe, 125–126)

1955, December 21 — 11:00 p.m. Roberta Vesta Jacobs sees a round, bright gold, domed disc climbing above her farmyard near Caribou, Maine. It rotates, hovers silently, and accelerates. (Sparks, p. 232; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 43–45)

1956

1956 — French ufologist Aimé Michel publishes The Truth about Flying Saucers, one of the best early books on UFOs, originally published in French in 1954. (Aimé Michel, The Truth about Flying Saucers, Criterion, 1956; "First Read: Aimé Michel's 'The Truth about Flying Saucers,'" Magonia, February 25, 2012)

1956 — Gray Barker publishes They Knew Too Much about Flying Saucers, a bestselling book about the supposed Albert K. Bender mystery and his encounter with three men in black. (Gray Barker, They Knew Too Much about Flying Saucers, University Books, 1956; David Halperin, "'They Knew Too Much': The Book That (Almost) Scared Me under My Bed," Ms.Horror.com, March 16, 2017; Clark III 178, 190, 727; Clark IV 214, 225, 808)

1956 — Morris K. Jessup publishes The UFO Annual, an anthology of newspaper and magazine articles about UFOs, and UFO and the Bible, the first book-length attempt to connect biblical miracles with space visitors. Jessup is the first writer to use the term "ufology" in his introduction (dated December 31, 1955). (Morris K. Jessup, The UFO Annual, Citadel, 1956; Clark III 106, 634–635; Clark IV 133, 696–697)

1956 — Soviet polar aviator Valentin Akkuratov is flying a Tupolev Tu-4 aircraft near Cape Morris Jesup, Greenland, performing strategic ice reconnaissance. Dropping down below the clouds, he sees an unknown object moving on the port side parallel to his course. It looks like a "large pearl-colored lens with wavy, pulsating edges." Thinking it is a US aircraft, Akkuratov heads back into the clouds. After flying for 40 minutes to the southeast, the cloud cover ends and Akkuratov encounters it again. He decides to approach the object, which changes course and paces the airplane at the same speed. After 15–18 minutes, the UFO sharply alters course, speeds ahead, and rises quickly until it disappears. (Felix Ziegel, "Unidentified Flying Objects," Soviet Life, no. 137 (February 1968): 27–29; Good Above, pp. 226–227)

1956 — Fishermen at lake Ozero Blagodati, Primorsky Krai, Russia, allegedly see an enormous silvery object with an apparent diameter of 4,900 feet rapidly flying above them at 1,960 feet. It resembles a hat with red portholes around its rim and is accompanied by loud grinding sounds and black smoke. The object emits numerous thin metal threads resembling horse hairs that the fishermen pick up the next day. The object crashes into the Sea of Japan. (Stonehill and Mantle, Russia's USO Secrets, Flying Disk, 2020, pp. 113–114)

1956 or 1957 — 7:45 p.m. W. J. Kyncy is aboard the destroyer USS Maddox in the North Pacific between Midway Island and Japan. He and some 30 other sailors on the stern see a steady orange light coming toward them at about 50 mph. It stops for 2 minutes about 1,300 feet away at about 400 feet altitude. It begins moving again at 35 mph then blinks out after 5–10 seconds. ("Correspondence," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 3, no. 4 (Aug./Sept. 1982): 6)

1956, January — The US Army Chemical Corps begins classified human experiments at its Edgewood Arsenal facility at the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland. The Medical Research Volunteer Program (1956–1975) is driven by intelligence requirements and the need for new and more effective interrogation techniques. Overall, about 7,000 soldiers take part in these experiments that involve exposure to more than 250 different chemicals. Some of the volunteers exhibit symptoms at the time of exposure to these agents but long-term follow-up is not planned as part of the Department of Defense studies. The experiments are abruptly terminated by the Army in late 1975 amid an atmosphere of scandal and recrimination as lawmakers accuse researchers of questionable ethics. Many official government reports and civilian lawsuits follow in the wake of the controversy. The chemical agents include VX, sarin, mustard gas, atropine, scopolamine, 2-PAM chloride, LSD, PCP, cannabinoids, riot control agents, alcohol, and caffeine. (Wikipedia, "Edgewood Arsenal human experiments")

1956, January — Edward J. Ruppelt's Report on Unidentified Flying Objects is published. His candid opinions about UFOs contradict many of the positions taken on UFOs by the Air Force. He has personally seen the Estimate of the Situation, he confirms the existence of Fournet's motion study, and he first describes the basic contours of the

Robertson Panel. (Edward J. Ruppelt, The Report on Unidentified Flying Objects, Doubleday, 1956; Michael D. Swords, [Review], JUFOS 3 (1991): 179–183; Powell, Keyhoe, 154–164; Graff 122–124)

1956, January 8 — 7:00 a.m. Four Chilean researchers on Robert Island, in the South Shetland Islands, Antarctica, see two silent, metallic objects hovering in the sky in an upright position. One is almost on the meridian, while the other is about 30° from it, reflecting the sun's rays. Each has the apparent diameter of the full moon. Around 9:00 a.m., the lower object shifts to a horizontal position, shoots off to the west, loses its metallic luster, and makes an acute angle turn without changing speed. Then it performs some zigzag maneuvers, braking sharply and accelerating instantly, then returns to its original position after 5 minutes. Shortly afterward, the second object conducts similar maneuvers for 3 minutes. The team's Geiger counter indicates that the ambient radioactivity has increased to a dangerous 40 times the background. They take several photos, color and black-and-white, of the UFOs. The objects remain in the sky, but at dusk the researchers walk north along the coast and take refuge in a moraine. They see the objects moving past the summit of a mountain and shooting a flash of light. During the night, some cirrus clouds allow the team to determine that the objects are at an altitude of nearly 5 miles and their length is around 500 feet. At 11:00 p.m. a snowstorm sets in and clouds cover the objects. The Geiger counter indicates diminished radiation. 1956, January 9 — The CIA's Applied Science Division takes on the job of holding UFO reports. (ClearIntent, p. 135)

1956, January 13 — UFO researcher Morris K. Jessup receives a letter from someone in New Kensington, Pennsylvania, who calls himself Carlos Miguel Allende [a pseudonym of Carl Allen], who alludes to a US Navy experiment to make a destroyer invisible in October 1943 [the bogus Philadelphia Experiment]. He writes another letter postmarked May 25 that suggests hypnosis or truth serum might bring out more details. (Wikipedia, "Philadelphia Experiment"; Andrew H. Hochheimer, "The Carl Allen Letters," The Philadelphia Experiment from A–Z, January 31, 2001; Clark III 95, 598; Clark IV 122, 657–658)

1956, January 15 — 8:00 p.m. An object the apparent size of a washtub is seen falling into the sea 150 feet offshore from Busan, South Korea, by large numbers of townspeople. The glow continues for an hour and a half before the object sinks. Korean and American military authorities are alerted. Military Police Cpl. Ben Elliot observes the glow, which resembles burning alcohol or benzene. (Samuel Norman, "Recent UFOs over Japan," Fate 9, no. 6 (June 1956): 22–24; Carl Feindt, "Report #127," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 182–184)

1956, January 18? — Four people at the beach at Los Caracas, Venezuela, watch a pulsating red light fly out from behind a hill and land in the sea. It vanishes but is later seen floating on the surface. Thinking an airplane has crashed, one of the witnesses attempts to reach the spot with some other men in a motorboat, but the engine fails. The Coast Guard, which conducts a 15-hour search for the object, has to tow the boat back to shore the following day. ("The Venezuelan Sea-Saucer," CRIFO Orbit 2, no. 12 (March 2, 1956): 4–5; "Recent Sightings," APRO Bulletin, July 1956, p. 9, 10; Dolan, USO1, 184–185)

1956, January 22 — Jonathan N. Leonard reviews Harold T. Wilkins's Flying Saucers Uncensored, Keyhoe's Flying Saucer Conspiracy, and Ruppelt's Report on UFOs in the New York Times. He calls Wilkins a mystic, Keyhoe "repetitious and unconvincing," and Ruppelt (most unfairly) "the longest and dullest of the current crop of saucer books." (Jonathan N. Leonard, "Visitors from Space," New York Times Book Review, January 22, 1956, p. 25)

1956, January 31 — 3:24 p.m. Kentucky National Guard pilot Lt. Col. Lee J. Merkel is flying an F-51 Mustang out of Standiford Field [now Louisville International Airport] in Louisville, Kentucky, on a maintenance test flight. His aircraft crashes 10 miles north of Bedford, Indiana, following some confusing information from various sources about an unknown radar target or visual observation in the vicinity. ("Recent UFO Sightings," CSI News Letter, no. 14 (May 6, 1956): 3; ClearIntent, pp. 62–63; Good Need, pp. 215–216; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, A History: 1956, January–April, The Author, 1993, p. 21)

1956, February — A survey of 100,000 residents of France finds that 53% think UFOs are extraterrestrial. ("Le Referendum d'Europe no. 1: 53% des Français croient que les soucoupes volantes viennent d'une autre planéte," France-soir, February 25, 1958, p. 8; Eghigian, After, p. 108)

1956, February 9 — 1:30 a.m. Patrolmen Marvin Poer and John Freeland see a ball of fire plunge behind the breakwater at Redondo Beach, California. It bobs on the water's surface before sinking into 15 feet of water some 300 feet off the shore. Five county lifeguards row out to look for it and retrieve a US Army Signal Corps battery light that was dropped from an airplane. ("Sea Cools Mystery of Hot Disk," Los Angeles (Calif.) Mirror-News, February 9, 1956, p. 8; "Sea-Saucer or Searchlight?" CRIFO Orbit 2, no. 12 (March 2, 1956): 4)

1956, February 9 — In a memo, "Responsibility for Unidentified Flying Objects," the CIA's Applied Science Division retains files for incoming raw reports that might provide information on foreign weapons R&D. Other (more significant?) reports are forwarded to the Fundamental Sciences Area for review of information on foreign science developments. Still others are to be destroyed. (Central Intelligence Agency, Applied Science Division, "Responsibility for 'Unidentified Flying Objects,'" Memorandum for the Record, February 9, 1956; ClearIntent, pp. 135–136)

1956, February 12 — 10:55 p.m. Two F-89D fighters flying at 20,000 feet, one crewed by pilot Bowen and radar observer Crawford, suddenly see a green and red object 40 miles southeast of Goose Bay AFB [now CFB Goose Bay], Labrador. It rapidly circles their jet, and the other fighter tracks it on radar but cannot see it visually. About 15 minutes later, operators at Goose Bay paint a stationary target about 40 miles southwest of the base. The two pilots vector toward the object and obtain radar contact, but it vanishes when they get within 8 miles. (NICAP, "Green & Red Object Circles Jet, Tracked on Radar (BBU 3969)"; Sparks, p. 233; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, A History: 1956, January–April, The Author, 1993, p. 41; Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, p. 262)

1956, February 17 — 10:50 p.m. Air traffic controllers at Orly Airport, Paris, France, see a target appear on their radar screens that is twice the size of a conventional aircraft. It cruises around, hovers, and accelerates at fantastic speeds, and is tracked for a total of 4 hours. When it first appears on radar it is directly above Gometz-le-Châtel, Seine et Oise, and 30 seconds later it is 19 miles away, having moved at nearly 2,500 mph. A second, smaller target appears, identified as an Air France DC-3 airliner flying over the Les Mureaux military base, Yvelines, at 4,500 feet (800 feet lower than the UFO). Orly radios the pilot to alert him to the unidentified target. Radio Officer Beaupertuis sees the object through a window on the starboard side of the plane—enormous in size, indistinct in outline, and lit in some areas with a red glow. Capt. Michel Desavoye confirms the sighting, saying he and the crew watched the object for 30 seconds and are certain it is no civil airliner. The sighting duration is nearly 3 hours. (NICAP, "Large UFO Tracked on Ground Radar"; "A Saucer Shows Up over Paris and Creates a Stir in a Radar Room and a Cockpit," Flying Saucer Review 2, no. 2 (March/April 1956): 3; Patrick Gross, "Orly Airport, France, February 1956")

1956, February 18 — Stringfield receives a letter from Lord Hugh Dowding that says he doesn't think there is an official "British attitude to UFOs." (Stringfield, Situation Red, Fawcett Crest, 1977, p. 165)

1956, February 25 — In the review article "The Latest on the Flying Saucer," Saturday Review editors ask five people—Harold T. Wilkins, Donald E. Keyhoe, Donald H. Menzel, Edward J. Ruppelt, and Jackie Gleason—whether they ever saw a saucer and what they think they are. Gleason writes that he never saw one, but he thinks "it is almost certain that their jumping off place is the moon. I think that their purpose in visiting us is to get geographic information and to find out all that they would have to contend with if they decide to make an absolute communication with us." ("The Latest on the Flying Saucer," Saturday Review, February 25, 1956; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, A History: 1956, January–April, The Author, 1993, pp. 43–44)

1956, February 25 — The Special Weapons Study Unit of Aviation Studies International Ltd. In London, England, provides a summary of anti-gravity research (electrogravitics systems) to Wright-Patterson AFB near Dayton, Ohio. It mentions that researchers at the Glenn Martin Company claim that gravity control can be achieved by 1962, but only with a "Manhattan District type of effort." ("Electrogravitics Systems," Special Weapons Study Unit, London, February 25, 1956)

1956, March — Mechanix Illustrated publishes a story on the Avro Canada MX-1794 (Y-2, or Silver Bug) vertical take-off gyroplane under development by the US Air Force. The cover proclaims, "U.S. Air Force Reveals Our Flying Saucer." Through 1958, Avro spends $2.5 million and the USAF $5.4 million funding the project. Numerous models are built, and wind-tunnel testing is undertaken at MIT and Wright-Patterson AFB. The design includes eight Armstrong Siddeley Viper turbojet engines, a very large center rotor/impeller with Lundstrom compressor turbines, with the cockpit mounted in the top center. Control is achieved through eight small exhausts at the outer edge, directed either through the top or bottom, in addition to the main turbine exhaust through the bottom center of the craft. A multiengine test rig is built and tested in 1956, resulting in powerful thrust, a great deal of noise, and vibrations. In 1957, the USAF provides additional funding to extend the project, by then highly classified and designated as Weapon System 606A. The concept developed is for a circular-winged, supersonic aircraft. Over 1,000 hours of wind-tunnel testing are performed. Drawings developed by Avro show an aircraft that appears to be a merging of a flying saucer with more conventional fuselage shapes—a tailless aircraft with circular wings. Nope, Canada," Wired, July 5, 2001; Good Need, p. 215; Joe Pappalardo, "Declassified: America's Secret Flying Saucer," Popular Mechanics, February 11, 2013)

1956, March 10 — British pilot Peter Twiss reaches an official airspeed of 1,132 mph in a Fairey Delta 2 over Chichester, England. (Wikipedia, "Peter Twiss")

1956, March 16 — Stringfield receives a letter from Gen. John A. Samford that ends his affiliation with ADC. (Stringfield, Situation Red, Fawcett Crest, 1977, p. 14)

1956, Spring — The Flying Saucer Discussion Group begins meeting on a more-or-less monthly basis at the YWCA in Washington, D.C. It is begun by Mrs. Walton C. "Clara" John, the publisher of a mimeographed zine called The Little Listening Post, which often covers UFOs. ("'Toward a Broader Understanding…': The Story of How NICAP Began," UFO Investigator, October 1971, p. 2)

1956, April — USAF Capt. George T. Gregory succeeds Capt. Charles Hardin as director of Project Blue Book. (Sparks, p. 14; Jacobs, The UFO Controversy, Indiana University, 1975, pp. 142–144; Clark III 919, 937; Clark IV 1029, 1047)

1956, April — An annotated copy of the paperback edition of Morris K. Jessup's The Case for the UFO (1955) is sent in a manila envelope from Seminole, Texas, to Adm. Frederick R. Furth, chief of the Office of Naval Research. The annotations are written in three different colors of ink, apparently by three persons, A, B, and Jemi, who claim to know a great deal about the UFO intelligences. They mention space people, underwater cities, force fields, and much more. The book falls into the possession of Maj. Darrell L. Ritter, USMC aeronautical project officer at ONR, who brings it to the attention of ONR Capt. Sidney Sherby and ONR Projects Officer Cmdr. George W. Hoover, who become interested and get permission (as long as it does not involve official naval personnel) to send the copy to the Varo Manufacturing Company, in Garland, Texas, which has contracts with the military. Varo publishes 25 spiral-bound copies of the book in black and red ink, which shows the annotations. Meanwhile, Jessup has been receiving at least two strange letters (January 13 and May 25, 1956) from someone calling himself Carlos Miguel Allende, which claim that as a result of a strange experiment at sea utilizing principles of Einstein's Field Theory, a destroyer (identified by some as the USS Eldridge and others by the USS Engstrom, which were not in the Philadelphia Navy Yard at the time) and all its crew became invisible in October 1943, but the sailors showed side effects. Allende says he has witnessed all of this. Sherby talks to Jessup about the Varo edition; Jessup isn't much interested but tells him about the Allende letters, which talk about the same things as the annotations and are obviously written by the same person. Gray Barker's Saucerian Press publishes the Varo edition in July 1972. Sometime in the 1970s, Carlos Allende appears at APRO headquarters and confesses that the whole annotations thing was a hoax, but he surfaces a few years later saying that the CIA coerced him into saying it was a hoax. In the late 1970s, Robert A. Goerman identifies Allende as Carl Allen, who lives near him in Pennsylvania. In the October 1980 issue of Fate, Goerman explains the entire mess, saying that Allen had written all three of the annotation types. Bill Moore and Charles Berlitz take the whole thing seriously enough to write The Philadelphia Experiment in 1979, which links the force fields back to T. Townsend Brown, later the founder of NICAP. (Morris K. Jessup, The Case for the UFO, annotated Varo ed., Saucerian, 1972; Wikipedia, "Philadelphia Experiment"; Ivan T. Sanderson, "Jessup and the Allende Case," Pursuit 1, no. 4 (September 30, 1968): 8–10; "Allende Letters a Hoax," APRO Bulletin, July/Aug. 1969, pp. 1, 3; William L. 1956, April 3 — Keyhoe writes a lengthy letter to Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.), criticizing Air Force secrecy, deconstructing Blue Book Special Report no. 14, and requesting a congressional hearing. Keyhoe asks Byrd to forward his letter to the Air Force for a response, but he forwards it himself anyway, as does Byrd. The Air Force's Gen. Joe W. Kelly responds, dismissing both Keyhoe and UFOs. ("Maj. Keyhoe's Eleven Unanswered Questions," Saucers 4, no. 2 (June 1956): 2–5; Swords 222–223)

1956, April 4 — T. Townsend Brown and his family in their home in Leesburg, Virginia, are discussing flying saucers and a national organization to study them. They are joined by a close friend, Helen Brasee Towt, who suggests the name, National Investigations Committee on Aerial Phenomena. (Powell, Keyhoe, 168)

1956, April 5–May 10 — Some 156 overflight missions into Soviet territory by RB-47 reconnaissance aircraft from Thule Air Base in Greenland begin in Operation Home Run. They fly over the North Pole and into Siberia, probing for electronic intelligence. (Wikipedia, "Project HOMERUN"; R. Cargill Hall and Clayton D. Laurie, eds., Early

1956, April 7 — Elizabeth Klarer returns to Flying Saucer Hill southwest of Rosetta, KwaZulu-Natal, South Africa, drawn by a strange compulsion. The spaceship is waiting for her, and Akon takes her in his hands and says, "Not afraid this time?" He leads her on board the craft, which she learns also carries a second alien, who looks much like Akon except he is darker and more muscular. As the ship first rises into space, Akon says he has been watching her for some time. He lets her look at the earth below through a viewing lens that also has x-ray capability. The saucer goes to a "mother ship" filled with friendly space people. At one point a huge video image projected on the wall allows her to view scenes from their home planet, Meton, in the Alpha Centauri system. They serve her a vegetarian meal. Klarer and Akon begin a lifelong romantic attachment that includes sexual activity. 1956, April 8 — 10:15 p.m. Capt. Raymond E. Ryan, First Officer William Neff, flight attendant Phyllis Reynolds, and many passengers take off on American Airlines Flight 715 from Albany, New York, heading north then nearly due west at 260 mph and 6,000 feet north of Schenectady, when a brilliant white light about 2–3 miles away is spotted about 90° to the left appearing like an airliner heading in to land at Albany. The white light moves about 90° to dead ahead position about 8–10 miles away at high speed, estimated at about 800–1,000 mph, where it changes color to orange and seems to block the airliner's path or risk collision. It disappears briefly and reappears as an orange light again but standing still ahead of the airliner to the west. The Convair airliner contacts Griffiss AFB [now Griffiss International Airport], Rome, New York, where controllers ask Ryan to turn his lights off and on to help identify aircraft. He is told the airliner is seen and the orange UFO are to the south. The airliner is ordered to maintain course to follow the UFO to the west, skipping its scheduled landing at Syracuse after nearly 30 minutes of following the object. The promised fighter jet interception is never seen. The object disappears at high speed to the northwest towards Oswego, New York. (NICAP, "Air Force Requests Plane Loaded with Passengers to Chase UFO"; Sparks, p. 236; "Airliner Chases Bright Light Miles across the State," *Buffalo (N.Y.) Ryan and Co-Pilot Neff," Ufology: A Primer in Audio, 1938–1959, November 21, 2013)

1956, April 9 — CIA agent Joseph Bryan III writes to Ruppelt, saying that while he served as special assistant to Air Force Secretary Thomas Finletter, he tried to "have him prepare a statement for release when communication was established with a Saucer." Finletter declines to do so. (Michael David Hall and Wendy Ann Connors, Captain Edward J. Ruppelt: Summer of the Saucers, Rose Press International, 2000, p. 10)

1956, April 13 — 1:20 a.m. A ham radio operator at an unknown location picks up a US Navy communication regarding a large luminous object that plunges into the sea about one-half mile to the north, presumably in the Pacific Ocean. The transmitting ship or airplane cruises in circles around the spot but can find no debris or trace of the object. ("Another Navy Report," Akualele Research Group Bulletin 2, no. 5 (August 1, 1957): 1; Dolan, USO1, 186–188)

1956, April 16 — An interview with Ryan and Neff is taped on the TV show Meet the Millers. They claim that Griffiss AFB "asked us our next point of landing and to identify the aircraft. I told them Syracuse and identified the flight number. Then they told us: 'Abandon that next landing temporarily. Maintain your course and altitude. We're sending two jets to intercept the object.'" About the UFO, Ryan says, "This was absolutely real. I'm convinced there was something fantastic up there." Keyhoe obtains a copy of the tape. (NICAP, [transcript of Meet the Millers program, April 16, 1956]; UFO Ev, pp. 41–42)

1956, April 28 — At the third Giant Rock Interplanetary Spacecraft Convention near Landers, California, contactee Dick Miller plays tape recordings allegedly made by Mon-Ka, a Martian, in which he asks Los Angeles radio stations to shut down for two minutes at 10:30 p.m. on November 7, 1956, so that Mon-Ka can speak from his spacecraft. As a publicity gimmick, two radio stations (KATY [now KYNS] of San Luis Obispo and KBIA of Los Angeles) go off the air at that time, and KTTV in Los Angeles sends up an airplane to watch for the approaching spacecraft. Nothing happens. (Bob Whearley, "Tune in Nov. 7: Mon-ka the Martian Is 'Sposed to Talk," Long Beach (Calif.)

1956, April 28 — In one of the few early instances in which the Roswell incident is mentioned, broadcaster Frank Edwards states, in a question-and-answer session following his talk at the Civilian Saucer Intelligence of New York public meeting at the Pythian Temple, "According to what I was told, they threw troops in a circle all around that place, and would let nobody in for five days." ("Public Meeting of April 28, 1956," Civilian Saucer Intelligence of New York, [Publication], no. 13, pp. 9–10)

1956, May 1 — USAF Gen. Joe W. Kelly writes to Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.) that there is a "total lack of evidence that [UFOs] are interplanetary vehicles." ("The Air Force Answers Keyhoe," Saucers 4, no. 2 (June 1956): 6–7; "How about Those Three Secret Reports, General Kelly?" CSI News Letter, no. 5 (September 21, 1956): 1)

1956, May 1 — Air Force Manual section 190-4 goes into effect. It affects all USAF official press releases, statements to Congress and the public, and publications about UFOs. It requires the Secretary of the Air Force Office of Information to "delete all evidence of UFO reality and intelligent control, which would, of course, contradict the Air Force stand that UFOs do not exist." NICAP is made aware of the regulation in 1962 when former USAF information spokesman Maj. William T. Coleman admits to a NICAP member that Maj. Lawrence J. Tacker's book Flying Saucers and the US Air Force was reviewed under AFM 190-4. ("Air Force Reveals Censorship Controls," UFO Investigator 2, no. 4 (July 1962): 1; "New Air Force Attacks on NICAP," UFO Investigator 2, no. 7 (Jan./Feb. 1963): 3)

1956, May 1 — 7:55 p.m. Koto Ward, a factory worker, along with many others, see a large bright object flying low over the rooftops in Tokyo, Japan. Turuko Kurihara, in a different location, sees a greenish object at 7:59 p.m. The object makes no noise but causes severe distortion on the TV sets in the area. ("'Flying Saucers' over Tokyo," Flying Saucers (N.Z.) 4, no. 2 (Sept. 1956): 18; Schopick, p. 103)

1956, May 3 — Hollywood producer Clarence Greene releases a semi-documentary about the UFO phenomenon in the US, U.F.O. Edward J. Ruppelt, Dewey Fournet, and Albert M. Chop assist in the production. The principal character is Chop, played by Los Angeles Examiner journalist Tom Towers, and examines his career going from skeptical USAF public information officer to Pentagon UFO press spokesman. The film uses professional actor Harry Morgan in a voiceover part; Bert Freed plays an Air Force colonel, and Robert Phillips plays Ruppelt's part in a speaking role. UFO witnesses Delbert Newhouse, Nicholas Mariana, and Willis Sperry play themselves, and Los Angeles policemen stand in for Ruppelt, Fournet, and Gen William Garland. The Air Force carefully monitors its reception and readies itself to counter the film's impact. The documentary analyzes two famous pieces of UFO footage: the Montana film of 1950 and the 1952 UFO Utah film (both shown for the first time in public). It concludes with the famous 1952 Washington, D.C., UFO incident, in which Chop played a central role, and recreates his experiences. At the end of the documentary, Chop states his belief that UFOs are a real, physical phenomenon of unknown origin. 1956, May 4 — 9:30 p.m. Rev. Charles Burmeister, an amateur astronomer, sees five "orange blobs" flying in a U-shape formation east to west at high speed over Marinette, Wisconsin. His son joins him to watch. One more object passes in the same flight path, then a group of six, then one more, followed by another. Blue Book classes the sighting as meteors without even consulting Hynek, who later says that meteors do not fly in formation. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1956 May–July, The Author, 1993, pp. 2–7; Swords 229–230)

1956, May 9 — 11:00 p.m. Jean Frost and Gertie Wynn are waiting for a bus on Water Street in Jacksonville, Florida, when they see two moving lights in the sky that are flashing on and off. After 15 minutes they return in the opposite direction; when almost overhead, they stop suddenly and the lower object merges with the upper one, which then drops earthward at terrific speed until it is only 150 feet above the witnesses. They see that the object has three pulsating white lights on top, is surrounded by an eerie red mist, and seems about 50–75 feet in diameter. A door is visible in the bottom, outlined in red. Just as their bus is approaching, the smaller object is ejected from the larger disc. The bus driver, Wallace L. Marlowe, gets out of the bus and sees the two objects before they ascend at a high speed. (C. W. Fitch, "Strange Disappearances and Pursuing Saucers," APRO Bulletin, March 1959, p. 7)

1956, May 22 — 11:05 p.m. USAF 1st Lt. Earl D. Holwadel and 1st Lt. Curtis Carley are piloting a T-33 jet at 18,000 feet 58 miles northwest of Monroe, Louisiana, when they see a bright light due east. They see it again in the east at 11:15 p.m. Holwadel banks right to the southeast somewhat behind the object, which is now a great distance away. The object suddenly comes straight at them at high speed, passing in front of the T-33 at about 225 feet away. It flashes an intensely bright white light from a "greenhouse-shaped dome" or cockpit window at its front end that lights up the canopy of the T-33. The object is about 30-40 feet long, elliptical in shape, shorter than a C-47 but wider, a small steady red running light in the center, with no wings, only stubby protrusions extending 3-4 feet and 25 feet long on each side. The bottom surface is like steel with ribs extending down 2–4 feet with a wave-like appearance. It moves away then returns at high speed on a westerly course with "fantastic" maneuverability. It never changes flight attitude at any time. (NICAP, "Elliptical Object Comes Straight at T-33"; Sparks, p. 237; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 44–47; Walter N. Webb, "Inside Building 263: A Visit to Blue Book, 1956," IUR 17, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1992): cover, 5)

1956, Summer? — Morris K. Jessup is invited to the Office of Naval Research to examine the mysteriously annotated version of his The Case for the UFO. He becomes convinced that his correspondent Carl Allen has written all or most of it. Capt. Sidney Sherby and Cmdr. Hoover ask for the Allen letters and these are included in a special printing of the annotated book by the Varo Publishing Company of Garland, Texas. In 1969, Allen confesses to APRO that he had written the annotations, but he retracts the confession later. (Andrew H. Hochheimer, "The Varo Edition," The Philadelphia Experiment from A–Z, December 13, 2016; Clark III 95–97; Powell, Keyhoe, 277–278; Clark IV 122–125).

1956, Summer — 11:30 p.m. A cigar-shaped UFO with lighted portholes is seen by two witnesses in the southwest part of Springfield, Illinois. The car driven by one of the witnesses quits, and the UFO seems to affect the traffic lights as well. The object looks slightly smaller than a blimp. After about 30 seconds it moves straight up and disappears. (Michael D. Swords, "The Timmerman Files," IUR 26, no. 4 (Winter 2001–2002): 14, 30)

1956, June (or June 1957) — RNZAF Airman Derek Mansell is a passenger in a Bristol 170 Freighter Mk 31M near Wellington, New Zealand, when the aircraft encounters severe turbulence and its compass and other instruments spin wildly. All communications fail and the engine spurts intermittently for 25 minutes before everything returns to normal. When the Freighter lands at RNZAF Base Ohakea near Bulls, the pilot of a Douglas C-47 Dakota lands and asks them whether they had seen a huge metallic disc about 250 feet in diameter with a blue light on top and a red light on the bottom, which he had observed just above the Freighter pacing it. The Dakota crew apparently took photos, but these have not turned up. After a two-hour debriefing, both crews are told never to discuss the matter. (Good Above, pp. 432–433)

1956, June — 10:00 p.m. Two women are driving north toward New Hampshire, Ohio, when a bright light approaches them from a small wooded area. They stop their car to look at it. The light is attached to a large rectangular object resembling a railroad box car that settles near the ground at the edge of the highway opposite to them about 30 feet away. Suddenly the side of the object facing them lights up from inside with a pale green light and they can see three small entities. One is standing next to a console "operating some kind of controls," and the two others are also active. For 5 minutes, they appear to be observing the women. The entities have dark hair on their heads and arms and are wearing short-sleeved smocks. The object moves up and away toward the southwest and disappears. ("Unreported 1956 CEIII Discovered in Ohio," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 3, no. 3 (June/July 1982): 4–5)

1956, June 6 — 6:30 a.m. A cosmetics salesman named Bierman is driving on US Highway 70 about 3–5 miles west of Banning, California, when he notices an object on his right, about 300 feet away and 100 feet in the air. It first appears silvery and cigar-shaped. Bierman stops his car to watch the object, which moves across the highway in front of him then banks left, changing to a domed-disc shape, somewhat bluish, about 20 feet in diameter. It re-crosses the highway in back of him, circling back to its original position in 8–9 seconds, then zooming away silently at tremendous speed toward the west-northwest. (NICAP, "Domed Disc Maneuvers at CE Range"; Sparks, p. 238; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 46–47)

1956, June 13 — Earth vs. the Flying Saucers, an American black-and-white science fiction film from Columbia Pictures, produced by Charles H. Schneer, directed by Fred F. Sears, starring Hugh Marlowe and Joan Taylor, and with special effects by Ray Harryhausen, is released in Los Angeles. The film's storyline is suggested by Donald E.

Keyhoe's nonfiction Flying Saucers from Outer Space (1953), but bears little resemblance to the content. Keyhoe has sold the rights to Clover Productions in Hollywood. 1956, June 14 — Walter N. Webb visits and interviews Project Blue Book head Capt. George T. Gregory at Wright-Patterson AFB in Ohio. (Walter N. Webb, "Inside Building 263: A Visit to Blue Book, 1956," IUR 17, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1992): 3–5)

1956, June 25 — ATIC's Col. John Eriksen, writing for Secretary of the Air Force Donald A. Quarles, replies to a query from Rep. John E. Moss (D-Calif.), explaining why USAF is not handing out multiple copies of Blue Book Special Report no. 14 (basically it printed 100 copies that were distributed to government agencies) and that it does not intend to withhold UFO information from the public. (Letter, John C. Eriksen to John E. Moss, June 25, 1956; Swords 223)

1956, July — Brinsley Le Poer Trench, 8th Earl of Clancarty, takes over as editor of Flying Saucer Review from Derek Dempster. ("The Editorship," Flying Saucer Review 2, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1956): 2; Clark III 498; Clark IV 547)

1956, July — US parapsychologist Andrija Puharich and Dutch psychic Peter Hurkos accidentally meet Charles Laughead and his wife Lillian in Acámbaro, Guanajuato, Mexico, both groups in town to view the famous figurines of Waldemar Julsrud, during the time that Hurkos is being studied by Puharich at his medical facility in Glen Cove, Maine. The Laugheads are convinced that Puharich and Hurkos are space people come to assist them, based on the channelings of their associate George Hunt Williamson (although they do not name him). 1956, July 4 — Pilot Hervey Stockman makes the first of eight U-2 flights over Soviet Russia, Mission 2013. He flies from Wiesbaden over East Germany and Poland before crossing the Soviet border near Grodno, Belarus, then over bomber bases at Minsk, Belarus; Leningrad [now St. Petersburg], Russia; and the Baltic states. The mission is tracked by Soviet radar; a number of MiG fighters unsuccessfully try to intercept the U-2. (Spyflight, "Lockheed U-2"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 86–88)

1956, July 9 — One early U-2 mission, Mission 2020, flown by Martin Knutson, flies over Engels-2 airfield, near Saratov, Russia, and photographs 20 M-4 Bison bombers on the ramp. Multiplying by the number of Soviet bomber bases, the intelligence suggests the Soviets are already well on their way to deploying hundreds of aircraft. Ironically, the U-2 has actually photographed the entire Bison fleet; there is no bomber at any of the other bases. Similar missions over the next year finally prove that. At least in official circles, the bomber gap is disproven. (Spyflight, "Lockheed U-2")

1956, July 10 — The Melbourne, Victoria, Australia, coastline and suburbs are draped with "angel hair" that hangs from utility lines and trees. It vanishes within hours, but a sample is recovered for analysis by the Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Organisation. It cannot be identified, although six scientists rule out wool, cotton, feathers, cellulose, and synthetic fibers. (Keith Basterfield, "Angel Hair: An Australian Perspective," IUR 27, no. 1 (Spring 2002): 7; Brian Boldman, "Angel Hair Physical Analyses: A Review," JUFOS 9 (2006): 102)

1956, July 12 — Clara John records an interview with Morris K. Jessup in which he proposes a civilian "centralized clearinghouse" for UFO sightings. (Wendy Connors, "High Strangeness Guide," Track 15, November 21, 2013; Powell, Keyhoe, 170–171, 427–428; Curt Collins, "The Woman Who Made UFO News," The Saucers That Time Forgot, December 19, 2024)

1956, July 16 — 7:00 p.m. Lawyer (or law professor) João de Freitas Guimarães is taking a walk on the beach at Caraguatatuba, São Paulo, Brazil, when he observes a hat-shaped, luminous object leave the sea between São Sebastião and Ilhabela and land only a few yards away from him. A door opens, a metallic stairway emerges, and two tall, human-looking men with long, fair hair emerge wearing green jumpsuits. Through gestures, they encourage him to enter the craft. Inside, the saucer takes off and the crew communicate with him telepathically, telling him about a radiation protection system that exists around the ship and that they have left the atmosphere. They are supposedly from Venus. His alleged trip lasts an hour. When he returns, his watch no longer works. (Luiz do Rosário Real, "Caso Dr. Freitas Guimarães," April 1976; Vallée, Magonia, pp. 257–258; Equipe UFO, "João de Freitas Guimarães, o advogado que passeou em um UFO," Portal UFO, October 1, 2013; Clark III 548–549; Brazil 32–35; Clark IV 237–238, 606–607)

1956, July 17 — Elizabeth Klarer takes several photos of a silvery disc as it is hovering around Flying Saucer Hill, southwest of Rosetta, KwaZulu-Natal, South Africa. (Clark III 657–658; Clark IV 732–733)

1956, July 19 — President Eisenhower temporarily halts U-2 overflights above eastern Europe. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed U-2")

1956, July 19 — Naval Air Station Hutchinson [now Hutchinson Air Force Station], Kansas, reports tracking "a moving unidentified object" on radar, observed visually by state police as a "teardrop shaped" light source. Witnesses report "noticeable maneuvers of UFO vertically and horizontally over a wide area of the sky." (NICAP, "NAS Tracks UFO")

1956, July 20 — In a lecture delivered at a meeting of Clara John's Flying Saucer Discussion Group, author Morris K. Jessup declares that it is time for a new UFO organization. A consensus is reached that a Washington, D.C.–based agency should investigate UFOs, and T. Townsend Brown offers to draft a preliminary proposal. ("'Toward a Broader Understanding…': The Story of How NICAP Began," UFO Investigator, October 1971, p. 2; Letter from T. Townsend Brown to Stuart Nixon, October 27, 1971, p. 2; "T. 1956, July 20 — Three witnesses in the Panorama City neighborhood of Los Angeles, California, independently observe a huge, ball-shaped object from which emerge three beings. They are nearly 6 feet tall and have long, blond hair, and wear tight, green suits. (Donald B. Hanlon, "Questions on the Occupants," in Charles Bowen, ed., The Humanoids, special issue of FSR, Oct./Dec. 1966, p. 64)

1956, July 22 — 5:30 a.m. Mrs. Ray Brown sees an egg-shaped object giving off a green-colored light from its rear end over Highway City, California. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 72)

1956, July 22 — 11:00 a.m. USAF Maj. Merwin Stenvers is flying at 16,000 feet over Pixley, California, in a Convair C-131D and is suddenly staggered and knocked to the right by a terrific blow. He makes an emergency landing at Kern County Airport [now closed] in Lost Hills. An examination shows that more than half of the left elevator control surface is gone or smashed, leading to speculation that the airplane had been hit by something. However, an accident investigation team finds that a series of rivets had popped, jamming a rod that controls the elevator servotab and causing the elevator to get stuck. ("Plane's Dive Is Laid to Control Device Failure," Fresno (Calif.) Bee, July 25, 1956, p. 4-B; Frank Edwards, FS Serious Business, Bantam ed., 1966, pp. 39–40; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 71–73)

1956, Late July — A group of US Navy pilots based at Naval Air Station Los Alamitos [now Joint Forces Training Base–Los Alamitos], California, tell news reporters from Orange County News Service that they have orders to shoot down any UFOs that seem hostile. The pilots say this is a standard command issued to pilots on the US to Hawaii run. ("Unanswered Questions: No. 4, Have UFOs Been Fired Upon?" Flying Saucer Review 3, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1957): 18–19)

1956, July 23 — 9:30 p.m. Virginia Maratea and her sister-in-law watch several yellow lights "the size of golf balls held at arm's length" moving swiftly through the sky in Putney, Vermont, sometimes coming to a complete stop and turning blue-white. When jets roar over, they dart away and return later. At a later time, they see a glowing red, bar-bell-shaped object the size of a large bomber moving swiftly in the west. ("Case 236," CRIFO Orbit 3, no. 9 (December 7, 1956): 1–2)

1956, July 26 — Night. Two disc-shaped objects are suspended in mid-air, one above the other, over the aircraft carrier USS Franklin D. Roosevelt as it is berthed in the port of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. They are 75–100 feet in diameter and have two rows of counter-rotating lights. The upper one releases a ball of fire that drops into the top of the lower one. Within seconds they vanish with tremendous speed. One of the witnesses is Petty Officer 3rd Class (OI) Leon Treadwell, who signs papers agreeing he will tell no one for 20 years. Chief Warrant Officer John C. Hau reports that the ship's radar tracked a cigar-shaped object the day before or after. (NICAP, "Huge Cigar Observed and Tracked on Radar"; "Another Account of '56 Sighting," Rockford (Ill.) Register-Star, July 9, 1992; Good Need, p. 231; Mutual UFO Network of Ohio, "USS Franklin D. Roosevelt, CVA-42," 2000; Dolan, USO1, 188–190)

1956, July 26 — 8:20 p.m. Physician J. L. Bennet and his wife watch two spinning, powder-blue lights for 10 minutes outside his home in Kilburn Estate, in District 21 near King Albert Park, Singapore. They dart about the sky "like fish in a tank," come together, hover, and separate at great speed, disappearing from sight. He manages to take several photos, one of which shows two objects, one a nearly perfect oval, the other blurred. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 73)

1956, July 28 — 9:55 p.m. Seven witnesses in Brentwood, California, see a sparkling green light flash through the sky and seemingly land in an orchard. Television reception is briefly interrupted. Sheriff's deputies and reserve officers search a square-mile area for 3 hours but find nothing. ("Mystery Light Falls in Contra Costa Co.,"

1956, August — FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover launches COINTELPRO (counter-intelligence programs). These are employed against American dissidents and their organizations; the first one targets the American Communist Party. Typical methods are anonymous or fictitious letters, false defamatory or threatening information, forged signatures, and other disinformation. The FBI blackmails insiders to spread false rumors or promote factionalism. It creates bogus organizations to attack or disrupt a bona fide group, and instigates hostile actions through third parties, such as employers, elected officials, and the media. It enables the FBI to investigate any political organization on the pretext of checking for Communists, including the NAACP, women's rights groups, and gay rights groups. These programs prompt nearly 330,000 FBI investigations and create a Security Index of over 200,000 dangerous Americans to be detained in the event of war. Documents relating to these programs are marked "Do not file," offering no clues that they exist. (Wikipedia, "COINTELPRO")

1956, August — John P. Cahn publishes a second article in True on the Scully hoax and the full story of convicted swindlers Silas M. Newton and Leo GeBauer. (J. P. Cahn, "Flying Saucer Swindlers," True, August 1956, pp. 36–37, 69–72)

1956, August — George King forms the Aetherius Society in London, England, as the result of what King claims are contacts with extraterrestrial intelligences, whom he refers to as "Cosmic Masters." The main goal of the believer is to cooperate with these Cosmic Masters to help humanity solve its current earthly problems and advance into the New Age. Life on other planets is described as free from war, hatred, disease, want, and ignorance. According to King, the civilizations of Atlantis and Lemuria both vanished during an atomic war. (Wikipedia, "Aetherius Society"; Douglas Curran, In Advance of the Landing: Folk Concepts of Outer Space, Abbeville, 1985, pp. 62–69; Clark III 52–53; Clark IV 70–71)

1956, August — Late night. Two young men are camping near Newark, Ohio, when they see five bright lights in a rigid V-formation. They fly in erratic, sharp-turning patterns for about 5 minutes, including sharp 30° turns. One man takes a photo. They report the sighting to the newspapers and the Air Force, but a USAF officer confiscate both the print and the negatives; the newspaper's copies are also taken. (Michael D. Swords, "Timmerman's Triangles," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 16)

1956, August 2 — 4:00 a.m. Jesse G. Kirby Jr., his wife, and two children are driving home overnight from Colorado Springs, Colorado, when they see a bright round object releasing beams of light intermittently from its top and bottom, but never simultaneously, as they are passing between Amarillo and Memphis, Texas. It is visible from time to time between the clouds for a total of 2 hours, 15 minutes. It gradually appears to be moving upward, diminishing to the size of a star, and is no longer seen. Kirby photographs the object with a Kodak 620 camera and submits two photos to the Air Force for analysis. The photos show an odd exhaust trail of glowing material. Over one year later, Project Blue Book suggests the photos either show a missile trail or is a hoax. ("Strange Light Photographed near Amarillo a Year Ago," Lubbock (Tex.) Morning Avalanche, November 5, 1957, p. 1; "Air Force Denies UFO Witnesses Muzzled Despite Order at Dallas," UFO Investigator 1, no. 3 (January 1958): 21; Curt Collins, "UFO Exploitation: The 1956 Texas Photo Fumble," The Saucers That Time Forgot, January 15, 2023)

1956, August 3 — A press leak from the Air Force Association reveals that proposals for two types of UFO-detecting satellites are under development. A television subsystem is cancelled as impractical, but an infrared subsystem requires much lower data transmission rates. Lockheed has signed an Air Force contract. The CIA's Richard M. Bissell later reveals that the CIA Office of Scientific Intelligence Deputy Director Gen. Philip G. Strong has been pushing the Air Force to develop an infrared tracking satellite. The infrared system actually begins as planned in 1968, with initial operational status in 1970. (Clark III 813, 1032; Clark IV 906, 1147)

1956, August 10 — 5:00 p.m. Lilla Padgett and a friend hear the sound of a motor above them on Empire Boulevard in Brooklyn, New York, and notice a domed metallic disc hovering about 1,200–1,500 feet in the air. After 90 seconds, it suddenly tilts and takes off at an incredible speed to the north. (NICAP case file)

1956, August 11 — T. Townsend Brown develops a tentative prospectus for a National Committee for the Investigation of Aerial Phenomena in Washington, D.C., that will "direct a united scientific investigation of aerial phenomena" with a minimum staff of 12 and a Board of Governors. (NICAP, Tentative Prospectus, August 11, 1956; Powell, Keyhoe, 176–178)

1956, August 13–14 — 9:30 p.m. A radar-visual UFO sighting begins at RAF Bentwaters [now Bentwaters Parks], Suffolk, England. A blip traveling approximately 4,000–8,000 mph on an east-west course is picked up on radar. It moves in a straight line to a position about 15 miles northwest of Bentwaters. Within a few minutes, about a dozen normal targets are spotted 8 miles southwest, moving northeast at about 100 mph. In front of the targets are three objects in a triangular formation, about 1,000 feet apart. All the targets then appear to converge into one extremely large target (several times the size of a B-36), which continues moving to the northeast, then stops for a few minutes, then resumes, and is lost to radar. The entire sighting up to this point takes 25 minutes. Five minutes later, another solid target appears, flying east to west at 4,000 mph or more, then vanishes when it moves out of range. A T-33 trainer from the 512th Fighter Interceptor Squadron crewed by 1st Lts. Charles Metz and Andrew Rowe is sent to investigate the radar contacts, but sees nothing. No visual sightings of the objects are made from Bentwaters in this period, with the exception of a single amber star-like object which was subsequently identified as probably being Mars. At 10:55 p.m., another target is picked up 30 miles to the east, traveling west at 2,000–4,000 mph. It passes directly overhead and is seen as a white light by both air (a C-47 at 4,000 feet reports it passed underneath him) and ground observers. Bentwaters notifies RAF Lakenheath, also in Suffolk, about what is going on, and Lakenheath personnel see a luminous object stop, then zoom off to the east. Also, two white lights are seen joining from different directions, which are tracked on two screens at Lakenheath. According to T/Sgt. Forrest Perkins, watch supervisor at the Lakenheath radar center, at midnight Lakenheath notifies RAF Neatishead, Norfolk, that a strange object is buzzing the base. A de Havilland Venom night fighter is scrambled, directed by Neatishead radar controller Flight Lt. Freddie H. C. Wimbledon. Perkins and Wimbledon claim the jets are sent up around midnight, but the crews think it is at 2:00 a.m. The Venom, crewed by Flight Officers David Chambers and John Brady from 23 Squadron at RAF Waterbeach [now closed] in Cambridgeshire, finds the object on radar north of Cambridge and sees it as a bright white light, which then disappears. The navigator says it is the "clearest target I have ever seen on radar." The object, however, is behind the plane and stays there for some time, despite climbs, dives, and circling. Ground radar operators say that the object is glued right behind the fighter. After 10 minutes, the fighter heads back. The UFO follows briefly, then stops and hovers. Another Venom, crewed by Flight Officers Ian Fraser-Ker and Ivan Logan, is scrambled at 2:40 a.m. but experiences engine problems and aborts. Ministry of Defence officer Ralph Noyes says that one of the Venom pilots has taken a gun-camera film, which was later shown at a briefing in Whitehall. The object is tracked on two radars, leaving the area at 600 mph. The encounter is classified until 1969, when it is analyzed by the Colorado project. Gordon Thayer suggests that the "apparently rational, intelligent behavior of the UFO suggests a mechanical device of unknown origin as the most probable explanation of this sighting." A later investigation is conducted by David Clarke, Andy Roberts, and Jenny Randles. In contrast to the reports given in the original classified teleprinter message (from 3910th Air Base Group to ADC at Ent AFB, now the US Olympic Training Center) three days after the event and in the accounts of both Wimbledon and Perkins, the air crews now state that the radar contacts were unimpressive and that no "tail-chase" or action on the part of the target occurred. They also assert no visual contacts were made. Chambers and Brady comment that "my feeling is that there was nothing there, it was some sort of mistake," while Ivan Logan, the second Venom's navigator, states that "all we saw was a blip which rather indicated a stationary target." At the time 23 Squadron decides that the radar contact had, if anything, been with a weather balloon. Martin Shough concludes that there are actually several incidents at different times and places and that the relationship between each is unclear. 1956, August 15 —The RAND Corporation releases a top-secret 1955 summary detailing more than 143 aircraft incidents in the Far East. (Alexander L. George, "Case Studies of Actual and Alleged Overflights, 1930–1953," Rand Corporation, RM-1349, August 15, 1956; Clark III 56)

1956, Mid-August — 10:15 p.m. North American Aviation research technician Edison F. Carpenter observes a formation of five flat, circular, pinkish UFOs over Boulder City, Nevada. (Center for UFO Studies, [case documents]; UFOEv, p. 58)

1956, August 16 — The CIA's Richard M. Bissell assembles a group of advisers to begin work on solving the problem of Soviets tracking the U-2 flights. Among the group are Edwin H. Land, Edward Mills Purcell, and Kelly Johnson. They look into radar-absorbing paint. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed A-12")

1956, August 21 — After 8:00 p.m. Businessman J. Gordon Campbell is flying his private plane at 4,000 feet near Billings, Montana, when he sees a black, elongated object with knobs at each end (like a dog bone) rapidly approaching. He estimates its length at 150 feet. It hovers, then speeds away. Seconds later, four similar objects appear, hover, then speed away. The Billings control tower does not track any of them. (UFOEv, p. 64; Olsen, sec. 3, p. 48)

1956, August 22 — 8:50–11:59 p.m. Radars on the island of Bornholm, Denmark, first report 2–3 objects on an easterly heading at 800 mph. Approximately 2 hours later, four objects appear and orbit over the location. About 90 minutes later, the tracks fade. (NICAP, "Objects Orbiting Location and Tracked on Radar")

1956, August 27 — 7:20 p.m. Royal Canadian Air Force pilot Robert James "Chick" Childerhose is flying nearly due west over the Canadian Rockies near Fort Macleod, Alberta. He is flying at 36,000 feet in the second position (far left side) of a formation of four F-86 Sabre jet aircraft. While approaching a large thunderhead (cumulonimbus) at a ground speed of about 460 mph, he sees at a much lower altitude a "bright light which was sharply defined and disc-shaped" or "like a shiny silver dollar sitting horizontal." He takes a color photo. An analysis suggests that it would have been radiating in excess of a gigawatt of power within the spectral range of the film. 1956, August 27 — 9:55 p.m. Mrs. R. S. Pope goes outside to her clothesline at her home in Juniata Township, [Blair County?], Pennsylvania. She sees a bright disc hovering 4 feet off the ground to the north. It seems to be 2–3 feet in diameter and is lighting up her backyard. The object has a dome protruding from its top. As she watches it, she feels a cold breeze emanating from it. It rises vertically 20 feet, then heads north, gains altitude, and moves out of sight. She has watched it for 3 minutes. (Sparks, p. 238; Olsen, sec. 3, p. 48)

1956, August 28 — 11:30 p.m. León Febres, Miguel Talavera, Jesús Prada, and Tomás Hernández are returning home in Calabozo, Venezuela, when the ground around them is lit up by a bright white light. Looking up, they see a large disc hovering silently. Several smaller objects emerge from the large disc, leaving behind a wake of phosphorescent smoke that dissipates quickly. The whole group flies off to the west in a V formation with the large object in the lead. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 74)

1956, August 29 — T. Townsend Brown files incorporation papers for a new UFO group, the National Investigations Committee on Aerial Phenomena (NICAP) in Washington, D.C. (Little Listening Post, [press release], August 30, 1956; "'Toward a Broader Understanding…': The Story of How NICAP Began," UFO Investigator, October 1971, pp. 2–3; Loren E. 1956, August 30 — Day. Two RAF Gloster Javelin interceptors, one piloted by E. H. "Wilbur" Wright, are flying west over the English Channel south of the Isle of Wight, England, when one of the navigators obtains a radar return at 19 miles distance (later calculations indicate it has a diameter of 600 feet). The pilots get permission to abandon their test exercise and investigate the object. Wright turns north toward the object on his right wing, but it has apparently slowed down and is maintaining its position. The second Javelin pilot has caught up from behind and confirms radar and visual sightings. The two aircraft bank steeply so the object is at 15 miles dead ahead on the radar screen They close the distance to 10 miles and see that the object has a metallic gray appearance. At 8 miles distance, the object suddenly climbs vertically too fast for radar to track (estimated at 18,000 mph) and vanishes.

After landing at RAF Odiham in Hampshire, the crews are told that ground radar at RAF Sopley [now closed] has tracked the object. They are ordered not to speak about the event. (Jenny Randles, "Scramble, UFO!" Fortean Times 386 (December 2019): 26–27)

1956, September — The General Physics Laboratory of the Aeronautical Research Laboratories (ARL) at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Dayton, Ohio, launches an intense program to coordinate research into gravitational and unified field theories with the hiring of Joshua N. Goldberg. The precise rationale for creating the program and justifying its budgets and personnel may never be determined. Neither Goldberg nor USAF Deputy for Scientific and Technical Information Walter Blados can locate the founding documents. Roy Kerr, a former ARL scientist, says the antigravity propulsion purpose of ARL was "rubbish" and that "The only real use that the USAF made of us was when some crackpot sent them a proposal for antigravity or for converting rotary motion inside a spaceship to a translational driving system." (Wikipedia, "United States gravity control propulsion research")

1956, September — Just before 8:00 a.m. A domed, disc-shaped craft allegedly lands within White Sands Proving Ground, New Mexico, just 150 feet away from US Highway 70. Radios and ignition systems of passing cars go dead, as witnesses—including two USAF colonels, two sergeants, and dozens of base personnel—observe the object as it takes off with a whirring sound. All personnel at Holloman AFB are assembled in a hangar, debriefed, and sworn to secrecy. (Ralph and Judy Blum, Beyond Earth: Man's Contact with UFOs, Bantam, 1974; Good Need, pp. 219–220)

1956, September 4 — Several fireball-like objects fly over Copenhagen, Denmark, tracked by radar at about 1,800 mph. (UFOEv, p. 79)

1956, September 7 — 12:30 p.m. Thomas J. and Maud Hutchinson watch an object drop out of low clouds and land in the middle of a bog at The Loup (near Moneymore), County Derry, Northern Ireland. They wade 600 feet into the bog until they come upon the small (3 feet high, 18 inches in diameter), red, rubbery, motionless object. There are 3 white stripes around the middle and it is pointed at both ends. Hutchinson kicks the object, which rolls over then resumes its upright position. He picks it up and is surprised at its lightness (estimated 2 pounds); the top is spinning while the bottom (a small, saucer-shaped base) remains stationary. It appears to be made of canvas-like material. They try to take it back with them, but Thomas has to put it down to negotiate a hedge, and the object takes off and disappears. ("Irishman Caught a 'Saucer,'" The Guardian (UK), September 8, 1956, p. 10; Desmond Leslie, "The Strangest UFO Case of All," Flying Saucer Review 2, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1956): 2–4; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 74–76; Clark III 328; Clark IV 364)

1956, September 7 — Test pilot Iven Carl Kincheloe Jr. reaches an altitude of 126,283 feet in the Bell X-2. (Wikipedia, "Iven Carl Kincheloe Jr.")

1956, September 8 — 4:00 a.m. Three men are fishing on a US Steel pier on Lake Michigan at Gary, Indiana. They notice four domed discs in the sky moving in single file from east to west. They stop abruptly, and the lead object tilts at a 45° angle. All of them wobble as they hover and seem to be spinning clockwise as sparks drop from their bases. The lead object then levels off and all four dart forward about 1,000 feet, hover momentarily, then shoot up at a 45°–60° angle and disappear. The duration of the sighting is 2 minutes. (Letter to J. Allen Hynek)

1956, September 8 — 9:30 p.m. Frank C. Clark is observing Mars with a 12.5-inch reflector in Las Cruces, New Mexico, when he sees a faint starlike object passing in a direction opposite to the apparent drift of Mars. It is visible for 10 seconds before passing out of the field. Clark moves the telescope and is able to see it again for another 10 seconds. It is a yellowish color. (Frank C. Clark, "An Observation of an Unidentified Celestial Object," The Strolling Astronomer 10 (May/June 1956): 67–68)

1956, September 11 — The Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory officially launches Operation Moonwatch, an effort to enlist amateur astronomers in tracking an artificial satellite that the US intends to launch during the International Geophysical Year. The announcement is made at a news conference by Armand Spitz, coordinator of visual satellite observations. The program is largely the brainchild of Harvard University's Fred Whipple, who recruits J. Allen Hynek as assistant director to help with the central operation. Until professionally manned optical tracking stations (using Baker-Nunn camera-telescopes) come online in 1958, this network of amateur scientists and other interested citizens plays a critical role in providing crucial information on the world's first satellites. The team records some 36 UFO reports from 1957 to 1966. The program is discontinued in 1975. (Wikipedia, "Operation Moonwatch"; Walter N. Webb, "Allen Hynek As I Knew Him," IUR 18, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1993): 4–5; Michael D. 1956, September 12 — 11:30 a.m. Riverside County Schools Consultant Dwight Lewis sees an oval object emerge from a cloud of smoke and ashes coming from a forest fire in Elsinore, California. It hovers for 5 minutes at about 5,000 feet, glittering in the sun. It moves away in a southerly direction. ("Case 218," CRIFO Orbit 3, no. 8 (November

2, 1956): 1; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1956, September–October, The Author, 1994, pp. 19, 23)

1956, September 15 — About 6:30 a.m. A married couple is driving in Salem, Indiana, when they notice a saucer hovering about 100 feet away in a field by the road. They stop the car and get out for a better look. The object is gunmetal gray in color and looks like two shallow bowls with a dark gap between them. Wisps of smoke are coming from the gap. The object looks as large as the town's courthouse. It begins undulating as it hovers. After 5 minutes, it tips over on its edge and vanishes. (NICAP case file)

1956, September 22 — 7:50 p.m. Amateur astronomer Reuben O. Borrud in Williston, North Dakota, sees a dull-metallic, elliptical object the size of a small airplane, oscillating side to side as it moves at 150 mph above the Missouri River. (Williston (N.Dak.) Plains Register, September 22, 1956; "Case 222," CRIFO Orbit 3, no. 8 (November 2, 1956): 3; Richard F. Haines and Franklin Carter, "A 1956 Military Aircraft–UFO Close Encounter," IUR 25, no. 1 (Spring 2000): 25)

1956, September 25 — Leonard Stringfield's wife Adelia observes several white tufts of angel's hair floating down in the front yard of their home in Cincinnati, Ohio. She places it in an airtight jar. After the Stringfields contact the Air Force, M/Sgt Oliver D. Hill retrieves the sample on October 12. Analysis was done by C. G. Cocks and L. Leatherland, who find that the fibers are "multifilament bundles" that are characteristic of "regenerated cellulose fibers, either viscose or cuprammonium rayon," perhaps from a defective filter. (Brian Boldman, "Angel Hair Physical Analyses: A Review," JUFOS 9 (2006): 102–103)

1956, Fall — More than 30 pilots, navigators, and flight engineers are on their way home from special duty in Europe on a US Navy Super Constellation transport. When they are about 50 miles northeast of Gander, Newfoundland, the pilot notices a cluster of lights beneath the aircraft. Suddenly, the lights dim and spread out, the largest light ascending on an apparent collision course with the transport. As it reaches the plane's altitude, it tilts, shoots to one side, and paces them at a distance of 300 feet. It is a huge metallic disc, 30 feet thick at the center and 350–400 feet wide, with a blurry glow around the rim. Gradually it pulls ahead, tilts upward, accelerates, and zooms away in 5–8 seconds. Gander Airport confirms that it had a radar target near them. (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 16–19; Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, pp. 78–84; Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Sightings, Landings, and Abductions, Methuen, 1979, pp. 104–106)

1956, Fall — A man in Falls City, Nebraska, sees a winged human with a demonic face that approaches him from three blocks away. It is about 8–9 feet tall and approaches him closely, hovering in the air about 25 feet away. As it passes over him, the man feels numb and paralyzed. The episode haunts him for the next 23 years when he talks to an investigator. ("Winged Wonder over Falls City?" Journal of the Fortean Research Center 1, no. 1 (April 1986): 3–4; Clark III 778; Clark IV 859)

1956, Fall or winter — Shortly after 12:00 noon. An Air Force Convair RB-36H of the 28th Strategic Reconnaissance Wing based at Ellsworth AFB, Rapid City, South Dakota, captained by Lt. C. Lenny Marquis, is flying in northern South Dakota at 423 mph when one of the crew sees a metallic disc 100 feet in diameter fly toward the airplane from the left and take up a fixed position on the left wing less than 300 feet away. Other crew members rush to the portholes to take photos. The object has a low dome at the top with three round openings or light sources. The bottom is nearly flat. Its narrow vertical sides are populated by many separate light sources, each a different color. The rest of the disc is a "light golden" hue. After 5–8 minutes, the object suddenly accelerates in parallel with the B-36 and then rises about 30° above the horizontal. The peripheral lights become brighter and turn greenish as it speeds out of sight in several seconds. Both inflight and ground radars detect the object. Substitute navigator Lt. Jimmie Lloyd says the crew turned in all photos, logs, and equipment to an intelligence unit after landing. (Richard F. Haines and Franklin Carter, "A 1956 Military Aircraft–UFO Close Encounter," IUR 25, no. 1 (Spring 2000): 22–25)

1956, October — Karl L. Veit and Anny Veit found the Deutsche UFO/IFO-Studiengesellschaft in Wiesbaden, Germany, which publishes the newspaper-format UFO-Nachrichten. He is motivated after observing UFOs above the Rhine River earlier in the year. DUIST names physicist and rocket pioneer Hermann Oberth its first honorary president. Veit is soon operating a new publishing house, Ventla-Verlag, which publishes UFO and contactee books. DUIST becomes the leading UFO group in West Germany in the 1970s and disbands in 1988. ("Marsmenschen über Mainz," Der Spiegel, November 5, 2007; "60 Jahre UFO-Nachrichten," 2016; Eghigian, After, pp. 106–107)

1956, October 2 — 3:45 a.m. Harry J. Sturdevant is on duty as a night watchman at Herbert Elkin and Company, a construction firm in Trenton, New Jersey. He sees a cigar-shaped object some 60–100 feet long and 15 feet in diameter swiftly descending toward him. Emitting a red glow, the object is making a hissing noise like steam and generating a foul odor. It swoops past him and vanishes. He loses his sense of taste and smell, possibly permanently. His face is burned to the point where he cannot shave for two weeks. He begins to lose hearing in his right ear. When he returns to work the next day, he finds leaves on the ground that have burned up like tissue paper. Sturdevant applies for workmen's compensation from the state for his medical expenses. An adjudicator awards him the money based on the fact that he may have only thought he saw something, but was injured when he went to investigate it, which his job required. However, the state denies his claim and it is reversed in 1958. ("Eerie Object Reported Hovering over River," *Camden (N.J.) 1956, October 7 — 10:45 p.m. UFO reports by police and civilians around Merced, California, reach Castle AFB [now Castle Airport Aviation and Development Center] and a lighted elliptical object about 100–120 feet in diameter is seen by the tower. Two interceptors are scrambled. The object ducks under and above a narrow cloud bank. The pilots can see it from various angles and as close as a few hundred yards. It appears to be a flattened circular shape. The pilots decide to fly one above and one below the overcast. Ground radar picks up the planes but not the UFO. One pilot breaks off to return but sees that the UFO is now chasing his buddy's plane. Several officers arrive from another base to debrief the pilots and they appear very knowledgeable about UFOs. They seek "confirmation, not information" and tell the pilots not to discuss the sighting at all. Citizen witnesses are told the pilots were chasing ducks or geese. (Sparks, p. 239; Richard H. Hall, Uninvited Guests, Aurora, 1988, pp. 242–244; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1956 November–December, The Author, 1994, pp. 52, 59)

1956, October 9 — 3:30 p.m. Mrs. James Petrey and three other witnesses in Springdale, Ohio, watch six pinpoints of light moving up and down and side to side at great speed. A silverish streak seems to connect three of the objects. Later, a large number of red objects, swarming like birds, fly in from the east in a straight horizontal path, "flopping over and over," then disappear behind some trees. ("Case 231," CRIFO Orbit 3, no. 8 (November 2, 1956): 4)

1956, October 10 — 10:30 p.m. Stockbreeder Giuseppe Fenu is returning to his home near Villamassargia, Sardinia, Italy, when he sees a luminous globe moving north to south. Suddenly it vanishes over the horizon, and three more globes appear in formation. About 30 minutes later, Fenu and other witnesses see a luminous cigar-shaped object about 60 feet long with a bluish-colored strip running along its perimeter. The strip is intersected by vertical bands like "grid holes." The globes begin to circle around the large object. (Renato Albanesi, "The Italian Scene: Part 2," Flying Saucer Review 9, no. 2 (Feb./Mar. 1963): 3–4)

1956, October 19 — NICAP's initial board of governors includes T. Townsend Brown (founder), Frank Edwards, Leon C. LeVan, Albert H. Baller, Charles A. Maney, Talbot T. Speer, Abraham M. Sonnabend, Col. Robert B. Emerson, Rear Adm. Delmer S. Fahrney, Gen. William E. Kepner, and Brig. Gen. Thomas B. Catron. Gladys Rose Hackett and Margaret Naylor are hired to do secretarial work, and Martin H. Heflin is hired as public relations specialist. The headquarters are at 1536 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. Incorporation is granted on October 24, NICAP's first legal day of existence. (Robert Serling, [memo to Ivan T. Sanderson], September 1956; Jim Lucas, "They're after Flying Saucers and $2 Million," Cincinnati (Ohio) Post, October 24, 1956; NICAP, [press release], November 4, 1956; "'Toward a Broader Understanding…': The Story of How NICAP Began," UFO Investigator, October 1971, p. 3; Loren E. 1956, October 29 — Howard Menger, a sign painter from High Bridge, New Jersey, goes public on the Long John Nebel show on WOR-AM in New York City with a story of his contacts with "Aryan-type" Venusians in spaceships. Menger reports that his contacts started in childhood, when he experienced flashbacks of life on another world and sightings of flying discs. In 1932 he met a beautiful blonde woman who could read his mind, and in 1946 he again sees her stepping out of a flying saucer. She is supposedly 500 years old, although she looks 25. He takes a ride in one of the spacecraft on August 4, 1956, and many contacts follow. 1956, November — The UFO Investigation Centre (UFOIC) continues the Sydney, New South Wales–based work begun by Edgar Jarrold and Andrew P. Tomas. W. P. Clifford becomes its first president. (Clark IV 1270)

1956, November 4 — NICAP issues its first news release. T. Townsend Brown emphasizes the group's "growing membership of responsible citizens from every walk of life and profession" and stresses that "there does exist more than enough evidence of certain and obvious aerial phenomena to justify independent evaluation." (NICAP, [press release], November 4, 1956)

1956, November 14 — 10:10 p.m. Captain William Joseph Hull and his copilot Peter H. Macintosh are flying Capital Airlines Flight 77 from New York City to Mobile, Alabama. While approximately above Jackson, Alabama, at 25,000 feet they see something like a brilliant meteor flash by the aircraft. The object stops, hovers, and engages in a range of acrobatics (crazy gyrations, lazy 8's, square chandeliers, 90° turns) for several minutes before shooting out over the Gulf of Mexico at "fantastic speed" and diminishing to a pinpoint. (NICAP, "Capital Airlines Pilots Sees Acrobatic UFO"; Sparks, p. 240; Sign Historical Group, "Captain Joe Hull's UFO Sighting"; "UFO Encounter Convinces Airline Captain, Former Skeptic," UFO Investigator 1, no. 2 (Aug./Sept. 1957): 21; Condon, pp. 127–129; Loren E. 1956, November 16 — Morning. Telephones and an automatic railroad block mechanism in Lemmon, South Dakota, fail to operate as a glowing red object about 3 feet in diameter flies over the railroad yards. (Mobridge (S.Dak.) Tribune, November 22, 1956; Schopick, pp. 21–22; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1956, November–December, The Author, 1994, p. 24; Richard F. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1956 November–December, Supplemental Notes, The Author, 2003, p. 14)

1956, November 21 — 8:23 p.m. A customs officer named Ueda and a maritime safety officer named Kume are walking along Number 1 Pier, Kobe, Japan, when they hear an explosion. They see something resembling fireworks on the bay and watch as two whirling balls of fire submerge. (Evening Okayama News, November 21, 1957; Sanderson, InvRes, p. 46)

1956, November 25 — 4:30 a.m. Police radio at Hot Springs, South Dakota, picks up transmissions made by a jet interceptor from the 54th Fighter Interceptor Squadron at Ellsworth AFB in Rapid City that makes three passes at a brilliantly lit UFO bobbing up and down in the sky. On the third pass, the pilot reports that the object registers on his radar. It is rumored that a blip is picked up on ground radar by the 740th Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron. Pennington County Sheriff Glenn Best and patrolman C. D. Erickson in Rapid City watch a UFO with a light changing from green, red, and white lights for 30 minutes; an upward-shining white light appears at intervals. They follow it toward the Badlands. (NICAP, "Gnd/Air/Visual, Jets Scrambled"; "'Saucers' Stir Speculation," Rapid City (S.Dak.) Daily Journal, November 26, 1956, p. 1; "Hills Residents Tell of Shining Objects," *Rapid City (S.Dak.) Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1956 November–December, Supplemental Notes, The Author, 2003, pp. 20, 22–23)

1956, November 30 — About 12:15 p.m. Charles Malott, 17, is driving his truck north on State Highway 61 about 2.5 miles south of Petersburg, Indiana, when he hears a loud noise behind him. He pulls to the side of the road and finds that the noise is coming from a spherical object about 16 feet in diameter slowly rising from some woods about 3,000 feet away. After attaining a height of 150 feet, the object becomes silent and takes off at great speed to the northeast. ("Case 275," CRIFO Orbit 3, no. 11 (February 1, 1957): 3)

1956, December — Chemical engineer Leon Davidson begins to distribute privately printed copies of Project Blue Book Special Report No. 14, together with his analysis and commentary. He has become convinced that UFOs are secret devices developed by the US government and that Special Report No. 14 is a clever attempt to hide the fact. Mostly, however, he focuses on discrepancies in the Air Force's public announcements and the actual data in the report. Davidson publishes further editions in October 1957, July 1966, January 1971, and 1976. (Leon Davidson, Flying Saucers: An Analysis of Project Blue Book Special Report No. 14, [1956], 3d ed., Ramsey-Wallace, 1966; Clark III 930)

1956, December 1 — 12:20 a.m. A round object, red to orange in color, is observed moving at approximately 1,000 foot above Valley City, North Dakota. It moves rapidly up, down, sideways, and hovers. A police car approaches it, but the car loses radio contact with the station. Valley City also loses contact with Jamestown, South Dakota. All radio contact returns after the object leaves the area. (NICAP, [Blue Book file])

1956, December 2 — Dorothy Martin sets off from Prescott, Arizona, with Charles and Lillian Laughead, ufologist brothers Ray and Rex G. Stanford, and George Hunt Williamson, his wife Betty, and toddler son Mark. They are acting in response to a series of Williamson channelings that had begun April 18 when Lord Aramu-Muru announced that "those we have commissioned" are to establish a priory of the Brotherhood of the Seven Rays "in a remote area of another country to the south." After spending some time in Mexico, they head for Moyobamba, Peru, under the direction of their spirit masters. The Laugheads (who apparently were in Mexico in July) and Stanfords leave around this time. After a while, those remaining move to the Valley of Pariahuanca east of Lima, Peru, and set up the Outer Retreat of the Monastery of the Seven Rays, which has some cult-like attributes. There they attract new members, including Williamson's later coauthor John McCoy. Williamson devotes himself for several years to paranormally guided archaeological expeditions. (Zirger and Martinelli, The Incredible Life of George Hunt Williamson, Verdechiari, 2016, pp. 105–115; Clark III 719–720, 1286; Clark IV 788, 1469–1470)

1956, December 3 — Day. Curvin F. Bush and Robert Bryant, guards at the nearby Walters Art Gallery, are standing at the intersection of Charles and Centre streets in Baltimore, Maryland, when they see a bright disc-shaped object streak away from a transport plane. The plane then reverses its direction from northeast to southwest to follow the object, which is spinning counterclockwise and disappears behind a building. ("Museum Guards Report Strange Antics Overhead," Baltimore Sun, December 4, 1956, p. 40)

1956, December 10 — 2:00 p.m. A US Air Force pilot sees a silver object with a "straight wing, having engine rods or large wing pods [or] intakes" flying at 56,000–62,000 feet for 15 minutes at Victoria, Texas. The pilot's description is a dead ringer for a secret U-2 aircraft, which is what Blue Book suspects. (Mark Rodeghier, "The U-2 Spy Plane and Blue Book: Another Look," IUR 27, no. 3 (Fall 2002): 20–21)

1956, December 13 — Capt. Karl Hars Dersson and the crew of the Danish ship Dorthe Mærsk view an intensely bright, cone-shaped fireball giving off weird flashes of light north of Isla La Orchila, Venezuela. It gets brighter as it descends, then explodes on hitting the water. The crew hears a loud concussion. Afterwards, the surface of the sea shimmers with various colors and is disturbed for 5 minutes. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1956 November–December, Supplemental Notes, The Author, 2003, pp. 39–40; Dolan, USO1, 205–206)

1956, December 15 — 11:00 a.m. While out gathering Christmas greens near Derry, New Hampshire, A. G. Horne looks up and sees a 2-foot tall green dwarf with a high-domed head, floppy ears, a face like a bloodhound, and lidless eyes like a snake. His skin hangs in folds like an elephant's. After a few minutes, the being "started for me with a kind of screeching sound," and Horne flees. (Center for UFO Studies, HUMCAT Index 1956, p. 23; Clark III 271; Clark IV 311)

1956, December 17 —NICAP Executive Vice Chairman T. Townsend Brown issues a Progress Report no. 1 before resigning and appointing Nicolas de Rochefort to replace him. Keyhoe has been appointed editorial consultant for its newsletter. (NICAP, Progress Report no. 1, December 17, 1956, pp. one, two, three, four, five)

1956, December 17 — 4:20 p.m. Near Itazuke Air Base [now Fukuoka Airport] in Fukuoka, Japan, a USAF pilot flying an F-86D interceptor picks up a large blip on airborne radar. The pilot sees a tan object, round on top, at 9.2 miles and closes to within 5.7 miles. The object starts to pull away from the fighter and at 13.8 miles all radar disappears. The pilot estimates its speed as 1,700–2,000 mph. Both the pilot and his wingman report interference resembling ECM (radar jamming). (NICAP, "Radar/Visual from F-86"; Sparks, p. 240; "Jet Chase of Large Circular Object Investigated by Far East Air Force," UFO Investigator 1, no. 2 (Aug./Sept. 1957): 1–2; "Jet Planes Chased Big Flying Object," Auckland (N.Z.) Star, October 4, 1957; Richard Hall, "Radar/Visual UFOs and Air Force Debunking," IUR 18, no. 3 (May/June 1993): 15–16)

1956, December 17 — Night. Marie Carow goes outside her home in Conashaugh, Pennsylvania, with a flashlight and discovers two little men, 3.5 and 3 feet tall, standing motionless in her back lawn. Both wear helmets and snug-fitting suits of silvery material. Carow shines the light on them for 3 minutes, then runs back to tell her husband. 15 minutes later, they are gone. (J. E. Myer, "Space Men," Pike County (Pa.) Dispatch, April 17, 1958, p. 6; Berthold Eric Schwarz, "UFO Occupants: Fact or Fantasy?" Flying Saucer Review 15, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1969): 16–18; Patrick Gross, URECAT, October 18, 2007; Clark III 269; Clark IV 309)

1956, December 21 — At a special meeting, the NICAP Executive Committee annuls the appointment of Nicolas de Rochefort as Executive Vice Chairman and continues T. Townsend Brown in the office as pro tempore vice chairman. (NICAP, Progress Report no. 2, January 7, 1957, p. 2)

1957 — Morris K. Jessup publishes The Expanding Case for the UFO, which argues that human "little people" (like the pygmy peoples of the Congo basin) were "planted" from UFOs thousands of years ago. Citing reports of anomalous lights on the moon, Jessup speculates that the pygmy races either colonized the moon or came to the Earth from there. They are the remnants of an advanced civilization that developed levitation, teleportation, and space flight, but had to leave Earth when Atlantis and Mu were sinking into the oceans. (Morris K. Jessup, The Expanding Case for the UFO, Citadel, 1957; Jerome Clark, "Vimanas Have Landed: Ancient Astronautics in Ufology," IUR 22, no. 3 (Fall 1997): 26; Clark III 106–107, 463, 635; Clark IV 133–134, 508, 697)

1957 — Metaphysical author George Hunt Williamson writes Other Tongues—Other Flesh (although it bears a copyright date of 1953), the first of three books that set forth an alternative occult history shaped by Atlantis, Lemuria, reincarnation, and space people—both benign and malevolent. He writes that space people first arrived 1 billion years ago [prior to the earliest known multicellular life on land], were 12 feet tall, and built an underground city beneath Lake Titicaca, Peru. Migrants from the "Sirius system" arrive during the Miocene Epoch [23–5 million years ago] looking for terrestrial bodies to inhabit—they select the evolving apes. The next visitation took place in Arizona in 10,000 B.C. [the beginning of the Neolithic Revolution] when Venusians land and interact with the Lemurians. Records documenting earth's unknown history are hidden in various inaccessible places ("secret places of the lion") around the globe. He also claims that space people are still on Earth to mix, mate, and marry with us. Williamson's book Secret Places of the Lion follows in 1958 and Road in the Sky in 1959. These are among the first ancient astronaut books. In the latter book, Williamson claims that the Hopi's ancestors are Martians, while their neighbors the Navajo are from Maldek, the planet whose destruction formed the asteroid belt. (George Hunt Williamson, Other Tongues—Other Flesh, Amherst, [1957]; George Hunt Williamson, Secret Places of the Lion, Destiny Books ed., [1958] 1996; Jerome Clark, "Vimanas Have Landed: Ancient Astronautics in Ufology," IUR 22, no. 3 (Fall 1997): 23–26; Zirger and Martinelli, The Incredible Life of George Hunt Williamson, Verdechiari, 2016, pp. 113–120, 235–243; Clark III 104–106, 1286; Clark IV 131–133, 1470)

1957 — New Jersey contactee Howard Menger releases an album of "Authentic Music from Another Planet," featuring a narrative by Menger and bland piano music written by his wife Connie (under her nom de plume Marla Baxter, sister of the blonde spacewoman he had met in 1946). (Discogs, "Authentic Music from Another Planet"; "Authentic Music from Another Planet by Howard Menger," Libertad450 YouTube channel, February 22, 2016; Clark III 739; Clark IV 820)

1957 — Otis T. Carr announces his invention of a fourth-dimensional space vehicle, a Circular-Foil Spacecraft powered by an Utron Electric Accumulator that makes use of the "free energy of the universe." (Clark III 860; Clark IV 947)

1957 — Ground Saucer Watch is established in Phoenix, Arizona, by Ted Starrett. William H. Spaulding is the Western Division Director, with James A. Spaulding as the Eastern Division Director in Cleveland, Ohio. It publishes Ground Saucer Watch Bulletin from 1976 to 1982. By 1979, GSW has analyzed nearly 700 UFO photographs and films, of which they verify 38 as bona fide. (Margaret Sachs, The UFO Encyclopedia, Putnam, 1980, p, 132)

1957 — George Fawcett founds the New England UFO Study Group in Marlborough, Massachusetts. It publishes the New England UFO Newsletter from 1976 to 1982.

1957 — Hayden C. Hewes founds the International UFO Bureau in Edmond, Oklahoma. It publishes the Interplanetary Intelligence Report from 1965 to 1966.

1957 — Wilbert B. Smith founds the Ottawa Flying Saucer Club in Ontario, where members meet each month in the basement of his house. (Eghigian, After, p. 107)

1957 — Contactee Yusuke Matsumura founds the Cosmic Brotherhood Association in Japan. Matsumura claims to have contacts with extraterrestrial intelligences and prophesies a global cataclysm following a shift in the earth's axial tilt in the early 1960s, offering members the chance to escape with the Space Brothers. The group later focuses on ancient astronauts and becomes inactive in the early 1970s. ("Cosmic Brotherhood Association (CBA)," Kook Science; "[End of Days Prophecy]," excite.news, August 19, 2018; Eghigian, After, p. 228)

1957 — Engineer Pantelimon Mizof and others see an object in the Bucegi Mountains, Romania, pass over them silently and land. Some of them approach to get a better look, but when they are 150 feet away, it takes off suddenly. (Hobana and Weverbergh 158–159)

1957 — 2:00 a.m. The Navy icebreaker USS Burton Island is in the Bering Sea when the crew sees an object emerge from the water in front of the ship. It hovers for 2–3 minutes then sinks back into the water. The ship's radar is said to have picked it up. (Carl Feindt, "Report #1173"; Dolan, USO1, 193)

1957 — The Victorian branch of the Australian Flying Saucer Research Society becomes a separate organization, the Victorian UFO Research Society. It publishes the Australian UFO Bulletin from 1957 to September 2007, edited by Les Bristol. (Australian UFO Bulletin 1, no. 3 (December 1957); Keith Basterfield, Vladimir Godic, and Pony Godic, "Australian Ufology: A Review," JUFOS 2 (1990): 24)

1957, January — Contactee Gabriel Green establishes the Los Angeles Interplanetary Study Groups, which in 1959 evolves into Amalgamated Flying Saucer Clubs of America in Los Angeles, California. It assumes that UFOs are piloted by friendly extraterrestrials. Around the same time, Green announces his meeting with flying saucer crewmen from the hitherto unknown planet Korendor, orbiting the triple star Alpha Centauri. At its peak, AFSCA has more than 5,000 members. (Wikipedia, "Gabriel Green"; Thy Kingdom Come, no. 4 (April/May 1957); Clark III 99; Clark IV 126–127)

1957, January — Norbert F. Gariety begins publishing S.P.A.C.E. (Saucer Phenomena and Celestial Enigma), a monthly newsletter, in Coral Gables, Florida. It continues until January 1963. (S.P.A.C.E., no. 1 (January 1957)

1957, January 1 — Shortly before 12:00 midnight. Herbert Naderson and his wife and sons are driving northeast to their home in Ashby, Minnesota, when they see a triangular object traveling slowly at a high altitude. They watch it for 45 minutes. ("Strange Light Seen in Sky toward Ashby," Fergus Falls (Minn.) Daily Journal, January 3, 1957, p. 7; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 January–March 22nd, The Author, 1995, p. 2)

1957, January 14–16 — T. Townsend Brown has proven so financially inept that the NICAP board asks him to step down. Delmer S. Fahrney replaces him as board chairman, Keyhoe steps in as director, and Fahrney convenes a press conference in which he announces that UFOs are under intelligent control, but that they are not American or Soviet aircraft: "No agency in this country or Russia is able to duplicate at this time the speeds and accelerations which radars and observers indicate these flying objects are able to achieve." Stringfield is made public relations adviser. (T. Townsend Brown, Letter to NICAP Board of Governors, January 16, 1957; NICAP, [press release], January 16, 1957; FBI Records: The Vault, "Statement on Unidentified Flying Objects by Admiral Delmar S. Fahrney, USN (Ret.), Chairman of the Board of Governors of NICAP," p. 8; "High Speed Objects Reported in the Sky," New York Times, January 17, 1957, p. 31; Stringfield, Situation Red, Fawcett Crest, 1977, p. 15; Loren E. 1957, January 16 — 8:00 p.m. The crews of two Air Force B-25s are flying about 90 miles north of Sweetwater, Texas, when they see a round white object make rapid maneuvers. Lt. Col. Howard T. Wright notes that his radio compass starts pointing directly toward the object, following its movements, instead of the beacon at its destination at Reese AFB [now Reese Technology Center] in Lubbock, Texas. The entire object begins blinking on and off and continues to follow the plane for an hour. When the aircraft gets within range of Lubbock, the object moves toward the aircraft, hangs motionless in front of them for 5 seconds, then flies away on a straight-line course in about 12 seconds. One of the B-25s refuels and is sent on a 4-hour search of the vicinity with no results. (NICAP, "Object Maneuvers near B-25's / EME"; Sparks, p. 241; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 January–March 22nd, The Author, 1995, pp. 20–22; Swords 244–245; Powell, Scientist, 90–91)

1957, January 21 — 10:45 a.m. Near Kagnew Station [now closed], Asmara, Eritrea, five enlisted men of the US Army's 4th Detachment of the Second Signal Service Battalion (M/Sgt Billy J. Woodruff, Sgt. Frank Haverly, SP2 Robert O. Clewell, SP2 George R. Dean, and SP3 Gerald L. Fennell) watch a large, shiny, metal sphere hovering at about 2,000 feet. It suddenly disappears but reappears later for a few minutes, then disappears again. Later in the day, Woodruff and Capt. Jesse M. Strong see two brownish, disc-shaped objects maneuvering in formation at a high altitude. One breaks away from the other, moving at high speed. (UFOEv, p. 29)

1957, January 27 — Former CIA director Rear Adm. Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter joins NICAP's board of directors. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 January–March 22nd, The Author, 1995, p. 31; Powell, Keyhoe, 208–209)

1957, January 31 — US Army Order number 30-13, "Sightings of Unconventional Aircraft," stipulates that personnel involved in sightings must "not discuss or disseminate such information to persons or agencies other than their superior officer(s) and other personnel authorized by the Acting Chief of Staff, G-2, this headquarters," by order of Col. Charles L. Olin. ("Air Force Sees Plenty: Tells Nothing," CSI News Letter, no. 8 (July 25, 1957): 7–8)

1957, February — Project MKUltra chief Sidney Gottlieb organizes field trials of psilocybin for injection into 9 black inmates at the Addiction Center in Lexington, Kentucky. Allen Dulles approves psychiatrist Donald Ewen Cameron's application for mind-control experiments to be administered at the Allan Memorial Institute of McGill University in Montreal, funded through the Society for the Investigation of Human Ecology, a CIA cutout organization. Cameron does not know that the money originates from the CIA. In addition to LSD, Cameron experiments with various paralytic drugs, electroconvulsive therapy at 30–40 times the normal power, and sensory deprivation in a "sleep room." This is a dimly lit dormitory of about 20 beds, which the nurses call "The Zombie Room." His "psychic driving" experiments consist of putting subjects into drug-induced comas for weeks at a time (up to three months in one case) while playing tape loops of noise or simple repetitive statements. His experiments are typically carried out on patients who have entered the institute for minor problems such as anxiety disorders and postpartum depression, many of whom suffer permanently from his actions. His treatments result in victims' incontinence, amnesia, forgetting how to talk, forgetting their parents, and thinking their interrogators are their parents. The Canadian government is apparently unaware of these activities. Naomi Klein argues that Cameron's research and his contribution to the MKUltra project are actually not about mind control and brainwashing, but about designing "a scientifically based system for extracting information from 'resistant sources.' In other words, torture." (John D. Marks, The Search for the "Manchurian Candidate": The CIA and Mind Control, Times Books, 1978; Anne Collins, In the Sleep Room: The Story of the CIA Brainwashing Experiments in Canada, Lester & Orpen Dennys, 1988; Gordon Thomas, Journey into Madness: The True Story of Secret CIA Mind Control and Medical Abuse, Bantam, 1989; Naomi Klein, The Shock Doctrine: The Rise of Disaster Capitalism, Picador, 2008; Jim Keith, Mind Control, World Control: The Encyclopedia of Mind Control, 2014)

1957, February — Chilean authorities allegedly discover a 3,000-foot-long translucent craft on the slope of a volcano north of Ollagüe, Chile. Inside is a manufactured object, one foot in circumference, made of an aluminum-like metal. ("Raro y gigantesco objeto hallaron en Andes Chileno," La Prensa (Lima, Peru), February 14, 1957, p. 1; "UFO Found in South American Andes?" Saucers 5, no. 1 (Spring 1957): 4; Clark III 328; Clark IV 365)

1957, February 3 (or 10) — 10:15 p.m. Ina Salter is driving on Redding Road toward Georgetown, Connecticut, when she sees a cigar-shaped object about 10–15 feet hovering low to the left of the road. It has 3–4 portholes, about 18–20 inches in diameter, illuminated with a yellowish light. She can see some shadows moving inside. The object has a large square opening on its base. As she approaches it, the object suddenly rises straight up, hovers for a second or two at treetop height, then speeds away, still parallel to the ground. ("Connecticut Landing, 1957," APRO Bulletin, March 1962, p. 1)

1957, February 13 — 2:30 a.m. The USAF operations director and three tower controllers at two radar sites within Lincoln AFB [now Lincoln Airport, Nebraska], the GCA and NCOIC, track several targets flying behind an airliner at a distance of 5–6 miles and traveling twice as fast. There is no IFF response. The objects hover and move at high speed. One splits into two objects, another executes an 180° turn. The radar blips are the size of a B-47. (NICAP, "Radar/Visual at Lincoln AFB"; Sparks, p. 241; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 96–97)

1957, February 13 — 9:40 p.m. Amateur astronomer Steve Papina is walking south in Placerville, California, when he notices off to his left the ionized track of what he takes to be a meteor. It is about 20° above the eastern horizon, rising at a 70° angle. The trail begins widening at about 35° above the horizon and veers in a westerly direction. Suddenly a black disc appears directly in front of the trail, whose diameter is approximately the width of the trail and the size of a nickel held at a distance of 5 feet. Its surface is not smooth but crisscrossed with grooves. It continues to move from east to west and acquires a white, dusty appearance before speeding directly away from Papina at high speed. ("ALPO Refers Sighting to APRO," APRO Bulletin, July 1957, p. 3; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 76–77)

1957, February 15 — 10:00 p.m. A large, circular object is seen by independent witnesses in Wardle, Lancashire, England. Shortly afterward, a commercial aircraft is seen following the same course as the UFO and displaying unusually powerful lights. Later, at a point along the flight path, a small radio transmitter like those attached to balloons is found, then another piece of meteorological equipment in another spot. In the House of Commons, MP Tony Leavey asks the Secretary of State for Air for an explanation. On March 20, Under-Secretary of State for Air Ian Orr-Ewing responds, saying that the objects were toy balloons illuminated by a flashlight bulb released by Neil Robinson, a laundry mechanic from Rochdale. But on April 17, the Air Ministry sends an investigator to interview the witnesses and tells them not to talk about the sighting. Robinson says he has no idea how to launch a balloon, but there is some evidence that he has considerable technical know-how and a penchant for pranks. ("Airborne Object, Wardle," UK Parliament, Hansard, vol. 567, col. 374, March 20, 1957; Clifford Thornton, "The Wardle Mystery," Flying Saucer Review 3, no. 3 (May/June 1957): 4; Geoffrey Norris, "Something in the Sky," Royal Air Force Flying Review, July 1957, pp. 14–16, 46; Good Above, pp. 46–47; David Clarke, "The Wardle 'Thing,'" Fortean Times 196 (June 2005): 40–41)

1957, February 17 — 9:56 p.m. Ground Observer Corps volunteer Dave Henderson sees two "orangish-colored" spheres traveling northeast above Albany, Oregon. They are on a horizontal trajectory and going as fast or faster than a jet airplane. After about 7 seconds, the objects split apart and vanish. ("'Flying Saucers' Are Reported by Skywatcher Here," Albany Greater Oregon, February 22, 1957, p. 1; "UFO News," Saucers 5, no. 2 (Summer 1957): 15)

1957, February 19 — In testimony before the House Appropriations Committee, National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics officials Hugh Latimer Dryden and Jimmy Doolittle are asked about UFOs. They "flatly denied the existence of such space vehicles." When asked why they don't speak out more often, they remark that they "cannot compete with the science-fiction people." (US House Appropriations Committee, Hearings, Independent Offices Appropriations for 1958, National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics, February 19, 1957, pp. 1417–1419)

1957, February 26 — UK Air Chief Marshal Hugh Dowding writes to retired Italian diplomat Alberto Perego that he is most interested in "accounts of intelligible contacts between human beings and the occupants of interplanetary ships." (Good Above, p. 48)

1957, March 1 — Leonard H. Stringfield publishes the final issue of CRIFO Orbit. (CRIFO Orbit 3, no. 12 (March 1, 1957); Clark III 1114; Clark IV 1240)

1957, March 6 — 2:00 p.m. Hearing the family dogs barking in the backyard, Mary Martin, who lives on Shades of Death Road near Great Meadows, New Jersey, looks outside and sees the dogs looking at a white object that looks like a "huge derby hat" about 50 feet in diameter. It is rocking slightly in the air as it hovers about 10–15 feet above a field behind her house and making a low, rumbling sound. Beneath it are "streamers or lines" that "twinkle like the fragile strands" of Christmas tinsel. She watches it for a full minute until the object abruptly rises almost vertically at an "immense rate of speed." The dogs stop barking. (Sparks, p. 241; "Sighting Reports," CSI Newsletter, no. 19 (May 1, 1957): 20, 23–24; Hynek UFO Report, pp. 150–154; Loren E. 1957, March 7 — Keyhoe issues a "personal statement" to potential NICAP associates in which he offers assurances that the organization is "beginning to operate as originally planned" and that membership fees have been cut in half from $15 to $7.50 annually. (Donald E. Keyhoe, [letter to potential NICAP members], March 7, 1957, pp. 1, 1a, 1b, 2a, 2b; Donald E. Keyhoe, [letter to NICAP members], March 18, 1957; Powell, Keyhoe, 204–205)

1957, March 8 — A pilot watches a UFO from the ground at Baudette, Minnesota. It is circular, 15–18 feet in diameter, and its odd glow shines on the snow-covered ground. It is flying so low that it seems to suck the loose snow up under it as it passes. ("Baudette Man Sees Mystery Air Object," Baudette (Minn.) Region, March 15, 1957; Keyhoe, FSTS, p. 56; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 January–March 22nd, The Author, 1995, p. 74; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 January–March 22nd, Supplemental Notes, The Author, 2003, p. 8)

1957, March 8 — 9:45 p.m. Victor Hancock and Guy Miller are flying a DC-3 owned by the Tennessee Gas Transmission Company above Pasadena, Texas, when they see a UFO bearing three brilliant white lights. After the UFO speeds by the aircraft, it slows down. When the DC-3 catches up, it speeds ahead. This cat-and-mouse chase continues for some 10 minutes. (NICAP, "UFO Maneuvers near DC-3"; "Two Pilots Chase 'Flying Saucer' near Houston," El Paso (Tex.) Herald-Post, March 9, 1957, p. 18; Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 55–56; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 January–March 22nd, The Author, 1995, pp. 68–69)

1957, March 9 — 4:33 a.m. Capt. Matthew A. Van Winkle, piloting a Pan American World Airways DC-6A airliner at a point over the Atlantic Ocean approximately 350 miles northeast of Jacksonville, Florida, observes a "burning greenish white round object" to the right of the aircraft that appears to be on a collision course. Van Winkle pulls the plane upward in a climb to avoid the object. This sudden maneuver causes four of the passengers to be thrown out of their seats, resulting in injuries. Copilot Dion W. Taylor and Flight Engineer John Washuta also observe the object. Washuta says the UFO is a high-intensity light that appears to stand still for approximately four seconds until it is lost to sight during the evasive action. Ed Perry, piloting Pan Am Flight 269 about 175 miles behind him, also sees it. Miami Air Traffic Control sends a flash message to the Civil Aeronautics Board describing the incident: "Pilot took evasive action, object appeared to have a brilliant greenish-white center with an outer ring which reflected the glow from the center. … Above description fits with what seven other flights saw…. Miami reports no missile activity…. Original reports of jet activity discounted." The Air Force quickly explains the sighting as a meteor, but the CAB declares it unexplained after a thorough investigation. (NICAP, "DC6-A Crew Take Evasive Action"; "Capt. Matthew Van Winkle Tells Hair Raising Story of Near Hit with Luminous Object," Greenfield (Ind.) Daily Reporter, March 11, 1957, p. 1; "Three Injured As Pilot Avoids Fiery Object," Eau Claire (Wis.) Daily Telegram, March 11, 1957, p. 12; "Pan American Airliner Case Still Unsolved, Says CAB," UFO Investigator 1, no. 1 (July 1957): 16–17; Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 54–56; Frank Edwards, FS Serious Business, Bantam ed., 1966, pp. 38–39; Good Above, pp. 282–283; Swords 245–246)

1957, March 20 — MPs in the House of Commons discuss the Wardle incident of February 15. MP Ian Orr-Ewing asserts that the object was a lighted balloon launched from a laundry in Rochdale. MP Tony Leavey replies that "it is most unlikely that that explanation will be accepted by those who saw this object." (Good Above, pp. 46–47; Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1957, March 22 — 11:15 p.m. Mrs. Robert Beaudoin, the wife of an Air Force officer, along with her 17-year-old daughter Carol Litten, sees a series of unusual lights northeast of Camarillo, California. First they see a large, soundless, and pulsing light, with something like a pole on top, making fast and erratic motions. She calls a military friend and then 1st Lt. Leonard E. Ott at nearby Oxnard AFB [now Camarillo Airport]. At 12:30 a.m., they see a green object accompanied by two smaller red lights below the horizon of the Los Palos Hills. The green object seems to be hovering over the North American Rocketdyne plant in the Simi Hills. At this time both the green object and the red objects seem to jump around, and the two red objects are zooming past the green object at tremendous velocities. Ott inquires about radar and a Lt. Martin tells him that radar is detecting a stationary object in the same area. The sheriff's office is contacted, and they send a patrol car. Deputy Sheriffs Segura and Rausch confirm Beaudoin's report, with the exception that by that time there are five red objects flying well below the green one. All are in motion and constantly changing altitude. Radar calls Ott back and says they have a scramble underway and they will have the aircraft check the area upon their return. Upon the arrival of the interceptors from Oxnard the red objects join the green object and speed away up and to the east. The aircraft are unsuccessful and return to base. At this time two Navy aircraft are sent to the area. Somehow, between the time of this report to Oxnard and the later Air Force investigation by the 4602nd, these red objects are changed, on the report, to stars and the moon above. This happens despite the witness stating that the red lights were below the hills on the horizon. To deal with that, the Air Force adds the theory that a temperature inversion caused light to bend the images of the stars, or, alternatively, the witness saw lights on a barn. Beaudoin herself is judged hysterical due to her pregnancy. The Air Force's explanation is completed without anyone bothering to interview the teenage daughter or taking anything associated with the airbase into account (for example, the radar returns). 1957, March 22 — 11:55 p.m. A swiftly moving unknown rectangular target is picked up on Civil Aeronautics Administration radar at Los Angeles International Airport, California, at a position 10 miles to the northwest. Tower Operator Norman Johnson says that at a distance of 40 miles it comes to an abrupt halt and reverses course in about 3 seconds. It returns to about 20 miles away, reverses course again, and disappears off the scope. About 5 minutes later, two more objects appear, also traveling at high speed. These also disappear off the scope to the northwest. A minute or so later, a fourth object appears and speeds off the scope at an estimated 3,600 mph. Two F-89 jet fighters are dispatched to the area from Oxnard AFB. Probably coincidentally, the airport radar's electricity shuts off at 12:07 a.m. (NICAP, "Rectangular Targets Tracked on Radar? Maybe Not"; Sparks, p. 242; "Four Saucers over California at Speeds up to 3600 M.P.H., Revealed in Radar Report Certified by NICAP Board Members," UFO Investigator 1, no. 1 (July 1957): 1, 3–4, 29–30; Powell, Keyhoe, 215–216)

1957, March 23 — Agriculturist Luis Petriera, along with several others, watches a glowing object plunge into Lake Maracaibo, Venezuela. No planes are missing. Officials drag the lake but find nothing. ("Report from Venezuela," APRO Bulletin, July 1957, p. 10)

1957, March 25 — The FBI arrests Harold Jesse Berney of Mobile, Alabama, for defrauding Pauline Gobel, a Washington, D.C., secretary, of $40,000 in money and property. Berney claims to have visited Venus twice and become an expert in Venusian science. He is promoting a device he calls a "modulator" (in fact, a TV antenna) that the space people have asked him to develop. ("'Man from Venus' Nabbed by FBI," Evansville (Ind.) Courier and Press, March 26, 1957, p. 1; "'Contact' Claimant Arrested in Confidence Swindle," CSI News Letter, no. 19 (May 1, 1957): 11; Clark III 597; Clark IV 656)

1957, March 28 — AEC physician and Navy Capt. Charles Wesley Shilling releases a press statement saying that "excessively hot baths can be as damaging to the human sex glands as radioactive fallout in the amount received in the last five years from the testing of atomic weapons." It is intended to counter the antinuclear activism of biochemist Linus Pauling. ("Says Hot Baths As Bad for Sex Glands As Fallout," Newport (R.I.) Daily News, March 29, 1957, p. 2)

1957, Early April — USAF Brig. Gen. Arno H. Luehman, director of Air Force information, tells the press that "There's no valid evidence that there are flying saucers." ("AF Intelligence Chief Visits Here," Miami (Fla.) News, April 14, 1957, p. 12A)

1957, April — 7:30 a.m. An anonymous resident of Córdoba, Argentina, is motorcycling to Rio Ceballos when his engine stops. He sees a large UFO hovering nearby, from which a human-like occupant emerges. He entices the man to enter the UFO with him. Inside, he sees 5–6 screens and intricate equipment, at each of which a similar occupant is seated. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 March 23rd–May 25th, The Author, 1995, pp. 63–64)

1957, April 4 — Pilot Robert L. Sieker takes a U-2 covered in radar-deflecting paint for a test run out of Area 51 and flies almost 90 miles without incident when suddenly the paint causes the aircraft to overheat, spin out of control, and crash near Pioche, Nevada. Sieker ejects but is killed when a piece of metal hits him in the head. (Aviation Safety Network, "Wikibase Occurrence #155905")

1957, April 4 — Five unusual radar contacts are detected simultaneously on three tracking radars of the Bombing Trials Unit based at RAF West Freugh [now MOD West Freugh], southeast of Stranraer, Scotland, and followed for 36 minutes. The three radars are located at two different sites near Luce Bay, Wigtownshire, Scotland. The object flashes across the sky at 60,000 feet, dives to 14,000 feet, circles, and speeds away. Wing Commander Walter Whitworth, in command at West Freugh, is ordered to say nothing about the object. Researcher Martin Shough notes that the case is unique in the UK in that there is "a document detailing an official technical investigation which is known to have had access to hard evidence—permanent radar recordings by multiple independent instruments—and which concluded in secret that real unidentified flying objects were detected." After looking at 12 likely causes for the returns, Shough concludes that "There appears to be no satisfactory explanation of these radar targets." (NICAP, "Three Radars Track Maneuvering UFO"; Good Above, pp. 48–49; Martin Shough, "Study of Unusual Radar Observations near RAF West Freugh, Wigtownshire, SW Scotland, April 4, 1957," March 2010; Patrick Gross, "The West Freugh Incident, 1957"; UFOFiles2, pp. 51–53)

1957, April 8 — USAF Maj. Gen. Joe W. Kelly answers a question from Rep. Lee Metcalf (D-Mont.) and denies that the Air Force has muzzled pilots. "Answers are provided on any unidentified flying objects which have attracted national attention." He admits that interceptors are still sent up "as a matter of security." (Keyhoe, FSTS)

1957, April 10 — Delmer S. Fahrney leaves NICAP's board of directors for urgent and personal reasons, partially because his wife is seriously ill, but also because of the ridicule generated by his peers in the military. (NICAP Special Bulletin, April 22, 1957; Clark III 792–793; Powell, Keyhoe, 207; Clark IV 873)

1957, April 14 — 3:00 p.m. Marie Garcin and Julia Rami are walking along road D24 a half-mile east of Vins-sur-Caramy, Var, France, when they hear a deafening noise and see a 5-foot-tall, 3-foot-wide, metallic, top-shaped object covered with vibrating sharp spines that is landing near a road sign. The sign starts to vibrate loudly, then the object hops over the road at a height of about 15–30 feet. Another witness, Jules Boglio, is about 1,000 feet away and sees the object land a second time in the adjoining road, then jump over another road sign which then vibrates loudly. Two other witnesses see the object at a much greater distance. (NICAP, "Top-Shaped Object Hovers at 300"; Jimmy Guieu, "Vins-sur-Caramy (Var), 14 avril 1957," Ouranos, no. 21 (1957): 50–52; "Soucoupe Lands Briefly in Provence," CSI News Letter, no. 20 (July 25, 1957): 13; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 145–146; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 154–156)

1957, April 15 — Two civilian technical representatives for the Philco Company see an object stalking a B-47 bomber during a landing approach at Eglin Air Force Base, Florida. Project Blue Book attributes the sighting to optical phenomena associated with the turbulence following the B-47. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 March 23rd–May 25th, The Author, 1995, pp. 39–40)

1957, April 17 — Secretary of State for Air George Ward tells the House of Commons that the Air Ministry investigates UFO reports "whenever the details are sufficient." (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1957, April 19 — 11:52 a.m. Two metallic discs are seen entering the South Pacific Ocean about 300 miles southeast of Tokyo, Japan, by Japanese fisherman aboard the Kitsukawa Maru. A violent turbulence disturbs the ocean after they submerge. The objects are 30 feet long and wingless. (NICAP, "Two Discs Enter Pacific"; "Two Mystery Craft Dive into Pacific Ocean," S.P.A.C.E., no. 7 (July 1957): 5; Dolan, USO1, 190–191)

1957, April 24 — 6:27 a.m. Project 57 is an open-air nuclear "dirty-bomb" test conducted in Area 13 at the Nellis Air Force Range, Nevada. The high explosives of a nuclear weapon are detonated asymmetrically to simulate an accidental detonation of an XW-25 warhead in an airplane crash. The purpose of the test is to verify that no yield would result, as well as study the extent of plutonium contamination. Some 4,000 galvanized steel pans sprayed with tacky resin are set up around a 10-by-16-square-mile block of land to capture plutonium samples. Some 68 air-sampler stations equipped with micropore paper are spread over 70 square miles. Mock-ups of sidewalks, curbs, and asphalt are set up in the desert; cars and trucks are added; giant air-sampling balloons are tethered in place; 9 burros, 109 beagles, 10 sheep, and 31 white rats are put in cages. Afterward, the contaminated area is fenced off and the contaminated equipment buried in place. Data from the test confirms that plutonium has a 24,000-year half-life; many of the test animals are killed, but security guard Richard Mingus manages not to inhale any particles. A radiological survey team detects alpha radiation, but no serious beta or gamma radiation. In 1981, the US Department of Energy decontaminates and decommissions the site. Hundreds of thousands of cubic yards of soil and debris are removed from Area 13 and disposed of in a waste facility at the Nevada Test Site. (Wikipedia, "Project 57"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 100–116)

1957, Late spring — Between 6:30 and 7:00 p.m. Airman 2nd Class Wallace Fowler is sitting on the front steps of his barracks at Ellsworth AFB near Rapid City, South Dakota, when a silver domed disc with portholes appears directly above him. Shadows are moving behind the portholes. The UFO is motionless and the size of a house. After about 2–3 minutes it takes off straight up at high speed. Many others on the base have seen the object as well, and jets are scrambled. The UFO maneuvers around the jets as if toying with them. One of the pursuing jets allegedly goes missing and the wreckage is never found. (Good Need, pp. 218–219)

1957, May — NICAP is fed a phony UFO crash story in the Everglades, Florida, by an Associated Press employee who is a "former Signal Corps engineer" with possible ties to the NSA. He admits faking the story but refuses to give any motive. (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 64–68)

1957, May — 4:50 a.m. A truck driver pulls over at the edge of the disused RAF Winkleigh Airfield [now the site of the West of England Transport Collection], Devon, England, to drink some coffee. He notices an object like a metallic, fluorescent-blue submarine with tail fins sitting at the end of the runway. It is about the size of an airliner. He watches it a while, then gets out of the truck and approaches it. He has the object in sight a total of 10–15 minutes and realizes it is hovering just above the ground. When he is 600 feet away, he encounters a type of force field that prevents him from approaching. The object then rises straight up into the sky to about 1,200 feet and shoots off to the north. The force field disappears. (Ron Toth, "UFO Landing at War-time Aerodrome," Pegasus 2, no. 3 (May/June 1970): 2–4)

1957, May — 6:00 a.m. Frances Stichler is working in her barn in Milford, Pennsylvania, when she hears a whirring sound and sees a bowl-shaped object approaching at a height of 15 feet. It is 15 feet in diameter with a rim about 3 feet wide. It hovers with one side tilted toward her 50 feet away. Its lone occupant, a helmeted figure with a long, olive-colored face and a shiny, light gray suit, gazes at her with a quizzical expression on his tanned face. It is sitting on the far rim with feet and legs hidden by the lower part of the object. Inside the open vehicle, she can see levers. After a minute, the object takes off to the southwest making a spinning sound. Her chickens do not seem disturbed by any of this. (Berthold Eric Schwarz, "UFO Occupants: Fact or Fantasy?" Flying Saucer Review 15, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1969): 14–15; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 May 24th–July 31st, The Author, 1996, p. 10; Patrick Gross, URECAT, December 17, 2006; Clark III 268; Clark IV 308)

1957, May? — 3:45 p.m. Two men in Orlando, Florida, see an oval object emerge from a larger cigar-shaped UFO about 75–100 feet long. (Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects: A Further Look," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 7, 25)

1957, May 1 — 7:00 a.m. A man driving a motorcycle about 9 miles from Pajas Blancas International Airport in Córdoba, Argentina, sees a UFO shortly after his engine fails. It is 65 feet in diameter and 16 feet thick, hovering about 50 feet above the ground. He hides in a ditch and sees the craft come down, making a sound similar to air escaping from a valve. A lift descends from its base almost to the ground. In it is a man of average height who makes friendly gestures. He is dressed in a plastic diving suit. The witness enters the machine and sees several people inside seated in front of instrument panels, lit by an extraordinary light. He is then escorted out, and the disc rises to the northwest. During the next hour, there are 6 other sightings made by independent witnesses. (Charles Bowen, "A South American Trio," Flying Saucer Review 11, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1965): 19–20; Oscar A. 1957, May 2— 6:55–7:20 a.m. Frank E. Baker, supervisor of civilian camera operators at Edwards AFB, California, sends the standard two-man crews out to their Askania tracking telescopes for their daily shifts. Veterans James D. Bittick and John R. Gettys Jr. are in their pickup expecting a normal day. As they approach their station in the Mojave Desert, they see a bright object in the sky. It is initially at about a 45° elevation and seems to be hovering. They need to get permission from Baker to photograph anything, so they call it in, begin readying the scope, load the film, and wait for the okay. Gettys says the base of the object has a circular appearance when high in the sky. Baker gives them his approval and they begin filming, each viewing the object through spotting scopes while the film rolls. They shoot about 100 feet then stop. During filming, the object moves from 1 mile away to 5 miles. What they see is a disc-shaped object with a low dome on top. They contact the base, which scrambles two jets, but they are too late. After they turn the film in, three officers show up and interrogate them. Future astronaut Gordon Cooper claims he was there that day, involved with the tracking. 1957, May 10 — After 10:45 p.m. At Beaucourt-sur-l'Ancre, Somme, France, a 29-year-old Hungarian refugee named Michel Sekete (or Fekete) is cycling when he is "dazzled by a strange projectile." He sees four men 4–5 feet tall approaching him in a threatening manner. One of them carries a bright light which prevents him from seeing much detail. He flees on his cycle to a nearby home, where others look out and see the occupants 300 feet away. The UFO is emitting red and white (or yellow) rays of light alternatively. They watch for about 20 minutes until 11:15 p.m. when the UFO takes off at a 45° angle. ("Flying Saucer Just a Lady with a Lamp," New York Daily News, May 12, 1957, p. 76; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 March 23rd–May 25th, The Author, 1995, pp. 69–72)

1957, May 11 — While attending the Giant Rock Interplanetary Spacecraft Convention in the Mojave Desert near Landers, California, Wayne Sulo Aho goes for a walk and sees a "majestic egg-shaped light." He directs a telepathic message to it, and the UFO lands 2 miles away. He begins receiving subtle psychic messages on his earthly mission. That night, Aho undergoes a "cosmic initiation." (Wayne S. Aho, Mojave Desert Experience, May 11, 1957, New Age, 1972; Clark III 59; Clark IV 80)

1957, May 15 — Secretary of State for Air George Ward responds to a question in the House of Commons by MP Frank Beswick concerning radar targets tracked over the English Channel on April 29 by saying that the speed of the objects was far less than 1000 mph as reported in the press. (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1957, May 20? (or 1956?) — Near 12:00 midnight. USAF Lt. Milton Torres is flying F-86D Sabre fighters with the 406th Bomber Wing based at RAF Manston [now closed], Kent, England. He receives an order from an RAF controller, who is tracking an unidentified target from Kelvedon Hatch Secret Nuclear Bunker [now closed] in Essex, to go up with a wingman to 32,000 feet over East Anglia in pursuit. Over the radio he receives an order to fire a salvo of rockets at the target; the order is so unusual that Torres seeks authentication before firing. Torres locates the large target on his aircraft radar, but when he closes in on it, it shoots away at tremendous speed, disappearing from the radar screens. The target might be explained by a secret CIA-MoD experiment, codenamed Palladium, to simulate an aircraft blip on Soviet radar screens. On his return to base, Torres is debriefed by a secret service agent and told his mission is top secret. (NICAP, "Milton Torres / Intercept Mission"; "U.S. Pilot Was Ordered to Shoot Down UFO," Reuters, October 20, 2008; David Clarke, "Intercept and Destroy," Fortean Times 242 (December 2008): 34–35; Paul Crickmore, "Project Palladium: Testing Soviet Radars," Tails Through Time, January 3, 2011; UFOFiles2, pp. 69–72; Curt Collins, "Area 51, the CIA, and Cold War UFOS: T. 1957, May 26 — An article in the UK Empire News on "Flying Saucer Clubs Probe: Peace Messages 'from Outer Space'" reveals that George King's Aetherius Society has been publishing channeled messages in its Cosmic Voice newsletter that are antiwar and anti-nuclear. It attracts the attention of Scotland Yard's Special Branch, thanks to an informant on the newspaper. King writes to explain that his group is religious and not political. A Special Branch officer visits King in his home in London, England, on May 31, and the group's writings and activities are watched for at least the next two years. (Kremlin 121–126)

1957, May 28 — Boltzmann, the first of 29 nuclear tests in Operation Plumbbob, takes place at the Nevada Test Site. At 12 kilotons, it is about the same size as the Hiroshima bomb and causes Area 51 personnel 11 miles away to be temporarily evacuated. Another test blast buckles aircraft hangar doors in Area 51, shatters windows in the mess hall, and breaks a dormitory ventilator panel. The Plumbbob tests continue until October 7, 1957. While most tests contribute to the development of warheads for intercontinental and intermediate range missiles, they also test air defense and anti-submarine warheads with small yields. (Wikipedia, "Operation Plumbbob")

1957, May 31 — 7:17 a.m. A British airliner is flying over Kent, two miles south of Rochester, England, when both the captain and first officer see a brilliant light approaching them. All radio communications cut out. The UFO blinks out and the radio equipment goes back into operation. (Schopick, pp. 122–123; Good Above, p. 50)

1957, June — The UFO Investigation Centre (UFOIC) begins publishing the UFO Bulletin. It lasts through July 1959. (Clark IV 1270)

1957, June 1 — Popular science writer and skeptic Martin Gardner publishes Fads and Fallacies in the Name of Science, an expanded edition of his 1952 work In the Name of Science. A survey of what it described as pseudosciences and cult beliefs, it becomes a founding document in the nascent scientific skepticism movement. Chapter 5 tackles UFOs and criticizes Keyhoe, Scully, Gerald Heard, and Raymond Palmer as examples of misguided "Forteanism." Besides fraud, the skies are teeming with weather balloons, stars, planets, aircraft, and birds that can be misidentified. He writes, "The more the public is confused, the easier it falls prey to doctrines of pseudo-science which may at some future date receive the backing of politically powerful groups." (Martin Gardner, Fads and Fallacies in the Name of Science, Dover, 1957)

1957, June 3 — 9:35 p.m. Shortly after takeoff from Shreveport (Louisiana) Airport, Capt. Lynn Kern and Flight Officer Abbey Zimmerman, flying Trans-Texas Airlines Flight 103, are told by the control tower that a small light is visible nearby. They see the star-like, blue-green object at about 400 feet altitude. It then climbs rapidly to 1,000 feet and parallels the airliner at a higher altitude and about a half-mile away. Kern flashes his landing lights, and the object responds with a beam of light. A second blue-green, pulsating object joins the first on the opposite side of the airliner (then at 9,000 feet). A crew from the air tower confirms that it has both objects on radar and visually through binoculars. The objects head south, climbing to about 10,000 feet, and follow the airliner to Converse, Louisiana, where the pilot queries ADC radar site, England AFB [now Alexandria International Airport], which confirms the two targets in the airliner's vicinity. The objects disappear from sight in a cloud deck to the southwest. (NICAP, "Flight 103 & 2 UFOs Tracked on Radar"; Sparks, p. 244; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 94–96; Clark 997; Clark IV 1110)

1957, June 5 — AEC Commissioner Willard Libby tells Congress that nuclear weapons testing is a "small risk" that must be measured against the "risk of annihilation." ("Bomb Testing Is Viewed As Risk to Be Compared with Annihilation," Spokane (Wash.) Chronicle, June 5, 1957, p. 2)

1957, June 11 — CIA operative Wallace R. Lampshire sends a memo to CIA operative Richard M. Bissell Jr., explaining that the agency's involvement with UFOs is passive, handing off reports to its geophysics or former weapons units. Lampshire has talked with Gen. Philip J. Strong, who knows of no Soviet technology that might be responsible for UFOs. (Staff memorandum from Wallace Lampshire to Richard Bissell, "Unidentified Flying Saucers (UFO)," June 11, 1957; Swords 264–265)

1957, June 15 — 5:06 p.m. George Marsden is resting by the side of the road during a bicycle ride with his 10-year-old son at Mawdesley, Lancashire, England, when he sees a light in the sky. He gets out his 35x pocket telescope and sees that it is a Saturn-shaped object with portholes. It appears to be 25 feet in diameter and is moving horizontally west-northwest at 500–600 mph at an altitude of 6,000–7,000 feet. The object is silver with a bluish tint and is in sight for about 11 seconds before it takes off vertically. (UFOEv, p. 146; Center for UFO Studies, [case documents])

1957, June 15 — A report in the UK weekly newspaper Reynold's News claims that an Air Ministry spokesman has admitted the agency conducts top secret UFO research in Room 801 of one of its offices on Northumberland Avenue, London, England. The spokesman says the room has "something like 10,000 sightings" on file and a large map of the British Isles with thousands of colored pins representing sightings. Flying Saucer Review editor Gordon Creighton says the office belongs to the Deputy Directorate of Intelligence (Technical), which employs UFO researchers full-time. ("The Secret of Room 801: Reynolds News Reporter," Flying Saucers (C.S.I. N. Z.) 5, no. 1 (July/Sept. 1957): 20; Good Above, p. 49; Marcus Lowth, "The Secrets of Room 801 and Britain's 'Lost' 1950s UFO Cases," UFO Insight, October 14, 2021)

1957, June 18 — 8:00 p.m. Captain C. G. Wertz and the crew of the Matson freighter Hawaiian Fisherman see two brightly lit objects off the port beam as they are steaming 150 miles off San Francisco, California. A third object joins them at 8:15. They appear as small moons, giving off a cold, white, unchanging light. The three move off in a V formation and pace the ship for a short time. The lights continue their controlled flight as dusk turns to night. ("Flying Saucers Back with Us," Oakland (Calif.) Tribune, June 20, 1957, p. 46; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 78)

1957, June 20 — Mysterious radar echoes begin turning up on Bluff Hill, near Invercargill, New Zealand, for several months. The targets are visible from several minutes up to an hour and are located somewhere in the ionosphere. Michael Gadsden of the Imperial College in London is in New Zealand for the International Geophysical Year and he says the targets' movements are unusual and suspects that ionized particles are the cause. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 81–82)

1957, Summer — P. Craig Phillips, curator of the Miami Seaquarium, and two other scientists witness a fall of angel hair for two hours as they are sailing northward toward the Florida Keys. Assuming them to be cobwebs from migrating airborne spiders, Phillips takes some samples and puts them in a mason jar. But when he uncaps the jar later in his office, no trace of the material is found, which is uncharacteristic of spider web. (UFOEv, pp. 99–100; Brian Boldman, "An Analysis of Angel Hair, 1947–2000," IUR 26, no. 3 (Fall 2001): 15; Clark III 124; Clark IV 151–152)

1957, Summer — Early morning. Contactee Trevor Constable and an associate named James Woods take many infrared photos of the desert sky over southern California. When developed, the film reveals a variety of shapes from vague blobs and amoeba-like forms to clearly defined discs. Constable calls them "critters" and thinks they are some kind of life form invisible to the naked eye. (Trevor James [Constable], They Live in the Sky, New Age, 1958; Clark III 1102; Clark IV 1228–1229)

1957, Summer — Allan Haney and some friends "on a number of occasions" climb onto someone's roof in Levelland, Texas, to watch 3–4 objects hovering over Reese AFB [now Reese Technology Center] in Lubbock, 26 miles to the east. (Donald R. Burleson, "Levelland, Texas, 1957: Case Reopened," IUR 28, no. 1 (Spring 2003): 5)

1957, Summer — A young boy and his mother are picnicking on the shore of Penobscot Bay near Camden, Maine, when they notice a silvery domed disk descending rapidly from the sky. It crashes into the water at a steep angle, but makes no sound and creates no ripples. The mother grabs her son and leaves the beach. (Carl Feindt, "Report #1116," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 191–192)

1957, Summer — 4:00 a.m. Two sport fishermen observe a huge, white-pink UFO come to the surface of the Straits of Florida off the Playa Bacuranao, near Havana, Cuba, creating white surf waves. The object flies overhead and drips salt water on their yacht. (Carl Feindt, "Report #142," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 192)

1957, July — The Air Defense Command disbands the 4602nd AISS and reassigns UFO investigative duties to the 1006th AISS at Norton AFB [San Bernardino International Airport], California. Soon afterwards, the Air Force reduces funds for the unit, impairing its investigative ability. (Clark III 919; Clark IV 1029)

1957, July — NICAP publishes the first issue of The UFO Investigator, in which it offers the Air Force an "8 point plan" of cooperation to end UFO secrecy and "assist in public understanding of the UFO problem." ("8 Point Plan Offered Air Force," UFO Investigator 1, no. 1 (July 1957): 1, 5, 25; Clark III 793; Powell, Keyhoe, 214–215; Clark IV 873)

1957, Early July — NICAP learns that the US Senate Subcommittee on Investigations is considering hearings on UFOs and wants its assistance. Hillenkoetter suggests withholding the best cases, at least initially. (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 70–79; Powell, Keyhoe, 218–219)

1957, July 5 — During the 74-kiloton Plumbbob Hood nuclear test at the Nevada Test Site, the Marine Corps conducts a tactical maneuver involving the use of a helicopter airlift, tactical air support, and an amphibian tractor called the LVTP5. Despite the AEC's assurance that no thermonuclear devices are being tested, Hood is thermonuclear and is the largest atmospheric test in the continental US. All Area 51 personnel are evacuated prior to the blast, but the military neglects to secure the sensitive information in the buildings with security guards. Seventy anesthetized Chester White pigs in military uniforms (as test fabrics) are placed in cages a short distance from ground zero. Several types of wood houses are constructed to see how each handles the blast. The Mosler Safe Company sponsors the construction of a steel vault to withstand the blast. Some 100 soldiers, lying in trenches, are stationed to gauge the psychological impact of the bomb. The flash is visible from Canada to Mexico and 800 miles out in the Pacific. The blast wave reaches Los Angeles 25 minutes later. Afterwards, security guard Richard Mingus has to drive through a highly radioactive ground zero to reach the buildings at Area 51 ten miles away. Area 51 remains an evacuated ghost town until the summer of 1959. (Wikipedia, "Desert Rock exercises"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 119–123)

1957, July 10 — George Hunt Williamson, exploring in Peru from his base at the Monastery of the Seven Rays and spurred by his own channelings, rediscovers a wall of petroglyphs [now known as the Petroglyphs of Pusharo, in the Manú National Park] in an area northeast of Cuzco called Cadena del Pantiacolla. (George Hunt Williamson, "Project Scroll," Flying Saucer Review 3, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1957): 18–19; George Hunt Williamson, Road in the Sky, Neville Spearman, 1959; Brother Philip [Williamson], Secret of the Andes, Neville Spearman, 1961; Zirger and Martinelli, The Incredible Life of George Hunt Williamson, Verdechiari, 2016, pp. 97–98, 109–115)

1957, Mid-July — Keyhoe meets with US Rep. James C. Healey (D-N.Y.) regarding USAF secrecy about UFOs. He shows Healey the 1949 Grudge report and apparently convinces him that the Air Force's explanations for the 24 cases are "sheer speculation" or "deliberately fitted." He also presents him Gen. Joe W. Kelly's April 8 letter to Lee Metcalf, indicating serious interest in UFOs. (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 81–82, 91, 96)

1957, July 15 — In a letter to his associates around the world, George Adamski announces a Get Acquainted Program, in which messages from the Space Brothers will be passed on to designated representatives: "Information of the Brothers of other worlds, with whom I continue having more or less regular meetings, will be sent regularly to each national leader, who in turn will forward it to all of his assistants. They then will pass it on to their associates. The idea is that the citizens of each nation, through these efforts, will grow into closer united friendship with their countrymen, without discrimination or divisions of any kind." Within two years, Adamski's contact list consists of 22 names from 17 countries. (The Adamski Case, "Get Acquainted Program"; Eghigian, After, p. 121)

1957, July 16 — 1:56 p.m. 1st Lt. Clifford E. Pocock, scope operator A2C Walter Lyons, and control technician A1C Armand Therrien at Las Vegas Air Force Station [now closed] at Angel Peak, Nevada, are using the FPS-3A L-band search radar and track an inbound target at about 6,200 mph when it "stopped abruptly" and "remained stationary" for 12 seconds to the east-northeast 85 miles away to the north of Grand Canyon in Arizona. Then it heads outbound at about 7,000 mph before disappearing at the radar's maximum range at 224 miles (near Marble Canyon, Arizona). The target responds to encrypted military IFF transponder signals and transmits encrypted responses. (NICAP, "6200 MPH Target Hovers near Grand Canyon"; Sparks, p. 244; Clark III 997; Powell, Scientist, 92; Clark IV 1110)

1957, July 17 — Before dawn. The crew of a USAF RB-47 reconnaissance aircraft is flying out of Forbes Field [now Topeka Regional Airport], Kansas, on an electronic warfare training flight over Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas. The RB-47 is carrying a 6-man crew, of whom three are electronic warfare officers manning ECM gear in the aft portion of the aircraft. Their names are Lewis Dormon Chase, pilot; James H. McCoid, copilot; Thomas H. Hanley, navigator; John J. Provenzano, No. 1 monitor; Frank B. McClure, No. 2 monitor; and Walter A. Tuchscherer, No. 3 monitor. The crew detects on its Electronic Intelligence (ELINT) equipment an airborne radar source at 2.8 GHz that mimics some but not all of the signal characteristics of a common air defense ground radar. Aircraft normally do not carry such high-powered radars. As the key ELINT officer on the RB-47 puts it, "an antenna bigger than the airplane" would be required to emit as strong a signal as the one detected from the UFO. Because the UFO signal appears to have comparable or greater received signal strength than the one-megawatt ground radar beam and the UFO's distance is about 5 times closer than the ground radar, a crude estimate of the UFO radar power output using the inverse-square law would be about 40 kilowatts. The maneuvering radar signal coincides in location with a bright UFO. At times the signal moves ahead of the RB-47, then circles around as if airborne, highly maneuverable, and flying faster than the RB-47. The 55th Strategic Reconnaissance Wing Intelligence report states that the Wing's director of intelligence "has no doubt the electronic D/F's coincided exactly with visual observations by a/c numerous times thus indicating positively the object being the signal source." An air defense radar station near Dallas, Texas, reportedly confirms tracking a UFO at the same location reported by the RB-47 crew but later tries to deny it in an unclassified message to ATIC. The UFO is reportedly tracked by the RB-47's airborne navigation radar as well, though the crew has differing recollections on this point. Twice the UFO blinks out visually when pursued by the RB-47. At the same time the strange signal disappears; either that, or the ground radar site and the RB-47 onboard radar loses the object from their scopes. At least once, the UFO suddenly reappears visually at about the same time the ground radar regains tracking of the object. The main part of the incident occupies 30 minutes over the Fort Worth, Texas, area from 5:30–6:00 a.m. Some earlier ELINT and visual incidents are noted as early as about 4:30 a.m., but they catch the crew off guard, and consequently reports at the time and later recollections have had to be carefully reconstructed. The UFO may have trailed the RB-47 up to 6:40 a.m. following the main events, for a total duration of possibly more than 126 minutes. The RB-47 incident is the first conclusive instrumented proof for the existence of UFOs. Calibrations of the RB-47's electronic measurements provide an irrefutable case. When the Colorado Project scientists asked the Air Force for the Blue Book file on the RB-47 case, the file could not be found. Ultimately, the case was put together by better file searching at Blue Book, James E. McDonald's success at locating several crew members and interviewing them, and FOIA searches that located more of the lost documents. Particularly in the George T. Gregory years at ATIC, this sort of rejection of the need to clarify almost any significant aspect of a UFO case was constant. If we did not know, from our earlier information, what Captain Gregory understood to be his duty as chief of Blue Book, we would label this as reckless and incompetent. Colorado project investigator Gordon Thayer declares the case unexplained, and later describes the official USAF explanation (airliner) as "literally ridiculous." Brad Sparks sums it up in 1998 (and in 2018): "This case certainly now ranks as among the best documented unexplained UFO incidents in history, and it has the potential for further revealing disclosures if records of an extremely highly classified investigation can be found and released. All of the UFO observations by multiple visual observers, multiple ELINT receivers, and multiple radar sets, as well as the serendipitous calibrations of the UFO signals against the separately identifiable Duncanville radar signals, provide a unique, tight, interlocking web of intricately fitted evidence." 1957, July 17 — Flight 655 en route from Dallas to Los Angeles, piloted by Capt. Ed Bachner, has a near collision with an object "at least the size of a B-47" over the salt flats some 100 miles east of El Paso, Texas. Bachner puts the plane into a dive and the object passes only 50 feet above them. Two passengers suffer slight injuries and are taken to the hospital on landing. However, the Civil Aeronautics Administration establishes the UFO in this case is American Airlines Flight 966, which had departed El Paso en route to Dallas. ("Airline Pilot Tells How 85 Persons Missed Death," Los Angeles (Calif.) Mirror, July 18, 1957, p. 2; "Near Collision In Air Reported," Roanoke (Va.) Times, July 18, 1957, p. 1957, July 17 — Keyhoe asks Ruppelt, who is now an engineer with Northrup Aircraft, to join the NICAP board following the I've Got a Secret Show on which he is appearing. Ruppelt considers it an honor, but declines two weeks later. (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 70–79; Powell, Keyhoe, 219–220)

1957, July 18 — 10:46 p.m. Capt. Claiborne F. Bickham and a radar crew at Mount Lemmon Air Force Station [now closed] northeast of Tucson, Arizona, using both MPS-7 L-band search and MPS-14 S-band height-finder radars, track a stationary target at 42,000 feet to the northwest about 82 miles away south of Chandler. The target responds to encrypted military IFF Mode 3 transponder signals and transmits encrypted responses that result in "normal Mode 3 paint" on radar scopes. A very slight strobe comes from the object that appears like Electronic Counter Measures jamming. (NICAP, "Ground Radar Track Responds to IFF Mode 3"; Sparks, p. 245; Clark III 997–998; Powell, Scientist, 92; Clark IV 1110)

1957, July 19 — The Plumbbob John nuclear test at Yucca Flats, Nevada, is the only test of the Air Force's AIR-2 Genie missile with a nuclear warhead. On the ground, the Air Force carries out a public relations event by having five Air Force officers and a videographer stand under ground zero of the blast, which takes place at between 18,500 and 20,000 feet altitude, with the idea of demonstrating the possibility of the use of the weapon over civilian populations without ill effects. (Wikipedia, "Operation Plumbbob")

1957, July 22 — Night. Capt. G. M. Schemel, the pilot of a TWA Constellation aircraft, is flying at 18,000 feet near Amarillo, Texas, when a big red and green light bears down on his plane in a collision course. He puts the aircraft into a dive and the object passes above him. Schemel has to make an unscheduled landing at Amarillo to hospitalize one passenger who is injured during the maneuver. ("Kenosha Pilot Tells of Mysterious Object," Kenosha (Wis.) News, July 24, 1957, p. 1; "Scientists Say Near Collisions May Involve Space Vehicles," UFO Investigator 1, no. 2 (Aug./Sept. 1957): 9)

1957, July 24 — Russian antiaircraft batteries on the Kuril Islands, Sakhalin Oblast, Russia, in the Pacific Ocean open fire on luminous, fast-moving UFOs. No hits are made. The US claims it has no aircraft in the area. However, at 10:00 a.m., two USAF pilots flying F-86s are scrambled to intercept a disc-shaped object over the Nemuro Strait, north of Hokkaido, Japan, that is tracked by ground radar and seen by ground witnesses. (Sparks, p. 245; Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, p. 42)

1957, July 24 — White Sands Missile Flight Safety Director Nathan Wagner is driving with his wife Alma south of Las Cruces, New Mexico, when they see a large, fast object at high altitude moving east toward the Organ Mountains. They watch it for 30 seconds until it disappears. (NICAP, "Missile Safety Chief Says Object Unknown"; "Space Vehicles Sighted?" El Paso (Tex.) Times, July 30, 1957, p. 1; "Missile Flight Safety Chief Reports Sighting of Large UFO," UFO Investigator 1, no. 2 (Aug./Sept. 1957): 6; Swords 249)

1957, July 25 — 12:25 a.m. USAF pilot 1st Lt. Robert S. Hipkins and alert center operator S/Sgt Raymond C. Henry, both 47th Fighter Interceptor Squadron, see a circular brilliant white object with six smaller pale-green lights on its perimeter moving slowly at constant altitude at Niagara Falls Municipal Airport in New York. It makes fast pivoting turns, maneuvering radically from southeast to northeast and disappears in about 5–8 minutes in a rapid, steep climb. A CPS-6B radar tracks it for 3 minutes. (NICAP, "CPS6 ADC Radar Tracks Brilliant White Light"; Sparks, p. 245; Condon, p. 145; Martin Shough, RADCAT: Radar Catalogue: A Review of Twenty-One Ground and Airborne Radar UAP Contact Reports Generally Related to Aviation Safety for the Period October 15, 1948, to September 19, 1976, National Aviation Reporting Center on Anomalous Phenomena, NARCAP Report TR-6, December 8, 2002, pp. 97–101)

1957, July 25 — 4:00 a.m. Several workers are taking a break at the Daye Steel Plant in Huangshi, Hubei, China, when they hear a humming sound. They notice a bright spot in the clear sky that is increasing in apparent size. As it comes closer, it is seen as a circular plate giving off a dazzling white light and leaving a white trail. It flies above the observers at an altitude of 3,300 feet and produces a whistling sound that is louder than a jet. As the object approaches the witnesses, the low pitch changes to a high pitch. (Wendelle Stevens and Paul Dong, UFOs over Modern China, UFO Photo Archives, 1983)

1957, July 28 — A Douglas Aircraft Company employee named Edward K. Current Jr. makes an emergency landing on the former U-2 airstrip at Groom Lake, Nevada. He claims he has been on a cross-country training flight when he became lost and ran low on fuel. The area is still evacuated for nuclear testing. (Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 125–126; T. D. Barnes, "False Emergency Landings at Groom Lake," Roadrunners Internationale, November 22, 2021)

1957, July 30 — 10:30 a.m. Jack Stephenson is walking his dog four miles south of Galt, Ontario, when he sees an aluminum-colored object with a dome. It circles, stops, and hovers, then lands in a gulley surrounded by woods. He watches it for 45 minutes as it hovers about 2 feet off the ground. It finally takes off at a 45° angle to avoid a power line, then shoots away. Local residents examine the area and find burned patches on the ground and small tree limbs that are broken. There are four burned or charred areas, each about 1 foot 3 inches in diameter, forming a four-sided figure with these measurements: 20 feet x 20 feet x 6.5 feet x 11.5 feet. Two large three-toed prints are also found, but the relationship of the prints to the object is unknown. ("Boy Reports 'Saucer,'" Brantford (Ont.) Expositor, August 3, 1957, p. 1; "Says He Saw Flying Saucer for 45 Minutes," Milk River (Alberta) Review, August 25, 1957; Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, pp. 51–53)

1957, August — Radar technician Edward Lovick Jr. begins work at Lockheed's secret Advanced Development Projects facility (the Skunk Works) in Burbank, California. His first assignment is to investigate radar-deflecting technology for the U-2 aircraft. (Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 126–127)

1957, August — Night. A young woman is driving home after work in Peru, Indiana, and notices people standing along the road looking at the sky. She stops, and they point to a large black object hovering above some nearby trees at about 100 feet. It is about 1,000 feet long and has a "soft delta" shape with rounded corners and window-like lighted areas underneath. There seems to be movement within the lighted areas. In the middle of the bottom is a round area that looks like it might be the outline of an entryway. It moves slowly away, making a noise like a quiet vacuum cleaner. (Michael D. Swords, "Timmerman's Triangles," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 16)

1957, August 1 — The North American Air Defense Command is announced by the US Joint Chiefs of Staff. (Wikipedia, "North American Aerospace Defense Command")

1957, August 3 — 7:45 p.m. 1st Lt. Robert J. Springer Jr., T/Sgt. Herman L. Giles, and 16 other air crewmen, while on routine Airborne Operations Center radar early warning patrol over the Pacific Ocean about 175 miles southwest of San Francisco, California, aboard an RC-121D aircraft, detect a radar target on IFF Mode 2 transponder only. At 7:56 p.m., the IFF target becomes a direct radar "skinpaint." At 8:02 p.m., the IFF equipment APX-6/APX-7 is turned off, but the target is still tracked on airborne radar. At 8:15 p.m., the target is at a 2 o'clock position 10 miles away when the aircraft starts a right turn to reverse course, putting the target dead ahead. It suddenly takes off to the northwest at very high speed, disappearing 58 miles away. Radar contact is regained at 8:18 p.m. as the target is tracked moving right to left, crossing in front of the aircraft again, and closing distance to 8 miles at 11 o'clock. At 8:20 p.m., the target turns to head on a parallel path. The crew loses contact at 8:24 p.m., 15 miles behind the plane. No visual confirmation. (NICAP, "RC-121D Has IFF Radar Targets"; Sparks, p. 246; Clark III 998; Powell, Scientist, 92; Clark IV 1110–1111)

1957, August 4 — An Italian Air Force noncommissioned officer on duty in the control tower at Naples International Airport, Italy, and about 30 other witnesses see a number of luminous, disc-shaped objects passing above them. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 80)

1957, August 5 — 10:00 p.m. Policeman Ernst W. Akerberg and his wife Karin are at their summer cottage on the island of Gotland, Sweden, in the Baltic Sea when they see a disc-shaped object heading toward them from the sea. When it reaches the shore about 600 feet away, the object changes course and executes a sharp turn at less than 90° of arc and turns on its edge, swaying briefly. The disc moves toward the southeast and makes another sharp turn just over a half-mile away, again turning on its edge and fluttering before passing out of view. A second, smaller object approaches and goes through the same maneuvers. Air currents from both objects make the water surface ripple and the treetops swing. Estimated to be about 80 feet in diameter, the objects seem to be made of shining metal, and the upper part rotates slowly over the lower part. Both objects have a kind of tube with two red lights. They are silent except for a hollow clicking sound. (Story, pp. 152–153; Clas Svahn, "1957 Diskusarna svängde framför polismannen," Riksorganisationen UFO-Sverige)

1957, August 14 — 8:55 p.m. Varig Airlines pilot Capt. Jorgé Campos Araujo and First Officer Edgar Onofre Soares observe a domed disc pacing their C-47 cargo plane at 6,300 feet over Joinville, Santa Catarina, Brazil. The UFO speeds up and crosses just in front of them, hovers briefly, then dives into the undercast at 5,700 feet. When the object hovers, it affects the engines, which cough and wheeze, and dims the cabin lights. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 August–September, Supplemental Notes, The Author, 2003, pp. 11–13)

1957, August 20 — 11:28 a.m. Shinichi Takeda takes a photo of a silvery disc near Enoshima Beach, Kanagawa, Japan. The object is also seen by his sister, who calls his attention to it. It gives off a brilliant glow at an estimated altitude of 3,000–4,000 feet, traveling north to south. The object makes a 90° left turn, speeds up, and disappears in the clouds. The photo shows capsule-shaped image near bank of cumulus clouds. A few minutes later, 15 people on the beach report a similar object that passes over at high speed. (NICAP, "Capsule-Shaped Object in Clouds / Takeda Photo")

1957, August 20 or 22 — A member of the Argentine Air Force guarding a downed aircraft is in a tent near Quilinos, Córdoba, Argentina, when he hears a high-pitched hum. Dashing out, he sees a disc slowly descending, making the grass and plants flutter wildly. Reaching for his revolver, he feels that something is preventing him from drawing his weapon, which seems glued in his holster. A voice from the disc tells him in Spanish that spacecraft have a base in the Salta region and that they are here to warn about nuclear energy. The craft rises vertically and speeds off to the north. Probable hoax. ("UFO Bases in South America?" Flying Saucer Review 11, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1965): 30–31; Patrick Gross, URECAT, December 8, 2006)

1957, August 22 — 3:40 p.m. A couple named Sheetz in a car at Naval Air Station Cecil [now Cecil Airport] in Jacksonville, Florida, chase a 50-foot, black, rotating, bell-shaped object bearing two bright white lights at the top. Their engine stalls when object hovers 10 feet away. Its underside resembles a disc with fins. When a jet takes off from the airfield, the object goes out of sight almost instantly. The car battery is completely dead. Noise from the object is compared to a helicopter, although there are no helicopters in the area. (NICAP, "Car Chases Bell-Shaped Object, Engine Stalls"; Sparks, p. 246; Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1981, p. 7)

1957, August 27 — Russia makes the first successful long flight of an ICBM, the R-7 Semyorka, from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in Kazakhstan. The dummy warhead lands in the Pacific Ocean. (Wikipedia, "R-7 Semyorka")

1957, August 27 — A Trendex poll on UFOs shows that 25.3% of Americans nationwide think flying saucers are from outer space, while 52.9 % are skeptical, many of them thinking that they are hallucinations, weather balloons, or US or foreign secret weapons. ("Trendex Poll Shows 1 in 4 Believes UFOs Are Real," UFO Investigator 1, no. 2 (Aug./Sept. 1957): 6)

1957, August 30 — Night. A Capital Airlines pilot is flying a Viscount at 12,000 feet approaching Norfolk, Virginia, with a Northeast Airlines DC-6 directly above on the same heading at 20,000 feet. The Viscount pilot sees a brilliant object that "flew fast and then abruptly halted 20 miles in front of us at 60,000 feet altitude." The Northeast pilot tries to acquire the object on radar. With the antenna at 0° elevation, nothing is detected, but with the antenna elevated to 15° he acquires "an excellent blip right where I told him to look for the object." According to the

Viscount pilot, the object "dissolved right in front of my eyes, and the crew above lost it from the scope at the same time. They said it just faded away." The entire incident lasts several minutes. (NICAP, "Two Aircraft Observe Object / Excellent Blip on Radar"; Condon, pp. 128–129; Martin Shough, RADCAT: Radar Catalogue: A Review of Twenty-One Ground and Airborne Radar UAP Contact Reports Generally Related to Aviation Safety for the Period October 15, 1948, to September 19, 1976, National Aviation Reporting Center on Anomalous Phenomena, NARCAP Report TR-6, December 8, 2002, pp. 101–102)

1957, August 31 — After nuclear test Plumbbob Smokey, Army troops conduct an airlift assault. (Wikipedia, "Desert Rock exercises")

1957, August 31 — Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) sends a letter to a constituent about UFOs, saying, "I, frankly, feel that there is a great deal to this." (UFOEv, p. 173)

1957, September — Soviet defector Nikolai Khokhlov suffers a sudden and severe illness while attending an anti-Communist meeting in Frankfurt, Germany. He is treated for thallium poisoning and survives. This case is often claimed to be the first radiological attack by the KGB, especially when compared to the poisoning of Alexander Litvinenko in 2006, although it remains unclear what isotope was used, if any. Former KGB officer Stanislav Lekarev claims, however, that Khokhlov is poisoned by radioactive polonium (not thallium), exactly as Litvinenko is later. Litvinenko's poisoning is also initially mistaken for thallium. A unique mechanism for administering poison is described by a knowledgeable source at the time as a pneumatically operated poison ice "atomizer" that leaves no wound or other evidence of the cause of death. (Wikipedia, "Nikolai Khokhlov"; Christopher Andrew and Vasili Mitrokhin, The Sword and the Shield: The Mitrokhin Archive and the Secret History of the KGB, Basic Books, 1999; Andy Wright, "The Russian Spy Who Convinced America to Take ESP Seriously," Atlas Obscura, January 13, 2017; David Kurlander, "Ending in a Fall: America's Response to the Poisoning of Soviet Defector Nikolai Khokhlov," Café, September 3, 2020)

1957, Early September — Several people fishing near Ubatuba, São Paulo, Brazil, watch a disc dive down from the sky and explode, showering the area with flaming fragments. One of the witnesses writes an anonymous letter and sends three pieces to O Globo, but no witnesses to the event have ever come forward. APRO representative Olavo T. Fontes examines the fragments, which are dull gray, irregular, and strongly oxidized. One sample is shot through with microscopic cracks and shows a fissure running through two-thirds of its length. All three have whitish smears of a powdery substance like cinders. Fontes takes one sample to the Mineral Production Laboratory of the Ministry of Agriculture for analysis, which shows it to be "magnesium of a high degree of purity." Chemist Luisa Maria A. Barbosa, who conducts a spectrographic analysis, says that not even trace elements are apparent. Fontes also has it analyzed by chemist Elson Teixeira and the Brazilian Army. The Laboratory of Crystallography conducts some X-ray diffraction work. All conclude that the material is pure magnesium, while one gives it a density of 1.866 (normal magnesium is 1.741). APRO sends a second fragment to the US Air Force, which accidentally destroys it. The third sample is sent to the Colorado Project in February 1968. Roy Craig runs tests on it at the Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Division of the IRS in Washington and Dow Chemical's Metallurgical Laboratory. Both determine that the level of purity is not as high as was determined in 1957 (although this is now seen as a major misrepresentation of the actual results). APRO does two further tests with University of Arizona metallurgical engineer Walter A. Walker and Robert W. Johnson of the Materials Research Corporation at Orangeburg, New Jersey. Walker and Johnson both find that the sample "had undergone a directional crystal growth type of manufacture." Walker concludes that the material was likely exposed to the earth's atmosphere at elevated temperatures. Researchers Brad Sparks and Michael D. Swords examine Roy Craig's archived original notes from the Colorado Project and find that the team had covered up the fact that an abnormal concentration of magnesium isotope Mg-26 had indeed been found and knowingly misrepresented the sample to APRO as "essentially the same as terrestrial magnesium," blaming them for cherry-picking the Brazilian lab results. Peter A. Sturrock acquires the remnant of the samples from APRO and performs further analysis on two of them in 1997. In 2018, Michael Swords and Robert Powell borrow one Ubatuba sample from Sturrock and arrange for further tests at an accredited lab, finding variations well outside the normal range for magnesium, strontium, copper, and barium. 1957, September — 3:00 p.m. Hélio Penteado and his foreman Zaca Sabiá are repairing a fence on Penteado's farm in Campinas, São Paulo, Brazil, when Sabiá's dog begins growling at something in the mint field. They hear a loud, irritating sound and see a disc about 50 feet wide landing in the field and supported by three legs with spheres on the end that pierce the ground. Penteado goes closer to investigate and sees two beings about 4 feet tall leave the UFO wearing green coveralls. They seem to float along the ground and take a vessel from under the craft. One of them is carrying something like a gun or flamethrower. They pass through a fence on the way to a river. After 10 minutes the beings return with the vessel apparently full of river water. The entity with the flamethrower shoots it at a jacaranda tree and a eucalyptus tree, damaging their trunks. They reenter the object via the dome, which takes off toward the city. Back at his barn, Penteado notices that all his metallic tools are stacked in a cone, the birds are dead, his monkey is agitated, and his watch has stopped working. The same day, people observe a UFO over a hospital on the Avenida Julio Mesqita, where the object dumps two drops of liquid metal that falls in the street. The UFO goes so low that it hits the corner of a parked truck. An analysis of the metal by an unnamed organization (possibly the Brazilian Air Force) shows that the metal is high in magnesium. Penteado later goes to the landing site and takes plaster casts of the footprints, which he sends to the Agronomy Institute of Campinas. ("Caso do disco proximo de Campinas," Boletim SBEDV, no. 14 (March 1, 1960): 1–3; Brazil 35–37)

1957, September 1 — 12:00 midnight. Chief Inspector Reginald Jones and a fellow officer of the Glamorgan Police are patrolling the seafront at Porthcawl, Bridgend County, Wales. Suddenly a blood-red object with a jagged black streak across its center rises out of the Bristol Channel on the southwest horizon. Two more streaks appear above and below it. It then takes off at great speed toward the Atlantic Ocean. ("World Roundup," Flying Saucer Review 3, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1957): 5, 9)

1957, September 2 — After the Plumbbob Galileo nuclear shot at the Nevada Test Site, Army troops are tested to determine their psychological reactions to witnessing the nuclear detonation. (Wikipedia, "Desert Rock exercises")

1957, September 4 — Four Portuguese jet fighter-bombers under the command of Capt. José Lemos Ferreira are flying at night at 24,600 feet between Ota, Portugal, and Granada, Spain. Near Granada they turn to head to Portalegre, Portugal. At this point, Ferreira notices a UFO like a bright star with a scintillating, colored nucleus that changes from deep green to blue. The object suddenly grows to 5 or 6 times its original size, then shrinks to a barely visible yellow point. These changes repeat several times, possibly due to changes in position. The UFO maintains its position 90° to the left of the squadron. Suddenly a small circle of yellow light emerges from the object and three smaller yellow objects appear, maneuver, then disappear. (NICAP, "Portuguese Air Force Jets Have 40-Min. Encounter / E-M"; "Portuguese Pilots Meet Saucers," Flying Saucer Review 4, no. 2 (March/April 1958): 7; Marciano Alves, "Air Force Pilots Spend 40 Minutes with Saucers," Flying Saucer Review 4, no. 3 (May/June 1958): 2–3; Good Above, pp. 147–148; Kean, p. 50)

1957, September 12 — NORAD's command headquarters is established at Ent Air Force Base in Colorado Springs, Colorado. Canada and the United States agree that the NORAD commander will always be a US officer, with a Canadian vice commander, and Canada "agreed the command's primary purpose would be…early warning and defense for SAC's retaliatory forces." Every continental US military radar UFO case in the Blue Book files from now on is a NORAD case because the subordinate USAF Air Defense Command belongs to NORAD. (Wikipedia, "North American Aerospace Defense Command"; Clark III 801; Clark IV 893)

1957, September 16 — ATIC briefs Howard P. Robertson, now chairman of the Defense Science Board, on Project Blue Book, presumably because he wants to find out how the Air Force is implementing the recommendations of the 1953 Robertson Panel. The briefing book (including Special Report no. 14 as well as reports on Keyhoe and the UFO movie) is delivered by the Pentagon's Maj. James F. Byrne. (Swords 265–266)

1957, September 19 — The Plumbbob Rainier nuclear shot at the Nevada Test Site is the first fully contained underground nuclear test, meaning that no fission products are vented into the atmosphere. This test of 1.7 kilotons can be detected around the world by seismologists using ordinary seismic instruments. (Wikipedia, "Operation Plumbbob")

1957, September 20 — 3:05 p.m. A national defense alert is called when the first of two or three supersonic objects, varying in speed for the next 30 minutes from 800 to 12,000 mph and varying in altitude from 50,000 to 135,000 feet, is picked up over the Atlantic by NORAD radar at Montauk, New York. A second (or same) UFO heads straight toward SAC headquarters in Omaha, Nebraska, in what is perceived as a threat trajectory potentially aiming for a nuclear knockout kill of the entire US nuclear force. At 3:10 p.m., interception is attempted by two F-102 jets from Kinross AFB [now Chippewa County International Airport] south of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, and later from Truax AFB [now Truax Field Air National Guard Base] northeast of Madison, Wisconsin. At 3:24 p.m., another UFO joins the first on a similar trajectory 150 miles behind. It passes over Ontario, Michigan, Illinois, and Iowa. The UFO sends radio replies to Identification Friend or Foe (IFF) interrogation signals, on different frequencies, confirming its location on the radar plots and making it impossible to explain as a malfunction or interference. Interception is impossible at these speeds and altitudes. SAC goes on high alert and apparently launches nuclear bombers toward Russia, but the alert is called off when the UFOs disappear. NORAD triggers a White House alert. High-level meetings of CIA and USAF intelligence, and the Intelligence Advisory Committee meet in executive session. The CIA Director of the Office of Scientific Intelligence, Herbert Scoville Jr., suggests that the object might be a maneuverable Soviet cruise missile, but that is not yet in the Soviet inventory. President Eisenhower is briefed multiple times. One year later, NORAD still cannot identify any malfunction that could possibly make the radar targets agree with the IFF signals. (NICAP, "Multiple Radars Track 4,500 MPH Target"; Sparks, pp. 249–250; [memo], R. Roach to A. H. 1957, September 29 — 4:20 p.m. A nuclear waste storage tank explodes spontaneously at the Mayak plutonium production site (Chelyabinsk-40) for nuclear weapons and fuel reprocessing at Ozyorsk, Chelyabinsk Oblast, Russia. It launches a kilometer-tall pillar of dust and smoke into the sky. Gray radioactive ash and debris settles over the industrial zone. There are no immediate fatalities, though up to 200+ additional cancer deaths perhaps ensue from the radioactive contamination of some 20,000 square miles; 270,000 people are exposed to dangerous radiation levels. Over 30 small communities are removed from Soviet maps between 1958 and 1991. (Wikipedia, "Kyshtym disaster"; John Greenewald, "Declassified NRC Document Sheds Light on Kyshtym Nuclear Explosion," The Black Vault, June 24, 2024)

1957, October — Leonard H. Stringfield privately publishes Inside Saucer Post…3-0 Blue that summarizes his early years as a UFO investigator and as director of Civilian Research, Interplanetary Flying Objects. (Leonard H. Stringfield, Inside Saucer Post…3-0 Blue, The Author, 1957)

1957, October — The Centro de Estudios Interplanetarios is founded in Barcelona, Spain, by Eduardo Buelta, Antonio Ribera, and Màrius Lleget. At its first meeting, Buelta is named president and Ribera vice-president. By January 1959 it is publishing a mimeographed bulletin, and from 1970 to 1981 it operates a quarterly magazine titled Stendek. Since then it has published occasional groups of papers on UFOs. (Stendek 1, no. 1 (June 1970); Ignacio Cabria García, Entre ufólogos, creyentes y contactados, Cuadernos de Ufologia, 1993; Papers d'OVNIs, no. 1 (1994); Nous Papers d'OVNIs, no. 1 (December 2014); Eghigian, After, p. 104)

1957, October — 10:00 p.m. Mrs. James Masterson and her sister Bernice Childers while driving see a reddish-orange disc, 30 feet in diameter, just above the treetops in Allen Park, Michigan. They chase it for a block or two before it streaks off. One of the women sees two figures wearing white Navy uniforms in a window on the lower section. (Center for UFO Studies, HUMCAT Index 1957, p. 16; Clark III 268; Clark IV 308)

1957, October 1 — 11:10 a.m. Three witnesses in Santa Barbara, California, including H. F. Hoag from Victoria, British Columbia, are watching a jet's vapor trail from La Mesa Park when they see a red object, approximately 100 feet in diameter, speed by. The object is silent and traverses a 90° arc of the sky in about 15 seconds. At the same time, the witnesses can also see the jet plane over Carpinteria to the east. On October 2, a 6:00 p.m. broadcast on Radio Station WATE reports that an Air Force jet interceptor had detected a UFO on its radar and pursued it. When the UFO comes into visual range, the pilot sees a circular object roughly the size of a B-29 bomber. Within seconds, the UFO accelerates away at an estimated speed of over 1,800 mph. ("'Flying Object' Seen by Victoria Visitor," Santa Barbara (Calif.) News-Press, October 1, 1957, p. A-2; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History, 1957, October 1st–November 2nd, The Author, 1997, p. 2)

1957, October 1 — The initial issue of NICAP's newsletter, the UFO Investigator, comes under scrutiny and criticism from Air Force officials through Capt. George T. Gregory. Demonstrating a lack of regard for the potential value in studying the UFO phenomenon, an official letter condemns Keyhoe-led NICAP's motives, characterizing the organization as an "instrument of rabble rousing and agitation." This viewpoint is contained in a briefing given to the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History, 1957, October 1st–November 2nd, The Author, 1997, pp. 2, 4)

1957, October 1 — 7:00 p.m. John Karcher, a former city councilman and farm owner, is outside Rochester, Pennsylvania, with his friend, Lee Plunkett, when they notice something unusual approaching from the west, flying at an altitude of about 2,000 feet. It is a luminous, torpedo-shaped object, estimated to be 200 feet long. Its top half is green, the bottom half reddish-orange, with a strip of yellow separating the two colors. The object is moving around 15 mph. Karcher grabs a pair of binoculars and calls some neighbors, a Mrs. Norderbugger and her daughter and son-in-law. The three of them also observe the object as it continues on a steady course southward, towards the Shippingport Atomic Power Station on the Ohio River. Karcher sees no further details through the binoculars and thinks the sighting is over when the UFO moves out of view. However, the object reappears after a few minutes, retracing its path. Karcher speculates that the object has made a U-turn over the nuclear facility, given its speed and the distance it traveled. 1957, October 4 — The USSR launches the first artificial earth satellite, Sputnik 1, which transmits radio pulses for 21 days. Some 4% of Americans claim to have seen Sputnik in orbit. However, what most are actually seeing is the 100-foot-long R-7 rocket core stage, outfitted with reflective panels that make it a first magnitude object, trailing 600 miles behind the 22-inch satellite until October 26 when the batteries run out. The satellite is barely visible at sixth magnitude. (Wikipedia, "Sputnik 1"; C. C. Furnas, "Why Did U.S. Lose the Race? Critics Speak Up," Life 43, no. 7 (October 21, 1957): 22–24; Walter N. 1957, October 4 — 10:00 a.m. A tadpole-like UFO is seen at Ichinoseki, Iwate Prefecture, Japan. Afterwards, material like spider web falls in great profusion around Saguramachi Middle School for about 2 hours. Chemical analysis reveals that it is organic, dissolvable in hydrochloric acid, and burns. The crystal structure is different from spider web. 1957, October 5 — 11:00 p.m. Antonio Vilas-Boas gets up from bed on his family's farm near São Francisco de Sales, Minas Gerais, Brazil, to open a window and notices a silvery reflection over the corral. After a short time, it moves towards the window. He and his brother watch as an object approaches and lights up the room. It disappears. (Clark III 1226; Clark IV 1406)

1957, October 6 — 4:15 p.m. Amateur astronomer Earl Sydow spots a bright object with the magnitude of the planet Venus through his telescope over Tucson, Arizona. Six other observers also watch the object, which measures approximately 3 minutes in diameter along its major axis and 1 minute along its minor axis. Smaller flat-white or silver-white objects, as many as 6–10, seem to emerge from the primary object as observations continue. The smaller objects are apparently short traces of light at some times and semi-wedge-shaped at other times. The smaller objects disappear from the field of the telescope until only the original object is visible, and it disappears as if moving directly away. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 80)

1957, October 8 — Day. Four Fijians in a punt with an outboard motor off Nabouwalu, Viti Levu, Fiji, see a white, circular object, which is hovering about 20 feet above the ocean. They approach it. It appears to be revolving, and they can see the figure of a man standing on the outside. The figure shines a blinding light at their boat, which makes them feel dazed and weak. As they draw closer, the figure disappears and the object rises rapidly upward, disappearing straight up. R. O. Aveling, an official of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, sees a similar object at the same time but at a different location. It is hovering at about 5,000 feet and swinging in a balloon-like fashion. Its color varies from bright white to deep, flashing red. 1957, October 9 — Evening. Fire ignites Windscale Pile Number One, an air-cooled, graphite-moderated, uranium-fueled reactor used for plutonium and isotope production at the Windscale facility [now Sellafield] in Cumbria, England. It burns for three days, and there is a release of radioactive iodine that spreads across the UK, contaminating surrounding dairy farms, as well as the rest of Europe. (Wikipedia, "Windscale fire")

1957, October 9 — Night. Radio station CKOV in Kelowna, British Columbia, after reports on Sputnik, rebroadcasts Orson Welles's 1938 War of the Worlds radio drama. Some 60 phone calls come in from listeners who think that Russians have landed in North America. ("Welles, 'Moon,' Terrify Town," Windsor (Ont.) Star, October 10, 1957, p. 28)

1957, October 9 — 7:24 p.m. The tower operator at Naval Air Station South Weymouth [now the Shea Field Naval Aviation Historical Museum], Massachusetts, sights a constant, conical, greenish-blue object with a phosphorescent glow through binoculars. In sight approximately 90 seconds, the observer sees no navigation lights. It is traveling faster than a jet plane on a track from northeast to south-southwest. The object comes out of the horizon and toward the end of its path makes three "crazy" gyrations then vanishes, possibly behind cloud cover. The object has no trail like a meteor. (Walter N. Webb, "Allen Hynek As I Knew Him," IUR 18, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1993): 7)

1957, October 10 — 4:00 a.m. A huge fireball plunges from the sky near Myton, Utah, just missing a US Navy DC-6 transport plane out of NAS Alameda [now closed], California, with 36 persons aboard. Pilot Lt. Cmdr. W. F. Norris reports the incident to Salt Lake City Airport. ("Big Fireball Perils Plane," Oakland (Calif.) Tribune, October 10, 1957, p. 1)

1957, October 10 — The coffee truck driven by Miguel Espanhol Navarrete and his driver stalls northwest of Ceres near Quebra Coco, Goiás, Brazil, as a UFO lands nearby. They see an intense light as they begin a steep ascent, and then realize that the flying object appears to be more than 600 feet long. It lights up the entire area, even though it is gliding at a great height. The driver panics and tries to speed away, but the truck's engine stalls as the object approaches and flies over the vehicle about 130 feet away. The object is about 3 feet in diameter by 40 inches high and is unevenly oval, with the upper section greater than the lower section. It looks like two superimposed plates separated by a strip 65 feet thick. When it is at an altitude of 20 feet, the UFO stops in the air and its light goes out. It lands, a door opens, and seven apparently human people come out dressed in luminous suits. Then the crew reenters the UFO and takes off, stopping at about 1,650 feet altitude. At that moment a smaller object detaches itself from the larger one and flies north. The larger object follows in a southeasterly direction. Navarrete is interviewed by Judge Gabriel Barbosa de Andrade, then-Secretary of the Interior and justice of the State of Goiás; Joaquim Neves Pereira; and Antenor Gomes, then-Secretary of Public Security for Goiás. (Lorenzen, Occupants, Signet, 1967, pp. 192–193; Patrick Gross, URECAT, October 17, 2006; "Caso Ceres," Portal Fenomenum, June 15, 2016; Clark III 230, 268; Brazil 40–41; Clark IV 270, 308)

1957, October 12 — 9:15 p.m. Many witnesses see a luminous oval object pass over Ciudad Bolivar, Venezuela, at great speed. The same or a similar object is seen at Coro at 9:25 p.m. and at Trujillo at 12:00 midnight. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 82)

1957, October 14 — 7:00 p.m. The Naval Air Station North Island tower in San Diego, California, directs a Navy S2F-1Tracker anti-submarine aircraft toward a bright light over Point Loma. The aircraft, piloted by Lt. Allen L. Ries, tracks the UFO on airborne radar at some points suddenly moving at 1,700 mph average speed (3,500 mph at peak) and 1,100 mph average relative to the aircraft's (peak 2,200 mph). Radar indicates the object is about 12 miles ahead. After 3 minutes the aircraft loses the object visually and on radar. Blue Book explains this as the star Arcturus, which is in the wrong direction in the sky, then changes the explanation to a balloon. (NICAP, [Blue Book documents]; Clark III 389–390; Clark IV 434–436)

1957, October 14 — Around 9:30 p.m. Antonio Vilas-Boas and another brother are plowing and see a bright object hovering 300 feet in the air. He approaches it, but it evades him and disappears. (Clark III 1226–1227; Clark IV 1406)

1957, October 15 — Retired RAAF Chief of the Air Staff George Jones observes at an unknown location "a brilliant white light at the bottom of a shadowy shape like a transparent balloon" flying silently at 40 mph at 1,500 feet altitude. (Bill Chalker, "Air Marshall Sir George Jones and the UFO," 2000)

1957, October 15 — Afternoon. Robert Moudy sees a glowing object hovering above his combine in Franklin County, Indiana, at about 1,500 feet. It appears to be silver and platter-shaped, perhaps 12 feet in diameter, with a pink flame coming from its base. It makes a loud whirring noise as it hovers. When it starts ascending at a 22° angle, its color changes from pink to light blue and the combine stops working. He notices two stalled cars on a nearby road. ("Indiana Farmer Says 'Whatsit' Was Overhead," Indianapolis News, November 5, 1957, p. 17)

1957, October 16 — 1:00 a.m. Antonio Vilas-Boas is plowing alone near São Francisco de Sales, Minas Gerais, Brazil, when a red, egg-shaped object appears above him. His tractor motor and lights fail. It lands nearby and something grabs him as he tries to run away. Three small figures bring him into the object, where he is subjected to tests and made to have sex twice with a short, odd-looking woman with seemingly bleached hair, slanted eyes, and a pointed chin. Afterwards, she points to her belly then points to the sky. Then he is given a tour of the craft and taken outside again around 5:30 a.m. ("The A.V.B. 1957, October 16 — Day. Nurse Ella Louise Fortune is driving north of Tularosa, New Mexico, when she sees a brilliant-white, elliptical object hovering in a deep-blue sky. It seems to have a faint exhaust trail at one edge. She stops her car and snaps a 35mm Kodachrome photo. Analysts generally agree this is a bright lenticular cloud with a trail of ice crystals. 1957, October 16 — Evening. Former Australian Air Marshal George Jones and his wife see a round object like a "flying balloon" moving silently at the speed of a jet over their home in Mentone, Victoria, Australia. It moves from south to north at an altitude of 1,000–1,500 feet. ("Former Air Chief Describes 'Flying Saucer,'" Canberra Times, January 4, 1958, p. 3; George Jones, "Former Air Chief Sees Saucers," Flying Saucer Review 4, no. 3 (May/June 1958): 6)

1957, October 17 — Groundbreaking ceremonies take place in Green Bank, West Virginia, for the National Radio Astronomy Observatory established by the National Science Foundation. In 1958, the land is set aside by the Federal Communications Commission as a National Radio Quiet Zone where no fixed transmitters are allowed within the area closest to the telescope. All other fixed radio transmitters including TV and radio towers inside the zone are required to transmit in such a way that interference at the antennas is minimized by using limited power and highly directional antennas. (Wikipedia, "National Radio Astronomy Observatory"; Wikipedia, "United States National Radio Quiet Zone"; Graham DuShane, "Radio Astronomy at Green Bank," Science 126 (1957): 955)

1957, October 21 — 9:18 p.m. Flying Officer D. W. Sweeney is flying a Meteor jet at 28,000 feet on a training exercise from RAF North Luffenham [now St. George's Barracks] when he nearly collides with an unidentified object over RAF Gaydon [now closed], North Warwickshire, England. After taking evasive action, Sweeney tries to approach the object, whereupon its six lights go out and it disappears. The UFO is tracked on radar at RAF Langtoft [now closed] in South Kesteven. ("UFO over British A-Bomber Base: Air Ministry Baffled," Flying Saucer Review 4, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1958): 6; Good Above, pp. 50–51; Powell, Scientist, 24–25)

1957, October 22 — The US Continental Army Command sends a memo to the Army Chief of Research and Development indicating its interest in the flying saucer concept and requesting initiation of a feasibility study of a "manned flying saucer." (Richard P. Weinert, History of Army Aviation, 1950–1962, US Army Training and Doctrine Command, November 1976, pp. 220–221)

1957, October 25 — On a farm near Petrópolis, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, a housekeeper (pseudonym = Anazia Maria) is taking care of a family member who is dying of stomach cancer. She claims that two diminutive, long-haired beings emerge from a landed UFO, come inside the house, examine the girl for an hour with a device that looks like a flashlight, communicate telepathically to the family, cure the girl, and leave behind some medication to give her. (Olavo T. Fontes, "Dying Girl Saved by Humanoid Surgeons," Flying Saucer Review 13, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1967): 5–6)

1957, October 30 — 9:00 p.m. Hugh Pulju and Shirley Moyer are driving 10 miles north of Casper, Wyoming, when a round, shiny object appears in the road about 250 feet ahead. Pulju tries to turn around, but the engine keeps stalling. It works well once he reaches a main highway. ("'Mystery Object' Is Reported Here," Casper (Wyo.) Tribune-Herald, November 5, 1957, p. 1; Aimé Michel, Straight-Line, pp. 237–238; Schopick, p. 24)

1957, October 31 — Keyhoe meets with Rep. James C. Healey again, who tells him the Air Force has "made a strong attempt to disprove your claims." (Keyhoe, FSTS, p. 113)

1957, October 31 — A businessman and his wife at Longchaumois, Jura, France, see a large lighted object with openings. It hovers close to the ground and takes off with a great increase in brightness, silently, at high speed. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957, October 1st–November 2nd, The Author, 1997, p. 83)

1957, October 31 — 8:00 p.m. Barbara Jean Stokes, her husband Paul, and another couple are driving in Lumberton, North Carolina, when they spot an object about 200 feet long in the sky. Suddenly the object rises straight up and flames. As this happens, the car stalls until the object disappears a few seconds later. ("Woman Says She Saw Ball of Fire on Road," Charlotte (N.C.) Observer, November 5, 1957, p. 1)

1957, Late October — Late one afternoon, a British RAF team is planning to return home from the Maralinga, South Australia, nuclear test site where the Operation Antler series of blasts have occurred (September 14, 25, October 9). They go outside and see a silvery-blue, metallic UFO with a flat base and a dome on top. Several squarish portholes are visible around the center. The object tilts at 45° and hovers. After 15 minutes, the UFO shoots up out of sight without a sound. One of the witnesses is Derek Murray, later a Home Office photographer. (Bill Chalker, "The UFO Connection: Startling Implications for Australia's North West Cape, and for Australia's Security," Flying Saucer Review 31, no. 5 (July 1986): 18–19; Jenny Randles, UFO Conspiracy, Cassell, 1987, pp. 94–95; Good Above, p. 163)

1957, November — Lt. Gen. John A. Samford succeeds Maj. Gen. Ralph Canine as director of the National Security Agency.

1957, November — Gene Duplantier launches the quarterly magazine Saucers, Space, and Science in Willowdale, Ontario. It continues through 1972. (Saucers, Space & Science, no. 1 (November 1957))

1957, November — Isabel Davis of Civilian Saucer Intelligence of New York writes a scathing critique of contactee claims in an issue of Fantastic Universe, highlighting the suspicious and contrived circumstances under which they take place, the extraterrestrials' utopian home worlds, their ease of communication through telepathy, their vague promises of protection against future doom, and the inconsistent functioning of their technology. However, she gives credence to some UFO sightings involving occupants. (Isabel L. Davis, "Meet the Extraterrestrial," Fantastic Universe, November 1957, pp. 31–39)

1957, November 1 — 9:15 a.m. More than 50 workers at the Luipaardsvlei mine near Krugersdorp, Gauteng, South Africa, watch two UFOs hanging motionless in the air at a great height until the afternoon. A Sabre jet from the South African Air Force is sent up to investigate. It climbs to 45,000 feet, but the objects are still above it. One of the witnesses is Maj. G. Ogilvie-Watson, from an ACF squadron at Pretoria. They move off at great speed. ("Jet Unable to Reach UFO," Flying Saucer Review 4, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1958): 2; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957, October 1st–November 2nd, The Author, 1997, p. 85)

1957, November 2 — 3:30 a.m. Three miles west of Canadian, Texas, S/Sgt. Alfred A. Calvin and a civilian witness see a submarine-shaped object, red and white, about 40–60 feet long and about 10 feet high, at ground level. A figure is near the object holding a white flag. When he stops the car, a flash of light from the object coincides with the sudden failure of the headlights. (NICAP, "Submarine-Shaped UFO, Entity, E-M Case"; Sparks, p. 253; Randle, Levelland, 2021, pp. 11–12)

1957, November 2 — 8:30 p.m. A witness is driving between Seminole and Seagraves, Texas, on US Highway 62 when he sees lights on the road ahead. As he approaches them, his headlights go out and his engine dies. A few seconds later, the lights rise into the air and disappear. (Hobbs (N.Mex.) News-Sun, November 5, 1957; Schopick, p. 25)

1957, November 2 — 10:50 p.m. Farmhand and veteran Pedro Saucedo and Joe Salaz are driving four miles west of Levelland, Texas, on Route 116 [now 114] south of Pettit (near its intersection with Five Mile Road). They see a flash of light to the right of the road. Then a 200-foot-long, 6-foot-wide blue rocket-shaped object, with yellow flame and white smoke coming from the rear, rises up out of the field, heads straight toward their truck, passes directly overhead at about 200 feet with a loud thundering roar, a rush of wind, and great heat. Their truck engine dies and the headlights to go out. The UFO disappears in the east towards Levelland. The lights come back on spontaneously and the engine restarts. A frightened Saucedo calls the occurrence in to Patrolman A. J. Fowler of the Levelland sheriff's office. At Pettit, Texas, the same night, two grain combines, each with two engines, fail as a UFO passes overhead. The Air Force calls the Levelland sightings ball lightning or St. Elmo's fire, even though there are no electrical storms in the area. Donald Menzel calls it a mirage. 1957, November 2 — 11:55 p.m. Two married couples driving near Shallowater, Texas, see a flash of orange light in the southwestern sky. The headlights and radio of their car fail for three seconds as they see the light. The car motor is not affected. (Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1981, p. 9; Randle, Levelland, 2021, pp. 16, 220–221)

1957, November 2 — About midnight. José Alvarez is driving along Route 51 in Whitharral, Texas, when he comes across a 200-foot-long object sitting in the road. His car engine stops as he approaches, and the headlights go out. At that point, the object rises quickly into the air. (UFOEv, p. 168; Schopick, pp. 27–28; Donald R. Burleson, "Levelland, Texas, 1957: Case Reopened," IUR 28, no. 1 (Spring 2003): 4; Randle, Levelland, 2021, p. 19)

1957, November 2 — About midnight. Jim Wheeler sees a 200-foot-long, egg-shaped, brightly lit object on Route 114 four miles east of Levelland, Texas. As he gets close to it, his engine and lights cease functioning. He gets out of his car as the light ascends; its lights blink out, and his engine and lights resume functioning. (UFOEv, p. 168; Schopick, p. 27; Donald R. Burleson, "Levelland, Texas, 1957: Case Reopened," IUR 28, no. 1 (Spring 2003): 4; Randle, Levelland, 2021, pp. 17–18)

1957, November 3 — 12:05 a.m. Texas Tech college student Newell H. Wright is driving west one mile west of Smyer, Texas, when the ammeter gauge on his car dashboard starts fluctuating widely. The car motor gradually goes out then the headlights and radio die. He gets out to check and sees a white or aluminum-colored, oval-shaped object flat on the bottom like a loaf of bread, with a bluish-green tint, about 75–125 feet long. After a few minutes, the object suddenly rises up from the road ahead and ascends almost vertically at great speed slightly to the north, disappearing in seconds. Afterward the car can start again. 1957, November 3 — 12:15 a.m. Frank Williams, a farmer, is near Whitharral, Texas, when he encounters an object described as an egg sitting on the crossroads. The UFO pulsates steadily; each time it glows bright, the car's power goes on and off. The object leaves with a thunderous sound. ("Whatnik Sidelines Sputnik, Woofnik," *Fort Worth (Tex.) 1957, November 3 — 12:45 a.m. Ronald Martin is on Highway 116 near Smyer, Texas, when he sees a glowing red UFO land ahead of his truck, then turn to bluish-green. The truck's electrical system fails. When the UFO takes off, it turns reddish again. ("Many West Texans See Mystery Flying Object," Abilene (Tex.) Reporter-News, November 4, 1957, p. 1; "Levelland 'Flaming Thing' Brings World Knocking at City's Door," *Lubbock (Tex.) 1957, November 3 — Around 1:00 a.m. Levelland (Texas) Fire Marshall Ray Jones, while out driving around and looking for some explanation of the many UFO reports, sees a "streak of light" north of the Oklahoma Flat. His headlights dim and engine sputters as he sees the light. (UFOEv, p. 168; Schopick, p. 32; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 145–146); Randle, Levelland, 2021, p. 21)

1957, November 3 — 1:15 a.m. James D. Long is 5 miles northwest of Levelland, Texas, on a farm-to-market road. He reports a bright object that is egg or oval-shaped, about 200 feet long, 200 feet away, sitting in the road. He hears a "thunderclap." The car's lights and motor quit. The object rises quickly and speeds away. ("Flying 'Fiery Object' Seen," Lubbock (Tex.) Avalanche-Journal, November 3, 1957, pp. 1, 14; UFOEv, p. 168; Schopick, p. 31; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 144–145; Randle, Levelland, 2021, p. 19)

1957, November 3 — 1:30 a.m. Near the same spot as James Long, Hockley County (Texas) Sheriff Weir Clem and Pat McCullough see a flash of light "like a brilliant red sunset" 300–400 yards to the south of them, lighting up the pavement. (UFOEv, p. 168; Schopick, pp. 31–32; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 145–146; Donald R. 1957, November 3 — About 3:00 a.m. Two MPs at White Sands Missile Test Range, New Mexico, Cpl. Glenn H. Toy and Pfc. James E. Wilbanks, are making rounds in their jeep when they notice a bright object high in the sky. It drops down to about 150 feet and the light goes out. A few minutes later the light goes on again and it drops to the ground in a bunker area 3 miles away and goes out. The UFO is egg-shaped and about 225–300 feet in diameter. (NICAP, "Three MPs Report Object over White Sands Base"; Sparks, p. 254; UFOEv, p. 169; Schopick, pp. 37–38; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 November 3rd–5th, The Author, 1997, p. 6; Swords 259; Randle, Levelland, 2021, pp. 23–27)

1957, November 3 — 7:00 p.m. Edna Ireland is driving with two friends near Sibbald, Alberta, when a blinking light appears in the sky and passes nearly above the car toward the northwest. Their engine coughs and the headlights flicker. ("Satellites Apparently Not Lonely Way Up There," Winnipeg (Man.) Tribune, November 7, 1957, p. 12; Aimé Michel, Straight-Line, p. 239; Schopick, pp. 42–43)

1957, November 3 — 8:00 p.m. Army Specialist 3rd Class Henry R. Barlow and Specialist 3rd Class Forest R. Oakes, Army Garrison Detachment 5, are in a jeep patrol driving west near the site of the first A-bomb explosion, Trinity Site, in White Sands Proving Ground, New Mexico. They see a pulsating red light thar turns to white, possibly 200–300 feet in size and 4–5 miles away. It brightens and dims then sometimes goes out, rising in the sky from the ground or from about 50 feet over the bunker up to about 45° elevation until it looks like a star or point source. They watch it for 25 minutes before it disappears. Possibly Venus in the southwest, which sets at about 8:30 p.m. (Sparks, p. 254; Schopick, p. 38; Randle, Levelland, 2021,pp. 27–31)

1957, November 3 — The USSR launches Sputnik 2 carrying Laika the dog. (Wikipedia, "Sputnik 2")

1957, November 4 — Portuguese Air Force Capt. Lenos Ferreira is conducting a training mission at the head of three jet fighters over Grenada, Spain, when he observes a luminous object changing color from an intense green to bright red. The object maintains a constant altitude while oscillating. Ferreira orders a change of course toward Córdoba, but the object follows his group for 40 minutes, dropping four smaller objects that also accompany the jets. Suddenly the objects go into a dive and disappear. (Patrick Gross, "UFO Chasing Jet Fighter Squadron, Lisbon, 1957")

1957, November 4 — After 12:00 midnight. A young couple are returning to Amarillo, Texas, from Palo Duro Canyon when they see a glowing object in the middle of the road, surrounded by fog. As they drive closer and enter the fog, the car engine and battery die. Another car has to push them into town to get the battery recharged. (Amarillo (Tex.) Daily News, November 4, 1957; Schopick, pp. 43–44)

1957, November 4 — 1:30 a.m. Chief Pilot Captain Jean Vincent de Beyssac and his copilot are flying a Varig Airlines C-46 cargo plane from Porto Alegre to São Paulo, Brazil. They are near Araranguá, Santa Catarina, when de Beyssac notices a red light on his left. It seems to be getting bigger, so he banks towards it out of curiosity. The light gets much bigger then begins to glow more brilliantly. The pilot and copilot smell smoke and, as they are looking for the source, the light disappears. De Beyssac returns to Porto Alegre. It turns out that the right engine's magneto (or generator), automatic direction finder, and the radio (both receiver and transmitter) have burnt out, allegedly simultaneously. 1957, November 4 — 2:00 a.m. Two sentries at the Fortaleza de Itaipu in Praia Grande, São Paulo, Brazil, watch an orange object approaching the fort. It holds its course until it is directly above them. Its diameter is at least as large as the wingspan of a DC-3 and scarcely 300 feet away. Suddenly there is a strange buzzing noise and the men feel a wave of glowing heat. One of them collapses on the spot, but the other succeeds in reaching safety in the shadow of the gun emplacements. His shouts of alarm rouse his comrades inside the fort, where the lights suddenly go out. In the meantime, the emergency power is switched on but immediately gives out. Only a few minutes after the alarm, two other men are out of the fort and at their sides. They too see the UFO, which is now heading out to sea. It leaves a luminous trail as it shoots away across the Atlantic. The two sentries are taken to a hospital in Rio de Janeiro. They suffer second and third-degree burns on large areas of their body, chiefly in areas covered by clothing. Afterwards, Brazilian Army and USAF personnel, along with investigators of the Brazilian Air Force, fly to the fort to interview them. There is some reason to think that Olavo T. Fontes made this case up, as no first-hand witnesses to the event have come forward. (NICAP, "Fort Itaipu Incident"; Wikipedia, "Caso do Forte de Itaipu"; Olavo T. Fontes, "Top Secret Report Unveiled," APRO Bulletin, September 1959, pp. 6–7; Jules Lemaître, "A Strange Story from Brazil," Flying Saucer Review 6, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1960): 9–11; Schopick, pp. 135–140; Clark II 537; Kevin D. 1957, November 4 — 3:12 a.m. At Elmwood Park, Illinois, three policemen (Clifford Shaw, Joseph Lukasek, and Dan Diglovanni) see a bright cigar-shaped object in the sky. The headlights and spotlight on the squad car dim. The car chases the UFO for a mile and a half, which dips and rises before speeding off. Fireman Bob Volz also sees a reddish-orange UFO about the same time. (NICAP, "Bright Cylinder Chased by Police, E-M Effects"; Sparks, p. 255; Aimé Michel, Straight-Line, p. 239; Keyhoe, FSTS, p. 117; Schopick, pp. 90–91; Loren E. 1957, November 4 — 1:10 p.m. James W. Stokes, electronics technician at Holloman AFB, New Mexico, is driving on US Highway 54 about 8 miles south of Orogrande, New Mexico. The car radio fades, and the car slows as if the battery is failing. Stokes notices 6–12 cars ahead of him have also stopped and drivers are out looking at the sky (looking behind him to the northeast), including a Mr. Duncan and Allan D. Baker. Stokes stops and gets out, sees a pearl-white oval or egg-shaped object about 500 feet wide with a slight purplish tinge heading south at an estimated speed of 1,500–2,000 mph. It is below the elevation angle of the Sacramento Mountains ridgeline, descending from about 5,000 feet above ground level in a shallow dive to about 1,500–2,500 feet altitude as it swerves to pass to the south of Stokes and the other stopped cars. At its closest it is about 2–5 miles away. It then circles around headed west and disappears. The same or another object appears in the northeast (as if the object has completely circled) and performs the same rounded course but passing farther to the south of the parked cars and disappears in the west. Duncan takes a 35mm film of the object. Stokes notices a wave of heat from the object at closest approach. Later that evening he is sunburned, but it clears up the next day. The Air Force calls it a hoax based on the Levelland sightings. (NICAP, "Stokes Incident"; Sparks, p. 255; "Egg-Shaped UFO Stalls Cars on Highway," *Alamogordo (N.Mex.) 1957, November 4 — 7:30 p.m. A Texas state border inspector is driving 3 miles southeast of El Paso Airport in Texas when his car engine stalls and the headlights go dim then out. He gets out and notices an object approaching that is making a whirring sound like an artillery shell. It passes above his car at about 150 feet, heading west and changing altitude occasionally. When it gets to the Franklin Mountains, it lifts into the air vertically. (NICAP, "Egg-Shaped Object Stalls Car"; Hynek UFO Report, p. 181)

1957, November 4 — 10:00 p.m. Jan Boucher, a policeman in Kodiak, Alaska, sees a red ball of fire with a greenish-yellow trail as he is patrolling on Mission Road. It apparently moves 50 feet above a nearby school. He tries to radio in a report but his radio gets interference for 2 minutes after the sighting. (Anchorage (Alaska) Daily News, November 7, 1957; Schopick, pp. 89–90)

1957, November 4 — 10:45 p.m. CAA air traffic controllers R. M. Kaser and E. G. Brink see a highly maneuverable 15–20-foot egg-shaped object with a white light at its base circle over one end of Kirtland AFB in Albuquerque, New Mexico, at 150–200 mph. It comes down in a steep 30° dive as if landing on Runway 26 to the north of the tower at about 1,500 feet. Radar tracks part of this maneuver. The object then crosses the flight line, runways, and taxiways heading towards the tower at about 50 mph and 20–30 feet above ground, observed through 7x binoculars until it reaches about 3,000 feet near the northeast corner of the flood-lit restricted Manzano Nuclear Weapons Storage Area and a B-58 bomber service site. It hovers for 20–60 seconds, then heads east again at about 200–300 feet altitude. Suddenly it shoots up in a steep climb. Controllers contact Radar Approach Control, which tracks the object on CPN-18 radar traveling east, then turning south, circling the Albuquerque Low Frequency Range Station. It then heads north, disappearing at 10 miles and reappearing 20 minutes later to follow 1/2 mile behind a USAF C-46 that has just taken off to the south. It continues for 14 miles until both go off the scope. A hovering radar target then appears to the north over an outer marker for 90 seconds before fading. 1957, November 5 — 5:10 a.m. The US Coast Guard Cutter Sebago (WHEC-42), Commander Clarence H. Waring Jr., cruising in the Gulf of Mexico about 200 miles south of Mobile, Alabama, tracks a radar target at a range of 22 miles moving at 650 mph. It disappears at 55 miles range. Three other unusual radar contacts are made in the next 10 minutes. A visual object like a brilliant planet is seen at 5:21 a.m. speeding north to south for five seconds by Ensign Wayne Schotley, Lt. Donald E. Shaffer, 1stClass Quartermaster Kenneth Smith, and radio operator Thomas Kirk. The Air Force ascribes it to confused radar operators who mistake ordinary plane blips for a UFO. 1957, November 5 — Late afternoon. Grain buyer Reinhold O. Schmidt is driving through the countryside near Kearney, Nebraska, when he notices a large, cigar-shaped object resting in a field. He is soon escorted inside the spaceship, which turns out to be crewed by completely human-looking space aliens, four males and two females, who apparently speak perfect German and claim to be from the planet Saturn. They also claim to be interested in the recently launched Russian sputniks and the satellite-launching plans of the US. Later Schmidt brings local police to view the landing site, where they find deep imprints and some "mysterious green residue." Schmidt also claims subsequent visits to the spaceship and many friendly conversations with its learned crew. Schmidt notices they drink MJB brand coffee, and also carry in their cigar-shaped craft an ordinary terrestrial MG sports car, which they use for running errands and buying groceries. (A schematic drawing of the ship's interior in Schmidt's later booklet depicts a Volkswagen Beetle.) Unlike most spaceships, the Saturnian ship has large propellers at both ends. Eventually Schmidt gets a ride up to earth orbit and a tour of the mother ship. On October 26, 1961, Schmidt is convicted in Oakland, California, for grand theft after bilking a widow out of $5,000 for a worthless mining venture in Tulare County, where he claims to have seen huge quartz crystals from a spaceship. Judge Donald K. Quayle sentences him to 1–10 years in prison. ("Man Sticks to Story of Space Ship Tour in Nebraska Field," *Pittsburgh (Pa.) 1957, November 5 — The Department of Defense Office of Public Affairs issues a new UFO fact sheet, emphasizing the high percentage of explained cases and the lack of a threat to national security. (UFOEv, p. 107; Swords 262)

1957, November 5 — 6:30 p.m. Larry and Marilynn Beaman are driving near Antioch, Illinois, when they notice a ball of fire fluctuating from white to yellow pacing their car on the right side, about 1,000 feet up. It goes out for a time then switches back on. At its largest, it seems 30 feet in diameter. It follows them all the way to Ringwood and then lands in some trees behind a school building two blocks from where they live. It glitters like a welder's arc and makes a sound like water swishing. Beaman rounds up some other witnesses and goes back to the landing site, but the object takes off, changes to purple, and moves away to the southwest. TV sets in town dim, finally losing both picture and sound during the same time period. ("Ringwood Residents Scared by 'Thing,'" *Aurora (Ill.) 1957, November 5 — 8:43 p.m. A witness in Woodstock, Illinois, sees a large, red, triangular object with a green light in the front and a yellow light in the rear. It makes a low droning sound and moves west to east. Woodstock police officers and another individual in Genoa City see the same object. At 10:15 p.m., an amber or orange UFO 200 feet long is seen for 5 minutes at Delavan, Wisconsin. Project Blue Book claims it is an aurora or jet aircraft. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 November 3rd–5th, The Author, 1997, pp. 86, 88; Marler 131–132)

1957, November 5 — 9:30 p.m. Civil service employee Lon Yarborough is driving along US Highway 81 about 1.5 miles southwest of San Antonio, Texas, when he sees an extremely bright object settle down in a ravine about 600 feet from him. The egg-shaped object is approximately 60 foot long and causes the lights and engine of his car to fail. The object rests a few minutes and finally takes off to the northeast. (NICAP, "60′ Egg-Shaped Object Disables Auto"; San Antonio (Tex.) Light, November 6, 1957; Schopick, pp. 44–45)

1957, November 5 — 11:00 p.m. Two young men see a red light north of US Highway 62 at a point 38 miles west of Hobbs, New Mexico. They watch for 9–10 minutes, thinking it is an oil flare, but the light suddenly rises straight up. After pacing their car for a few minutes, the light turns toward the car, passes over it, and hovers over the Permian Basin Pipeline plant. As it passes overhead, the car engine sputters, then dies, and the lights go out. After the men coast the car down the road, the motor restarts and they drive away. The battery is found to be dead the following morning and the dashboard clock is stopped. (Schopick, pp. 45–47; Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1981, p. 12)

1957, November 6 — Just after 12:00 midnight. A taxicab company owner, Joe Martinez, and one of his drivers, Alberto Gallegos, sees a UFO approach them in Santa Fe, New Mexico. They hear a humming sound as it comes close. The object is egg-shaped and multicolored. As it passes over their car, the engine stalls and the dashboard clock stops. The UFO then pulls up and moves rapidly into the southeast. One witness later discovers that his wristwatch has also stopped at the time of sighting. (Aimé Michel, Straight-Line, pp. 246–247; Schopick, pp. 47–48; Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1981, p. 12)

1957, November 6 — 4:30 a.m. William Rush II is driving on Long Point Road in Houston, Texas. A brilliant red, egg-shaped UFO kills his car engine and causes static on his radio. (Houston (Tex.) Chronicle, November 6, 1957; Schopick, p. 48)

1957, November 6 — 5:40 a.m. Richard Kehoe is driving along Vista Del Mar in Playa Del Rey, California, when his engine fails. Two other cars on the highway are also affected, and the drivers (Ronald Burke and Joe Thomas) all get out. They see an egg-shaped object that seems to be wrapped in a blue haze. It is tan or cream-colored and has two metallic rings around it. Two smallish men, about 5 feet 5 inches tall and wearing black leather pants, a white belt, and a light-colored jersey, exit the object. They ask Kehoe and the others where they are and what time it is in something approaching English. They walk back to the object, which takes off. After it leaves, Kehoe's car starts with no problem. (Lorenzen, Flying Saucer Occupants, Signet, 1967, pp. 126–127)

1957, November 6 — 6:30 a.m. Everett Orain Clark, 12, of Dante, Knoxville, Tennessee, lets his dog Frisky outside and sees an object like an elongated egg in a field 300 feet away from his house. 20 minutes later, he calls to bring the dog back and sees Frisky with other dogs on the other side of the road close to the object. Clark walks toward the UFO and sees two men and women, apparently dressed in a normal manner. One of the men tries to catch Frisky who grunts and moves away. They are speaking in a foreign language that sounds like German to him. The four people go into the craft by seemingly walking right through the wall. Journalist Carson Brewer goes back to the site with Clark and finds an "oblong ring of pressed grass" 24 feet by 4.5 feet. In the afternoon, two men from the Oak Ridge National Laboratory (engineer Wallace Russell Gambill and physicist N. D. Greene) collect soil samples and check for radiation (they find none). 1957, November 6 — US scientists are "pretty shook up" about the recent UFO sightings, according to astronomer Charles F. "Chick" Capen in the November 7 El Paso Times. However, Capen talks more about missile launches and lunar photography than UFO sightings. ("Sighting 'Shakes' Scientists," El Paso (Tex.) Times, November 7, 1957, p. 21; "El Pasoans Take Look at Sputnik," El Paso (Tex.) Times, November 7, 1957, pp. 1, 3; Swords 264)

1957, November 6 — 5:00 p.m. Two Malay fisherman are in a waterway near Bagansiapiapi, Sumatra, Indonesia, when they see a black and red object swiftly approaching their boat and trailing black and greenish smoke. The top and bottom of the object are curved like discs. When it is 60 feet away it stops in mid-air about 35 feet above the water, and the bottom part continues to rotate as the water foams below it. The object is a triangular shape and white smoke is coming out from each point. The object speeds up and disappears, leaving behind black and greenish smoke lines. (Marler 133)

1957, November 6 — Early evening. Varine "Rene" Gilham sees a brilliant object radiating a strong red light as he is using an outhouse on his farm near Merom, Indiana. The whole farm and surrounding area are bathed in the light for 10 minutes. A small object joins the larger one and the light grows more intense. The two objects fly away. The next day, Gilham has "sunburn" in many places. Two days later he is admitted to a hospital for treatment. (NICAP, "Merom/Gilham Incident"; "Ironworker Burned by Shiny Object," *Sullivan (Ind.) 1957, November 6 — 8:02 p.m. Six people in Toronto, Ontario, watch a yellow-white light travel silently from south to north across the eastern sky. One experiences static on his TV set as the object passes, slower than a meteor. ("Was It Sputnik or Vapor Trail?" Toronto (Ont.) Daily Star, November 6, 1957; Aimé Michel, Straight-Line, pp. 248–249; Schopick, pp. 80–81; Loren E. 1957, November 6 — Night. Two state policemen, Calvin Showers and John Matulis, in Danville, Illinois, observe a brilliant white light that changes color successively to amber and orange. They chase it for 15 miles because the light appears to be low in the sky. During the chase, their communications radio does not function. The light eventually flies out of sight. 1957, November 6 — 9:00 p.m. Jacques N. Jacobsen Jr. and three friends (William Munday, William Totten, and Robert Dawson) are in a hunting lodge on the Baskatong Reservoir, Quebec, listening to a battery-powered radio. Outside, they see a glowing, yellow-white sphere 2–3 miles away to the southwest. It remains in place for 15 minutes. During this time their portable radio goes silent, and one of the men's shortwave radios is working on only one frequency that emits a strong, rapidly modulated tone that sounds like, but is not, Morse code. The UFO rises into the clouds and the radios function normally again. 1957, November 6 — 9:43 p.m. Kenneth J. Delano, who is participating in aurora and meteor watches for the International Geophysical Year, is observing the sky at St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore, Maryland, when he sees a brilliant white light in the northwest. He watches it approach until it is nearly overhead. Then a faint, silvery-gray, elliptical disc is visible for a few seconds above the light. It is silent, except for a faint whirring sound. He watches it for a total of 4 minutes until it passes behind some buildings. (Kenneth J. Delano, "UFO over Baltimore," IUR 32, no. 4 (October 2009): 17–18, 24)

1957, November 6 — 11:30 p.m. Olden J. Moore is driving home in Montville, Ohio, when he sees an object like a bright meteor split into two pieces, one of which heads straight up. The other becomes larger while its color changes from bright white to blue green. It hovers about 200 feet above a field and lands with a soft whirring sound, perhaps 500 feet away. Moore watches cautiously for 15 minutes, then approaches it. The UFO is shaped like a "covered dish," and is about 50 feet in diameter, 15 feet high, with a cone on top about 10 feet high. It is pulsating slowly, and a haze surrounds it. Moore goes home to get another witness (his wife) but when they return the UFO is gone. Mrs. Moore reports the sighting to County Sheriff Louis Robusky the next morning, and a civil defense director, Kenneth Locke, visits the site. Locke finds high levels of radioactivity (a maximum of 150 microroentgens/hour, suggestive of an approximately one-hour radionuclide half-life or less) two perfectly formed holes six inches in diameter, and unusual footprints that come from nowhere and go nowhere. (NICAP, "Olden Moore Case / Close Encounter"; Sparks, p. 257; UFOEv, pp. 169–170; Center for UFO Studies, [case files]; Clark III 772–773, 950; Clark IV 853–854, 1064)

1957, November 7 — 1:45–1:55 a.m. Seven airmen at Holloman Air Force Base near Alamogordo, New Mexico—Bradford Rickets, James Cole, Dennis Murphy, Wayne Hurlburt, and Harry Uhlrich—see a UFO while on duty at a salvage yard on the north side of the base. The object makes a whistling noise and turns from white to orange to red. (Lorenzen, FSHoax, pp. 100–101)

1957, November 7 — 7:25 a.m. Truck driver Malvin Stevens stops one mile east of House, Mississippi, because a silvery "blimp" about 5 feet high and 2 feet long is blocking the road. He walks toward it, a sliding door opens, and three small, pasty-faced men about 4.5 feet tall emerge. Stevens feels paralyzed. After a short time, the beings make a military about-face and reenter the UFO, which takes off vertically. ("Flying Saucer Lands near Meridian Thursday," Jackson (Miss.) Clarion-Ledger, November 8, 1957, p. 5; Aimé Michel, Straight-Line, pp. 263, 272–273; Center for UFO Studies, HUMCAT Index 1957, p. 32; Clark III 269; Clark IV 309)

1957, November 7 — 9:20 a.m. Trent Lindsey and his wife and son Byron are driving on US Highway 54 near Orogrande, New Mexico, when Byron notices that the speedometer is jumping wildly back and forth from the top to the bottom of its range. It then stops just as suddenly. The three witnesses later see a metallic-appearing UFO high in the sky to the southwest. It continues moving away for three minutes until it was lost from view over the Organ Mountains. The speedometer functions normally after the UFO is gone. ("Family Reports Seeing Large Object over NM," Albuquerque (N.Mex.) Tribune, November 8, 1957, p. 1; Lorenzen, FSHoax, pp. 99–100)

1957, November 7 — 9:38 a.m. Mysterious radio signals on the 108 megacycle radio band are recorded by RCA Communications at Riverhead, Long Island, New York. The signal is a continuous, tone-modulated hum at a low pitch of 200 cycles per second. The FCC admits it is baffled, but suspects that it comes from a radio amateur or equipment testing in the New York City area. Another report claims that Vanguard and Federal Communications Commission watchers at 18 monitoring stations throughout the Western Hemisphere are picking up signals at 14.286 megacycles, possibly connected with Sputnik 2. The signal is a long note of low pitch followed after a few seconds by two short notes. ("Mystery Signals Are Unconnected with Satellites," Fort Myers (Fla.) News-Press, November 8, 1957, pp. 1–2; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 83)

1957, November 7 — 7:46 p.m. Bright, flashing objects hover for 30 minutes over the Atomic Energy Commission's Pantex Plant 15 miles east of Amarillo, Texas. The UFOs are reported to the State Highway Patrol office by plant guards, and a patrolman dispatched to the plant arrives at 8:15 p.m. and sees a strange light. Guards at the plant are "all shook up" from watching three objects floating 50 feet above the ground. One of the objects apparently lands on Farin Road 2373, three miles north of Highway 60. Guards tell the patrolman they tried to approach the objects by turning off their lights, "but the things would just slip away from them when they got near." They are unable to estimate the size of the objects but seem positive "they saw more than just lights." (NICAP, "Lights Shake Up Guards at Nuclear Plant"; Sparks, p. 258; "Mystery Objects Sighted at Pantex," Amarillo (Tex.) Globe-Times, November 8, 1957, p. 1)

1957, November 7 — Night. Paul Rutledge, a packinghouse worker at Waterloo, Iowa, sees an object hovering above his garage. He can see two figures walking around inside. The object is about 30 feet long and has a shiny bottom and a glass top. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 84; Patrick Gross, URECAT, January 24, 2007)

1957, November 8 — 3:03 a.m. Polish-Australian astronomer Antoni Przybylski and Dutch-American astronomer Bart Bok see a vivid pink object moving slowly across the sky at Mount Stromlo Observatory near Canberra, Australia. It is visible to the naked eye for two minutes. Przybylski has just finished observing Sputnik 1 and 2, so it wasn't a satellite or a meteor. Assistant Director Arthur Robert Hogg thinks it might be circling the earth like a satellite. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957, November 7th–12th, The Author, 1998, p. 36; Michael D. 1957, November 8 — 6:22 a.m. Connie Foster watches a lighted triangular object flying from southeast to northwest over Camarillo, California. It is moving with the base facing forward and has bright lights on the tips of the triangle. She watches it for nearly 30 minutes before it disappears. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957, November 7th–12th, The Author, 1998, p. 37)

1957, November 8 — Spencer Whedon, chief of Air Intelligence at Wright-Patterson AFB near Dayton, Ohio, tells the press that of 5,700 UFO reports received by his office since 1940, 97% have been identified satisfactorily and the other 8% remain unidentified due to insufficient information. ("Seeing Things? No, Sky Really Red," Cincinnati (Ohio) Post, November 7, 1957, p. 8)

1957, November 8 — 6:00 p.m. Pan Am Flight 7, a Boeing Stratocruiser flying across the Pacific mysteriously crashes midway between San Francisco and Honolulu. One of the crew is UFO witness Capt. William H. Fortenberry. The cause of the crash is never determined. Fortenberry's journalist son, Ken H. Fortenberry, suspects that the bereaved and mentally unstable purser Oliver Eugene Crosthwaite, has deliberately caused the crash, killing himself and murdering 43 innocent people in the process. (Wikipedia, "Pan Am Flight 7"; Ken H. Fortenberry, Flight 7 Is Missing: The Search for My Father's Killer, Fayetteville Mafia, 2020)

1957, November 8 — Night. 12 female and 4 male farmworkers are in a truck on the Newhailes Road returning to Edinburgh from picking Brussels sprouts in a nursey at Musselburgh, Scotland. One of them spots a gray, round object seemingly following the truck at a distance of 60 feet. Mary Horne says it is domed on the top and bottom. It follows them for 5–10 minutes then moves off towards Portobello leaving a double vapor trail. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957, November 7th–12th, The Author, 1998, pp. 54–55)

1957, November 9 — 12:15 a.m. A man is driving in Sacramento, California, when his car engine and headlights fail. He looks up and sees an elongated egg-shaped object with delta-shaped wings, 150–200 feet long and 40–50 feet wide. The wings come back to about 30 feet from the rear of the fuselage. It has a bright bluish hue and leaves a bluish fluorescent trail. The sighting lasts 2–3 minutes. (Herbert S. Taylor, "An Update on Vehicle Interference Reports, Part Two," IUR 34, no. 1 (September 2011): 19)

1957, November 9 — 9:15 a.m. Eastern Airline pilot Capt. Truman Gile Jr. is preparing to take off from Lafayette (Louisiana) Airport when he sees a big silvery object about 20,000 feet in the air. Gile watches it for 3 minutes (or seconds) and it doesn't move. He alerts copilot James E. Hall, the stewardess, and the ground agents, and they all watch it another 5 minutes (or seconds) before it fades away. ("Veteran Pilot Spots 'Object' at Lafayette," *New Orleans (La.) 1957, November 9 — 7:20 p.m. Several witnesses are driving 12 miles northeast of Carrizozo, New Mexico, on US Highway 54 in the vicinity of White Oaks when a large, rapidly moving light approaches their car from the south and apparently causes the vehicle's lighting system to fail. The light changes course and speeds off to the southwest. Jim and Coral Lorenzen are driving east on US Highway 380 about 10 miles east of Carrizozo when they spot an anomalous light that might be the same object. (Lorenzen, FSHoax, pp. 101–102)

1957, November 10 — 1:25 a.m. Leita Mae Kuhn is checking the stove in her Doberman dog kennel at Madison, Ohio, when she notices a glowing, domed disc hovering 60 feet above the rear of the kennel. It is about 40 feet in diameter and emitting puffy clouds of smoke. Her eyes begin to burn after watching it for 20–30 minutes, and she runs back into the house and locks the door. She has rashes and her eyes hurt so badly she visits a doctor. (Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, pp. 11–12; Loren E. 1957, November 10 — Residents of Skaryszew, Poland, watch a huge, radiant, cigar-shaped object slowly moving west. (Poland 20)

1957, November 10 — Evening. UFO witness Olden Moore of Montville, Ohio, is visited by Sheriff Robusky, a deputy, and a USAF officer who asks him to go with them to Youngstown to be interviewed by military officers. They drive him to the field where the encounter took place and put him aboard a military helicopter. He is interviewed in Youngstown, then he is returned to the field at 11:00 p.m. (Clark III 773; Clark IV 854)

1957, November 10 — 5:55 p.m. Wilfred S. Hardy, an assistant safety engineer at the Tokyo, Japan, Engineer Supply Center, sees (along with his wife and a Japanese boat boy) a huge cigar-shaped object with lighted portholes above Lake Imba-numa 10 miles away. He estimates it is about 200–500 feet long. The object lights up the entire lake, then disappears to the south 10 seconds later. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 86)

1957, November 10 — 7:00 p.m. Many people see a UFO at Hammond, Indiana. Two policemen (Sgt. Charles J. Mauder, Office Steve Betuslak) see a red and white light hovering 500–1,000 feet overhead. They hear a beeping sound and there is interference on the police radio while the object is in view. Another witness sees a green light on a basket-shaped object; his car radio fails. The lights fly away when anyone tries to approach. (Aimé Michel, Straight-Line, p. 268; Schopick, pp. 92–95; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957, November 7th–12th, The Author, 1998, pp. 73, 75)

1957, November 10 — Night. French astronomer Jacques Chapuis at Toulouse Observatory in France observes a maneuvering, yellow, star-like object for 5 minutes. It ascends straight up out of sight. (UFOEv, p. 50)

1957, November 11 — A silvery elliptical UFO is seen flying below Western Airlines Flight 61 over the desert east of Los Angeles, California. Robert D. Hahn, a jewelry designer, is a passenger and describes it as a large, elliptical, metallic object with dark patches zigzagging about 200 feet above the ground. (UFOEv, p. 67)

1957, November 13 — An object explodes over the State Hospital at Crownsville, Maryland, and two or three burned pieces of metal fall on the hospital grounds. It is recovered by employees William A. Zick and J. Caswell. The pieces are checked for radiation and confiscated by army intelligence officers at Fort George G. Meade. They are apparently sent to the Air Research and Development Center in Baltimore. An ARD colonel tells NICAP member and WFBR news director Lou Corbin that he has no idea what the metal is. Some of the material is perhaps sent to ATIC. ("Metal Object from Skies Rushed to ATIC for Analysis," UFO Investigator 1, no. 3 (January 1958): 5–6)

1957, November 14 — Afternoon. Evalyn Riead hears a sputtering noise like someone is pulling into her driveway in Tamaroa, Illinois. She looks outside and sees a bright, moon-shaped object with a tail moving above the trees bordering US Highway 51. It disappears after 5–6 booms and 3 flashes of light. As soon as this happens, the lights in her home go out. Electrical power in a 4-mile area between Tamaroa and Du Bois is interrupted for 10 minutes. Power is restored when the company closes an open circuit breaker, but they could find no cause. ("Current Cut Off As Flying 'Thing' Appears in Illinois," Lima (Ohio) Citizen, November 15, 1957, p. 10; Schopick, pp. 140–141)

1957, Mid-November — The US Senate Committee on Government Operations, chaired by Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark.), begins an inquiry into UFOs. Ruppelt is called to give testimony. (Ruppelt, 1960 ed., p. 253)

1957, November 16 — Afternoon. Cynthia Appleton blacks out unexpectedly at her home in 87 Fentham Road in Aston, a suburb of Birmingham, England. On November 19, she feels faint again as the light outside dims, and a man with blond hair and wearing coveralls materializes in the center of the room. She hears him speaking to her telepathically. He tells her not to be afraid and that he is from a world he calls Gharnasvarn (which we know as Venus) and he shows her what seems to be a holographic image of two spaceships. She has other visitations by entities on January 7 and February 7, 1958. In September 1958, the spaceman informs her that she is pregnant, which is apparently true, as she gives birth on June 2, 1958, to a boy with blond hair that she and her husband Ron name Matthew. Appleton says the Venusians visited her a few more times, but the trail grows cold in July 1960. 1957, November 17 — An Air Force car with two officers comes to UFO witness Olden Moore's house in Montville, Ohio. He is told they are taking him to Washington, D.C., for extended questioning. They drive him to a waiting airplane, which stops briefly at Wright-Patterson AFB to pick up one officer and drop another off. In Washington, Moore is housed in a building said to be a federal courthouse [US Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces?]. He is kept there and interrogated for several days. Officers watch him constantly, even when he is sleeping. Toward the end of his stay, Moore is shown slides of UFO photos and a UFO film taken from inside a military plane. Moore is asked to sign a document that swears him to secrecy. (UFOEv, p. 114; Clark III 773; Clark IV 854)

1957, November 21 — The Army Chief of Research and Development responds to CONARC's October 22 request on the feasibility of building a manned "flying saucer," stating that he had reviewed the Avrocar disc concept and that it looked promising. (Richard P. Weinert, History of Army Aviation, 1950–1962, US Army Training and Doctrine Command, November 1976, pp. 220–221; Wikipedia, "Avro Canada VZ-9 Avrocar")

1957, November 21 — Merchant Hans Haugaard Hansen is driving out of Gesten, Denmark, on the road to Egholt when he sees a triangular UFO moving low over a field some 300–600 feet away. It is emitting a red or orange light and makes no sound. The bottom of the object is solid, but the upper part is transparent, and he can see two figures inside. He stops the car to watch as it moves about 40 mph. Similar objects are seen at Jordrup and Vorbasse. Lt.

Col. Hans-Christian Petersen of the Danish Air Force (and later in the year a co-founder of Skandinavisk UFO Information) is taking the reports seriously. ("Flying Saucer Reports Pour in from Denmark," Flying Saucer Review 4, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1958): 2; Loren E. 1957, November 21 — Night. Frank Dickenson and two friends are driving up Reasty Hill near the village of Silpho, North Yorkshire, England, when their car stalls and they see a glowing object in the sky that appears to fall to the ground on a ridge above Broxa Forest. Dickenson leaves the car with a flashlight, climbs up a bank, and finds in a patch of bracken a metallic saucer shaped like a "large flattish spinning top," 18 inches in diameter and weighing 33 pounds. As he returns to tell his friends, he passes a young couple walking toward the scene. When the tree men return to search for it, the disc is gone. Dickenson places an advertisement in a Scarborough newspaper about the disc, and he is able to recover it for £10 from a man who claims he was the mystery man on the moor. Photos taken by UFO researcher John Dale show that the copper base of the object is inscribed with a mystery script. The top of the disc is made from layers of laminated metal that has been painted with a white substance. The two halves are stuck together with a grayish substance resembling cellulose, and a pencil-thick iron rod runs through a "white metal bearing" in the top. When the bearing is drilled out, they find a heap of ash inside the cavity, as well as pieces of fused glass and a tightly rolled cylinder of copper. Also inside is a tiny booklet of 17 sheets of thin copper foil fastened at one edge. The booklet is engraved with script similar to that found on the outside. The coded script is translated by a café proprietor from Scarborough named Philip Longbottom, who claims the 2,000-word inscription is from an alien named Ulo, with later text added by an apparently female companion named Tarngee. A metallurgist at the University of Manchester analyzes the disc and finds the outer casing is made primarily from lead, and the copper foil is triple laminated and unusually free from impurities. In 2017, David Clarke discovers that five specimens from the Silpho disc have been preserved in a tin cigarette box housed in London's Science Museum. The specimens were sent to aviation historian Charles Harvard Gibbs-Smith in 1963 by Essex ufologist C. C. Stevens for analysis. Gibbs-Smith judged the items to be of terrestrial origin, and they were donated to the Science Museum with his papers after his death in 1981. Veteran Scarborough Evening News editor Mick Jefferson said in 2003 the newspaper had long ago exposed the object as a hoax made from a "domestic hot-water cylinder." However, the hoaxers have never surfaced. 1957, November 23 — 6:10 p.m. Fighter pilot 1st Lt. Joseph F. Long's car engine stalls 30 miles west of Tonopah, Nevada. He hears a high-pitched whining noise and sees four 50-foot, domed, saucer-shaped UFOs landed on the right side of the road about 900–1,200 feet away. They are glowing brightly and equipped with three landing gears. Long estimates they are about 10–15 feet tall. When he approaches to within 50 feet of the closest object, the hum increases in intensity and Long's ears begin to hurt. The objects take off abruptly, retracting the landing gears. They rise about 50 feet into the air and proceed across the highway to the north at about 10 mph. The total time of the sighting is 20 minutes. Shallow, bowl-shaped ground impressions in the shape of a triangle are found at the landing site. (NICAP, "Four Huge Saucers Land near Car, Engine Stalls"; Sparks, p. 259; Hynek UFO Report, pp. 182–186; Willy Smith, On Pilots and UFOs, UNICAT Project, 1997, pp. 71–80; UFOEv II 74–75; Good Need, pp. 222–223, 228; Randle, Levelland, 2021, pp. 101–106)

1957, November 23 — 7:30 p.m. Six truck drivers watch a strange object with three lights in a triangular pattern hovering above a field off State Highway 8 just north of the Butler Valley Turnpike exit in Richland Township, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania. It has a green light at the bottom, a red light at the right corner, and a yellow light at the left corner. They get out of their car and approach the object, but when they are 75 feet away, it moves to the east, then south. They go back to the car and shine their lights on the object, which is about 20 feet above some trees. The lights go out and the object disappears. ("3-Lighted 'Whatsit' Floats over Field," Pittsburgh (Pa.) Sun-Telegraph, November 27, 1957, p. 3)

1957, November 25 — 10:00 p.m. All the lights in the town of Mogi Mirim, São Paulo, Brazil, suddenly dim and fail. Numerous people see a circular light traveling directly overhead. Two similar lights follow a short time later. The blackout only lasts 5 minutes, but the power station has no explanation. (Schopick, pp. 141–142)

1957, November 26 — 8:41 p.m. Radar technicians at West Mesa Air Force Station [now closed] 9.5 miles west of Albuquerque, New Mexico, detect a target emitting a civilian mode 3 signal while traveling at a speed of 3,500 mph. (NICAP, "Blip Tracked at 3,000 Knots"; Powell, Scientist, 93)

1957, November 27 — The director of an engineering firm and four of his staff members see five black, disc-shaped objects hovering in the French Alps for 8 minutes. The group performs a series of maneuvers, after which a parachute-shaped object emerges from one of them. Suddenly they all shoot away at supersonic speed toward the Swiss border. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 87)

1957, November 28 — 8:30 p.m. Regino Lacuesta is driving on the Hawaii Belt Road near Hakalau, Hawaii, when his car engine begins sputtering. Suddenly he sees a bright flash of light 20 feet above the highway in front of him. The engine dies, the headlights go out, and the car rolls to a stop at the point where the light had been. Lacuesta feels numb and cannot move. Soon the headlights come on and the car starts up again, although it is in high gear and he has not touched the starter. He drives straight home to Ninole. ("Big Isle Man Says Light from Sky Stalled His Car," Honolulu Star-Bulletin, November 29, 1957, p. 1; Schopick, pp. 49–51)

1957, November 29 — 2:30 a.m. Capt. Fred Sutton, skipper of the fishing trawler Ella Hewett, is 4 miles off Port Jack, Douglas, Isle of Man, when an orange ball of fire crosses the sky. As it passes over the hull of the small boat, the vessel grows luminous, with firefly-like sparks of luminescence everywhere. The fireball bursts like fireworks, seen by others on the island as well as Scotland. The crew notices that the white paint on the metal railings at the edge of the boat has disappeared, leaving only the red undercoating. At daybreak, however, the paintwork is perfectly normal again. (Jenny Randles, "Mysterious Island: The UFO Legacy of the Isle of Man," IUR 29, no. 1 (Spring 2004): 13–14)

1957, November 29 — Two German expatriates, G. R. Miczaika and Eberhart W. Wahl, form Project Space Track in Building 1535 of the Geophysics Research Directorate at the Air Force Cambridge Research Center at Hanscom AFB in Bedford, Massachusetts. Its mission is to track and compute orbits for all artificial earth satellites and space probes, including US and Soviet payloads, booster rockets, and debris. (Wikipedia, "Project Space Track")

1957, November 30? — Morning. The newly established Brazilian Navy meteorological station on Ilha da Trindade, Brazil, is tracking a launched weather balloon by radio and with a theodolite. Suddenly the radio signals from the balloon change frequency. The technician observing with the theodolite tells Capt. Carlos Alberto Bacellar that there is another object near the balloon. Bacellar rushes out to look and sees a silvery speck moving from one side to the other and making tight turns. Through the 20x theodolite scope, the object looks distinctly oval, silvery-white in color, and reflecting sunlight from a metallic surface. It changes shape occasionally, possibly indicating oscillation. The balloon bursts at the appropriate time, but the object remains in sight for nearly 3 hours. (Olavo T. Fontes, "The UAO Sightings at the Island of Trindade, Part 1," APRO Bulletin, January 1960, pp. 5–9)

1957, December — National Intelligence Estimate (NIE) 11-10-57 predicts that the Soviets will "probably have a first operational capability with up to 10 prototype ICBMs" at "sometime during the period from mid-1958 to mid-1959." The numbers of the missile gap start to inflate. (Wikipedia, "Missile gap")

1957, December — A classified Canadian Department of National Defence memorandum states that the "RCAF has no official policy concerning the subject" of UFOs and "there has never been a serious investigation of any report on file" at RCAF headquarters. (Gregory M. Kanon, "UFOs and the Canadian Government, Part One," Canadian UFO Report, no. 22 (1975): 22)

1957, December — Several UFO sightings take place along the Finland-Russia border. A cigar-shaped object is seen by two Finnish farmers moving horizontally at a high altitude from west to east. (Good Above, pp. 307–308)

1957, December — Walter K. Buhler launches the Sociedade Brasiliera de Estudos sobre Discos Voadores in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. It publishes the Boletim SBEDV through 1988. (Boletim SBEDV, no. 1 (December 1957))

1957, December — Night. Edmund Rucker is awakened by a roaring noise in El Cajon, California, and watches a strange object land near his house. Its windows are lighted and he can see some strange-looking heads inside. An opening becomes visible, and four creatures emerge. They have large heads, dome-like foreheads, and bulging eyeballs. They deliver a message to Rucker in English, saying they have philanthropic and scientific purposes. (Mark Cashman, "Behavioral Classification System for UFO Occupants," IUR 24, no. 1 (Spring 1999): 19; Patrick Gross, URECAT, July 28, 2007)

1957, December — Keyhoe is invited to appear on the CBS Armstrong Circle Theater anthology drama TV program hosted by Douglas Edwards to talk about UFOs with Kenneth Arnold and Clarence S. Chiles. Others invited are Edward J. Ruppelt, Donald Menzel, and an Air Force representative. But Keyhoe finds out that it will not be a panel discussion but a scripted conversation, and he will only have 7 minutes. He is promised he will have final say over his part of the script, and he agrees. However, writer Irve Tunick cuts out critical portions of Keyhoe's material (including references to the Estimate of the Situation and the Robertson Panel), saying it is too long.

Ruppelt, Chiles, and Arnold soon withdraw from the program, expanding Keyhoe's segment to 11 minutes. (Clark III 167–168; Clark IV 194–195)

1957, December 1 — 1:30 a.m. Swissair pilot Walter Borner is flying a DC-6B at 18,000 feet over Ras El-Kanayis, Egypt, when he sees a "giant, red, burning cylinder falling down vertically, leaving a yellowish trail." It is possible that this is the reentry of the final stage of the rocket that launched Sputnik I. (Luis Schoenherr, "Unknown Missiles," IUR 19, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1994): 22)

1957, December 3 — 2:30 p.m. Z. Thad Fogl, radio officer of the SS Ramsey, claims to have taken a photo of a saucer off the coast of San Pedro, California. The photo appears in Flying Saucer Review in 1959 and Life in 1966. However, in 1967 Fogl admits that he had faked the photo using parts of plastic airplane models. (NICAP, "Disc with Landing Gear Photo / Fogl Case"; "Radio Officer's Amazing Story: UFO Snapped from Ship," Flying Saucer Review 5, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1959): 6–7; B. E. 1957, December 3 — 7:00 p.m. Many residents of the Menastash Ridge area of Ellensburg, Washington, watch a "strange ball of fire" for 20 minutes. A truck driver sees the light hovering above his truck, causing the motor to cough and sputter. His engine does not stop completely, however, so he drives away. The night is misty, but the object is so bright that it lights up the sky as if it were daytime. (Schopick, pp. 51–52)

1957, December 4 — Blue Book Capt. George T. Gregory complains that as a result of pressure from the press and public, "Assistant Secretary of Defense requested that ATIC immediately submit a preliminary analysis to the press" of the Levelland, Texas, cases, even though he has "limited data." (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, p. 147)

1957, December 5 — 8:00 a.m. A round, silvery object crosses the sky above the meteorological station at Ilha da Trindade, Brazil, at about 6,000 feet. (Olavo T. Fontes, "The UAO Sightings at the Island of Trindade, Part 1," APRO Bulletin, January 1960, pp. 5–9)

1957, December 5 — Morning. An unidentified beeping sound is picked up for three minutes on KBR Rural Public Power Radio in Ainsworth, Nebraska, operating at 72.3 AM. ("Unidentified Beeping Heard on KBR Power Radio on Thursday," Ainsworth (Nebr.) Star-Journal, December 12, 1957, p. 1)

1957, December 6 — A letter written to contactee George Adamski on State Department stationery from R. E. Straith, Cultural Exchange Committee, is a hoax concocted by ufologists Gray Barker and James W. Moseley. The letter informs Adamski that the State Department knows his claims are true and they encourage his activities. (Max B. Miller, "That State Department Letter," Saucers 6, no. 2 (Spring 1958): 9–12; "U.S. Govt. 1957, December 7 — 10:00 p.m. In western Victoria and eastern South Australia, witnesses see a moon-like object explode with a vivid flash. Unexpected blackouts are reported in the area. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 87)

1957, December 8 — 5:30 p.m. A disc-shaped UFO with a dome and three pads on the underside suddenly comes toward a car with three passengers at Woodward, Oklahoma. The car heater, wipers, and radio fail and finally the car stalls out as the UFO hovers overhead at 200 feet. It emits a high-pitched whining sound. It is over 50 feet in diameter and has portholes. The whine increases in pitch after about two minutes, and the UFO rises vertically out of sight. The headlights come on and the engine of the car starts by itself. The driver spends 4 hours with two officers from Kirtland AFB in New Mexico who tell him of similar observations. (Vallée, Magonia, pp. 267–268)

1957, December 8 — 9:00 p.m. Eight people traveling together in two cars on Highway 17 between Coulee City and Soap Lake, Washington, see a huge, fiery object pass overhead from north to south. Both cars stall out and their headlights also fail as the UFO passes overhead. In addition, the inside dome lights come on, even though they aren't turned on. The cars remain stalled until the object passes out of sight. Police say the object stalled as many as six cars along that sparsely traveled road. (Schopick, pp. 52–53)

1957, December 12 — A USAF pilot attains 1,208 mph in a McDonnell F-101A Voodoo at Edwards AFB, California. (Wikipedia, "McDonnell F-101 Voodoo")

1957, December 12 — 5:45 p.m. At least 13 witnesses see a bright light over the Sea of Japan. The object is tracked on radar and seen through binoculars. At 7:22 p.m., a scramble is ordered and two F-86D's take off from Misawa Air Base, Japan. Multiple radar and visual sightings take place over the next three days. (NICAP, "Jets Scrambled after Radar/Visual UFO"; Sparks, p. 261; Powell, Scientist, 25–26)

1957, December 14 — Night. Ed Waslashi sees a lighted green object fall into a haystack on his farm at Langdon, North Dakota. He picks out a strange metallic substance from the ashes of the burned hay. The material finds its way to geologist Nicholas N. Kohanowski at the University of North Dakota, who finds that it is light, porous, and mostly magnesium dioxide. ("What Is It?" Winona (Minn.) Daily News, December 17, 1957, p 1; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 87)

1957, December 15 — 1:00–2:00 a.m. Three young men see a huge light in the sky at Almind, Denmark. It is oval-shaped, emits red or orange rays, and appears to be descending. They watch it for 18–19 minutes as it hovers at a 10° angle and quivers. Suddenly it becomes still and from its center emerge two small objects that drift away in a northerly direction and soon disappear. The large object lies on its side and quivers some more. Later it ascends and a fan-shaped tail of light spreads after it. The UFO is seen later along the coast and photographed. ("Flying Saucer Reports Pour in from Denmark," Flying Saucer Review 4, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1958): 2; Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects: A Further Look," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 25)

1957, December 16 — Between 2:00 and 3:00 a.m. Mary M. Starr, a resident of Old Saybrook, Connecticut, and a former teacher with a master's degree from Yale, is awakened by a bright light in her room. A cigar-shaped object, brightly lit and with square portholes, hovers just above her clothesline. She can see men inside. The object is approximately 20–30 feet long and dark gray or black in color, hovering motionless about 5 feet above the ground. Through its lighted windows Starr sees two figures that pass each other, walking in opposite directions. (NICAP, "Cigar Hovers over Clothesline / Entities Observed"; "The Near-Landing at Old Saybrook, Connecticut, December 16, 1957," CSI News Letter, no. 25 (July 15, 1959): 9–10; Mary M. Lore, eds, UFOs: A New Look, NICAP, 1969, pp. 27–28; Center for UFO Studies, HUMCAT Index 1957, p. 42; Clark III 269; Clark IV 309)

1957, December 16 — 8:45 p.m. A cargo train en route from Miguel Burnier to Chrockatt de Sá, Minas Gerais, Brazil, is followed by an object with an estimated diameter of six inches [at arm's length?]. The UFO glows brightly and seems to be at a height of about 5,000 feet. The object gives off an intense orange light that is so strong that the faces of the witnesses take on an orange tint as they gaze upward. It appears round-shaped and maneuvers from the right to the left. The sighting lasts 10 minutes as some 20 people view the UFO. ("Florianopolis, Santarina State," S.P.A.C.E., no. 15 (March 1958): 2; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 December, The Author, 1998, p. 53)

1957, December 17 — Skandinavisk UFO Information is founded in Denmark by Hans-Christian Petersen under the name Sydjysk UFO Information. It publishes the journal UFO-Nyt from 1958 to 2010. (Wikipedia, "Skandinavisk UFO Information")

1957, December 17 — The US conducts its first successful launch of an SM-65A Atlas missile at Cape Canaveral, Florida. (Wikipedia, "SM-65A Atlas")

1957, December 18 — Luis E. Corrales of Caracas, Venezuela, finds an odd luminous streak on a photographic plate recording the passage of Sputnik 2. It is a luminous trail running parallel to the satellite's trail, then veering away. ("Strange Luminosity Parallels Path of Sputnik II," APRO Bulletin, March 1958, p. 3; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 December, The Author, 1998, p. 57)

1957, December 21 — 6:30 p.m. Yvonne Torres de Mendonça, her three small children, and a servant are traveling in a jeep driven by her mechanic, Marcio Gonçalves, towards Ponta Porã, Mato Grosso do Sul, Brazil, along the Paraguayan border. They see a large ball of light about the size of the full moon that starts moving toward them, and they realize that it is two lights flying silently side by side. The lights straddle the road, oscillating from one side to the other in a strange wobbling motion and spinning on their axes. One of them stops in mid-air and dives toward the ground in a falling-leaf motion 60 feet ahead of them, while the other maneuvers in circles around the jeep. The lights are spherical and encircled by a Saturn-like ring at the center. The upper hemisphere and rim are fiery red, while the lower hemisphere is silvery white. The two objects follow the jeep for 2 hours, all the way to town, maneuvering intelligently around them, especially when the jeep stops twice to evaluate the objects. (Olavo T. Fontes, "Shadow of the Unknown, Part II: UAOs Chase Cars," APRO Bulletin, March 1959, pp. 3–6; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 148–150; Loren E. 1957, December 30 — Night. George Chowanski is cutting wood at his home in Schooley's Mountain, New Jersey, when his two dogs begin to bark and howl. He hears a whirring noise like an electric shaver that persists for one minute. Then he sees a saucer-shaped object, 5 feet high and 15 feet wide, hovering about 2 feet above the ground in a grove of trees 100 feet from the back porch. Three individuals come out of the craft and walk about in the clearing. One of them bends over to pick something up and carries something heavy back to the object. After 2–3 minutes, it slowly rises, spiraling through the tall trees, and flies off. (Edna Slack and Carl Darby, "Strange Craft, Three Visitors Are Reported at Drakestown," Dover-Lakeland (N.J.) News, March 6, 1958, pp. 1, 6; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 88–89; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1957 December, The Author, 1998, pp. 73–74)

1957, December 31 — 7:50 a.m. Five workers (including the station doctor and Naval Lieut. Inacio Carlos Moreira) at the meteorological station at Ilha da Trindade, Brazil, watch a silvery, circular object pass overhead at 6,000 feet. (Olavo T. Fontes, "The UAO Sightings at the Island of Trindade, Part 1," APRO Bulletin, January 1960, pp. 5–9)

1958 — The Atomic Energy Commission puts a barbed wire fence around Area 13 at the Nellis Air Force Range, Nevada, where the Project 57 "dirty bomb" had been detonated in April 1957, with signs indicating "do not enter / nuclear material." (Jacobsen, Area 51, p. 297)

1958 — Project Orion, an effort to build a nuclear-powered spacecraft, begins at a maximum-security facility in Area 25 of the Nevada Test Site. Led by Ted Taylor of General Atomics and physicist Freeman Dyson, its initial focus is to send astronauts to Mars and back. The spaceship would be 16 stories tall and piloted by 150 men. Soon ARPA and the Air Force take over the project and redesign it for a space-based battleship that could launch nuclear missiles from space. But no one builds Orion and it is effectively disbanded by the 1963 nuclear test ban. (Wikipedia, "Project Orion (nuclear propulsion)"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 304–305)

1958 — French ufologist Aimé Michel publishes Flying Saucers and the Straight-Line Mystery, an examination of the UFO wave of September–October 1954 in France. The book's preface is written by Gen. Lionel-Max Chassin, in which he expresses his opinion that UFOs are genuinely mysterious ("That strange things have been seen is now beyond question, and the 'psychological' explanations seem to have misfired"). Michel contends that each day's sightings, when plotted on a map, occur along straight-line paths, even though different objects seem to figure in each sighting. The alignments, which he calls "orthotenic lines," do not necessarily correspond to a trajectory. However, Jacques Vallée later concludes that the alignments can be explained by chance alone. (Aimé Michel, Flying Saucers and the Straight-Line Mystery, Criterion, 1958; Olavo T. Fontes, "Orthotenic Survey in Brazil," APRO Bulletin, July 1960, pp. 1, 3–4; "An Evaluation of Aimé Michel's Study of the Straight Line Mystery," in Charles A. 1958 — Trevor James Constable writes They Live in the Sky, which explains UFOs as etheric (good) and astral (bad) entities that are engaged in a battle for control of earthly minds. He bases this on his analysis of occult texts and channeled communications from cosmic informant Ashtar. The astral entities are based inside the earth, but they can leave it through an opening in the South Pole and fly 125,000 miles into space. Only the atomic bomb can penetrate the astral realm, which is why astrals disguised as benevolent Space Brothers argue fervently for nuclear disarmament. The men in black are reincarnated versions of Richard Shaver's deros. 1958 — Night. A sergeant in charge of a fire truck crash crew at an air base in South Korea is positioned near the runway awaiting an emergency landing by an American jet fighter low on fuel. The men see a bright light approaching from across the Yellow Sea. It grows bigger and, within several hundred yards of the shore, stops and hovers. The control tower operators, watching the object through binoculars, do not know what it is. Suddenly the object shines a beam of light straight down on the water. It soon goes out, but the water remains luminescent for a while before fading out. The object again shines a light on the water and turns it off a minute or so later. By this time, the jet that is low on fuel is landing. A second jet is asked to check out the object, which instantly shoots back toward China and disappears in seconds. 1958, January — The US Senate Committee on Government Operations asks to meet with representatives from the Secretary of the Air Force Office of Legislative Action to discuss the possibility of holding open hearings on the Air Force UFO program. USAF fears "uncontrolled publicity," but agrees to go along with it. Soon, however, Richard E. Horner, USAF assistant secretary for research and development, persuades the committee's chief counsel, Donald O'Donnell, that hearings are "not in the best interest of the air force," nor necessary for national security. Horner says Project Blue Book has things well in hand, and he tells Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) that allegations about the Air Force withholding information are "entirely in error." People who report UFOs simply want confidentiality, and the Air Force respects that. (Jacobs, UFO Controversy in America, Signet ed., 1976, pp. 140–141, 144; Clark III 919–920; Clark IV 1030)

1958, January — Lackland AFB in San Antonio, Texas, asks for Keyhoe's permission to use The Flying Saucer Conspiracy to develop a script for closed-circuit broadcast at the base. Keyhoe agrees. (Keyhoe, FSTS, p. 218)

1958, January — 1:30 a.m. A woman is driving along the New York State Thruway near Niagara Falls, New York, when she sees an illuminated 50-foot pole in the center parkway ahead. It seems to be retracting and getting shorter. As she closes in on it, her engine stops and the headlights go out. The pole is attached to a saucer-shaped object, and she sees shadowy figures floating around it. The UFO rises and moves away, and she starts the car again. An area of snow a foot in diameter has melted dry where the pole has been. (Michael D. Swords, "Messing Around with the Force," IUR 31, no. 4 (Mar. 2008): 16)

1958, January 1 — 7:50 a.m. The entire garrison at the meteorological station at Ilha da Trindade, Brazil, watches a bright point of light flashing over the ocean at a high rate of speed to the north. (Olavo T. Fontes, "The UAO Sightings at the Island of Trindade, Part 1," APRO Bulletin, January 1960, pp. 5–9; Clark III 1133; Clark IV 1284)

1958, January 2 — Night. The Brazilian Navy tow ship Triunfo, traveling off the coast of Bahia, Brazil, watches an unknown object circle the ship for almost 10 minutes. It is round, encircled with an orange glow, and maneuvers at high speed, making sudden changes of course and right-angle turns. Occasionally it hovers briefly, sometimes close to the ship. (Olavo T. Fontes, "The UAO Sightings at the Island of Trindade, Part 1," APRO Bulletin, January 1960, pp. 5–9)

1958, January 3 — Cliff DeLacey, a 23-year-old college student from Vallejo, California, shoots 90 seconds of film of UFOs at Diamond Head, Hawaii. DeLacey sees nine UFOs flashing across the sky and immediately grabs his camera. He is careful enough to shoot the tops of nearby trees, allowing a reference to the height and relative speed of the unknown objects. The objects appear to be about 3–4 miles away from the camera, flying at an altitude of 7,000–8,000 feet, and moving at a speed slightly greater than that of a jet. The silvery globules appear to be no more than 20 feet in diameter. They are spherical, and no tail fins or protrusions of any kind are visible. The film, in color, is said to be clear and to show at least two of the nine UFOs in considerable detail. 1958, January 6 — Morning. Capt. Carlos Alberto Bacellar is tracking a weather balloon launch at the meteorological station at Ilha da Trindade, Brazil, when the balloon's radio signals begin fading away without a loss in frequency. Soon, the balloon's transmitter falls completely silent. Outside, the balloon is still visible and approaching a cumulus cloud at 14,000 feet. Suddenly, the balloon is sucked up into the cloud, reappearing 10 minutes later and ascending more rapidly, indicating it had released its instrument packed while inside the cloud. However, no parachute is see and the instruments are never recovered. A silvery object emerges from the cloud. Through the 20x theodolite, the object looks like a bright white half-moon. Bacellar follows it with the scope for 30 minutes. It eventually disappears in a cloud bank. (Olavo T. Fontes, "The UAO Sightings at the Island of Trindade, Part 1," APRO Bulletin, January 1960, pp. 5–9; Clark III 1133; Clark IV 1284)

1958, January 10 — Day. Capt. Chrysólogo Rocha is sitting with his wife on the porch of a house in Guarujá, São Paulo, Brazil, overlooking the South Atlantic. He is trying to focus with his binoculars on what appears to be a small island. When he does get focused, he realizes the island is getting bigger and is in two parts, both a clear, gray color. One part is in the sea, while the other seems suspended above it. Without warning, both parts suddenly sink out of sight. Shortly afterwards, a steamer comes into view, on a course that will take it very close to the object. About 15 minutes later, when the ship is out of sight, the object again rises slowly out of the sea. He now sees clearly that the two parts are joined by several narrow upright shafts or tubes that are bright and visible to the naked eye. These shafts, "like beads on a necklace" pass in a "disorderly and simultaneous movement." Shortly afterwards the two parts of the object close up again, and it disappears below the waves. Probably an inferior mirage of an island in combination with a towering effect. (Charles Bowen, "A South American Trio," Flying Saucer Review 11, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1965): 20–21; Wim van Utrecht, "A UFO Dives in and Out of the Ocean," Caelestia; Dolan, USO1, 195)

1958, January 13 — 11:45 p.m. Brian Crittenden sees a dome-shaped light with a long narrow light underneath coming directly towards him as he is leaving a friend's house southwest of Casino, New South Wales, Australia. He jumps into his car and heads home. The UFO chases his car along Benns Road, practically touching the telephone poles. His car radio develops interference when the UFO approaches him. It follows him all the way to town, 7 miles away. (Schopick, p. 81; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 January–February, The Author, 1998, p. 21)

1958, January 16 — Around 12:00 noon. As the International Geophysical Year research ship Almirante Saldanha is anchored on the south side of Ilha da Trindade, Brazil, 730 miles off the coast in the Atlantic Ocean, the commander and many crew members, including photographer Almiro Baraúna, see a Saturn-shaped object maneuvering over the island. It reportedly comes toward the island from the east, flies towards the Pico Desejado, makes a steep turn, and goes away very quickly to the northwest. Baraúna takes four photos with a Rolleiflex 2.8 model E. Commander Paulo Moreira da Silva of the Brazilian Navy Hydrography and Navigation Department (who technically outranks the ship's captain, José Santos de Saldanha da Gama), is apparently an eyewitness and states, "the object was encircled by a greenish glow, our [meteorological] balloon was of a red color." Baraúna is officially there to take photos of the island, underwater photos, photos of the IGY activities, and the ship's operations. The radar detection of an unexplained supersonic target reportedly occurs the day before, at about 12:05 p.m. There is a power failure on the ship when the object is seen; the power returns upon the object's departure. Instruments like radio transmitters and apparatus with magnetic needles cease operating while the flying object remains in the island's proximity. Willy Smith's April 20, 1983, interview of Baraúna takes on more significance: "I asked if the object had been detected by ship's radar. He [Baraúna] replied that it hadn't because all the electrical power aboard ship was out at the time. He was sure of the reality of the power outage because just before the object appeared a launch was being hauled up from the water by electric pulley, and it stopped midway just as the UFO appeared!" The ship's log is provably incomplete since it does not even mention the UFO photo incident. A 1999 analysis by Martin J. Powell seems to indicate that the object photographed is an airplane, distorted by Baraúna through a double-exposure process. In August 2010, a major TV show in Brazil airs information stating that the original photographer had made hoax photographs in the past. 1958, January 22 — The "UFO: The Enigma of the Skies" segment of Armstrong Circle Theater airs on CBS. USAF Reserve Lt. Col. Spencer Whedon from ATIC says all UFOs are explainable. Keyhoe comes on and starts reading his script for a few minutes, then shocks everyone by deviating from it, saying "And now, Mr. Edwards, I would like to make a disclosure, something which has never been revealed to the public. For the last six months our committee has been working with a Senate committee which is investigating official secrecy on UFOs. If the hearings are held, open hearings, I feel it would prove that the flying saucers are real—". Then his microphone is cut off, although the filming continues. Menzel then appears, then USAF spokesman Richard E. Horner comes on afterward and says that the Air Force is not hiding anything about UFOs. Keyhoe later claims this is not censorship by the show, although he thinks it is the Air Force silence group at work. In April, CBS director of editing Herbert A. Carlborg tells NICAP that Keyhoe's deviation "might lead to statements that neither this network nor the individuals on the program were authorized to release. As a consequence, public interest was served." 1958, January 23 — Capt. G. H. Oldenburgh, public information officer at Langley AFB, Virginia, writes to a NICAP member who has been denied a request to place an ad in the base newspaper asking for UFO reports: "I felt it would encourage Air Force personnel to violate present Air Force policy and specifically AF Regulation 200-2." (Frank Edwards, FS Serious Business, Bantam ed., 1966, p. 51)

1958, January 26 — 4:00 p.m. Some chemical workers at Shimada, Japan, see a bright object land and claim that beings fell from the sky without parachutes. They wear strange suits and speak an unknown language. ("They Are Landing in Japan, Too," Flying Saucer Review 4, no. 3 (May/June 1958): 33)

1958, January 28 — Hillenkoetter announces that "two committees on Capitol Hill" are investigating the UFO controversy. Rep. William Hanes Ayres (R-Ohio) writes a letter to constituent Melvin V. Knapp, saying that "Congressional investigations have been held and are still being held on the problem of unidentified flying objects (UFO's). Since most of the material presented to the committees is classified, the hearings are never printed.

When conclusions are reached, they will be released if possible." ("Flying Saucer Proof Clouded by Air Force, Private Probers Say," Rochester (N.Y.) Democrat and Chronicle, August 3, 1958, p. 8; UFOEv, p. 173)

1958, January 30 — 11:45 p.m. Attorney José Valencia Dongo, his wife, and their nephew feel an electric shock as they are driving between Arequipa and Lima, Peru, at a point (roughly around the Yauca District) along the Pan American Highway 220 miles northwest of Arequipa. Several seconds later the headlights and engine of their car fails. They then see an inverted mushroom-shaped object, about 15 feet in diameter, descending from the sky. It hovers for about 8 minutes at a 150-foot altitude, glowing red. A truck and bus are also affected. 1958, January 31 — A meeting is held in the office of Assistant Secretary of the Air Force Richard E. Horner under the auspices of the Subcommittee on Investigations of the Senate Committee on Government Operations, even though Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) and other senators are absent. The Air Force is represented by Maj. James F. Byrne, Maj. Joseph E. Boland, and Maj. Lawrence J. Tacker who meet with the subcommittee's FBI liaisons. Tacker declares that USAF does not want a congressional investigation, and the McClellan effort dies immediately. (Swords 275)

1958, January 31 — 10:48 p.m. The US launches its first satellite, Explorer 1, from Cape Canaveral Missile Annex, Florida. It is the first spacecraft to detect the Van Allen radiation belt. (Wikipedia, "Explorer 1"; Graff 132)

1958, February — Keyhoe meets again with Rep. James C. Healey and tells him that the Armstrong Circle Theater incident was Air Force censorship. A few days later, Healey tells Keyhoe that the Air Force is claiming that the program proves "there are no such things as flying saucers." Keyhoe gives Healey the facts about the 1956 Ryan case pointing to USAF ordering a commercial flight to pursue UFOs, citing the Meet the Millers tape from April 16, 1956, which he has obtained. He offers to get the committee a transcript. (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 166–167, 182–184)

1958, February — Ufologist Raymond Veillith launches the UFO journal Lumières dans la Nuit in Le Chambon-sur-Lignon, Haute-Loire, France. In the 1960s and 1970s it features a network of 2,000 investigators and a circulation in the thousands. It continues under various editors until at least 2018. (Lumières dans la Nuit, no. 1 (February 1958); Wikipedia, "Lumières dans la Nuit"; Story, p. 218; Eghigian, After, pp, 108–109)

1958, February 1 — 9:20 a.m. Artist Eduardo Moll and his fiancée Juana are driving along the Avenida Costanera in Lima, Peru, when they observe a red-orange light flying low about 800 feet ahead. They drive closer, stop the car, and see it is a ball of fire with a white light underneath hovering about 30 feet in the air near an abandoned factory. The light consists of dozens of small crosses that flicker on and off, red and yellow, and a beam of white light comes from its base. The beam's edge is sharply defined, but it does not illuminate the ground below it. Moll decides to walk toward the object. When he is 25 feet away, the light goes out and the object rises slowly to the east and gradually disappears. 1958, February 2 — An elliptical UFO with two porthole-like markings is seen somewhere in New South Wales, Australia. (UFOEv, p. 137)

1958, February 3 — OTC Enterprises runs a two-page ad in a Baltimore, Maryland, newspaper and distributes a well-printed brochure announcing that Otis T. Carr has approached the US government and offered to build it a working spacecraft called the OTC-X1—circular, 45 feet in diameter and 15 feet high—for $20 million. He sets a date of December 7, 1959, to take a three-man crew on the spacecraft on a round trip to the Moon. Some press accounts treat Carr as if he is a real scientist. 1958, February 5 — The Air Force revises AFR 200-2 and recreates the system of air base commanders conducting initial investigations of sightings in their areas. It also continues ATIC's responsibility to "reduce the percentage of unidentifieds to the minimum." (Department of the Air Force, "Intelligence: Unidentified Flying Objects (UFO)," Air Force Regulation 200-2, February 5, 1958; Department of the Air Force, "Intelligence: Unidentified Flying Objects (UFO)," Air Force Regulation 200-2A, July 3, 1958; Clark III 919; Clark IV 1029)

1958, February 7 — In response to the launching of Sputnik, President Eisenhower creates the Advanced Research Projects Agency and houses it in the Pentagon. (Wikipedia, "DARPA")

1958, February 17 — Evening. Flora Evans and Bernice McIntosh twice encounter an intensely brilliant orange light about 15 feet in diameter that sends out peculiar grid-like or diamond-shaped patterns and lights up a canyon northeast of Alcalde, New Mexico, along State Highway 68. The two women are temporarily blinded. Their trip home to Albuquerque inexplicably takes 4 hours instead of the normal 2 hours. Both witnesses are exhausted and have burned or reddened areas on their skin, some on their kneecaps and the back of their lower legs, even though they have not left the car. Evans has a reddened area shaped like a triangle on her back. An acquaintance, Paul Boyett, has a Geiger counter, with which he gets a high radiation count from both women on February 19. The next day Evans, who is working in some capacity in civil defense, goes to her doctor at the Lovelace Clinic in Albuquerque, to see about possible radiation burns and exposure. She overhears a comment about "178 roentgens" exposure, but the doctor says there is nothing to worry about. McIntosh's symptoms (nausea, vomiting, rash) are initially more irritating but subside substantially, although both women have swellings in their lower legs, and both gain serious weight (some 50 pounds) over the next few months. 1958, February 19 — 10:30 p.m. Cicero Claudino da Silva, Mustafa Esgaib, Alegario Campos, and João Manuel Vasquez are investigating the Ponta Porã case from December. They are at Porteiro Ortiz, Mato Grosso do Sul, Brazil, along Highway 463 and shining their lights in the direction of the Paraguayan frontier when a reddish light appears and becomes larger, as if approaching them. The ground around their car is illuminated for a few seconds, and they realize that another red light is nearing them on the other side of the car. They head for Ponta Porã at breakneck speed. (Olavo T. Fontes, "The Shadow of the Unknown," APRO Bulletin, March 1959, p. 6)

1958, February 24 — 3:05 a.m. Attorney Carlos José de Costa Pereira, Manoel Mendes, and Antônio de Araujo are driving near Santo Antônio de Jesus, Bahia, Brazil. The car engine sputters and fails. All attempts to detect the trouble fail. The next inhabited place is far away, so the travelers decide that the best thing to do is to sleep at that spot, beside the road. Next morning they will try to do something about their situation, getting help from some nearby village or farm. It was then that they notice a large luminous Saturn-shaped object silently approaching to about 240 feet from them and only 90 feet from the ground. It then descends in a falling-leaf pattern to about 12 feet. They can see it is about 60–75 feet in diameter with a rotating center section. Suddenly it climbs vertically to 600 feet, makes a tight circle, then tilts to 45° and makes a number of high-speed maneuvers, then descends again in a falling-leaf motion before shooting up vertically at tremendous speed. After this, the car starts easily and they proceed to Salvador. (Olavo T. Fontes, "The Shadow of the Unknown," APRO Bulletin, May 1959, p. 7; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 150–152; Schopick, pp. 59–61)

1958, February 28 — USAF Director of Information Maj. Gen. Arno H. Luehman naively inquires of the McClellan Senate subcommittee whether, based on its "preliminary informal investigation," it would state that the Air Force is investigating UFOs and not withholding information. (Arno H. Luehman to Director of Legislative Liaison, "McClellan Subcommittee Statement Concerning Air Force Handling of UFO Reports," February 28, 1958; Swords 275)

1958, February 28 — Brig. Gen. João Adil Oliveira, chief of the Brazilian Air Force's General Staff information service, tells O Globo that the UFO phenomenon is a "fact confirmed by material evidence. There are thousands of documents, photos, and sighting evidence demonstrating its existence." (Good Need, p. 233)

1958, February 28 — Police detective Faustin Gallegos and his wife Dorothy see something like a "large medicine ball" descend and land in their back yard in Miami, Florida. Outside, he sees a football-shaped object 20 inches long and 8 inches high, lined with "thousands of minute cells resembling those of a honeycomb. It is clear and pulsating. He touches it and his fingers leave marks. They put it in a jar, but it evaporates on the way to the police station. (Faustin Gallegos, "The Pulsing Honeycomb from Space," Fate 11, no. 9 (September 1958): 40–43; Clark III 1102; Clark IV 1228)

1958, March — The Air Force releases parts of the 1953 Robertson Panel report, a mere three paragraphs recommending that "the national security agencies take immediate steps to strip the Unidentified Flying Objects of the special status they have been given and the aura of mystery they have unfortunately acquired." ("CIA Evades, Then Denies Charge of Attempted UFO Censorship," UFO Investigator 1, no. 4 (June 1958): 4)

1958, March — A French Foreign Legionnaire on sentry duty at Bouamama, near Sidi Chami, Algeria, hears a whistling noise and sees an enormous, elliptical-shaped object descend and hover 115–131 feet above the ground 165 feet away. The object is surrounded by pale green light, and a relaxing emerald-green beam of light is coming from its base to the ground. Seemingly paralyzed, he stares at the object for 45–50 minutes. The noise returns, the object rises gently, and flies off at tremendous speed. (Joël Mesnard, "Tranquillizing Visitation at Bouahmama: An Algerian Report of 1958," Flying Saucer Review 19, no. 3 (May/June 1973): 17–18)

1958, March 2 — The Brazilian Navy, after an analysis of the January 16 Ilha da Trindade sighting and photos, offers an ambiguous conclusion: "the existence of personal testimonies and of a photographer, of some value given the circumstances involved permit the admission that there are indications of the existence of the UFO." (Brazil Department of the Navy, "Clarification of the Observation of Unidentified Flying Objects Sighted on the Island of Trinidad, in the Period of 12/5/57 to 1/16/58," March 2, 1958)

1958, March 3 — Gen. Joe W. Kelly responds to Luehman, falsely stating that the Air Force has done "considerable work" with the McClellan subcommittee. (Swords 275–276)

1958, March 8 — A USAF radar site in Korea tracks a UFO slowly descending from 77,000 to 25,000 feet. (UFOEv, p. 80)

1958, March 8 — Keyhoe appears on ABC's The Mike Wallace Interview and mentions the Estimate of the Situation, Fournet's motion study, and the CIA Robertson Panel. Wallace surprises him by saying Assistant Secretary of the Air Force Richard E. Horner told his producers that the Senate Committee "show no interest in any hearings." This is news to Keyhoe. Wallace also quotes from the Robertson Panel summary that was just released. A few days later, Keyhoe receives two letters from the Senate Committee confirming that it "does not intend to investigate the United States Air Force." (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 189–190; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 March–April, The Author, 1998, p. 9; "Mike Wallace Interview of Maj. Donald E. Keyhoe: A Sequel to the Armstrong Circle Theater," Journal of UFO History 2, no. 1 (March/April 2005): 8–11; Swords 272–273; "NICAP – Maj. Donald E. Keyhoe Interviewed by Mike Wallace 3-8-1958," Ufology: A Primer in Audio, 1938–1959, November 21, 2013; Powell, Keyhoe, 229–231; "1958 'UFOs Are Real' Interview by Mike Wallace with Former Marine Air Corps Major Donald E. Keyhoe," Eyes On Cinema YouTube channel, February 26, 2024)

1958, March 13 — Keyhoe writes a four-page letter to CIA Director Allen Dulles, criticizing the Air Force for its censorship on the Armstrong Circle Theater and asking for a copy of the Robertson Panel report. He asks Dulles if the CIA has been interrogating and intimidating UFO witnesses. (Powell, Keyhoe, 253–254)

1958, March 14 — 8:45 a.m. Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Cummings and another witness see a 3-foot-long, round, black object approach from the west in Healdsburg, California. It touches the ground 50 feet away in the backyard, then takes off to the east, turns south, and disappears. (NICAP, [case file]; Sparks, p. 263)

1958, Late March — NICAP begins a new campaign to open another government UFO investigation. This time it approaches the Department of Justice, the National Security Council, the CIA, and the US Army. It receives rebuffs and denials. (Keyhoe, FSTS, p. 191)

1958, March 31 — Ruppelt writes to Keyhoe that he is "completely out of the UFO business" and he thinks the "chances of UFOs being real are a billion to one." (Powell, Keyhoe, 255)

1958, April — Edgar Sievers begins publishing a pro-Adamski newsletter titled Approach in Pretoria, South Africa. It folds in March 1960. (Approach 1, no. 1 (April 1958))

1958, April — 6:00 a.m. At some place along the Brazilian coast between Maceió and Paripueira, Alagoas, Brazil, Wilson Lustosa stops to ask some fishermen what they are looking at. He hears a humming sound and sees a disc-shaped object hovering about 50 feet above the ocean and 120 feet away. It has a small lighted dome on top and a band of square portholes around its midsection through which a red light is shining. Under the UFO the water seems disturbed. The object is visible for an hour. (Gordon W. Creighton, "A Brazilian Sighting," Flying Saucer Review 10, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1964): 18; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 56–57; Clark III 378; Clark IV 422)

1958, Early April — Night. A 2-foot red blinking light frightens children over the Walnut housing area in Ellwood City, Pennsylvania. Police officers Joseph Scala and Emanuel Mavero investigate and watch the bright disc for 10 minutes. Their police radio malfunctions. They try to get closer, but it disappears when they get to the top of a hill. (C. W. Fitch, "Monitoring and Scanning Discs," APRO Bulletin, September 1964, p. 5)

1958, April 1 — 5:30 a.m. Passengers on two buses moving south out of Tucson, Arizona, see a V-formation of white, round objects moving at a high altitude southeast parallel to the East Benson Highway. They remain visible while one of the buses travels 15 miles. A spokesman at Davis-Monthan AFB says the next day that the objects are probably delta-wing F-102 aircraft. ("Tucsonans Sight Flight of High-Flying Saucers," Tucson Arizona Daily Star, April 2, 1958, p. 1; "UFOs May Have Been F102s," Tucson Arizona Daily Star, April 3, 1958, p. B-1)

1958, April 4 — Wilton E. Lexow, chief of the CIA Applied Science Division, sends a memo to the assistant director for scientific intelligence regarding requests by Keyhoe and Leon Davidson to see a copy of the 1953 Robertson Panel report. Lexow indicates that Maj. Lawrence J. Tacker prefers all UFO information requests go to the Air Force for answering. He adds, "I think we can use this procedure as a precedent henceforth in all inquiries regarding UFO's." (Wilton E. Lexow, "Comments on Letters Dealing with UFOs," April 4, 1958; Powell, Keyhoe, 293)

1958, April 9 — A family in Cleveland, Ohio, sees a flight of nine UFOs that suddenly separates into two groups of four and five objects. (UFOEv, p. 15)

1958, April 9 — 7:15 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. B. Mills are driving on St. Vincent Street in Nelson, New Zealand, when they see a bright-red triangular object with white lights around its perimeter. It is descending from the northeast at a 45° angle and moving across Tasman Bay. They see the object again, somewhat dimmer, around 8:00 p.m. from a friend's house on Matipo Terrace. ("Another 'Object' Reported," Nelson (N.Z.) Evening Mail, April 12, 1958, reprinted in Space Probe 6, no. 1–2 (July/Dec. 1958): 27–28; "Triangular Object over New Zealand," Flying Saucer Review 4, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1958): 6)

1958, April 9 — 9:30 p.m. Patrolman Roger Gordon spots two UFOs off the Pier in Newport Beach, California, after three fishermen point them out. About six other people also witness the hovering objects. Gordon observes the objects flying slowly at an altitude of about 500 feet, heading northeast. They appear flat, delta-winged, and have no tail or visible structure. About six red lights flash on and off in a series on their trailing edges. One object makes a sharp right turn and heads over Newport, while the other continues north along the coast, turning inland near the Santa Ana River. Gordon contacts El Toro Marine Corps Air Station to report the sighting. El Toro flight operations say they have no record of such activity. Teenage boys on the pier and others in a nearby apartment also report seeing the objects, describing them as silent, strange, and moving in unusual ways. Witnesses compare them to helicopters but note there is no noise or visible structure. The incident follows an earlier UFO sighting that week involving military and civilian authorities. ("Two Mystery Flying Objects Sighted," Anaheim (Calif.) Daily Bulletin, April 10, 1958, p. 1; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 March–April, The Author, 1998, p. 68)

1958, April 10 — A Danish fighter pilot reports seeing a formation of UFOs. They are also tracked on radar at Skrydstrup Airport in Vojens, Denmark. The pilot attempts to overtake them, but they accelerate and disappear. The commander of Fighter Wing Skrydstrup appeals to the public to report any UFOs. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 March–April, The Author, 1998, p. 69)

1958, April 10 — Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) speaks out on the subject of UFOs after recent sightings in Arizona. He tells the press, "Flying saucers, unidentified objects or whatever you call them—are real," and that the "Air Force has a project to investigate these reports but when you ask about them they clam up." ("Senator Goldwater States Belief Flying Saucers Are Real," UFO Investigator 1, no. 4 (June 1958): 6)

1958, April 13 — 9:40 p.m. Lester Billheimer and Carl Kern watch an object shaped like a "solid right angle" glowing like a white neon light over Allentown, Pennsylvania. It travels northwest at first, then turns west and disappears after three seconds. (NICAP case file)

1958, April 15 — Day. A witness in Broager, Denmark, sees a large, black, low-flying, triangular object. As it flies over town, a number of horseshoe-shaped objects emerge, emitting a strong light. Twenty other witnesses see a triangular "spaceship" at the same time. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 March–April, The Author, 1998, p. 77)

1958, April 16 — Wibren Heslenga and Adrian Keet, while working on construction of a barn in Ingersoll, Ontario, watch several glowing objects approach from the north. The men describe them as having corners and approximately two farm fields distant. While the other objects hover in the air, one appears to land. Before the men can go to the landed object, it takes off straight up with a jerky movement and disappears from view along with the other objects. No ground markings can be found. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 March–April, The Author, 1998, pp. 77–79)

1958, April 25 — The officer for UFO investigation in Denmark, Lt. Col. Hans-Christian Petersen, tells the magazine B-T that multiple-witness sightings are commonplace and that the current Danish wave is comparable to that of the US 1952 wave. "Nothing is gained by rejecting all the accounts as fantasy," he tells reporters. Petersen has founded the Skandinavisk UFO Information group in December with five other Danish military jet pilots. ("Flying Saucer Reports Pour in from Denmark," Flying Saucer Review 4, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1958): 2–4; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 March–April, The Author, 1998, pp. 97–99)

1958, April 29 — Milton Hourcade founds the Centro de Investigación ed Objectos Volandores Identificados in Montevideo, Uruguay.

1958, May 4 — Dewey Fournet confirms, in a statement to NICAP, the existence of the Estimate of the Situation and his own motion study from 1952. (UFOEv, p. 110; Swords 509)

1958, May 5 — 3:40 p.m. Experienced pilot Carlos Alejo Rodriguez is flying his Piper Cub in the vicinity of Capitán de Corbeta Naval Air Base [now part of Capitán de Corbeta Carlos A. Curbelo International Airport] near San Carlos, Uruguay, when a brilliant top-like object (symmetrical above and below) suddenly approaches his plane head-on. The UFO is about 45–60 feet in diameter, stops about 6,500 feet away and "rocked twice, in a balancing motion." Rodriguez feels strong heat, so he removes his jacket and opens the aircraft windows. The UFO takes off abruptly toward the sea "at a fantastic speed," leaving a thin vapor trail. (NICAP, "Top-Like Object Heats Up Piper Cub"; UFOEv, p. 120; Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, p. 16)

1958, May 6 — In a letter to NICAP member George Stocking of St. Petersburg, Florida, Ruppelt says he is "now convinced that the reports of UFO's are nothing more than reports of balloons, aircraft, astronomical phenomena, etc. I don't believe they are anything from outer space." (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 May–July, The Author, 1999, p. 5; Powell, Keyhoe, 256)

1958, May 7 — Keyhoe's friend Lou Corbin has received from a military friend of Gen. Nathan Twining news that Twining is still concerned about UFOs. Keyhoe writes to him and receives a note from Twining's executive officer, Col. James C. Sherrill: "No effective means have been developed for the establishment of communication by radio or otherwise with unknown aerial objects. The technical obstacles involved in such an endeavor, I am sure, are quite obvious to you." (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 198–199)

1958, May 8 — US Rep. John E. Henderson (R-Ohio) writes to Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy asking about the status of UFO reports and the USAF investigation. ATIC decides to give Henderson a formal briefing. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 May–July, The Author, 1999, pp. 5–8, 42; Swords 276)

1958, May 13 — 12:15 p.m. A Royal Canadian Air Force Dakota DC-3 is flying to RCAF Station Cold Lake, Alberta, from Victoria, British Columbia. When it changes its heading about 25 miles southwest of Calgary, Alberta, a large, thick, black cloud suddenly appears directly across its flight path at the same altitude. The VHF communications with Cold Lake and Calgary suddenly cease working. The cloud has indistinct, hazy edges, and it increases in size as the plane approaches at about 155 mph. The pilot unsuccessfully tries to radio Calgary to request a flight path change to avoid the cloud, which is now about 10 miles away. Suddenly he sees a brilliant white pinpoint of light materialize in the dark mass. It grows in size, forming a brilliant ball that quickly approaches the aircraft on a collision course. He braces himself, but the light disappears, and the black cloud vanishes. (Don Ledger, "Two Spherical UAP Cases Witnessed by Pilots in Canadian Airspace," IUR 33, no. 2 (July 2010): 7–9)

1958, May 14 — 7:00 p.m. Artur Berlet is passing by a farm on he outskirts of Sarandi, Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, when he sees a strange light about 500 feet away. He approaches and sees a landed disk about 90 feet in diameter. Some figures appear and a light hits him, whereupon he loses consciousness. He wakes up inside the craft, which has landed in a strange city. The crew members take him to a building outside, where he communicates in German with an alien named Acorc, who is from the planet Acart, where they have taken him. They return him to an area outside Sarandi, where he has to walk home. He has been gone eight days. (Artur Berlet, UFO Contact from Planet Acart, UFO Photo Archives, 1988; Clark IV 234–235)

1958, May 15 — The Soviets launch Sputnik 3 from Baikonur Cosmodrome in Kazakhstan. (Wikipedia, "Sputnik 3")

1958, May 15 — Lackland AFB's chief of education planning for the officer candidate school, Maj. Warren Akin, suggests, at a meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce in San Antonio, Texas, that UFOs are spacecraft. ("Visitors from Outer Space Already May Have Visited Us, Major Says," San Antonio (Tex.) Express, May 16, 1958, p. 2)

1958, May 16 — USAF Capt. Walter W. Irwin reaches 1,404 mph in a Lockheed YF-104A Starfighter at Edwards AFB, California. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed F-104 Starfighter")

1958, May 31–June 1 — The fifth Interplanetary Spacecraft Convention takes place at Giant Rock, near Landers, California. Dana Howard, Truman Bethurum, John McCoy, Wayne Aho, Daniel Fry, and Reinhold O. Schmidt join host George Van Tassel for two days of contactee conviviality. (Dana Howard, "Dana Howard Reporting the Giant Rock Convention, 1958," Flying Saucer Review 4, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1958): 20–21, 25)

1958, Summer — At an unidentified Air Force base in the Southwest US, two jets are vectored in on two UFOs flying together as seen on radar. As the jets close in, one UFO disappears from the radarscope and quickly reappears behind the first jet. The first pilot reverses his course and again tries to close in. The UFO climbs out of range.

The second pilot has the same difficulty with the other UFO. ("UFO Chase by AF Jets Revealed to NICAP," UFO Investigator 1, no. 8 (June 1959): 7)

1958, Summer — Evening. A mechanic at Holloman AFB, New Mexico, allegedly sees a disc-like craft hovering silently above the tarmac. As the object retracts its landing gear, he manages to alert another mechanic in time for them both to see it take off at high speed. The Air Force officers who interrogate them tell them the object was also seen by control tower operators. ("White Sands Sightings Kept Secret, Now Told," Skylook, no. 64 (March 1973): 4; "UFO Landing in Proximity of Holloman Air Force Base Told," Skylook, no. 65 (April 1973): 5; Good Need, p. 223)

1958, June — A USAF officer secretly meets with Keyhoe and gives him three UFO reports and warns him that the Air Force will ask him for "certain UFO information. Think it over carefully before you decide." NICAP could be in trouble, he says. Two days later, NICAP receives a request from the Air Force requesting any cases that indicate intelligent maneuvers by UFOs. Keyhoe refuses the request, sensing a setup. (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 199, 232–233)

1958, June — Richard H. Hall joins NICAP as executive secretary and associate editor. (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 30, 208; Powell, Keyhoe, 233–234)

1958, June — Lackland AFB in San Antonio, Texas, has prepared a 17-page TV script based on a straightforward interpretation of Keyhoe's The Flying Saucer Conspiracy, even including the 1953 Moncla case. The script states that "the most logical explanation is that the saucers are interplanetary." It also says that USAF has "concealed information which was thought to be of danger because of the impending possibility of hysteria and panic." Keyhoe approves the script, but Lackland withdraws it from consideration by December. (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 219–227)

1958, June — 4:00 a.m. A woman doctor at a resort at Sinaia, Romania, sees a silvery domed disc traveling slowly and silently toward the southeast at 1,500 feet. On its underside it has a bluish triangular section with rounded points. It passes within 900 feet of her hotel. (Hobana and Weverbergh 159–160)

1958, June — 9:00 p.m. B. Muratov and his father are returning home to Chimbay, Uzbekistan, after a fishing expedition to the Aral Sea. They notice a disc-shaped object approaching them directly at low altitude from the northeast. It flies over them and see that its diameter is about 82 feet and it is traveling at 150–180 mph. Its hull is shiny and one side shines with a red color. A pipe is attached to one side, and it gives off a steady "zing zing zing" sound. (Stonehill and Mantle, Russia's USO Secrets, Flying Disk, 2020, p. 123)

1958, June 1 — 11:15 a.m. Bjørn Taraldsen, Nils M. Turi, Kate Julsen, and Rasmus Hykkerud watch a silent "unknown aircraft" like a twin-engine, delta-wing jet with no identifying marks plunge into the Altafjord, Troms og Finnmark, Norway. A column of water rises up, and dead fish float to the surface. The frigate KNM Arendal and the submarine KNM Sarpen, along with divers, search fruitlessly for more than a week, although the Arendal does get a sonar reading of a mobile object. (Ole Jonny Brænne, "Observations of Unidentified Submarine Objects in Norway," IUR 20, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1995): 12; Dolan, USO1, 195–196)

1958, June 6 — Keyhoe writes to NICAP member George Stocking saying that Ruppelt has a job at an aircraft company that contracts with the Air Force and thus might be playing it safe about UFOs. (Clark III 1023; Clark IV 1137)

1958, June 10 — MP George Chetwynd in the UK House of Commons asks the Air Ministry how many instances of UFOs were reported in the past 12 months and what steps were taken to look into them. Under-Secretary of State for Air Ian Orr-Ewing replies that 54 reports were received and that most were meteors, balloons, aircraft, and satellites. ("Unsatisfactory Answer to M.P.'s Question on UFOs by Undersecretary for Air," Flying Saucer Review 4, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1958): 5; Good Above, p. 51; Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1958, June 20 — USAF Maj. Joseph E. Boland and Maj. Lawrence J. Tacker brief Rep. John E. Henderson (R-Ohio) for one hour on the status of Air Force UFO investigations in the Capitol building in Columbus, Ohio. Also in attendance are Rep. William C. Cramer (R-Fla.), and Rep. Donald H. Magnuson (D-Wash.). Afterward, the legislators express confidence in the investigation and agree that publicity is unwise, "particularly in an open or closed formal congressional hearing." ([documents], "20 June 1958 Briefing Representative Henderson," USAF Historical Archives; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 May–July, The Author, 1999, pp. 48–50; Swords 276–277; Clark III 920; Clark IV 1030)

1958, June 20 — 11:05 p.m. US Army Sgt. A. Parsley notices an unusual object from a point one mile north of the Army hospital at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. The light-silver object is circular and the apparent size of the full moon (which is below the horizon). Its lower section is surrounded by a think greenish haze. He has it in view for 10 minutes. It is hovering at first, then begins a slight oscillating motion and speeds away due north. (NICAP, "Communications Chief Reports Full Moon-Sized Object"; Sparks, p. 264)

1958, June 25 — The US Air Force selects nine men to be the first astronauts in a pre-NASA program known as Man In Space Soonest. Among them are Neil Armstrong, Albert Scott Crossfield, Joseph A. Walker, and Robert Michael

White. The program is canceled on August 1, 1958 and replaced by NASA's Project Mercury. (Wikipedia, "Man In Space Soonest"; Dwayne A. Day, "A Darker Shade of Blue: The Unknown Air Force Manned Space Program," The Space Review, September 12, 2022)

1958, June 25 — 8:05 p.m. Rádio Renascença in Lisbon, Portugal, broadcasts a Portuguese-language version of The War of the Worlds with only the names of characters and places changed. The Martians are supposedly landing in Caracavelos, Portugal. A certain amount of confusion results. (John Gosling, Waging the War of the Worlds, McFarland, 2009, pp. 120–129)

1958, June 26 — The New York sector becomes the first operational component of the Semi-Automatic Ground Environment, a system of large computers that coordinates data from many radar sites and processes it to produce a single unified image of airspace over a wide area. SAGE directs and controls the NORAD response to a Soviet air attack, operating in this role from the late 1950s into the 1980s. Its enormous computers and huge displays remain a part of Cold War lore. (Wikipedia, "Semi-Automatic Ground Environment")

1958, June 28 — Otis T. Carr and Norman Evans Colton appear on the Long John Nebel show on WOR-AM in New York City. After Carr praises his mentor, Nikola Tesla, another guest asks Carr to enumerate one or two of his discoveries. Carr feigns a memory lapse, then later is unable to recite even one of Newton's three laws of motion. (Clark III 860; Clark IV 948)

1958, June 28–29 — Lee Childers Jr., a baker from Detroit, Michigan, speaks at a flying saucer convention near Mountain View, Missouri, in the Ozarks hosted by contactee Buck Nelson. He claims that since April 1955 he has made 21 trips to other planets (and even to "Wolf Star 359 in the Titanian system" that has 2 planets revolving around it) on a saucer piloted by a spaceman named Commander Marcosan. He also went to a space station 2,000 miles in diameter called Trijanon. Other people tell their personal fantastic stories, among them Wayne Aho and Buck Nelson himself. (Buck Nelson, My Trip to Mars, the Moon, and Venus, Quill, 1956; "Out-of-This-World Ozark Convention," St. Louis Post-Dispatch, July 6, 1958, p. 71; Clark III 915; Clark IV 1025–1026)

1958, June 29 — Day. Former RAF Flight Engineer Peter Spencer is flying in an Auster aircraft piloted by Dennis Jackson at 800 feet near the docks at Grimsby, Lincolnshire, England. A large black dumbbell appears below them, flying against the wind. Suddenly it rises up to their height and flies along with them for a while at their speed. Then it accelerates in a terrific burst of speed to a position above them. They try to follow it, but it speeds out over the docks at 1,000 feet and 800 mph. Spencer manages to take three photos of it, but the images show a speed blur. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958, May–July, The Author, 1999, p. 59)

1958, July — President Dwight Eisenhower requests permission from Pakistan to establish a secret US intelligence facility at Badaber (Peshawar Air Station) to fly U-2 reconnaissance missions over the Soviet Union. (Wikipedia, "1960 U-2 incident")

1958, July — Dusk. Michael D. Swords and his brother Tom are at home in St. Albans, West Virginia, and listening to WCHS-AM radio where someone is calling in a UFO report. They rush to a window and see a domed disc with a revolving top cruise quietly across the landscape. (Michael D. Swords, "We Know Where You Live," IUR 30, no. 2 (January 2006): 12)

1958, July — Night. A 509th Refueling Mission is returning to an Air Force Base in New Hampshire [Pease AFB in Portsmouth?] from Goose Bay [now CFB Goose Bay], Labrador. The crew is flying a KC-97 at about 17,000–18,000 feet. A light like a "moving star" appears. It approaches below the cloud cover and seems to be spherical and as bright as Venus. It soon becomes the apparent size of the Moon, lighting up the clouds above it. The light is a brilliant blue-white with two dark spots, possibly indicating a structure. The object angles upwards and speeds out of sight in 5 seconds. (Michael D. Swords, GrassRoots UFOs: Case Reports from the Timmerman Files, Fund for UFO Research, 2005, pp. 24–25)

1958, July–September — A civilian in Washington, D.C., manages to repeatedly photograph "geometrically shaped flying objects as they passed between his telescope and the moon." The photos are "remarkably clear and certainly indicated a phenomenon for which he had no ready explanation." The writer of an October 1 memo, a CIA employee, requests advice on "how we might get our hands on these materials to examine them firsthand and to make a more complete analysis of them." (ClearIntent, pp. 136–137)

1958, July 8 — One hour before sunset. John A. Collins is fishing with a friend in a boat on Canistear Reservoir near Stockholm, New Jersey. They notice a bright light slowly and silently approaching from the south. It first appears as a cherry-red rectangle then, after 10 minutes, it tilts 45°, levels off, and tilts another 45°, turning from red to bluish-white to white. The object takes two 90° turns and approaches them once more, again turning cherry red. At its lowest point it was about 400 feet in altitude. After a total of 45 minutes, it speeds up, rises swiftly, and disappears. (Berthold E. Schwarz, "UFOs in New Jersey," Pursuit 7, no. 2 (April 1974): 31–32)

1958, July 17 — Keyhoe writes to Ruppelt to say he is puzzled about his current stance on UFOs, but understands that he might be under pressure from the Air Force. (Michael Hall and Wendy Connors, "The Forgotten Correspondence of Edward J. Ruppelt: The Story behind Report on Unidentified Flying Objects," pp. 15–16; Powell, Keyhoe, 257)

1958, July 18 — 8:30 p.m. High-school student Chris Kauffman is gazing at the night sky in Albuquerque, New Mexico, when he sees an object shaped like an equilateral triangle pass directly overhead in a north to south direction at 70–100 mph and 1,000 feet altitude for 10 seconds. It is flying with one point of the triangle as a forward edge and has 12 small orange lights along its edges. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958, May–July, The Author, 1999, pp. 76–77)

1958, July 20 — 3:00 p.m. Three widely separated independent witnesses at a small private lake 4 miles north of Glennie, Michigan, hear a noise like an object hitting the water and see a 10-foot circle of foam in the water, which is apparently sizzling. The object takes a zigzag path along the lake surface for 200 feet, making violent movements, then sinks into 50 feet of water. (Sparks, p. 264; Carl Feindt, "Report #160," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 196–199)

1958, July 29 — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration succeeds the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics. The new agency is to have a distinctly civilian orientation, encouraging peaceful applications in space science. (Wikipedia, "NASA")

1958, July 29 — An Associated Press writer in Alamogordo, New Mexico, sees an abridged version of Carl Jung's 1954 letters on UFOs in the APRO Bulletin and jumps to the conclusion that the psychologist believes them to be extraterrestrial in origin. ("Dr. Carl Jung on Unidentified Flying Objects," Flying Saucer Review 1, no. 2 (May/June 1955): 17–18; Carl Jung, "On Unconventional Aerial Objects," APRO Bulletin, July 1958, pp. 1, 5; "Flying Saucers Are Real, Show Signs of Guidance, Jung Says after Study," St. Louis (Mo.) Post-Dispatch, July 29, 1958, p. 1; "Dr. Jung Says 'Saucers' Exist: Bars Psychological Explanations," New York Times, July 30, 1958, p. 13; "Dr. Jung Sets the Record Straight," UFO Investigator 1, no. 5 (Aug./Sept. 1958): 1, 3–4; Clark III 637; Powell, Keyhoe, 264–265; Clark IV 701)

1958, July 30 — Ruppelt writes Keyhoe back, saying he has "always been convinced that UFO's were nothing more than reports of airplanes, balloons, astronomical phenomena, etc." He says he is not being intimidated, he is just not interested in UFOs anymore and too busy. (Michael Hall and Wendy Connors, "The Forgotten Correspondence of Edward J. Ruppelt: The Story behind Report on Unidentified Flying Objects," p. 16; Powell, Keyhoe, 257–258)

1958, July 30 — MP George Chetwynd presses further questions in the UK House of Commons by asking the Secretary of State for Air George Ward what action is taken to identify unexplained UFOs. Ward replies that the unidentified reports are "not sufficiently precise." ("More Questions in House of Commons," Flying Saucer Review 4, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1958): iv; Good Above, pp. 51–52; Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1958, August — Polish Air Force pilot Apoloniusz Czernów of the 3rd Fighter Regiment in Warsaw, is returning from an attempted balloon interception in the area around Świdnica, Poland. Flying at 26,000 feet, he sees another possible balloon 9 miles away at a height of 3,200 feet and turns his MiG-17 toward it. But when he approaches it, he sees it is a cigar-shaped object tilted at a 45° angle, silvery-orange in color, and pulsating with a weird light. He gets closer and the object ascends at high speed, heads north, changes to orange-red, and disappears. Base radar has detected nothing. (Poland 63–64)

1958, August — A man living about 19 miles from Paraíba do Sul, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, notices a shiny object approaching him silently. It lands and he walks toward it, noticing that a porthole has opened up in the lower part of the craft. A blond, long-haired man's head and shoulders emerge and the man gets out and walks toward him. He is wearing a light-colored coverall and makes gestures that the witness fails to understand. Apparently frustrated, the man walks back to the object, which takes off and vanishes rapidly. (Gordon Creighton, "Three More Brazilian Cases," Flying Saucer Review 13, no. 3 (May/June 1967): 5; Clark III 268; Clark IV 309)

1958, August 1 — The Teak thermonuclear test, part of Operation Hardtack I, is launched from Johnston Atoll in the North Pacific Ocean and carries a payload of 3.8 megatons. The warhead is carried on a Redstone missile, which has a "program failure," causing it to go straight up and detonate directly above the island. In a sanitized film record of the event, men in flip-flops and shorts can be seen ducking for cover as a phenomenal fireball consumes the sky overhead. During the Teak test, all crew on and around Johnston Atoll are given protective eyewear to prevent flash blindness from the explosion. Besides the hazard of blindness, thermal radiation is another concern—even at an altitude of 50 miles. A crew member on Johnston at the time is said to have received a slight sunburn from the amount of thermal radiation that had reached the island. While only slight to the crew member, it creates issues for the local fauna. Many birds are seen in distress. Unsure if this is caused by blindness or thermal radiation, the project members decide to take precautions to protect local wildlife during the next test. The explosion can be seen from Hawaii 806 miles away and is said to be visible for almost half an hour. After the explosion, high-frequency, long-distance communication is interrupted across the Pacific. Due to this failure, Johnston Atoll personnel are unable to contact their superiors to advise of the test results until about 8 hours after the detonation. The detonation disturbs Wernher Von Braun so greatly that he leaves the island shortly after comms are restored. The explosion causes the blue sky to turn red, white, and gray, and it creates an aurora 2,100 miles long along the geomagnetic meridian. (Wikipedia, "Operation Hardtack I"; Wikipedia, "Hardtack Teak"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 170–171)

1958, August 3 — 2:25 a.m. A sudden violet-orange brightness illuminates the sky over Rome, Italy, for about 3 seconds. Lights in the city dim, failing completely in some areas. Physician Angelo Corsi witnesses it 37 miles southeast of Rome in Sgurgola. After his car radio fails, and the house and streetlights go out, he sees a long whitish trail like a fan in the sky. At 2:22 a.m., in Rieti a sergeant and some guards see a yellow-green cigar-shaped object moving rapidly toward the southeast. It leaves a luminous trail that lights up roads, mountains, and houses for several seconds. A similar sight is seen in Naples. (Schopick, pp. 142–143; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 August–September, The Author, 1999, pp. 1, 3)

1958, August 8 — An informal two-hour hearing on UFOs is held by the House Subcommittee on Atmospheric Phenomena, chaired by Rep. William Natcher (D-Ky.), which is part of the Select Committee on Astronautics and Space Exploration, chaired by Rep. John W. McCormack (D-Mass.). Although McCormack wants an extended hearing in closed secret session, unrecorded, ATIC Capt. George T. Gregory persuades him to allow the Air Force to give a briefing, while allowing people like Menzel, Ruppelt, and Keyhoe to offer their opinions later. NICAP as a whole should be excluded, he emphasizes. The main witnesses turn out to be Gregory and Maj. Tacker. The subcommittee, which also includes Kenneth Keating (R-N.Y.) and Lee Metcalf (D-Mont.), commends Gregory for his presentation on Project Blue Book's "improved" methods. The hearings were to have been extended to the following week, but they decide to call no more witnesses at the suggestion of scientific consultant Dr. Charles S. Sheldon II, who thus maneuvers Keyhoe out of appearing. ([documents], "8 August 1958, McCormack Sub-Committee Briefing," USAF Historical Archives; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 August–September, The Author, 1999, pp. 5–27; Swords 277–279; Clark III 920; Powell, Keyhoe, 231–232; Graff 136; Clark IV 1030)

1958, August 9 — Carl Jung issues a denial to the Associated Press about his "extraterrestrial" statement, saying that witnesses are "in need of fantasy." He thinks "something is being seen," but his interest is more in what they think they are seeing. ("Dr. Jung Says Flying Saucers Are a New 'Savior Myth,'" St. Louis Post-Dispatch, August 9, 1958, p. 5; Coral Lorenzen, "Editorial," APRO Bulletin, September 1958, p. 6; "Dr. Jung Sets Record Straight," UFO Investigator 1, no. 5 (Aug./Sept. 1958): 1, 3–4; Powell, Keyhoe, 265–267)

1958, August 11 — The Orange thermonuclear test is launched by Redstone missile from Johnston Atoll with a yield of 3.8 megatons. Although Orange is visible from Hawaii, it is not the great spectacle Teak had been. The light from the 28-mile-high blast is visible for about 5 minutes, but does not cause a large communication interruption; however, some commercial flights to Hawaii are said to have lost contact with air traffic controllers for a short period of time. (Wikipedia, "Operation Hardtack I")

1958, August 11 — Betty Jane Williamson dies in Lima, Peru, when her husband George Hunt Williamson is on a lecture tour in Europe. Her death is caused by malnutrition generated by an alternative diet regimen. James W. Moseley later circulates an outrageously false accusation that Williamson killed Betty by pushing her off a cliff, but the charge is a complete fabrication. (James W. Moseley and Karl T. Pflock, Shockingly Close to the Truth! Confessions of a Grave-Robbing Ufologist, Prometheus, 2002, pp. 137–138; Jerome Clark, "The Trivialist," IUR 27, no. 1 (Spring 2002): 15–19, 29–30; Zirger and Martinelli, The Incredible Life of George Hunt Williamson, Verdechiari, 2016, pp. 117, 123–124; Clark III 1286; Clark IV 1470)

1958, August 16 — Around 5:00 p.m. Several persons on Lake Geneva, Switzerland, watch a bright light descending. It comes to hover about 45 feet above their boat. It is saucer-shaped, about 39 feet in diameter, and has a cabin on top with several windows. It causes a noticeable current in the water. After several leaps in the air, it flies off at high speed. (Vallée, Magonia, p. 272)

1958, August 18 — After discovering that seven contactees have accidentally received membership cards, Donald Keyhoe sends each of them a telegram requesting their return and that any use would "constitute false pretenses." Telegrams are sent to George Adamski, Orfeo Angelucci, Truman Bethurum, Howard Menger, Buck Nelson, Reinhold O. Schmidt, and George Van Tassel. Only Menger decides to keep his by paying for a membership. ("Contactees Told to Return NICAP Cards," UFO Investigator 1, no. 5 (Aug./Sept. 1958): 4)

1958, August 18 — 7:05 or 7:10 p.m. Typewriter repairman Alex Donald Chisholm is at home at 21950 Cunningham Avenue in Warren, Michigan, with Walter Moilanion and his wife and possibly a young daughter, when he sees a light much brighter than Venus in the vicinity of a flight of four military aircraft. He watches the object through

8x30 mm Japanese artillery-observer field glasses. It looks to be a Saturn-shaped grayish object like a "fried egg in pan." Later it flips over, and another more elongated ring can be seen surrounding it. The object is about 60 feet long and is stationary for 5-8 minutes. However, the object is probably a Skyhook balloon launched from the University of Minnesota on August 17. (NICAP, [case file]; Clark III 392; Clark IV 438)

1958, August 27–September 6 — In Operation Argus, three nuclear warheads are launched from X-17 rockets from the deck of the USS Norton Sound in the South Atlantic Ocean off the coast of South Africa. They explode approximately 300 miles into space. The tests are proposed by Nicholas Christofilos in an unpublished paper of the Livermore branch [now the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory] of the Lawrence Radiation Laboratory in Berkeley, California, as a means to verify the Christofilos effect, which argues that high-altitude nuclear detonations will create a radiation belt in the extreme upper regions of the Earth's atmosphere (they do create artificial electron belts that persist several weeks), or an electronic pulse that could hypothetically damage the arming devices on Soviet ICBM warheads (they do not). (Wikipedia, "Operation Argus")

1958, August 27 — NICAP accepts the resignation of its office manager, treasurer, and typist Rose Hackett Campbell after she gives membership cards to George Adamski and other contactees. Richard H. Hall begins work at NICAP as associate editor. ("Resignations," UFO Investigator 1, no. 5 (Aug./Sept. 1958): 2; "Richard Hall Becomes Assoc. Editor," UFO Investigator 1, no. 5 (Aug./Sept. 1958): 2; Powell, Keyhoe, 239–249)

1958, August 28 — 4:20 p.m. Two Ohio highway patrolmen are headed east on State Highway 125 about two miles east of Georgetown, Ohio, when they see a huge, silver disc apparently hovering near a power line and above a field to the northwest. It is about 500 feet away and 500 feet in the air, apparently solid, and wobbling slightly. The patrolmen turn the car around for a better look and drive back to their station where they call the dispatcher outside to view the object as well. The object moves upward for about 50 feet, then goes away at an angle, disappearing into the distance. (Delbert E. Anderson, "A Compelling Patrol," Ohio UFO Notebook, no. 11 (1996): 15; Powell, Scientist, 46)

1958, September 8 — 6:40 p.m. At Offutt AFB, Omaha, Nebraska, SAC Operations Officer Maj. Paul A. Duich, plus several officers from USAF Ballistic Missiles Division, Los Angeles AFB in El Segundo, California; many other air base officers and airmen; and Offutt air traffic control tower personnel see a brilliant-white, elongated, cylindrical object hovering in the west just after sunset. The object is oriented vertically with the blunter end highest. After several minutes, the object turns dull orange-red and becomes sharper in outline. A swarm of about 10 "black specks" appears to "cavort" around the lower end of the object for about one minute before disappearing. Then the cylindrical object begins to rotate counterclockwise and starts drifting slowly to the south from due west and drops in elevation angle over about 5 minutes. During the final 5-minute observation, the object continues angular descent and gradually decreases in angular size, but it begins rotating clockwise until it disappears by fading into the slight atmospheric haze. A USAF colonel takes several color photos with a 35mm camera on a tripod but later claims nothing came out. (Sparks, p. 265; UFOEv, pp. 25, 27; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 58–59; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 August–September, The Author, 1999, pp. 59–63; Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects and Cloud Cigars," IUR 29, no. 1 (Spring 2004): 5–6; Swords 280)

1958, September 12 — The Operation Hardtack II series of 37 nuclear tests takes place at the Nevada Test Site through October 30, all within 18 miles of Area 51. (Wikipedia, "Operation Hardtack II")

1958, September 21 — 3:00 a.m. Mrs. William H. Fitzgerald of Sheffield Lake, Ohio, sees through her east-facing bedroom window a metallic domed disc, 12–22 feet in diameter and 6 feet thick. It sweeps in over the front lawn heading north and descending in a falling-leaf oscillating motion to about 6 feet altitude, then crosses over her driveway, and stops for several seconds about 40 feet away. It then reverses course heading south and hovers 5 feet above the lawn about 25 feet away, making a jetlike sound. The object wobbles and emits gray smoke, makes two tight clockwise turns, then rises and takes off straight up over the house towards the east. Her 10-year-old son also observes the event from another room. (NICAP, "12′ Diameter 6′ Thick Disc within 40′"; UFO Research Committee of Akron, Ohio, The Fitzgerald Report: A Complete and Detailed Account of the Sighting of an Unidentified Flying Object, Sheffield Lake, Ohio, September 21, 1958, December 1, 1958; Coral Lorenzen, "The Fitzgerald Investigation: What It Means," Flying Saucers, May 1959, pp. 47–50; Donald Menzel and Lyle Boyd, The World of Flying Saucers, Doubleday, 1963, pp. 279–288; UFO Ev, p. 113; "A Documented Case of Governmental Dishonesty," Pursuit 5, no. 2 (April 1972): 28–30; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 August–September, The Author, 1999, pp. 68–72)

1958, September 25 — The Project Moonwatch team in Portland, Oregon, is looking at the Moon when they see objects crossing the lunar disc. Occasionally they recognize the transit as a bird, but there are "tiny dark objects" that behave differently. All the objects pass in the same direction and in the same location for about one second.

Supervisor Alex Geddes, who was not present, sends a supportive letter to the observers, thanking them for the data. (Michael D. Swords, "Gazing at the Moons," IUR 32, no. 4 (October 2009): 15; CUFOS files, [1958–1962 Moonwatch Mystery Satellites], pp. 45–50)

1958, September 29 — 5:30 a.m. Pvt. Jerome A. Scanlon, stationed at Nike missile base W-93 in Derwood, Maryland, is walking from his sentry post to the barracks to sound reveille when he hears a humming sound above him. He looks up and sees a teardrop-shaped object 300 feet up and coming in for a landing at 30 mph. It moves over trees, breaking branches, and lands about 1.5 miles away. Exhaust flames issue from its rear, and its luminous green skin illuminates the terrain. It rises again and disappears. Scanlon runs to inform Riney Farris, the sergeant of the guard, who has also seen the object. They go to the landing site and find broken branches and a scorched strip of earth and vegetation about half a mile long. After the story appears in newspapers, the Air Force explains the incident as repair trucks doing welding jobs. ("Brass to Hear GI's Account of Fiery 'Saucer,'" New York Journal-American, October 7, 1958; "'Saucer' Landed, Say Two Soldiers," Goldsboro (N.C.) Record, October 9, 1958; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 90–91; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 August–September, The Author, 1999, p. 79)

1958, September or October — Around 9:00 p.m. The USS Franklin D. Roosevelt is on a shakedown cruise in the Caribbean Sea out of Guantanamo Bay Naval Base, Cuba, when at least 25 of the 3,000 crew members notice a light following the aircraft carrier. Fireman's apprentice Chester C. Grusinski watches it as it comes close and sees a cigar-shaped object with portholes and figures inside looking out. Grusinki can feel heat coming from the object, and some of the ship's power apparently goes out. After a few minutes, the object turns red-orange and takes off. ("U.S.S. Franklin D. Roosevelt CVA-42, Part II," Ohio UFO Notebook, no. 9 (1995): 21–22; Chester C. Grusinski, "UFOs Seen by Crew of an American Aircraft Carrier (1952–1958)," Flying Saucer Review 40, no. 3 (Autumn 1995): 1–4; Jon Baughman, "A Moment in (Recent) History: UFOs Shadowed US Aircraft Carrier," Broad Top Bulletin (Saxton, Pa.), December 1, 1999; Carl Feindt, "Report #1083," waterufo.net; Gordon Creighton, "Confirmation of an Important U.S. Naval Sighting," Flying Saucer Review 46, no. 2 (Summer 2001): 17–20; Good Need, pp. 234–236; Dolan, USO1, 199–202)

1958, October — Maj. Robert J. Friend takes over as head of Project Blue Book, relieving Capt. George T. Gregory. About this time, a new USAF fact sheet states that investigative improvements have reduced unsolved sightings to 1.8%. The "refinement" comes from lumping "probable" and "possible" identifications into "identified." At the same time, a secret staff study by USAF intelligence officers addresses the public relations problems caused by Keyhoe, who is characterized as a "political adventurer" allied with Ruppelt, both of whom are in the UFO "business" strictly for the money. Yet together "they represent a formidable team from which plenty of trouble can be expected." The study recommends that 18–20 personnel be assigned to temporary UFO investigation duty. They would solve reports that have not been sent directly to Blue Book. Though ATIC urges implementation of the plan, Air Force Headquarters kills it. (Sparks, p. 14; Jacobs, UFO Controversy in America, Signet ed., 1976, pp. 146–151; Hynek UFO Report, pp. 25–27; Clark III 919, 920, 937; Clark IV 1029, 1030, 1047)

1958, October 1 — NASA begins operations. It includes three major labs: Langley Aeronautical Laboratory [now Langley Research Center] in Hampton, Virginia; Ames Aeronautical Laboratory [now Ames Research Center] in Mountain View, California; and Lewis Flight Propulsion Laboratory [now Glenn Research Center] in Brook Park, Ohio. It incorporates elements of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency and the US Naval Research Laboratory. (Wikipedia, "NASA")

1958, October 2 — Shortly after 5:00 p.m. Naturalist Ivan T. Sanderson and his wife Alma see a dull-gray object, shaped like a pickle with a flat bottom, fly erratically in loops over the Delaware Water Gap near Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania. It appears sometimes edge-on, other times oval or circular. It vanishes once but quickly reappears, continuing its rapid gyrations, and speeds away to the west after a 30-second performance. Sanderson writes: "The best way I can describe the motion is that somebody was flying a 1000-foot circular kite on a 500-foot lead in a 250-mile hurricane over Stroudsburg. The thing had just the erratic flipping, with sudden stops and sharp-angle turns, of a kite in a really rough updraft." (NICAP, "Nickel-Shaped Object Flies Loops (Sanderson Case)"; Sparks, p. 266; UFOEv, p. 52; Ivan T. Sanderson, Uninvited Visitors, Tandem ed., 1969, pp. 33–38)

1958, October 3 — 3:10 a.m. A Monon Railroad freight train is traveling between Owasco and Kirklin, Indiana, when a formation of four odd white lights crosses ahead of the train. The entire crew watch the UFOs turn and traverse the full length of the train, front to back (about a half mile). After passing the rear of the train, the objects swing east, turn back, and follow the train. The bright glow conceals their exact shape, but they appear flattened and sometimes fly on edge. The objects follow the train until the conductor shines a bright light on them. Immediately the objects speed away, but return quickly and continue to pace the train. Total time of observation is about 1 hour 10 minutes. Finally the UFOs move away to the northeast and disappear. (NICAP, "The Monon RR UFO Incident"; "They're Back Again—in Indiana," APRO Bulletin, November 1958, pp. 1, 3; Frank Edwards, "UFO Buzzes Train," Fate 12, no. 2 (February 1959): 25–30; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 October, The Author, 1999, pp. 5–8; Jazz Shaw, "More Evidence the Pentagon Has Always Lied about UFOs," Mysterious Universe, February 22, 2024)

1958, October 7 — 2:55 p.m. Joseph Gwooz, master of the SS Nantucket, sees a gray, oval object in the sky at an altitude of 8,000–10,000 feet at the entrance to the Nantucket Channel, Massachusetts. It remains stationary for more than one minute, then shoots up and away to the northeast. (Charles A. Maney and Richard Hall, The Challenge of Unidentified Flying Objects, NICAP, 1961, p. 9; UFOEv, p. 71; Clark III 376–377; Clark IV 420–421)

1958, October 7 — 6:02 p.m. Chemist John R. Townsend, special assistant for research and engineering to the Assistant Secretary of Defense, sees a large, stationary, sharply outlined Saturn-shaped silvery object (with a "gossamer" surface appearance and a rim or girdle around its equator) in a clear sky in Alexandria, Virginia. It rapidly rises at an estimated speed of 1,000 mph and disappears to the south after 40 seconds. At one point a passing Capitol Airlines Flight 407 flies directly between his line of sight and the UFO at 2 miles distance, allowing him to estimate the UFO's size as about 500 feet. Townsend reenacts the timing by walking the half block down Lee Street to get a better feeling for its distance and size. (NICAP, "Saturn-Shaped Object Observed, Object Confirmed by Pilot"; Sparks, p. 267; Swords 282)

1958, October 26 — 10:30 p.m. Alvin Cohen and Phillip Small are rounding a curve on Maryland Route 146 some 600–900 feet south of the bridge at Loch Raven Reservoir, Maryland. They see a large (100 feet long) egg-shaped object hanging 100–150 feet above the bridge. When they drive to within 75 feet of it their car stalls and the dash lights turn off. They get out of the car and watch the UFO from behind it for 30–45 seconds. The UFO flashes a beam of white light and they feel heat on their faces. They also hear a dull explosion. The UFO rises vertically and disappears in 5–10 seconds. They are able to start the car and drive into Towson, Maryland, to make a phone call to the Ground Observer Corps and the police. Police Cpl. Kenneth Hartmann and Patrolman Richard Fink drive up and they tell them the story, then they go to St. Joseph's Hospital in Baltimore and are given a cursory examination for burns. Other people in the neighborhood either see an object at the time or hear the boom. (NICAP, "Egg-Shaped Object & E-M Effects over Bridge"; Sparks, p. 268; "Baltimore's Flying Saucer," Baltimore (Md.) Evening Sun, December 15, 1958, p. 21; Schopick, pp. 62–63; J. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 October, The Author, 1999, pp, 73–86; Clark III 686; Clark IV 761–762)

1958, October 28 — 7:55 p.m. Jean Boyer is driving on Route Nationale 75 along the valley of Le Grand Buëch river near a cliff formation called Pont-la-Dame about 5.6 miles northeast of Aspres-sur-Buëch, Hautes-Alpes, France. He notices a luminous disc, like two plates together, motionless in the sky above Pont-la-Dame. It seems to be floating about 650–1,300 feet above the ground. He stops the car on a bridge roughly beneath the object for a better look. A smaller circle on the disc is emitting dark red sparks. After 2 minutes, the object shoots off a stream of blinding sparks and rises vertically, leaving a fiery trail and a faint glow that soon vanishes. At the same time, he feels a current of air that rocks his station wagon. (Jacques and Janine Vallée. Challenge to Science: The UFO Enigma, Regnery, 1966, pp. 194–197)

1958, November — Skandinavisk UFO Information in Denmark begins publishing UFO-Nyt. (UFO-Nyt, November 1958)

1958, November 3 — 2:01 p.m. At Minot, North Dakota, M/Sgt. William R. Butler, a medic, sees one bright-green object, shaped like a 10-cent piece, and one smaller, silver round object. The first object explodes, then the second object moves toward the location of the first at high speed. Sighting lasts 1 minute. (Sparks, p. 268)

1958, November 4 — 9:03 p.m. The pilot of a KB-50 USAF tanker is in the downwind leg of the traffic pattern during a ground-controlled approach to Pope AFB [now Pope Field] in Fayetteville, North Carolina, when he notices an object on a collision course. He and his flight crew also notice that "strange lights were observed in his cockpit while he was on the final approach..." He executes a go-around maneuver and climbs in altitude to await the disappearance of the object. Air Force tower personnel also see the UFO hovering above the airport, watching it through their binoculars for 20 minutes. They are convinced it is not an atmospheric phenomenon. They say that "the UFO presented a hazard to aircraft operating in the area." (NICAP, "Object on Collision Course with KB-50 Tanker, Circles"; Sparks, p. 268; Richard F. Haines, "Aviation Safety in America: A Previously Neglected Factor," NARCAP, October 15, 2000, pp. 53–54)

1958, November 5 — MP Roy Mason asks the Air Minister in the UK House of Commons to what extent official records are kept of UFO sightings and what departments are involved. Air Minister George Ward replies in writing that reports involving national security are investigated but "nothing suggests that they are other than mundane." ("Come Off It, Mr. Ward! 'Nothing Suggests That They Are Other Than Mundane,'" Flying Saucer Review 5, no.

1958, November 9 — Residents of Trinidad, Rio Dell, and other towns in northern California report showers of cobweblike material, some in strands 5–6 feet long. Two fishermen at sea, George Korkan and Jack Curry, say the substance settles on their boat in such quantity that it makes the boat appear "a million years old." A sample obtained at McKinleyville is examined by biologist Erwin Bielfuss at Humboldt State College. He rules out mold or an animal product and suggests it is plant material or plastic. ("Cobweb Like Substance in Area Mystifies Zoologist," Eureka (Calif.) Humboldt Standard, November 10, 1958, p. 5; UFOEv, p. 99)

1958, November 9 — 10:00 p.m. Two carpenters, Stig Ekberg and Harry Sjöberg, are returning from Stockholm, Sweden, to their cabin on Väddö island, about 20 miles to the northeast. About 6 miles north of Älmstä the engine of their Ford V8 pickup begins to sputter and fail, and the headlights go out. They see a huge, shining object descending toward them and making a turn above Väddö Bay to the left of the road. It lands in the middle of the road about 300 feet in front of their car. The object illuminates the surrounding landscape with such a tremendous amount of light that a nearby barn is clearly visible. The air smells of ozone and smoldering insulation. They estimate it is 53 feet long and 20 feet high, with a bright glow underneath the object and a dazzling mist surrounding it. They watch the object for about 10 minutes, then the object gets brighter, lifts off the ground, moves to the left and up, makes a sudden turn, and speeds away in the direction it had come. Afterward, the air is stifling and hot, but the engine starts up right away. A few minutes later they return to the landing site and find flattened grass and a still-hot, smooth, triangular piece of metal the size of a matchbox, which they retrieve. They submit the metal to several labs over the next few years, apparently without ambiguous results, but in the process it is split into three pieces. Finally, an engineer in Linköping named Schalin finds the metal has the hardness of sapphire and a specific weight of 15.2. It can take several thousand degrees C. heat without getting red hot. One of the pieces is submitted to the US Air Force and not returned. In the early 1970s, another piece is examined by James Harder at the University of California, Berkeley, who establishes it is composed of tungsten carbide, cobalt, and traces of titanium, and that it has been manufactured. 1958, November 11 — 1:35 a.m. A Mrs. Robert J. Kinney, who is a Lt. Col. in the Civil Air Patrol in Topeka, Kansas, wakes up when her bedroom floods with an amber-colored light and her three dogs begin barking. The source is a 25-foot diameter sphere that is sitting on the walkway in the yard about 30 feet away. Kinney opens a door to go out on a porch, but the light zooms straight up and out of sight. She goes back to bed and the phone rings; it is a neighbor who has seen the light going toward her house. At 7:30 a.m., the phone rings again; this time it is the controllers at the Philip Billard Municipal Airport, who know her well and tell her about the light they saw. In the evening, she finds there is an electrical failure on the east side of the house. Lights, radios, and refrigerators are not working. Kinney replaces some fuses, but not everything turns on again. An electrician comes and replaces some wiring on November 12, but Kinney's eyes develop subconjunctival hemorrhages and sensitivity to bright light. She begins to wear sunglasses regularly. Both of her male dogs develop cataracts. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs: A History, 1958 November–December, The Author, 1999, pp. 5–7; Swords 287–288)

1958, November 17 —10:03 p.m. Somewhere in Russia a luminous object hovers and lands. It is seen for 2 minutes. (Vallée, Magonia, p. 273)

1958, November 30 — Tom Gerber of the Boston Herald features interviews with unnamed Air Force officers who proclaim an "undeclared war on phony organizations that capitalize on the 'mystery' of flying saucers." Supposedly, the Air Force has evidence that "perhaps as many as 100,000 persons belong to these UFO organizations" and are "making a wad of money." As many as 16% of the UFO sightings investigated by USAF are "hoaxes originated by members or officials of these organizations"—an obvious swipe at NICAP. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs: A History, 1958 November–December, The Author, 1999, pp. 17–18; Swords 282–283)

1958, December — The Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, California, is transferred to NASA from the Army, becoming the agency's primary planetary spacecraft center. (Wikipedia, "Jet Propulsion Laboratory")

1958, December — Some 450 airline pilots have signed a petition protesting the official policy of debunking UFO sightings. One pilot describes the policy as a "lesson in lying, intrigue, and the 'Big Brother' attitude carried to the ultimate extreme." Of the signatories, more than 50 personally have reported UFO sightings but are told by the Air Force that they are mistaken. USAF warns them that they face up to 10 years in prison under JANAP 146 if they reveal details of their sighting to the media. Because of situations like this, Maj. Friend unsuccessfully requests that Blue Book be transferred from ATIC to Air Research and Development Command on the grounds that UFOs are a scientific, not a military problem. His staff complains that the work is time-consuming and unproductive, and ARDC could speak to the public with authority and persuasiveness. ARDC briefly considers, then declines, the offer. (Good Above, p. 284; Clark III 922; Clark IV 1032)

1958, Early December — Contactee Lee Childers visits a New York City group called the Bureau of UFO Research and Analysis to present a lecture. By now he is calling himself Prince Neosom of Tythan, which is 8.5 light years from Earth. He also answers to the name Dana. (Clark III 915; Clark IV 1025–1026)

1958, December 1 — Adamski claims that during a delay on a Rock Island Railroad train from Kansas City, Missouri, to Davenport, Iowa, he steps outside to stretch his legs and is picked up by a car that takes him to a spacecraft concealed in a wooded area. The saucer takes him to Davenport, where another car brings him to his hotel. NICAP elaborately deconstructs this fiction. ("Adamski's Latest Claim Blasted by NICAP Affiliate," UFO Investigator 1, no. 8 (June 1959): 1, 3–4; Powell, Keyhoe, 279–280)

1958, December 6 — Between 6:38 and 6:40 p.m. Along the border of Russia and India, an observer sees a bright UFO cross his field of vision through his telescope from north to south as he is observing Mars. He thinks it might be Sputnik 3, but the location and direction of the object do not bear that out. (ClearIntent, pp. 137–138)

1958, December 6 — 5:44 a.m. The first launch of a Juno II, carrying Pioneer 3, at LC-5 at Cape Canaveral, Florida, suffers a premature first-stage cutoff, preventing the upper stages from achieving sufficient velocity. Pioneer 3 cannot escape Earth orbit but transmits data for some 40 hours before reentering the atmosphere. A malfunction in a propellant depletion circuit is found to be the cause of the failure, although the exact nature of it cannot be determined. The circuit is redesigned afterwards. (Wikipedia, "Juno II")

1958, December 18 — Sunrise. Launch control and safety officer Capt. Jack Hembree is near a launch tower beginning the fueling process for a PGM-11 Redstone missile test launch at White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico. He notices three or four bright, transparent spheres, each about 30 feet across, moving at a low elevation about 150 feet away from the missile. Each contains horizontal and vertical bands containing points of light. The spheres are moving as if connected. He watches them for 30–40 seconds, after which they move in unison at a high rate of speed, elongate slightly, and fly west out of sight. There are no other witnesses. 1958, December 19 —John Lester, a writer for the Newark (N.J.) Star-Ledger, has polled 1,000 US government radar operators over the past month and found that 80% have observed UFOs traveling at fantastic speeds, executing perfect 90° turns, steep vertical climbs, and hovering stops. They fly in formation and manage to stay just ahead of USAF jets scrambled to intercept them. Tacker responds immediately that the UFOs are natural phenomena ("lightning, meteors, and meteorites"). (John Lester, "Radar Experts Track Mysterious Flying Objects," Newark (N.J.) Star-Ledger, December 19, 1958, pp. 1–2; "AF Calls 'Saucers' Natural Phenomena," Newark (N.J.) Star-Ledger, December 21, 1958, p. 2)

1958, December 20 — 12:30 a.m. Franklin and Louise Richardson are driving on Spivey-Tapp road near School Creek, roughly 10 miles north of Lampasas, Texas, "headlight-hunting rabbits," when they spot six blue-white lights, roughly Four times the size of a car headlight, hanging about 75 feet in the air about a quarter mile away. After a short while, the lights begin moving in no discernible pattern, jumping around and blinking on and off. Two of them break loose from the others and rapidly approach, coming within 150 feet of the car before slowly sinking into the ground. This is the first of several sightings the Richardsons encounter over the next six weeks. ("Lampasas Couple 'Victims' of Mysterious, Fast-Flying Lights," Lampasas (Tex.) Record, January 29, 1959; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 November–December, The Author, 1999, pp. 44, 51)

1958, December 20 — 2:55 a.m. Hans Gustafsson, a 24-year-old truck driver, and Stig Rydberg, a 30-year-old student, claim that while driving home to Helsingborg, Sweden, from a dance they see a strange light in a glade on their right near Domsten. They leave the car and walk up to the object, which turns out to be a disc-shaped vehicle 16 feet in diameter resting on 3 legs. The two are suddenly attacked by four gray creatures about 4 feet tall who try to drag them to the UFO. In January 1959, a medical doctor, Lars-Erik Essén, hypnotizes the men in what is perhaps the first use of hypnosis of a UFO witness, but the two manage to fool Essén. In the late 1980s, Gustafsson's brother Artur reveals to ufologist Clas Svahn that before he died his brother had told him the story was a hoax. 1958, December 21 — A group of more than 50 commercial airline pilots, all of whom have had at least one UFO sighting, tell reporter John Lester with the Newark (N.J.) Star-Ledger that the Air Force policy of censorship and denial regarding reports is the "Big Brother attitude carried to the ultimate extreme." Most express disgust with the USAF methods of interrogating civilian pilots and complain about the gag order about publicly talking about their sightings under penalty of 10 years in prison or $10,000 in fines (JANAP 146). One says: "But you make your report anyhow and the Air Force tells you that the thing that paced your plane for 15 minutes was a mirage or a bolt of lightning. Nuts to that. Who needs it?" ("Pilots Ridicule AF Secrecy on Saucers," Newark (N.J.) Star-Ledger, December 22, 1958, p. 4; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1958 November–December, The Author, 1999, p. 55)

1958, December 22 — 3:00 p.m. In Muszyna, Poland, Stanislaw Kowalczewski, a physician, sees a disk emerge from an odd yellow cloud above a nearby mountain. He takes a photograph of it, then goes outside to look at the sky but does not see anything unusual. After developing the film, he sees two odd spots on it—a darker one at the bottom (the disk) and a fainter one at the top, which seems to be a refraction or reflection. (Jerzy Pokrzywnicki, "O zjawisku obserwowanym 22 grudnia 1958 r. w Muszynie," Urania, no. 4 (1959): 142–145; Hobana and Weverbergh 67–68; Wiki Meteoritica, "Muszyna 1958"; Poland 21–23)

1958, December 22 — A "top Washington official" leaks to the press that the US Air Force has captured "at least one and possibly two flying saucers." He also claims that France has at least two, England one, Russia one, and possibly Brazil has one. The source concedes that he cannot confirm that the Air Force has a saucer "stashed away at a secret base." (John Lester, "Claims U.S. Has Captured Flying Saucer," Jersey (N.J.) Journal, December 23, 1958, p. 3; Clark III 328; Clark IV 365)

1958, December 30 — 3:30 p.m. Joseph Bennett, a farmer in Portglenone, County Antrim, Northern Ireland, is out walking and hears a noise like a rush of wind. A black object 7 feet across comes hurtling through the air about 20 feet above the ground. Moving from south to northwest, it crashes into an oak tree, splitting it in two at a height of 10 feet, then ascends and disappears in seconds. The tree has no burn or scorch marks. ("UAOs Collide with Tree, Roof," APRO Bulletin, March 1959, p. 2; "We're Not Roswell, We're Portglenone," Fortean Ireland, March 17, 2019)

1959? — According to weapons specialist David Middleton, sometime in the late 1950s a few hours prior to a nuclear weapons test at the Nevada Test Site, he and several other technicians watch two silver discs race across then swoop down and maneuver near the detonation tower where the atomic weapon is mounted. The two objects fly a tight circle around the tower before zooming off at high velocity. The test is immediately postponed by senior AEC personnel. Middleton is debriefed and sworn to secrecy. (Nukes 58–59)

1959 — Night. Shortly before the test firing of a Black Knight rocket at the RAAF Woomera Range Complex in South Australia, the recovery officer, Percy Hawkins, sees an exceptionally bright greenish-white light traveling at high speed directly toward the test site at an altitude of about 2.8 miles. Group Captain Tom Dalton-Morgan, the officer in charge, and his team can see the light approaching from their elevated control building, even though they are located 87 miles to the southeast of Hawkins's position. The light flies in silently and orbits around the range buildings some 5 miles to the south. When the object is east of the control building, it accelerates and climbs steeply away. (Tom Dalton-Morgan and Clive Williams, Tommy Leader, Griffon, 2007; Bill Chalker, "'Tommy Leader': Tom Dalton-Morgan and the 3% UFO Solution," TheOzFiles, June 25, 2024)

1959 — The original US Navy Space Surveillance System goes into operation. From 1960 until the early 1990s the system is used in conjunction with a network of Baker-Nunn cameras that can see an object the size of a basketball at 25,000 miles. The system is operated by the US Navy for NORAD from 1961 to October 2004. Initially independent, it is run by Naval Space Command from 1993 to 2002, and then by Naval Network and Space Operations Command from 2002 to 2004, when it is taken over by the Air Force. (Wikipedia, "Air Force Space Surveillance System")

1959 —The US Army and CIA at Edgewood Arsenal at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland, show significant interest in deploying a new drug, 3-quinuclidinyl benzilate (BZ), as a chemical warfare agent. The drug's effects last for three days, perhaps as long as six. Between 1959 and 1975, some 2,800 soldiers are given BZ at Edgewood. (Reid Kirby, "Paradise Lost: The Psycho Agents," The CBW Conventions Bulletin, no. 71 (May 2006): 1–5)

1959 — Psychologist Carl Jung publishes Flying Saucers: A Modern Myth of Things Seen in the Skies in the UK, a translation of Ein moderner Mythus von Dingen, die am Himmel gesehen werden, published in Zürich, Switzerland, in 1958, in which he compares the discs to archetypes, dreams, visions, paintings, and the metaphysical symbol of a mandala: "the rounded wholeness of the mandala becomes a space ship controlled by an intelligent being." He contends that flying saucer beliefs are a "living myth" that revolves around redemption and metaphysical hope. However, he remains puzzled by the physical evidence. (Carl Jung, Flying Saucers: A Modern Myth of Things Seen in the Skies, Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1959; Georges Duplain, "At the Frontiers of Knowledge: Interview with Professor C. G. Jung Regarding a Study on Flying Saucers," trans. from the Gazette de Lausanne, 1959; Clark III 25, 637–638, 938–939; Eghigian, After, pp. 183–184; Clark IV 39–40, 701–702, 1049)

1959 — Inspired by the Sputnik missions, Russian mathematician Matest M. Agrest begins wondering whether extraterrestrials had visited Earth in ancient times. He is struck by references to gods coming to earth and Enoch being taken up into the heavens and wonders whether the megalithic stone terracing at Baalbek in Lebanon had been used as a launch site for spaceships, and that the destruction of Biblical Sodom and Gomorrah was the result of a nuclear explosion detonated by extraterrestrial beings. In February 1960, a summary of his speculations is published in Literaturnaya Gazeta under the title "Does the Trail Lead into Space?" Agrest is a major inspiration of later figures such as Erich von Däniken and Zecharia Sitchin, who in later decades popularize the idea of ancient astronauts. ("Следы ведут в...космос?" [Trail Leads to...Space?], Литературная Газета, February 9, 1960; Matest M. Agrest, "On the Development of the Idea of Paleocontacts in the USSR at the Beginning of the 1960s," RIAP Bulletin 8, no. 3–4 (July/Dec. 2002): 4–8; Eghigian, After, pp. 177–178)

1959 — The Soviet KGB has created its own disinformation Department D (Dezinformatsiya) in the First Chief Directorate, which under Yuri Andropov is later renamed Department A (for "active measures"). It specializes in the fabrication and dissemination of forged documents, tapes, letters, manuscripts, photos, rumors, and false intelligence. (Wikipedia, "Active measures"; John Barron, KGB: The Secret Work of Soviet Secret Agents, Bantam, 1974; Richard H. Shultz and Roy Godson, Dezinformatsia: Active Measures in Soviet Strategy, Pergamon-Brassey's, 1984)

1959 — Author Hugo Correa founds UFO Chile in Santiago, Chile. Its newsletter appears from August 1967 to May 1969. (Hugo Correa, "¿Que es 'UFO Chile'?" UFO Chile, no. 1 (August 1967): 1)

1959 — Contactee Howard Menger publishes From Outer Space to You, an account of his meetings with space people. (Howard Menger, From Outer Space to You, Saucerian, 1959; Clark III 739; Clark IV 820)

1959 — George Van Tassel claims the space people have taught him a method of rejuvenating the human body. Using his new-found knowledge and funds provided by Howard Hughes, he completes the outer structure of the Integraton at Giant Rock, California, a four-story domed structure, 55 feet in diameter, built mostly of wood without nails, screws, iron, or steel. Van Tassel claims it will harness the EMF energy required for recharging the cells in our bodies. In the course of its construction, Van Tassel discovers that the Integraton functions as a time machine. (Wikipedia, "Integraton"; Douglas Curran, In Advance of the Landing: Folk Concepts of Outer Space, Abbeville, 1985, pp. 79–81; Clark III 1219; David Clarke and Tom Clark, "Going 'Out There' in SoCal," Fortean Times 388 (January 2020): 75–76; Clark IV 1395)

1959, January — Leonard Hewins sees a fiery, round object come down near Stratford-on-Avon, England, from the east and land 300 feet away. A blue haze forms and three figures emerge and sit down with clumsy movements. Hewins is unable to move until the UFO takes off. (John D. Llewellyn, "Stratford-on-Avon Landing with Occupants: January 1959," Flying Saucer Review 13, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1967): 15; Patrick Gross, UFOCAT, March 9, 2008)

1959, January — After 5:00 p.m. A couple and their daughter are strolling along the beach at Port Gawler, South Australia, when they notice a silhouetted sphere emerging from the waters of the Gulf Saint Vincent. Suddenly a curtain of white energy or matter silently erupts from its underside. The object moves closer to the witnesses, then hovers. Another object appears from the south and joins the first one temporarily then moves back south again. The first object takes off at an incredible speed. (Australian UFO Research Network, "1959"; Dolan, USO1, 202–203)

1959, January 1 — Rocket scientist Wernher von Braun, on holiday in Germany, makes a cryptic statement about the failed launch of Pioneer 3 by a Juno II rocket on December 6, 1958: "We find ourselves faced by powers which are far stronger than we had hitherto assumed, and whose base is at present unknown to us. More I cannot say at present. We are now engaged in entering into closer contact with those powers, and in six or nine months' time it may be possible to speak with more precision on the matter." (Gordon W. Creighton, "Unidentified Satellites," Flying Saucer Review 7, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1961): 3, 6; Good Above, p. 370)

1959, January 1 — 4:55 p.m. Deputy Fred Gunzelman of the Harbor Department in Corona del Mar, California, spots a bright object outside department headquarters. He summons Deputy Elmer Sandling and Sgt. Bruce Young and the three watch the object through binoculars, where it appears to be a disc-shaped object with a rotating tail. They notify the lifeguard headquarters at Newport Beach, where Lt. Mike Henry, Guard Jack Bell, and Lt. Jim Richards also see the UFO. The planet Venus is clearly visible in the same section of sky. During the 15 minutes it is visible, it starts moving to the southeast and then splits into four parts. Two rise vertically at high speed, another heads southeast, and the last remains stationary. ("'Unidentified Flying Object' Sighted off Newport Beach," Santa Ana (Calif.) Register, January 2, 1959, p. 2; "From Here and There," APRO Bulletin, January 1959, pp. 6, 7; UFOEv, p. 137; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 95; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 January–March, The Author, 1999, pp. 1–2)

1959, January 11 — Wilbert Smith speaks on UFOs at the Illuminating Engineering Society's Canadian Regional Conference in Ottawa, Ontario. He claims that "Various items of 'hardware' are known to exist, but are usually clapped into security and are not available to the general public." (Frank Edwards, FS Serious Business, Bantam ed., 1966, p. 48)

1959, January 13 — 7:00 a.m. Robert Collins is driving a pickup truck south on Hartstown Road across Pymatuning Lake, Pennsylvania, when he sees a bright light approaching from the east and illuminating the ground. It stops above his truck, hovering 200 feet above it for several minutes. The truck's electrical system fails, the engine dies, and the headlights and radio go out. The object's light illuminates an area about 300 feet in front of him. It takes off and disappears in seconds, and the truck begins working again. ("Area Man's Encounter with Unidentified Flying Object Called Weirdest Experience," Greenville (Pa.) Record-Argus, January 31, 1959, pp. 1–2)

1959, January 17 — George Adamski arrives in Auckland, New Zealand, on the first stop of a worldwide speaking tour where he is received by North Island Adamski Correspondence Group leaders Henk and Brenda Hinfelaar for a 6-week engagement starting with a talk in Kaikohe on January 20. (Marc Hallet, A Critical Appraisal of George Adamski: The Man Who Spoke to the Space Brothers, The Author, 2016; "World Lecture Tour," The Adamski Case, October 5, 2019)

1959, January 18 — The latest in a series of UFO articles by John Lester discusses the significant financial investment made by the US government in the investigation of unidentified flying objects. The article estimates the Air Force, has spent approximately $200 million on UFO investigations. Of this amount, $75 million was allocated to the examination of around 7,500 UFO sightings since 1947, at an estimated cost of $10,000 per sighting. (John Lester, "Hunt for Flying Saucers Costs U.S. $200 Million," Washington (D.C.) Star-Ledger, January 18, 1959; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 January–March, The Author, 1999, pp. 22–24)

1959, January 18? — Eight people see a UFO over Stigsjö, Sweden. The round object, 18–24 feet in diameter, approaches slowly from the south over Lake Länsjön at a height of 900 feet. It is surrounded by a luminous ring 6 feet wide. It is visible for 3 minutes. (Stockholms-Tidningen, January 20, 1960; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 January–March, The Author, 1999, p. 25)

1959, January 21 — 6:00 a.m. A flying object is seen crashing into the waters of the harbor at Gdynia, Poland. Rumors later claim that a rust-free fragment is retrieved by divers and, after being examined by the Polish navy, sent to Gdynia Polytechnic University [possibly the Polish Naval Academy]. A few days later, an injured occupant of the craft is allegedly found wandering in the area. He speaks no known language, wears an odd uniform, and apparently has burns on the face. He is taken to a hospital, but he dies when doctors attempt to remove an armband. His remains are said to have been shipped to the Soviet Union. (Hobana and Weverbergh 1–2; Poland 25–28, 115)

1959, January 21 — MP Roy Mason asks the Air Minister another question in the UK House of Commons: What instructions have been sent to RAF stations about collecting military UFO reports, and what collaboration is there with Canada and the US? Air Minister George Ward replies that RAF units have standing instructions for handling reports, and there is no special collaboration with those countries. ("Roy Mason Asks Another," Flying Saucer Review 5, no. 2 (March/April 1959): 2; Good Above, p. 52; Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1959, January 25 — After 12:00 midnight. Franklin and Louise Richardson park on Spivey-Tapp road north of Lampasas, Texas, hoping to once again see the mysterious lights they encountered on December 20. They notice a large light about 20 miles to the northeast, "hopscotching" south rapidly, then making a right-angle turn and so that it is heading directly toward them. Panicked, Louise begins driving away, watching the light in the rear-view mirror. She accidentally hits some gravel on a curve, applies the brakes, and the car skids and hits some trees. The car is severely damaged, Louise is injured, and the light has disappeared. ("Lampasas Couple 'Victims' of Mysterious, Fast-Flying Lights," Lampasas (Tex.) Record, January 29, 1959, via Loren E. 1959, January 28 — At a Symposium on Aerospace Technology by the Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences at the Astor Hotel in New York City, USAF Maj. Gen. Donald J. Keirn, assistant deputy chief of staff on development for nuclear systems, talks about nuclear aircraft propulsion. He mentions that if intelligent extraterrestrials do exist, "it is entirely possible that some of them may have passed through our stage of evolution, and may have already achieved a higher level of social and technological culture than our own." He suggests using electromagnetic emissions to detect them, as they may be doing with us. (US Congress, Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, Hearings, Aircraft Nuclear Propulsion Program, July 23, 1959, p. 153)

1959, January 31 — The US Ground Observer Corps is deactivated with the advent of automated Army (Missile Master) and Air Force (SAGE) radar systems. (Wikipedia, "Ground Observer Corps")

1959, February — 9:30 p.m. The people of Digeliotika, Greece, hear a humming noise coming from the direction of the sea. Running out of their homes, many people see a luminous disc circling the village for about 10 minutes. Radios fail to operate and the electrical current in one house fails completely. When the disc flies low over the house of the priest, Papa Costas, there is a loud noise and the whole house shakes. The object moves off to the west. Inspection of the house the next day reveals that many of the roof tiles have been displaced, and others are on the ground. ("UAOs Collide with Tree, Roof," APRO Bulletin, March 1959, p. 2)

1959, February 1 — JANAP 146(D) integrates Canada into the CIRVIS reporting instructions. The Canadian Department of National Defence launches a series of Communications Instructions for Reporting Vital Intelligence Sightings in line with the JANAP procedures. (Gregory M. Kanon, "UFOs and the Canadian Government," Canadian UFO Report 3, no. 7 (Spring 1976): 17–18; Antonio F. 1959, February 12 — 6:10 p.m. Anna Ochipa sees a white cylindrical object, resembling a cigarette, jerking back and forth over a cloud in Miami, Florida, before it suddenly vanishes. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 January–March, The Author, 1999, p. 48)

1959, February 17 — Hynek wants to start bringing together ATIC and Blue Book personnel for monthly meetings where scientific and PR problems are reviewed. To get it going, he meets with Air Force Intelligence, Secretary of the Air Force officials, and Blue Book staffers in the Pentagon. This meeting includes, besides Hynek, Maj. Robert J. Friend, Col. Leonard T. Glaser, Alex Francis Arcier, Maj. James F. Byrne, Maj. Joseph E. Boland, Maj. Lawrence J. Tacker, and Burgoyne Lee Griffing. The group agrees that eventually the term "UFOs" should be jettisoned and older unsolved cases reexamined in the light of "greater scientific knowledge" that will move them from unknowns to knowns. 1959, February 20 — Pfc. Bernard G. "Gerry" Irwin, on leave from Fort Bliss in El Paso, Texas, is driving near Cedar City, Utah, when he stops to investigate what seems to be a crashing plane. He is later found unconscious in the snow and treated at the Cedar City hospital. He suffers from amnesia, continues to have fainting spells, and returns more than once to the site in some kind of fugue. He soon goes AWOL from the Army but returns and spends several more years in the service, rising to the rank of sergeant. He is living in Idaho in 2013, where David Booher interviews him about his PTSD-like symptoms. 1959, February 20 — Just as the first working models of the Army's VZ-9 Avrocar are being manufactured, the Canadian government cancels the Avro CF-105 Arrow program. Almost all Avro Canada employees are laid off, including those with the Special Projects Group. However, three days later, many of the Special Projects employees are rehired, but it isn't quite business as usual. The USAF Project Office devoted to the Avro projects recommends that the WS-606A and all related work (including the Avrocar) be cancelled. However, in May the USAF authorizes Avro to continue its "flying saucer" programs. (Wikipedia, "Avro Canada VZ-9 Avrocar")

1959, February 24 — 8:20 p.m. Capt. Peter W. Killian is flying an American Airlines flight from Newark to Detroit when he encounters three bright lights flying in a precise line. The initial detection takes place when the aircraft is flying at 8,500 feet and 50 mph about 13 miles west of Williamsport, Pennsylvania. At first Killian thinks he is seeing Orion's sword, but he can see those stars elsewhere. One of the objects abruptly leaves formation and approaches the plane, slows down before Killian takes evasive action, then rejoins the other two. Killian alerts copilot James John Dee and then announces on the intercom for the passengers to take a look. He also puts out a call to nearby aircraft, and five other commercial airline pilots indicate that they can see the objects. The lights remain at about the 9 o'clock position for 40 minutes, providing an opportunity for many of the 35 passengers to observe them. They are also seen by the crews of two other planes flying much farther to the south, as well as by the tower operators in Pittsburgh. The Air Force quickly identifies the objects as the three Orion stars, changes that to an aerial refueling operation, then accuses Killian of being drunk. But an independent sighting of the UFOs by an Air Force transport plane 150 miles further south confirms Killian's observation, and no refueling routes exist in central Pennsylvania. Brad Sparks uncovers new evidence in 2016 that supports the witnesses' story. 1959, February 24 — 10:00 p.m. A 17-year-old male is home babysitting the family pets and his younger brother in Victorville, California, when he sees a bright light shining in his bedroom window. The dogs begin to howl and run around. He goes outside and sees a luminous object like an "elongated egg," dull red with purple waves inside it, flying in a descending path toward his house. It passes over the front yard at a height of only 8–10 feet. As the object returns, he goes inside to get a gun, but as he goes outside the object is making a third pass and he goes back inside. When the parents return home, they find the dogs in a terrified state. (Hynek UFO Report, pp. 167–170; Swords 286–287)

1959, Late February–April 15 — George Adamski continues his world lecture tour in Sydney, Perth, Adelaide, Melbourne, and Brisbane, Australia. ("World Lecture Tour," The Adamski Case, October 5, 2019)

1959, February 25 — 8:45 a.m. Jim Dobbs Jr. is driving south on State Highway 18 south of Hobbs, New Mexico, when he sees an egg-shaped object glowing like radium on a watch dial. He estimates it is 10° above the southern horizon and traveling fast. His radio fades out and produces only a steady succession of two dots and a dash. The object disappears in the east after 30 seconds. ("Hobbs Man Sees Glowing 'Saucer,' Hears Signals," Alamogordo (N.Mex.) Daily News, February 26, 1959, p. 5; "Hobbs Man Sees Glowing UFO, Hears Signals," APRO Bulletin, March 1959, p. 1)

1959, February 25 — Lt. Col. Lee B. James, chief of the Liaison Branch of the Army Ballistic Agency in Huntsville, Alabama, gives a talk at the Detroit Chapter of the Michigan Society of Professional Engineers on space flight. Because of the recent Killian incident, he is asked about UFOs. Referring to the witness on that aircraft, he says: "If they (35 passengers and several crew members) saw what they really saw, it would have to come from outer space—a civilization decades before ours." (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 January–March, The Author, 1999, p. 68)

1959, February 25 — 7:25 p.m. A pale-yellow light is seen by officials above one of the runways at London Airport [now Heathrow], England. Airport and air defense radars do not pick up any target. RAF Fighter Command Headquarters says the light fluctuates in intensity and is about 200 feet from the ground. It stays in one position for 20 minutes then climbs away at high speed. 1959, February 28 — The US Air Force launches Discoverer 1, the first of a series of satellites that are part of the Corona spy program. The mission is a failure due to problems with the Agena upper stage. (Wikipedia, "Discoverer 1")

1959, March — On the Baltic Sea coast near Kołobrzeg, Poland, soldiers watch the sea become turbulent as a triangular object, 12 feet in diameter, emerges, circles the barracks, and flies away at high speed. ("Pologne: Rapport sur l'année 1959," Le Courier Interplanétaire, no. 56 (September 1961); Carl Feindt, "Report # 168," waterufo.net; Vallée, Magonia, p. 275)

1959, March 11 — Rear Admiral George J. Dufek, on his way back from commanding Operation Deepfreeze in Antarctica, tells reporters in Wellington, New Zealand, that he does not think the existence of UFOs can be discounted: "I think it is very stupid for human beings to think no one else in the universe is as intelligent as we are." Asked years later why he said this, he explains that it was because of sightings related to him by people who worked with him at the South Pole. ("Stupid to Doubt Flying Saucers, Says Admiral," Boston (Mass.) Globe, March 11, 1959, p. 15; Yvonne S. Durfield, "The Eyewitness Report of the Incredible UFO Invasion of Antarctica," Ideal's UFO Magazine, no. 2 (June 1978): 44–50; Swords 290)

1959, March 11 — In the House of Commons, MP Albert Hunter asks John Hay, the Minister of Transport and Civil Aviation, about the light seen at London Airport on February 25. Hay responds that it was not reported to the Ministry. MP Geoffrey de Freitas asks the Secretary of State for Air George Ward whether he will make a statement about the case, and he replies that there is insufficient information. ("Saucer over London for All U.K. Knows," Toronto (Ont.) Daily Star, March 12, 1959, p. 13; Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1959, March 12 —Several witnesses at Bergen, Norway, see a bright object passing north to south, taking two minutes to move from horizon to horizon. Several minutes later another appears, following the same course. This is soon followed by three more in succession. (ClearIntent, p. 138)

1959, March 13 — 2:00 a.m. Percy Briggs is driving from Purnong to Mannum, South Australia, with a load of vegetables and Claypans Postmaster C. Towill as passenger. They have just climbed Cournamont Hill near the Purnong Ferry over the Murray River. They see to the left of the road a huge dome-shaped object with 8–9 red and blue lights about 20 feet apart. The UFO soon rises from the ground at a 15° angle and moves away to the southwest. The separate lights merge into one big light. They watch it recede for about 10 minutes. ("Purnong Landing," Australian Saucer Record 5, no. 2 (1959): 3; "Saucer Landings Reported at Punnong and Goolwa, Australia," Flying Saucer Review 5, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1959): 6–7; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 January–March, The Author, 1999, pp. 79–80)

1959, March 18 — 8:50 p.m. Jesse Wilson of Denville, New Jersey, is taking photos of the Moon through a telescope and captures an image of two groups of multiple objects. (Center for UFO Studies, [case documents])

1959, March 19 — USAF spokesman Maj. Lawrence J. Tacker retracts the dubious Orion explanation for the Killian case and says instead that the pilots saw B-47 bombers refueling in flight from a KC-97 tanker. Killian tells the papers, "I don't care what the air force says," he knows what refueling looks like and the UFOs were "at least three times the size of any tanker or bomber we have. They could travel at 2,000 mph. And they were not conventional aircraft." (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 January–March, The Author, 1999, pp. 82–84)

1959, March 20 — 5:30 p.m. Witold Sambrowski, an electronics engineer, sees two noiseless cigar-shaped, reddish-pink objects flying over Ostroleka, Poland. They are traveling horizontally at a speed greater than a jet. When the two vanish, a third appears and follows the path the others have taken. (Hobana and Weverbergh 211–212)

1959, March 20 — 9:00 p.m. A farmer, Cirocco Elio, is driving home from Murray Bridge, South Australia. with his wife. His wife suddenly cries out in alarm, and he immediately slams on the brakes. In the sky ahead, they see what appears to be a blazing golden coin. It shines like a sun in the darkness, arching upward at tremendous speed before vanishing. ("Spaceship Query in S.A. Township: Strange Objects in Sky," Sydney (N.S.W.) Morning Herald, March 29, 1959, p. 5; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 January–March, The Author, 1999, pp. 86–87)

1959, March 22 — 1:30 a.m. Mr. and Mrs. Gary Bond are driving near Ann Arbor, Michigan, when they see an intensely lighted object hovering about 2 miles to the southeast. It is about 200 feet in the air and just south of a main road. Intense shafts of light are shining from two oval ports at the bottom. As they drive closer, they can hear no sound and find it is about 50–75 feet from the road. The UFO parallels their car at first, then the light shafts go out, and a circle of 8–10 red lights appear on the bottom. Then it rises rapidly and disappears in seconds. A local radio astronomer, Allen Barrot, claims the couple saw the lights of his telescope. But the Air Force finds that the couple were never looking in the direction of Barrot's observatory. ("Report Seeing Object Resembling Bird Cage in Sky," Ann Arbor News, March 23, 1959; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 January–March, The Author, 1999, pp. 87–90; Swords 288–289)

1959, March 25 — 7:36 p.m. A B-52 jet bomber on a sensitive Operation Head Start mission flying south over northern Montana becomes aware that something is following it when the tail gunner, T/Sgt Joe Cobb, picks up an object on his radar. It is also detected by the Electronics Warfare Officer, 1Lt Robert J. Millard, who determines that it is using two radar frequencies. They watch the target on an MB-9 scope for approximately one hour at ranges of 4.5 to 8.5 miles. A ground GCI station is notified upon initial contact with the object and an F-89J interceptor is launched at the time the object penetrates the Northern Air Defense Identification Zone and makes visual contact. The UFO has red and green bright flashing lights about 30-40 feet apart with a steady white light in between and somewhat to the rear, thus suggesting a delta or swept-wing aircraft about the size of a B-57 bomber. The pilot, 1Lt Austin E. Bond, closes to within 4 miles of the object when it changes its heading, increases speed. and begins to climb. The F-89 gives chase, but the object steadily pulls away and is lost by 8:42 p.m. The UFO demonstrates high performance and apparently emits an X-band signal at around 9130–9135 MHz. (NICAP, "B-52 and Gnd Radar / Radar Visual / Radar Freqs from UFO"; Clark III 998; Clark IV 1111)

1959, March 27 — Lou Corbin has told Keyhoe that Rep. Samuel Friedel (D-Md.) is "all set to hop on this Killian business" and begins to plan for Killian to meet with him. But Killian's wife now tells Keyhoe that he is under strict orders from the Air Force not to talk to anyone about the sighting or risk losing his job. Soon afterwards, the Air Force releases a statement from Killian that says, "Having never seen night refueling of jets by a tanker, I suppose that could be what we saw." (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 27–36; UFOEv, pp. 116–117)

1959, March 31 — 11:30 p.m. Barry Neale, operator of the Port Elliot movie theater, is driving home to Goolwa, South Australia, and sees a dome-shaped, reddish-orange object with a row of evenly spaced portholes around it. He estimates it to be about 15 feet wide, and it is on the ground about 900 feet from the road. He sees it disappear to the east. ("Saucer Landings Reported at Punnong and Goolwa, Australia," Flying Saucer Review 5, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1959): 6–7; Michael Hervey, UFOs over the Southern Hemisphere, Robert Hale, 1975, p. 165; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 January–March, The Author, 1999, pp. 99–100)

1959, Spring — Keyhoe meets with Hillenkoetter at the New York Yacht Club to discuss NICAP strategy. USAF Public Information Officer Lawrence J. Tacker has sent the organization a letter asking it to stop writing to Air Force personnel about UFOs. Keyhoe tells Hillenkoetter that three scientists have contacted a certain congressman to report UFO sightings. Hillenkoetter advises, "we'll have to do something to speed things up." (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 15, 247–248)

1959, Spring — Soviet radar and Air Defense personnel observe UFOs circling and hovering for more than 24 hours above the headquarters of the Tactical Missile Command at Sverdlovsk, Russia. Fighter aircraft sent to intercept them report that the UFOs easily outmaneuver them and zigzag to avoid machine gun fire. (Flying Saucers, no. 47, May 1966, pp. 6–10; Good Above, p. 227)

1959, Spring — Early evening. A weather officer with the US Fifth Air Force in Tokyo, Japan, is in the operations center when the staff tracks a UFO near Misawa Air Base on the north end of Honshu. One of the officers says this happens frequently, that the objects travel at 2,000 mph, and they often stop in one position and hover for 30 minutes to several hours before taking off westward along the Tsugaru Strait and disappearing in a burst of speed. The center commander orders the pilots of two specially equipped F-106s based at Misawa to intercept the target. One of the planes is having instrumentation problems, but the other goes up. After 10 minutes he is being guided toward the target through Misawa. The pilot says the object is circular and metallic with a cockpit on top. The commander calls the Pentagon for authorization for the pilot to fire on the UFO, and he gets permission for the pilot to make a firing pass. The pilot fires two missiles, but they detonate just at the edge of the object, as if it is protected. The UFO then turns toward the terrified pilot, and the command center watches as the two blips merge into one. The blip disappears. Crews search for wreckage for 4 days but find none. (Bruce Maccabee, "Hiding the Hardware," IUR 16, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1991): 8–9)

1959, April 1 — An Air Force C-118 plane with four on board crashes between Sumner and Orting, Washington, about an hour after taking off from McChord AFB [now Joint Base Lewis-McChord] in Tacoma. Their last radio message indicates that they hit something or that something hit them. Bob Gribble and other UFO investigators find witnesses who claim to have seen two orange or yellow objects closing in on the plane. Best guess is that the plane hit a tree and the UFO observations are unrelated. ("Plane Crash Fiery," Centralia (Wash.) Daily Chronicle, April 2, 1959, p. 1; Bob Barry, "The Case of the Mysterious Airplane Crash," Saucer News 6, no. 4 (September 1959): 14–17; Bruce Sandham, "'Murder' on a Mountainside," Saucers, Space and Science, no. 62 (1971): 13–14; Loren E. 1959, April 7 — 8:00 p.m. Control tower operators at CFB St. Hubert [now Montreal/Saint-Hubert Airport], Quebec, spot a red, glowing light hanging in the sky for a few minutes at 3,000–7,000 feet altitude. It suddenly darts to the north at supersonic speed. ("Flying Object over Defense Spot Baffles Air Force," Marysville (Ohio) Journal-Tribune, April 13, 1959, p. 1; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 100)

1959, April 9 — Rev. William Booth Gill sees an unusual light high up on the flank of Mount Pudi near the southeastern top of Papua New Guinea. At first he thinks it is someone carrying a lamp, but it reappears 10 minutes later on the opposite side of the mountain. (Clark III 533; Clark IV 583)

1959, April 12 — 8:00 p.m. Control tower personnel and airport officials at St. Hubert Air Defence Command Base [now CFB St. Hubert], Quebec, as well as local residents watch a red ball of light hovering above the airfield at 3,000–7,000 feet. Descriptions vary from a black ball with a red light to a long red cigar. Radar does not pick it up. Suddenly it takes off toward Montreal to the north. ("Red Light Still Mystery," Montreal (Que.) Star, April 13, 1959, pp. 3–4; Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Sightings, Landings, and Abductions, Methuen, 1979, pp. 94–96)

1959, April 17 — George Adamski meets with Sisir Kumar Maitra, head of the Department of Philosophy and dean of the Faculty of Arts of Banaras Hindu University in Varanasi during a stopover in Kolkata, India. ("World Lecture Tour," The Adamski Case, October 5, 2019)

1959, April 18–May 14 — Adamski arrives in London, England, and appears on the TV show In Town Tonight on April 18 and on the BBC program Panorama on April 20 where he debates with astronomer Patrick Moore, a show that is seen by 9 million viewers. Both Gen. Frederick Browning and RAF Commander Peter Horsley meet with Adamski and Desmond Leslie during their visit to a private address in London. Adamski gives further lectures in Tunbridge Wells, Weston-super-Mare, Bournemouth, at Caxton Hall in London (on April 28), Birmingham University (April 29), Manchester (May 1), and several more around the British Isles. ("World Lecture Tour," The Adamski Case, October 5, 2019; David Clarke, "The Prince and the Saucers," Fortean Times 406 (June 2021): 19)

1959, April 19 — 3:00 p.m. Otis T. Carr and Norman Colton, who have been in Oklahoma since February, pretend to attempt the launch of their OTC-X1 spacecraft in a gravel pit 6 miles east of the Frontier City amusement park northeast of Oklahoma City. Frontier City obligingly erects a model of the spacecraft as a ride. However, Carr comes down with a mysterious throat ailment and goes to Mercy Hospital on April 17. He invites Long John Nebel to have a brief glimpse of the model, but Nebel thinks it looks like a jumble of unconnected parts. As it turns out, the OTC-X1 develops a "mercury leak" and the launch is delayed then canceled. Those who have come for the April 19 launch hear contactee Dana Howard talk about her trip to Venus, and Margaret Storm (Carr's "publications editor" in Baltimore) declares that Carr is inspired by the "Divine Master St. Germain." 1959, April 20 — Ufologist Morris K. Jessup commits suicide in a Dade County park, Florida, from carbon monoxide poisoning. Some theorists connect his involvement with the Allende letters and the Philadelphia experiment to his death, but friends say Jessup has been discussing suicide with them for several months. ("Jessup and the Allende Case," Pursuit 1, no. 4 (September 30, 1968): 8–10; Clark III 635; Powell, Keyhoe, 277; Clark IV 697)

1959, May — The first Avrocar, #58-7055, rolls out of the Avro Malton factory in Mississauga, Ontario. From June 9 to October 7 it is tested in a static hover rig. A second Avrocar is completed in August. (Wikipedia, "Avro Canada VZ-9 Avrocar"; Graff 133)

1959, May 4 — Otis T. Carr and his attorney are summoned to the county courthouse in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, to answer questions about stock sales by OTC Enterprises, including a block of 21,000 shares to Frontier City promoter Jimmy Burge, oilman Frank Buttram, and publisher Edward K. Gaylord. Carr pleads the Fifth Amendment. (Clark III 861; Clark IV 948)

1959, May 5 — Hynek's newly formed UFO Advisory Panel holds its first meeting at Wright-Patterson AFB in Dayton, Ohio. The panel consists of Hynek, Lt. Col. Richard M. Graham (chaplain), Lt. Col. Theodore J. Hieatt (PR), Maj. Leroy D. Pigg (psychologist), V. J. Handmacher (physicist), and L. V. Robinson (Harvard astronomer). (Jacobs, UFO Controversy in America, Signet ed., 1976, pp. 148–149; "Saucer Reading Fest," Saturday Night Uforia, January 25, 2019)

1959, May 18 — George Adamski has an audience with Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands at Soestdijk Palace in Baarn on his world lecture tour, amid fiercely critical media coverage. The royal audience, scheduled to last 45 minutes, goes on for two hours, making Adamski 20 minutes late for his lecture in The Hague. The royal couple claim that the British royal family, especially Prince Philip, are also keen to meet

Adamski. After the audience, Dutch Aeronautical Association president Cornelis Kolff says "The Queen showed an extraordinary interest in the whole subject." Royal Netherlands Air Force Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Haye Schaper says, "The man's a pathological case." ("World Lecture Tour," The Adamski Case, October 5, 2019; David Clarke, "The Prince and the Saucers," Fortean Times 406 (June 2021): 19)

1959, May 20 — 5:30 p.m. Antonio Sanchez and Ernesto Fogliani are hunting rabbits about 7 miles from Pehuelches station, Buenos Aires, Argentina. They see a saucer-shaped, silvery machine resting on the ground about 980 feet away. They approach to about 490 feet when the object rises into the sky and disappears. At the spot where it was, they find the grass flattened in the shape of a large oval. (Jacques Vallée and Janine Vallée, Challenge to Science: The UFO Enigma, Henry Regnery, 1966, p. 53; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 April–June, The Author, 1999, p. 32; Clark III 378; Clark IV 422)

1959, May 25 — The UFO Advisory Panel meets again to "determine the type of information which should be used for correlation in bringing Special Report #14 up to date." ("Saucer Reading Fest," Saturday Night Uforia, January 25, 2019)

1959, Late May — Ruppelt tells Keyhoe he is revising his book to bring it more up to date and requests NICAP's most recent information. He says the Air Force is giving its full cooperation and he is "middle of the road" on the UFO question. (Donald E. Keyhoe, "Capt. Ruppelt Revising His UFO Book: Air Force Rumored to Be Pressuring Former Project Chief," UFO Investigator 1, no. 8 (June 1959): 5–6; Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 258–260)

1959, May 26, 29 — Adamski gives two lectures in Zürich, Switzerland. At the second talk, he meets with organized resistance by a group of 300 students (in an audience of 700) who have been led to believe he will discredit Swiss astronomer Fritz Zwicky. When a reporter afterwards asks if he will accept an apology, Adamski replies that it should not be given to him, but to the Swiss public. Due to recurring heart problems, Adamski cancels his remaining lectures in Switzerland, Italy, Austria, and Denmark. ("World Lecture Tour," The Adamski Case, October 5, 2019)

1959, May 28 — Otis T. Carr and two OTC Enterprises employees (Lari Kendrick and Charles O. Rhoades) are barred by a federal court order from selling any further stock in the company. The SEC contends that they have been selling unregistered securities fraudulently since November 18, 1955, using the US mail to do so. Contactee associate Wayne Aho escapes arraignment, while Norman Colton has fled the state and cannot be located. (Clark III 861; Clark IV 948)

1959, May 28 — Night. Two observers on a Project Moonwatch team in San Antonio, Texas, see two silvery objects through their telescopes that shoot across the sky in less than one second, one curving away in a parabolic path, the other executing a more gradual hyperbolic curve. (Michael D. Swords, "Gazing at the Moons," IUR 32, no. 4 (October 2009): 13–14; Center for UFO Studies, "Moonwatch Mystery Satellites, 1958–1962")

1959, June — The Argentine Navy bottles up a fast, submarine-like object in the Buenos Aires harbor, Argentina. It is shaped like a huge fish, is silver in color, and sports a tail like the stabilizer on a B-17. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 52–53)

1959, June — The radiation effects reactor at Lockheed's Georgia Nuclear Aircraft Laboratory [now closed] in the Dawson Forest outside Dawsonville, Georgia, is brought up to full power and unsheathed for the first time. It is a water-cooled 10-megawatt nuclear reactor in a shielded underground shaft with the purpose of irradiating military aircraft as well as the forest itself to determine the effects of nuclear war on wildlife. The experiment exposes everything within a 1,000-foot radius to a lethal dose of radiation. Bugs fall from the air, and small animals and the bacteria living in and on them are exterminated, in a phenomenon the technicians call "instant taxidermy." Oak trees turn brown, yet crabgrass is seemingly unaffected. Pine trees are the hardest hit of all. Clear Coca-Cola bottles turn brown, hydraulic fluid coagulates into chewing gum, transistorized equipment stops working, and rubber tires become rock hard. Documents about the reactor remain highly classified, and the entrance to the underground portion of the facility has been buried. The area is closed in 1971, and only objects left above ground were the concrete foundations on which the buildings and reactors were placed. (Wikipedia, "Georgia Nuclear Aircraft Laboratory"; Adam Higginbotham, Midnight at Chernobyl, Simon & Schuster, 2019, p. 30)

1959, June 12 — Keyhoe writes an open letter to Ruppelt that lists his past statements on UFOs and urges him not to let the Air Force intimidate him into retracting. (Donald E. Keyhoe, "Capt. Ruppelt Revising His UFO Book: Air Force Rumored to Be Pressuring Former Project Chief," UFO Investigator 1, no. 8 (June 1959): 5–6; Powell, Keyhoe, 280–281)

1959, June 13 — Charles S. Sheldon II, technical director of the House Science and Astronautics Committee, writes to Richard H. Hall at NICAP to say that while he thinks UFOs are "extremely interesting," they do not pose a national security threat." (Swords 290)

1959, June 13 — Adamski, along with follower Lou Zinsstag, meets with diplomat Alberto Perego and Mario Maioli at Ristorante La Cisterna in the Trastevere area of Rome, Italy, then go on an all-night taxi ride around the city. He returns to the United States via Copenhagen, Denmark, on June 17. ("World Lecture Tour," The Adamski Case, October 5, 2019; 1Pinotti 106)

1959, June 21 — 1:00 a.m. Rev. William Booth Gill's assistant, Stephen Gill Moi, sees an "inverted saucer" in the sky above Boianai Mission, Papua New Guinea. (Clark III 533–534; Clark IV 583)

1959, June 22 — 8:00 p.m. A large, luminous UFO passes over Salta, Argentina, and blacks out all electrical power for several minutes. (Bernardo Passíon, "Report from Argentina," APRO Bulletin, November 1959, p. 9; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 April–June, The Author, 1999, p. 56)

1959, June 26–28 — 6:45 p.m. At Boianai Mission, Papua New Guinea, Rev. William Booth Gill and 38 others watch a platform-shaped object with legs that appears in the sky above Venus. It has an electric blue spotlight and is hovering about 500 feet away at a height of 300–400 feet. On top of the object, four humanlike figures, their bodies surrounded by illumination, are busy with some unknown task. The men and spotlight disappear at 7:20 p.m. and the object vanishes into the clouds. It reappears at 8:28 without the men or spotlight but now joined by second, third and fourth objects at 8:29, 8:35, and 8:35–8:50 p.m., coming and going through the clouds. The main UFO, "large, clear, stationary," gives off a red light and disappears overhead into clouds at 9:10 p.m., reappears at 9:20, moves across the sea to Giwa appearing white-red-blue, then disappears at 9:30. An overhead object reappears at 9:46, hovering, disappears behind a cloud at 10:10, reappears in a gap between clouds at 10:30, then is gone at 10:50. The next day, the object returns at 6:00–6:30 p.m. with two others, one to the west and one overhead. "Two of the figures seemed to be doing something near the center of the deck. They were occasionally bending over and raising their arms as though adjusting or setting up something (not visible). One figure seemed to be standing, looking down at us." Father Gill and another teacher wave their arms, and two of the figures on the main object wave back. Gill waves a flashlight and the object moves back and forth laterally. Gill goes in for dinner and a church service; when he returns at 7:45 p.m., the UFO is gone. The next evening at 6:45 p.m., some eight objects align themselves across a section of the sky. No occupants are visible. Martin Kottmeyer suggests that Gill was watching a lighted squid-fishing boat close to shore, but Gill has confirmed the object was over his head. 1959, July — The Air Force reassigns UFO investigative duties to the 1127th Field Activities Group stationed at Fort Belvoir, Fairfax County, Virginia, replacing the 1006th AISS. The unit will also be responsible for Project Moon Dust and Operation Blue Fly. (Jacobs, UFO Controversy in America, Signet ed., 1976, p. 134; Kevin D. Randle and Donald R. Schmitt, "Secret Projects and Open Eyes: A Response," IUR 19, no. 3 (May/June 1994): 16–17; Clark III 919; Clark IV 1029)

1959, July — Contactee Gabriel Green rebrands his group as the Amalgamated Flying Saucer Clubs of America and publishes the AFSCA World Report from 1959 to 1961, UFO International from 1962 to 1965, and Flying Saucers International from 1966 to 1969. 1959, July 5 — 9:30 a.m. A group of scouts and other witnesses on a beach in Matanzas, Cuba, see an oval, metallic object emerge from Matanzas Bay about 650 feet from the shore and hover a few feet above the surface. Seconds later, the object rises vertically into the air and disappears. (Clark IV 1312)

1959, July 5–6 — US Navy Cmdr. Julius Larsen, an ONI liaison officer to the CIA's Photographic Intelligence Center in Washington, D.C., rediscovers the Swan-Knowles-Affa correspondence from 1954 in a file and decides to follow up on it. He goes to Eliot, Maine, to visit Rear Adm. Knowles and interview Frances Swan. Larsen tries his hand at automatic writing and channels a message from Affa. Back in Washington on July 6, Larsen goes to director of the Photographic Intelligence Office, Arthur C. Lundahl, and tells the story to him and his assistant Lt. Robert S. Neasham. They urge Larsen to try to contact the extraterrestrials. Larsen goes into a trance, asks Affa questions, and writes the answers down. When Neasham challenges Affa to appear in person or let them see his spaceship, Larsen stops writing and tells Neasham to go to the window. Lundahl sees nothing unusual, but Neasham insists a spaceship is hiding behind some fluffy clouds. He also insists that he later contacted Washington National Airport and heard from the radar tower that the sector where the UFO appeared had been "blocked out." Neasham urges Project Blue Book's Maj. Robert Friend to come over for a briefing. He shows up on July 9 and hears Neasham's version of the story, and Larsen even channels some messages. Friend goes back to Dayton, Ohio, and prepares a memo for his boss. 1959, July 8 — Night. Mrs. Napau Abednego and other indigenous people on Prince of Wales Island in the Torres Strait off Queensland, Australia, see a huge, glowing red object land on top of a hill at Port Lihou. The same night, residents of nearby Thursday Island see a green UFO flying low, and a strange object is also reported at Mapoon Mission on the west coast of Cape York. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 July–September, The Author, 2000, p. 13)

1959, July 11 — 6:02 a.m. A Pan American Boeing Stratocruiser piloted by Capt. George Wilson flying over the Pacific Ocean about 1,035 miles northeast of Honolulu, Hawaii, encounters a large bright light with 3–4 satellite lights in a line below, behind, and to the left of the main object. It makes a sharp right turn and disappears to the south. Copilot Richard Lorenzen and Flight Engineer Bob Scott also see the UFOs. Another Pan Am flight sees essentially the same phenomenon, as well as an Air Force bomber crew, a Slick Airways plane, and a Canadian Pacific airliner. 1959, July 13 — 5:30 a.m. Eileen Moreland, a farmwoman in Blenheim, New Zealand, goes to the barn to milk her cows and sees a huge object, about 20–30 feet in diameter, with two intense green lights on its underside descend towards her and hover at rooftop height. It bathes her in green light. Two rows of jets around the middle shoot out orange flames. She can see two men inside, dressed in close-fitting suits of shiny material and opaque helmets. The jets turn on again, the object tilts, and it shoots up vertically at great speed, making a high-pitched sound. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 July–September, The Author, 2000, pp. 25–28; Richard H. Hall, "Dyad 'Scout Craft,'" IUR 25, no. 4 (Winter 2000–2001): 23; UFOEv II 457–458; Patrick Gross, URECAT, November 2, 2006)

1959, July 14 — 8:22 p.m. Larry Godwin of Salisbury, North Carolina, sees a flash of light and hears a loud vibrato noise. His TV set mysteriously goes dead. Six other families in the area either hear the sound or report interference with their lights and TV sets. (Schopick, pp. 111–113; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 July–September, The Author, 2000, pp. 29–30)

1959, July 20 — A shuttlecock-shaped UFO is seen over the RAAF Woomera Range Complex in South Australia. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 100)

1959, July 27 — The UFO Advisory Panel meets at Wright-Patterson AFB in Ohio to discuss trends and statistics and recent sightings. ("Saucer Reading Fest," Saturday Night Uforia, January 25, 2019)

1959, July 28 — 2:10 p.m. Ray Stanford and a friend simultaneously take 8mm and 16mm film footage of three cigar-shaped objects maneuvering in the sky above his parents' home at 2629 Lynch Street, Corpus Christi, Texas. A fourth UFO appears about 5 minutes later. At one point a jet aircraft appears to alter its course to fly closer to one of the objects. (Ray Stanford, "The July 28 Movies," Saucers 7, no. 3/4 (Fall/Winter 1959/1960): 20–23; "Out of the Past," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 5, no. 4 (Aug./Sept. 1984): 5–7; "Out of the Past," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 5, no. 5 (Oct./Nov. 1984): 7–8)

1959, August — Stan Seers, president of the Queensland Flying Saucer Research Bureau [now UFO Research Queensland], is contacted by a man who requests a meeting with him in a Brisbane car park and offers him important information on UFOs. At the meeting he finds out that the man is an agent of the Australian Security Intelligence Organisation, who indicates he knows quite a bit about the group and its officers. By suggesting that ASIO could offer them significant information, the agent subsequently infiltrates the group and causes dissension and confusion. Some QFSRB members are pacifists, apparently, and are seeking to contact Russian scientists about the UFO phenomenon through the Soviet cultural organization VOKS. (Good Above, pp. 164–166; Kremlin 137–144)

1959, August — 2:00 p.m. A son and his father are driving near Skiatook, Oklahoma. Upon nearing a bridge, the car engine dies. Another car is stopped on the other side of the bridge with its hood up. They see a metallic, domed disc with a flexible hose hovering less than a foot above the water of a creek. They watch it for 5 minutes, then the hose draws in and the disk rises to 10 feet, disturbing the water's surface into a foot-deep trench. It flies upward and the cars start again. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 July–September, The Author, 2000, pp. 59–61; Michael D. Swords, "Messing Around with the Force," IUR 31, no. 4 (March 2008): 16–17)

1959, August — Kathleen O'Rourke is asleep with her two children in her bedroom in New Matamoras, Ohio, when her son yells her awake. There are a dozen globes of yellow light circling about a foot above his bed. They are about 3 inches in diameter. Then a second group enters the room, passing through the screen. They split, half joining the first and half sailing over Kathleen. They all then move to her bed and circle above her. Not one of the lights goes to her daughter's bed. She presses the light switch, and the lights turn into straight-edged streaks of light and disappear. There are no holes in the screens. (Michael D. Swords, "A Trick of the Light," IUR 31, no. 2 (June 2007): 10)

1959, August 9 — 7:30 p.m. Petroleum engineer Armando Uribe is returning home from Cerro Sombrero, Tierra del Fuego, Chile, with his wife and an 11-year-old housemaid when their pickup runs out of fuel. As they are waiting for another vehicle, the girl spots a bright blue light around 7:54 p.m. that is swinging in the air with a pendulum-like motion. As it approaches, they see it is an object like a metallic egg standing on end with two shafts of white light projecting from the bottom. A rose-colored, rotating device is on top. The object makes a quick movement when Uribe gets out of the truck, but then moves closer. Uribe points a rifle at it, and it quickly recedes and disappears. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 14–16; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 July–September, The Author, 2000, pp. 53–54)

1959, August 13 — 4:00 p.m. Pilot Jack H. Goldsberry, flying a Cessna 170 from Hobbs to Albuquerque, New Mexico, at 8,000 feet, notices halfway between Roswell and Corona, that his Magnesyn electric compass has suddenly moved around a slow 360° rotation in about 4–5 seconds. His other standard magnetic compass is spinning wildly. About this time, he sees three small, gray, and slightly fuzzy elliptical objects in close echelon formation passing in front from left to right and around his plane at a distance about 450–600 feet at a speed of about 200 mph. The Magnesyn compass follows the objects' position as they circle the plane, and after one full circle they disappear to the rear. Then both compasses settle back to normal. The controller at Albuquerque cancels his flight plan and orders him to land at Kirtland AFB, where he is interrogated by a USAF major, who tells him that he might become ill from the experience. (NICAP, "Former Navy PBY Pilot Encounter / EME"; Sparks, p. 278; "AF Secretly Warns Pilot of Danger," UFO Investigator 3, no. 1 (March/April 1965): 5; Schopick, pp. 127–128; Swords 287; Clark III 950; Clark IV 1064)

1959, August 13 — Around 9:45 p.m. Orville Shanks is driving with three passengers on Highway 332 north of Freeport, Texas, when they see a bright object with two satellite lights approach at low altitude. The car motor stalls and the headlights go out. The two lights appear to land, the main object follows them, continually changing colors and varying the intensity of its light. The motor and lights come back on when the UFOs cross the road, and Shanks drives on. About midnight they return, and the object is still there. Shanks gets out and approaches, but the UFO starts glowing brightly and making a noise, and they drive off again. ("Object Lands in Texas, U.S.," APRO Bulletin, September 1959, p. 3; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 July–September, The Author, 2000, pp. 55–60)

1959, August 17 — The automatic keys at the power station in Uberlândia, Minas Gerais, Brazil, suddenly disconnect power to all four trunk lines. A technician at a substation 45 miles away reports that all the keys disconnected as a UFO passes overhead, traveling toward the main station along the power lines. The chief engineer resets all the keys but they turn off again. Outside he sees a bright object approaching at high speed. As soon as it passes, the entire system returns to normal. (Lorenzen, FSHoax, pp. 179–180; Schopick, pp. 143–145; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 152–153; McCampbell, Ufology, 1976, pp. 65–66; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 July–September, The Author, 2000, pp. 66–67)

1959, August 25 — 11:00 a.m. At Eveking, North Rhine-Westphalia, Germany, Lutz Holtman walks towards a bright object in a forest and faints after he gets close to it. When he regains consciousness, he sees the UFO take off silently and vertically. The object is circular, has a tripod landing gear and two rows of bright openings, and is about 90 feet in diameter. (Vallée, Magonia, p. 277)

1959, September — Employees of Lockheed's Skunk Works are the first to return to Area 51 in Nevada to develop an aircraft that will replace the U-2. The Archangel-12 (A-12) spy plane will be designed to reduce its radar cross section by 50%. Following tests with wooden models at Burbank, California, proof-of-concept tests are to be carried out at Area 51 with full-scale mockups elevated onto 50-foot pylons. The CIA program to develop the follow-on aircraft to the U-2 is code-named Project Oxcart. EG&G agrees to move its radar test facility here. (Jacobsen, Area 51, p. 131; Peter W. Merlin, "Area 51 Timeline," Secret Heroes, November 10, 2021)

1959, September — Waveney Girvan takes over the editorship of Flying Saucer Review from Brinsley Le Poer Trench. ("Trench Resigns," Flying Saucer Review 5, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1959): 2; Clark III 498; Clark IV 547)

1959, September — Physicists Giuseppe Cocconi and Philip Morrison propose using the 21 cm hydrogen line to detect potential radio signals from interstellar civilizations. (Giuseppe Cocconi and Philip Morrison, "Searching for Interstellar Communications," Nature 184 (1959): 844–846)

1959, September — Harvard University psychologist Henry Murray begins what are widely considered unethical experiments, in which he uses 22 Harvard undergraduates as research subjects in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Among other purposes, experiments focus on measuring people's reactions under extreme stress. The unwitting undergraduates are submitted to what Murray calls "vehement, sweeping, and personally abusive" attacks. Specific, tailored assaults on their egos, cherished ideas, and beliefs are used to cause high levels of stress and distress. The subjects then repeatedly view recorded footage of their reactions to this verbal abuse. Among them is 17-year-old Ted Kaczynski, a mathematician who goes on to become the Unabomber, a domestic terrorist targeting academics and technologists for 18 years. Alston Chase's book Harvard and the Unabomber connects Kaczynski's abusive experiences under Murray to his later criminal career. His participation in these experiments and his service in the OSS have led many to believe that Murray was a part of the MK Ultra program. His experiments are not so much for observing stress reactions, but for a study of brainwashing and enhanced interrogation techniques. (Wikipedia, "Henry Murray"; Alston Chase, Harvard and the Unabomber: The Education of an American Terrorist, Norton, 2003)

1959, September 7 — 2:00 a.m. Rural mail carrier Walter E. Ogden sees a glowing, pumpkin-shaped object about 40 feet above the trees in his pasture at Wallingford, Kentucky. After a minute, a bluish blaze of fire comes from the bottom and it rises about 500 feet, leaving a circular smoke ring. It then zooms away horizontally. Six days later, a 12-foot depressed ring of scorched earth is discovered on the spot, along with a kerosene smell. Air Force investigators show up and declare it a hoax. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 July–September, The Author, 2000, pp. 74–75, 77–80)

1959, September 9 — The first Atlas-D ICBM is successfully launched at Vandenberg AFB [now Vandenberg Space Force Base] near Lompoc, California, and Gen. Thomas S. Power, CINCSAC, declares the first ICBM to be operational. Shortly afterward, the first operational Atlas-D ICBM squadron goes on alert at Francis E. Warren AFB, west of Cheyenne, Wyoming. It is equipped with six SM-65D Atlas missiles based in above-ground launchers. (Wikipedia, "Vandenberg Space Force Base"; Wikipedia, "SM-65 Atlas")

1959, September 13 — 9:58 p.m. A radar target is tracked at Kirtland AFB in Albuquerque, New Mexico, moving at 2,300 mph at an altitude of 60,000 feet and heading northwest. A total of four radar stations track the object. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 103)

1959, September 14 — Air Force Regulation 200-2 is revised, with additional emphasis on reducing the number of unknowns. This version devotes five full paragraphs to public release of information, which is now restricted to the Secretary of the Air Force's Office of Information Services at the Pentagon. Local base commanders can release information only if an object is positively identified. Air Force personnel are not to contact private individuals on UFO cases or discuss their operations unless ordered to. ("USAF UFO Program," September 28, 1959; Clark III 920–921, 922; Clark IV 1031, 1033)

1959, September 14 — The CIA emphasizes antiradar study, aerodynamic structural tests, and engineering designs, selecting the Lockheed A-12 over rival Convair's Kingfish. Edward Lovick's suggestion for adding cesium to the A-12's fuel in order to ionize the exhaust and mask it from radar is also persuasive. Lockheed has also added twin canted fins instead of a single right-angle one. Project Oxcart is officially established. The A-12 design, a combination of their A-7 and A-11 submissions, emphasizes low radar cross section, extremely high altitude, and high-speed performance. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed A-12")

1959, September 17 —The first powered X-15 flight is piloted by Albert Scott Crossfield out of the Dryden Flight Research Center at Edwards AFB, California. (Wikipedia, "North American X-15")

1959, September 21 — The Air Technical Intelligence Center is renamed the Aerospace Technical Intelligence Center. (NASIC, "National Air and Space Intelligence Center Heritage")

1959, September 24 — About 4:55 a.m. In Redmond, Oregon, police officer Robert Dickerson sees a bright white light rapidly descending north of the airport. It stops abruptly and hovers about 200 feet above ground for several minutes, lighting up the juniper trees below. Dickerson drives toward it on the Prineville Highway, then turns toward the airport. The object turns reddish-orange and moves rapidly to about 10 miles northeast of the airport to hover again. Dickerson arrives at the airport to report his sighting in person to the FAA Air Traffic Communication Station. Flight Service Specialist Laverne Wertz, Dickerson, and others view the object through binoculars as flat and round with occasional flames extending from its edge. The FAA reports the UFO to Seattle Air Route Control Center in Washington at 5:10 a.m., which in turn reports it to Hamilton AFB [now closed], Novato, California, which scrambles six F-102 jets from Portland to intercept the object. FAA station observers see the object hover and emit long tongues of red, yellow, and green light that extend and retract at irregular intervals. As the jets approach the object from the southeast, it turns into a mushroom shape, emits red and yellow flames from the lower side, and ascends rapidly, disappearing above scattered clouds at about 14,000 feet. The object's departure forces one F-102 to swerve to avoid collision. Another nearly loses control from the UFO's turbulent wake. The UFO is tracked on one F-102 gunsight radar, but the jets cannot intercept. The UFO reappears about 20 miles south of Redmond at about 25,000 feet. The Seattle Center reports at 6:20 a.m. radar contact with the object about 25 miles south. The USAF Air Defense Center radar site at Klamath Falls, Oregon, tracks a large target abruptly changing course and vectors B-47 and F-89 aircraft to identify it. Redmond FAA controllers lose sight of the object. Seattle FAA reports at 7:11 a.m. that Klamath Falls radar still is tracking it at 25 miles south of Redmond but varies in altitude from 6,000 to 52,000 feet. The Air Force claims the UFOs are caused by false radar returns, with excitable witnesses imagining the glow. But locals notice the FAA is checking for abnormal radioactivity, so the Air Force changes its explanation to weather balloon. After NICAP obtains FAA logs showing all the details, the Air Force again changes its explanation to Venus. (NICAP, "Huge Disc Sparks Scramble"; "Recent Sightings," APRO Bulletin, January 1960, p. 3; "Federal Aviation Agency Report Exposes AF Cover-Up," UFO Investigator 1, no. 9 (March 1960): 1–3; "Air Force Contradicts FAA Report," NICAP Special Bulletin, May 1960, p. 2; UFOEv, pp. 44, 48, 113–114, 138; Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, pp. 33–36; Loren E. 1959, September 28 — ATIC issues a staff study by Col. Richard R. Shoop reassessing its UFO investigating role. It recommends that the UFO program be transferred to the Air Research and Development Command, which has better scientific capabilities, and then implement an effective public relations campaign with the goal of "the eventual elimination of the program as a special project." ("USAF UFO Program," September 28, 1959; Jacobs, UFO Controversy in America, Signet ed., p. 151; "Saucer Reading Fest," Saturday Night Uforia, January 25, 2019)

1959, September 29 — Maj. R. O. Braswell, flying an Air Force C-47 at 6,500 feet over Texas, sees a "large red fire" that looks like a mushroom cloud. It is 5° above his plane, with its base at 12,000–15,000 feet and its top at 16,000 feet. (Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, pp. 160–161)

1959, September 29 — The first attempt to hover a tethered Avrocar is made. After the vehicle becomes airborne, an uncontrollable roll and pitch-coupled oscillation starts that forces each of the three wheels into the ground in turn. The pilot, W. D. "Spud" Potocki, immediately shuts down all engines. Changes are made to the stability system to provide more control authority, while new tethers are investigated to improve the ability to control the problem. (Wikipedia, "Avro Canada VZ-9 Avrocar")

1959, September 30 — Night. During a training flight with a student over Poznań, Poland, a pilot named Leszczyński sees two large circles of light with another pair some 12 miles away. He makes a close approach, but one of the objects shoots off while the other grows dimmer. After a short while, the dark object moves away. (Poland 63)

1959, October — NICAP continues collecting statements in preparation for potential congressional hearings. It gets statements from USAF pilot and UFO witness Lt. Col. Richard T. Headrick, Sgt. James H. Sawyer, and Sgt. Oliver Dean. (Keyhoe, FSTS, pp. 252–254; UFOEv, p. 25)

1959, October — 10:00 a.m. Fr. Raimundo Nascimento Teixeira, a professor at Don Bosco College, is walking in the Núcleo Bandeirante region in Brasília, Federal District, Brazil, when he sees a crowd watching a strange object moving and stopping in the blue sky. He sees a student of his with a box camera, and he takes six photos of what he calls a flying saucer. A few days later, Teixeira meets with another witness, Israel Pinheiro, president of the New Building Company, who takes the negatives of his three best photos to forward to the Brazilian Navy for analysis. A few months later, the Navy returns different photos and offers no technical report. (Roberto Affonso Beck, "Um Fenômeno Desafiador," September 2005, pp. 35–36; Clark III 197; Clark IV 233)

1959, October 1 — 9:20 a.m. A radar target moving at 719 mph on a northwest course is tracked at Kirtland AFB in Albuquerque, New Mexico. At 10:29 a.m., another radar target is detected moving at 1,000 mph to the northwest. Its altitude is 41,000 feet. Two F-89J Scorpion fighters are scrambled to intercept it but they can see nothing. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 103–104)

1959, October 2 — 12:20 a.m. For three hours, a Hercules radar site (#13) at McChord AFB [now Joint Base Lewis-McChord] near Tacoma, Washington, tracks a total of five objects that usually appear in pairs. The radar returns are said to be "weak." Visually, at least one soundless, round. "quarter sized," blue-white light is seen in the sky. ARTC reports no air traffic in the area of the radar site during the time of contact. The first object on radar is seen at 10° elevation. The last object seen on radar was at 20° elevation. The visual object is at 10° degrees elevation. When last observed, the visual object is 20° elevation. Flight patterns are erratic. Range changes from 12,000 feet to 24,000 feet, and azimuth from 190° to 170°. Objects seem to fade from the scope and visual contact when finally lost. Visual contact is disrupted by intermittent fog. (NICAP, "Hercules Site Tracks Objects for Three Hours"; Condon, pp. 145–148; Swords 287)

1959, October 6 — 8:15 p.m. Selective Service Lt. Col. L. Liggett and his wife and son watch a round, white-yellow light make several abrupt turns at high speed for 2 minutes from their home in the southeast portion of Lincoln, Nebraska. The object is about the size of a dime at arm's length. (Sparks, p. 281; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 68–69)

1959, October 8 — Night. Two amateur astronomers in Mobile, Alabama, observe an unknown object traverse the Moon's disk from west to east directly over the crater Copernicus. They watch the fast-moving shape "every night the weather permitted for a period of 33 days." They write to Project Moonwatch about the observations, but they reply that no other lunar observers have seen the phenomenon, so it must be closer to the Mobile observers. (Michael D. Swords, "Gazing at the Moons," IUR 32, no. 4 (October 2009): 15)

1959, October 12 — 1:00 p.m. Multiple witnesses at Washington, Sharon, and Crawfordville, Georgia, watch "brown or black footballs" traveling southeast to west, followed by angel hair covering a vast area. The substance consists of "threads from 10′ to 50′ long connected at ¾″ intervals by minute particles resembling snowflakes." The material falls for about 2 hours. Five samples are collected and sent to the Chemicals and Materials Laboratory at Robins AFB, Georgia. No unusual elements are discovered except for high amounts of silver in one and some silver in three others. The conjecture is that "cloud seeding with a silver salt could have caused the phenomenon." (Brian Boldman, "Angel Hair Physical Analyses: A Review," JUFOS 9 (2006): 103–104)

1959, October 13 — In his syndicated column, Joseph Alsop goes so far as to describe "classified intelligence" as placing the Soviet missile count as high as 1,500 by 1963, and the US will have only 130 at that time. (Joseph Alsop, "True Missile Gap Picture Belies Pentagon Response," Eugene (Oreg.) Register-Guard, October 13, 1959, p. 10)

1959, October 22 — Night. Three witnesses are driving through Cumberland, Maryland, when they see a metallic disc emitting a bluish-green light around its edge. The driver abruptly stops, but leaves the car running. Suddenly the object drops down to 50 feet altitude and hovers 100 feet away in front of the car, making a humming vibration. As two of the witnesses open the door to get out, the car engine, lights, and radio fail. Shortly afterward, the disc shoots straight up, then forward, makes a 90° angle, then disappears in clouds. The car begins functioning normally again. (Whitney Bolton, "Looking Sideways," Santa Ana (Calif.) Register, November 5, 1959, p. D2; Schopick, pp. 67–68; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 104–105)

1959, Late October — 6:55 p.m. Electrician Gideon Johansson is at home in Mariannelund, Småland, Sweden, when there is a power failure. He goes outside to look at the power lines when he bumps into his son Rolf, who points out a brilliant white object hovering above a three-story building. The object descends slowly and appears to be heading toward Johansson's garden. The machine oscillates three times and smashes into the top of a maple tree, descends through the branches and hovers about 18 inches above the ground. Only about 10 feet away, Johansson can see the object has a large window, through which two entities are visible. Their heads have high crown and they have big, friendly eyes. They have mall mouths and pointed chins and are wearing white uniforms with broad black belts. One seems to be working at an instrument panel. They are only the size of a 14-year-old. Soon the object moves up and shoots away in a flash. Glassy deposits are found on some power lines in addition to the damaged tree, and Johansson gets prickly pains in his lower body. (Anders Liljegren, "Mariannelund UFO and Occupants," Flying Saucer Review 16, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1970): 14–17)

1959, October 31 — Soviet Col. Georgy Mosolov reaches an airspeed record of 1,484 mph in a Mikoyan-Gurevich MiG-21 over the Soviet Union. (Wikipedia, "Georgy Mosolov")

1959, November — A full-scale mockup of the A-12 is shipped to Area 51 in Nevada for radar signature testing by EG&G. (Peter W. Merlin, "Area 51 Timeline," Secret Heroes, November 10, 2021)

1959, November 2 — 12:00 noon. A substance described as angel hair falls from two UFOs seen in Evora, Portugal, and is collected and analyzed under a microscope by a school director, Dr. Amaral, and later by armed forces technicians and scientists at the University of Lisbon. The scientists conclude that the substance is produced by a small insect or some strange kind of single-celled organism about 4 millimeters in length. (Hayley Price, "Evora Angel Hair," UFO Weekly News; Nicole Guardiola, "An Extraterrestrial Living Being, Captured and Studied Eighteen Years Ago," translated from El País, October 13, 1978)

1959, November 2 — Otto Struve, director of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Green Bank, West Virginia, announces in a lecture at MIT in Cambridge, Massachusetts, that he is certain there billions of planets in the Milky Way that could support intelligent life: "Whether it is human life, we don't know, but I feel sure there is some form of life." ("Believes There Is Form of Life in Outer Space," New Castle (Pa.) News, November 4, 1959, p. 8)

1959, November 3 — Two businessmen driving between Woodlands and Kennington, New Zealand, watch a glowing 40-foot-long object with a balloon-like attachment on the underside hovering just above the trees. As they approach it in their car, it speeds off to the north. ("New Zealand: Businessmen Frightened," Flying Saucer Review 6, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1960): 17–18; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 100)

1959, November 8 — A large, luminous object is seen moving at great speed over Kandahar, Afghanistan, to the northwest. Shortly afterward it explodes with a loud roar in nearby mountains, causing some slight earth tremors. Possible Russian missile test. (Good Above, p. 308)

1959, November 10 — Requests to transfer responsibility for UFO investigations from ATIC to ARDC are sent to Maj. Gen. Charles B. Dougher (ATIC commander), Col. Philip G. Evans (ATIC Deputy for Sciences and Components), and Maj. Gen. James H. Walsh (AF Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence). ("Saucer Reading Fest," Saturday Night Uforia, January 25, 2019)

1959, November 12 — The first completely free flight of an Avrocar takes place. This test proves the nozzle control system unacceptable. (Wikipedia, "Avro Canada VZ-9 Avrocar"; Graff 133–134)

1959, November 16 — 8:00 p.m. Czech Air Force officer Commander Duchoň is driving with another officer named Bezák to a Czechoslovakian airfield [now in the Czech Republic] to supervise night-flying exercises. At about 6 miles from the airfield, the car engine begins to stall. Suddenly they see a light sapphire-colored band moving at high speed at an altitude of 1,600–2,600 feet. It is completely silent. Some minutes later they are able to start the car again. Personnel at the airfield tell them they had seen a flaming ball that rotated, made a 90° turn, and passed over the airfield again. The tower tracks the object on radar at an altitude of 3,000 feet during its second pass. The object is about 500 feet in diameter with a glowing ring around it. ("Saucers and the Iron Curtain: A Report from Czechoslovakia," Flying Saucer Review 6, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1960): 31–32)

1959, November 19 — Otis T. Carr is convicted in federal court of selling unregistered securities to Gurney G. Warnberg, a pilot and railroad man in Yukon, Oklahoma, and fined $5,000. Unable to pay, Carr works off his fine in jail at a dollar a day. ("Trial Is Slated for Otis Carr," Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman, November 1, 1959, p. 28A; "Carr Fined $5,000 for Saucer Deal," Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman, November 20, 1959, pp. 1–2; "Short Shots," Saucers 7, no. 3–4 (Fall/Winter 1959/1960): 28; Clark III 861; Clark IV 948)

1959, December — The new edition of Ruppelt's The Report on Unidentified Flying Objects is published with three new UFO debunking chapters, the last of which is completely different in tone from the rest of the book. He claims there is no Air Force secrecy on UFOs and NICAP is just a bunch of grandstanding nuts. (Michael Hall and Wendy Connors, "The Forgotten Letters of Edward J. Ruppelt," IUR 24, no. 4 (Winter 1999): 20–26, 30, 32; Swords 301; Clark III 1024; Powell, Keyhoe, 281–286; Clark IV 1138)

1959, December — The London UFO Research Organisation is founded by Paul Teugells, Nigel Stephenson, Susanne Stebbing, and Roy Stemman, and begins publishing a monthly magazine, LUFORO Bulletin. (LUFORO Newsletter, no. 1 (December 1959))

1959, December — Project Space Track moves to a new building in Cambridge, Massachusetts, the National Space Surveillance Control Center (NSSCC), which is formally dedicated on February 9, 1960. The NSSCC is part of the Air Force Command and Control Development Division, Air Research and Development Command. Harold O. Curtis of Lincoln Laboratory is the director of the NSSCC. (Wikipedia, "Project Space Track")

1959, December — 5:45 a.m. Larry Jensen is driving to work on US Highway 99 near Proberta, California, when his radio begins making "snapping" noises, and his lights dim. He pulls over to the side of the road and gets out to check his headlights, which he finds are shining feebly. He notices a huge, bright, bluish-green, crescent-shaped object hovering about 60 feet above the road a quarter of a mile behind him. It appears to be 80–90 feet across and 15–20 feet thick. Suddenly and inexplicably, he finds his clothes are soaked and he feels an alarming feeling as if he is getting crushed inside. He also feels as if he is being sucked up into the object. He grabs for a car door, then collides with a side mirror and staggers backward, but manages to get inside. Looking out the right-door window, he sees the UFO a few miles away, heading northeast and climbing at a shallow angle over the Sierra foothills. It vanishes within 10 seconds. Jensen's car lights come back on. He resumes driving, but 600 feet away is forced to stop because he smells burning rubber. The battery caps are blown out, and the battery is swollen out of shape, the generator is not working, and the armature and field wires have melted together. Later, he finds it odd that he has not encountered another single car during or after the episode. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: 1959 October–December, The Author, 2000, pp. 56–59; Clark III 866; Clark IV 961)

1959, December 1 — At a NASA news conference in Washington, D.C., Cal Tech geochemist Harrison Brown suggests that boneless animals similar to jellyfish abound in oceans on Venus. The speculation comes in the wake of the discovery that the planet's atmosphere contains water vapor. ("Scientist Says Jellyfish May Live on Venus," Wilmington (Del.) News Journal, December 2, 1959, p. 29)

1959, December 2 — A bright, circular object is seen in the sky heading southwest over Ghazni, Afghanistan. It disappears after 2 minutes. (Good Above, p. 308)

1959, December 5 — After five flights, testing of the Avrocar is temporarily halted, by which time it has logged 18.5 hours of test time in total. (Wikipedia, "Avro Canada VZ-9 Avrocar")

1959, December 7 — Maj. Gen. James H. Walsh writes to Lt. Gen. Bernard A. Schriever, commander of ARDC, regarding transfer of UFO duties. ("Saucer Reading Fest," Saturday Night Uforia, January 25, 2019)

1959, December 11 — A memo reaches CIA head Allen Dulles's desk recommending the removal of Fidel Castro. He sets the wheels in motion.

1959, December 13 — Early evening. A rocket project officer at Fort Bliss in El Paso, Texas, is out looking at the Moon with binoculars when a lighted object approaches the Moon very slowly in the six o'clock position. Once nearly in line with the lunar edge, it begins a precision journey, skirting the edge until it reaches three o'clock. It then leaves on a straight track directly away. During the observation, the man calls his wife and two neighbors to watch the performance. (Michael D. Swords, "Gazing at the Moons," IUR 32, no. 4 (October 2009): 14–15)

1959, December 15 — USAF Maj. Joseph Rogers attains an airspeed of 1,526 mph in a Convair F-106 Delta Dart at Edwards AFB, California. (Wikipedia, "Convair F-106 Delta Dart")

1959, Late December — 10:00 p.m. Lorentz Johnsen sees a dark, silent object with a row of windows fly slowly by at an altitude of 500 feet, headed in the direction of Namsenfjorden, Trøndelag, Norway. It descends to about 160 feet, grows fiery red, then explodes with a crash and falls into the water. He says that it looks like a cover is torn off in one piece like a "curved sheet of metal." (Ole Jonny Brænne, "Observations of Unidentified Submarine Objects in Norway," IUR 20, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1995): 13)

1959, December 23 — 12:07 a.m. Kenneth Lindsley Jr. is near the intersection of Claribel Road and McHenry Avenue just north of Modesto, California, when he sees a bright orange "bowl-shaped" object descending toward him from about 2,000 feet. It drops to about 20 feet above the road, where it stays for about 2 minutes before ascending again. The object makes another appearance at 12:45 a.m. when he is walking further south near the new McHenry Bowl. Estelle Hendershott also sees a bright, stationary object above Modesto at 12:15 a.m. ("Bright Orange 'Thing in Sky' Calls for Explanation," Modesto (Calif.) Bee, December 24, 1959, p. 1; "Women Report Seeing Bright Object in Sky," Modesto (Calif.) Bee, December 27, 1959, p. C-1; "Bowl-Shaped Object in Central California," APRO Bulletin, January 1960, p. 3)

1959, December 24 — Maj. Gen. Richard E. O'Keefe, acting inspector general of the Air Force, issues instructions pertaining to "UFO business" to every air base commander in the US. The document is not intended for public distribution, but NICAP obtains a copy. Across the top are the words "UFOs Serious Business." It says that UFOs "must be rapidly and accurately identified as serious USAF business in the ZI [Zone of Interior]" and specifies that UFO investigators "should be equipped with binoculars, camera, Geiger counter, magnifying glass and have a source for containers in which to store samples." O'Keefe asks that UFO explanations be "reasonable and knowledgeable." ("AF General Warns UFO's Serious, Will Increase," UFO Investigator 1, no. 9 (March 1960): 1,

1960 — Jim Lorenzen is hired as senior technical associate with the Kitt Peak National Observatory, so he and Coral move to Tucson, Arizona, from Alamogordo, New Mexico. On their third day in Tucson, an "exterminator" visits them, offering to inspect their rented premises for free. He fails to mention the name of his company, nor does he seem interested in his occupation. He talks with Coral about their reason for moving, where Jim is employed, and UFOs. (Lorenzen, Encounters with UFO Occupants, Berkley Medallion, 1976, pp. 3, 251; Clark III 50; Clark IV 68)

1960 — French journalist Louis Pauwels and Russian-French chemical engineer Jacques Bergier publish Le Matin des magiciens, covering a diverse array of topics from alternative history to ufology, Nazi occultism, alchemy, and spiritual philosophy. Heavily influenced by Charles Fort's ideas, the authors' primary aim is to arouse the curiosity of their readership, stating, "Let us repeat that there will be a lot of silliness in our book, but this matters little if the book stirs up a few vocations and, to a certain degree, prepares broader tracks for research." The book's tales of ancient astronauts predate the works of Erich von Däniken on the topic. An instant cult classic with French youth culture, the book is translated into English in 1963 under the title The Dawn of Magic and released in 1964 in the US as The Morning of the Magicians. (Wikipedia, "The Morning of the Magicians"; Louis Pauwels and Jacques Bergier, The Morning of the Magicians, Stein & Day, 1964; Clark III 110; Eghigian, After, p. 178; Clark IV 137)

1960 — Brinsley Le Poer Trench, 8th Earl of Clancarty, publishes The Sky People, in which he claims that Adam and Eve, Noah, and many other characters in the Bible originally lived on Mars. Trench believes that Adam and Eve were experimental creations of extraterrestrials. The biblical description of the Garden of Eden is inconsistent with what Earth is like, and because Mars contains canals, the Garden of Eden must have been located on Mars. He further claims that the north polar ice cap melted on Mars, causing the descendants of Adam and Eve to move to Earth. The Book of Genesis is a symbolic version of what actually happened to groups of people on Mars, he writes, with the Great Deluge referring to the flooding of Atlantis and Lemuria, which were populated with Adamic migrants. (Brinsley Le Poer Trench, The Sky People, Spearman, 1960; Jerome Clark, "Vimanas Have Landed: Ancient Astronautics in Ufology," IUR 22, no. 3 (Fall 1997): 26–27; Clark III 107–108; Clark IV 134–135)

1960 — Contactee George Hunt Williamson legally changes his name to Michel d'Obrenovic, said to reflect an ancestral connection to the throne of Serbia. However, John Griffin says the real reason is that Williamson's sensational claims have rendered his anthropological work (such as it is) completely unacceptable. (Zirger and Martinelli, The Incredible Life of George Hunt Williamson, Verdechiari, 2016, pp. 119–124; Clark III 1287; Clark IV 1470)

1960 — Brazilian lawyer and ufologist José Escobar Faria publishes Discos voadores: Contatos com sêres de outros planétas, in which he analyzes the actions of aliens reported in both UFO and contact cases. He believes there are three types whose actions are tied to their perceived racial features: peaceful beings who are white, hostile beings who are black, and an undifferentiated category of beings only observed from a distance. (José Escobar Faria, Discos voadores: Contatos com sêres de outros planétas, Melhoramentos, 1960; Eghigian, After, p. 150)

1960 — Night. During a pause in army maneuvers near Brno [now in the Czech Republic], soldiers see a peculiarly colored light above the city. After hovering a while, it vanishes but reappears in another part of the sky. Their commanding officer tells them to look at it with binoculars and check the radar. Headquarters sends up interceptors to chase the object, but every time one of them gets near, the light disappears from the radar screen, only to turn up elsewhere. The incident goes on for an hour before the light disappears for good. (Hobana and Weverbergh 90)

1960 — Night. A3C Larry W. Rogers, assigned to the USAF 3926th Air Police Squadron K-9 at Ben Guerir Air Base in Morocco, and five other members of his squadron are on guard at the north end of the base runway shortly after one of the French nuclear tests in the Reggane District of Algeria. They notice a group of small, glowing objects hovering above the Atlas Mountains to the southeast. After calling the observation in to their command post, they see 4–5 fighter jets launched from Zaragoza Air Base in Spain streaking toward the lights. As they approach, the lights suddenly begin moving around erratically, making sharp-angled turns and full circles. The encounter lasts 45 minutes, after which the jets return to Spain. The K-9 squadron is taken to headquarters for a debriefing, and Rogers is ordered to sign a non-disclosure statement. (Robert Hastings, "UFOs Observed by U.S. Air Force Security Guards during French Atomic Testing in Algeria," UFOs & Nukes blog, February 7, 2013)

1960 — The invention of transponders that transmit an electronic identification signal from aircraft to ground control helps to further reduce clutter on air traffic control radars. This means that "aerial phenomena" appear on radar only if they intrude on flight paths and create a near miss of the type investigated by the Civil Aviation Authority. (David Clarke, "Gremlins and Black Projects," Fortean Times 291 (August 2012): 26–27; National Air Traffic Controllers Association, A History of Air Traffic Control, 2019)

Early 1960 — Night. Vice Chief of Air Staff Gen. Curtis LeMay is conducting an exercise to test his bombers' capability to penetrate US air space. An F-89J Scorpion jet instructor pilot and his radar observer, 1Lt. Joe Meyer, have just successfully intercepted a B-47 and are descending to land at James Connally AFB [now TSTC Waco Airport] near Waco, Texas. They notice a pinpoint of light at their level 12 miles away over Waco and decide to approach and attack it as if they are armed. As they approach on a collision course, they see the object has four bright blue-white lights on it and it is stationary. They estimate it is 25–30 feet in diameter. But the object shoots straight up at incredible speed before they reach it. They look up and see the object is bright blue white on its underside. It disappears at about 90,000 feet altitude. ("Pilot Finally Reveals UFO Encounter," MUFON UFO Journal, no. 375 (July 1999): 17)

1960 or 1961 — A woman and her father are driving along State Highway 2 near Point Pleasant, West Virginia, when a human-like figure appears in the road in front of them. She slows down and sees that it is gray and large. A pair of huge wings unfolds from its back and it takes off straight up and disappears in seconds. (John Keel, The Mothman Prophecies, Saturday Review, Tor ed., 2001, pp. 33–34; Clark III 779; Clark IV 860)

1960, January — The first issue of the Australian Flying Saucer Review is published jointly by the Victorian Flying Saucer Research Society and UFOIC, edited by Peter E. Norris and Andrew P. Tomas. It will continue until December 1972, various issues confusingly sponsored by each group. The renamed Victorian UFO Research Society begins publishing its own Victorian edition in May 1964. UFOIC publishes 3 issues of its own New South Wales edition (June 1965, November 1966, and December 1969). (Australian Flying Saucer Review 1, no. 1 (January 1960); Clark IV 1270)

1960, January — Tests continue with a slightly modified Avrocar. (Wikipedia, "Avro Canada VZ-9 Avrocar")

1960, January 18 — 11:00 a.m. Lorna Nelson, wife of the Rev. Robert A. Nelson, Methodist minister at Kollupitiya, Colombo, Sri Lanka, is at Devon Cottage in Nuwara Eliya when she sees a cigar-shaped object flying high in the sky. The object is moving toward the east and descending in a cloudless sky. At arm's length the object measures about 4 inches. Mrs. Nelson watches it for about 4 minutes and then rushes into the house for her binoculars. When she returns, the object is lower in the sky about the hills in the east. Two other people with her also witness the object. ("Ceylon: Cigar Shape," Flying Saucer Review 6, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1960): 22)

1960, January 18 — 10:45 p.m. Leo Haley and Bert C. Baker are driving on US Highway 2, some 9 miles west of Lakota, North Dakota, when the headlights dim just as a brilliant green flash lights up the sky. In a field to the north about 1 mile away they can see a 5–6 foot crescent-shaped object with a 9-foot exhaust tail. ("Report Seeing Bright Object Fall in Field," Grand Forks (N.Dak.) Herald, January 21, 1960, p. 5; UFOEv, p. 75; Schopick, p. 69)

1960, January 26 — Richard Bissell notifies Kelly Johnson that the CIA is authorizing the delivery of 12 A-12 aircraft that will be five times faster than the U-2 and fly three miles higher. Skunk Works will move into production at Area 51 in Nevada to work on Project Oxcart. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed A-12"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 134–135)

1960, January 30 — Two Argentine Navy patrol ships allegedly detect two unknown underwater objects by sonar in the Golfo Nuevo, Chubut, Argentina. One object is lying on the seabed and the other is circling it. Two anti-submarine ships are summoned, and they drop depth charges. Both objects surface and race toward the entrance of the bay, with the Argentine ships firing on them. They dived back underwater, and the naval sonar detects four objects, then six. As they approach the anti-submarine nets at the entrance of the bay, some kind of explosion dismantles the ships' sonar systems. (Nikolai Nepomniaschii, Iz Sekretnikh Arkhivov Razvedok Mira [From the Secret Archives of the World Intelligence Services], 1998); Vladimir G. Azhazha and Evgeny P. Litvinov, Подводные НЛО: Загадочные места мира [Underwater UFOs], 2015; Dolan, USO1, 210–211)

1960, February — The US Navy reportedly detects a "dark satellite" thought to be a Soviet spy satellite in orbit. However, a follow-up article alleges that the object was "the remains of an Air Force Discoverer VIII satellite that had gone astray." ("Trackers Spot Mystery Object Orbiting Earth," Washington (D.C.) Evening Star, February 11, 1960; Wikipedia, "Corona (satellite)")

1960, February 5 — The office of the AF Chief of Intelligence is informed of ARDC's rejection (by Maj. Gen. James Ferguson) of the ATIC proposal. ("Saucer Reading Fest," Saturday Night Uforia, January 25, 2019)

1960, February 5 — 11:15 p.m. Many people see a distinctly round UFO hover and maneuver slowly over or near the intersection of Sunset Boulevard and La Brea Avenue in Hollywood, California. Cars are stopped bumper-to-bumper, according to employees of several businesses around the intersection, with people gaping at the object overhead. Persons on hotel and apartment rooftops go out to see a bright "cherry-red, circular light." Two service-station attendants at the intersection, Jerry Darr and Charles Walker, say that "hundreds of people saw it—everybody was looking" as the light hovers for at least 5 minutes over a busy drive-in. Pen Meyer, another service station attendant a third of a mile to the north, watches it hovering for about 10 minutes. Harold Sherman, his wife, and two others watch it as it resumes motion very slowly eastward. After proceeding east for a distance of a block or two, it veers southeastward and passes out of sight. No sound is heard over street-noise background. (Los Angeles NICAP Subcommittee case files; James E. McDonald, "Statement on Unidentified Flying Objects," in Symposium on Unidentified Flying Objects, Hearings, US House Committee on Science and Astronautics, 90th Cong., 2nd Sess., July 29, 1968, pp. 54–57)

1960, February 6 — 11:15 p.m. The red object reappears over Hollywood, California, this time about one block further east, above Sunset Boulevard and Sycamore Avenue. A number of witnesses observe it hovering for about 10 minutes at an altitude of 500–600 feet. Then with a loud explosion it emits a brilliant bluish-white flash that extends downward and to the west, lighting up the ground all around La Brea Avenue. A mushroom-shaped cloud appears and dissipates. As the red light is extinguished, an object described by most witnesses as long, tubular, and about 70 feet long shoots upwards. A few seconds later, the red light appears about 1,000 feet above Sunset and La Brea for about 8 minutes. It then begins drifting slowly eastward, turns sharply toward the north-northeast, accelerates and climbs steeply, not stopping again until it is at a very high altitude well to the north. (Los Angeles NICAP Subcommittee case file; James E. McDonald, "Statement on Unidentified Flying Objects," in Symposium on Unidentified Flying Objects, Hearings, US House Committee on Science and Astronautics, 90th Cong., 2nd Sess., July 29, 1968, pp. 54–57)

1960, February 14 — 4:40 p.m. A silver, cigar-shaped object streaks across the sky over Nome, Alaska, following a curved flight path. ("Probe Mystery Flying Object," Fairbanks (Alaska) Daily News-Miner, February 16, 1960, p. 1; "Second Alaska Sighting in Three Weeks," APRO Bulletin, March 1960, p. 2; "Other Recent Sightings," UFO Investigator 1, no. 9 (March 1960): 8; UFOEv, p. 138)

1960, February 16 — 9:15 a.m. Retired industrial chemist Earl T. Ross sees an oval, light-colored object moving steadily toward the east from his home in Laguna Beach, California. Two seconds later, a similar object, wobbling on its axis, approaches and overtakes the first from a position lower in the sky, taking up a steady position behind and to the right of the first. Both objects move toward the hills on the horizon in about 8–10 seconds. (UFOEv, pp. 67–68)

1960, February 17 — Hynek writes to Brig. Gen. Benjamin G. Holzman at ARDC in the hopes of interesting him in assessing UFO reports. ("Saucer Reading Fest," Saturday Night Uforia, January 25, 2019)

1960, February 22 — 5:30 p.m. Five people see a formation of circular, whitish UFOs that make a loud noise as they speed overhead at Sarnia, Ontario. Canadian National Railway employees say the objects are definitely not helicopters. One witness describes the sound they make as "whirling dynamos." They move in formation on two levels, each projecting a beam of light toward the ground. ("Other Recent Sightings," UFO Investigator 1, no. 9 (March 1960): 8)

1960, February 27 —NICAP sends photocopies of O'Keefe's 1959 "UFOs Serious Business" memo to the media and to committees in the House and Senate, calling for congressional hearings. NICAP Board member Rear Adm. Roscoe Hillenkoetter adds a statement: "Behind the scenes, high-ranking AF officers are soberly concerned about the UFOs. But through official secrecy [AFR 200-2] and ridicule, many citizens are led to believe the unknown flying objects are nonsense." NICAP board member Albert Baller writes: "If the UFOs are believed a threat, it would seem incumbent on the armed forces to waste no time in alerting the people. Any sudden, hostile act against a nation left in relative ignorance could have serious consequences." ("UFO Warning Issued: Flying Objects 'Now Serious Business,'" Lincoln (Nebr.) Journal Star, February 27, 1960, p. 1; "Air Force Order on 'Saucers' Cited," New York Times, February 28, 1960, p. 30; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1960, The Author, 2003, p. 37)

1960, March — The Ottawa Flying Saucer Club begins publishing Topside, edited by Wilbert B. Smith until 1962. It continues until winter 1971. (Topside, no. 1 (March 1960))

1960, March — Col. Philip G. Evans, ATIC deputy for science and components, writes to the ATIC commander, Maj. Gen. Charles B. Dougher, suggesting a transfer of the Project Blue Book responsibilities to the Secretary of the Air Force's Office of Information. Consultant A. Francis Arcier concurs, but the office wants no part of it. (Jacobs, The UFO Controversy in America, Indiana University, 1975, p. 171; Clark III 922; Clark IV 1032)

1960, Early March? — Some Athabaskan-speaking First Nations scouts report to the mounted police that a flying saucer has crashed in heavy forest along the Fraser River near Agassiz, British Columbia. They refer to the object as a

"sasquatch ship," and it is said to be circular, about 600 feet in diameter, and made of white metal. The scouts say that it glows at night. ("Canada: Athabasca Sasquatch Ship," Flying Saucer Review 6, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1960): 22; Carl Feindt, "Report #264," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 211–213)

1960, March 4 — 5:55 p.m. Charles R. Morris and his wife, while watching his flying students perform aerobatics in Dubuque, Iowa, observe three elliptical UFOs moving in a line, glowing blue-white, and arcing from the southeast to the northeast. Morris runs inside to retrieve his camera, but his 8 mm Kodachrome film fails to capture them. The objects travel across an arc of about 135° over four minutes before disappearing while climbing slightly. NICAP member Alexander D. Mebane interviews Morris a few days later, confirming additional details. The UFOs, at their largest, appear to be about one-eighth the apparent size of the moon, produce no sound, and leave no trails. The third object occasionally lags behind. The Air Force interrogates Morris and informs him that no aircraft were scheduled in the area. He checks with Cedar Rapids Air Traffic Control, which confirms the same. (Sparks, p. 283; "Iowan Photographs 3 Flying Objects," Council Bluffs (Iowa) Daily Nonpareil, March 6, 1960, p. 4C; UFOEv, p. 40; Kevin D. Randle, "UFOs Caught by the Movie Camera," Official UFO, Fall 1976, p. 72)

1960, March 6 — 5:15–5:27 a.m. Photographer Esse Jansson of Norrtälje, Sweden, goes out early in the morning to try to take a photo of an unidentified satellite, termed 1960 Alpha [however, the designation of 1960 Alpha 1 is reserved for the Pioneer 5 space probe, which isn't launched until March 11], "which was expected to pass the Stockholm latitude in a southerly direction about 0525 hours." He sees two objects that come from the north and move in a southeasterly direction. They are similar to phenomena he has seen before, but these objects reverse direction completely. One of his plates shows a third object. The CIA takes note of this and another mystery satellite viewed by a Swedish airplane and reported in Dagens Nyheter, March 8. ([Light in the Sky New Satellite, Experts Believe], Dagens Nyheter (Stockholm), March 10, 1960; Central Intelligence Agency, "UFO's Sighted, Photographed in Sweden; Unidentified Satellite Seen," FDD Note 1107, March 17, 1960; E. Jensen, "Lidt Rapportnyt fra Sverige," UFO-Nyt, June 1961, p. 112; "Weltrundschau," Weltraumbote, no. 60/61 (1961): 19–20; ClearIntent, p. 138)

1960, March 8 — Holzman forwards Hynek's letter up the chain of command. ("Saucer Reading Fest," Saturday Night Uforia, January 25, 2019)

1960, March 17 — President Eisenhower signs off on a CIA paper titled "A Program of Covert Action against the Castro Regime." The order gives the agency authorization to create an organization of exiled Cubans to manage opposition programs, begin a propaganda offensive to draw support for the movement, create an intelligence gathering network inside Cuba, and develop a paramilitary force to be introduced into Cuba to organize, train, and lead resistance groups against the Castro regime. Its budget is $4.4 million. Under the Cuban Project and under the direction of CIA Directorate for Plans Richard M. Bissell, MKUltra's Sidney Gottlieb proposes spraying Fidel Castro's television studio with LSD and saturating his shoes with thallium to make his beard fall out. Gottlieb also hatches schemes to assassinate Castro, including the use of a poisoned cigar, a poisoned wetsuit, an exploding conch shell, and a poisonous fountain pen. (Wikipedia, "Sidney Gottlieb"; Kris Hollington, Wolves, Jackals, and Foxes: The Assassins Who Changed History, St. Martin's, 2008; Wikipedia, "Operation Mongoose")

1960, March 24 — Two policemen are in the vicinity of Lambert–St. Louis International Airport in Missouri, one on the north side, the other on the south side. A bright light illuminates the entire area. Three objects in a V-formation whisk overhead. They are round, white, and 9 feet in diameter. (Swords 293)

1960, April 8 — Project Ozma, the first SETI experiment set up only a few days earlier by Frank Drake at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Green Bank, West Virginia, seems to hit paydirt. As he slews his 85-foot radio antenna off Tau Ceti and onto Epsilon Eridani, Drake is greeted with a strong, periodic, pulsed signal on 1420 MHz, the hyperfine transition emission line of interstellar hydrogen atoms proposed for SETI by Giuseppe Cocconi and Philip Morrison, and still favored as a promising hailing frequency for interstellar communications. Drake is ready with a second, low-gain antenna. The pulses are there as well, sadly disproving their extraterrestrial origin. But they are not exactly terrestrial interference, either. The rate at which the phantom signal traverses the sky suggests that it is emanating from an aircraft cruising at unprecedented altitude—perhaps 80,000 feet. At the time, no known aircraft can reach the stratosphere. Such an aircraft, as it happens, doesn't "come into existence" until the following month, when Francis Gary Powers is shot down over the Soviet Union. (Drake wisely decides to withhold publication of this positive result, so he never does receive proper credit for "discovering" the U-2.) The project only lasts through July. (Wikipedia, "Project Ozma"; H. Paul Shuch, "Project Ozma: The Birth of Observational SETI," in Searching for Extraterrestrial Intelligence, Springer, 2011, pp. 13–18; Seth Shostak, "Project Ozma," SETI Institute, July 2021; Graff 159–166)

1960, April 9 — The U-2 spy plane piloted by Francis Gary Powers crosses into the Soviet Union from Pakistan and flies over the Semipalatinsk Test Site in Kazakhstan; the Dolon Air Base in Semey, Kazakhstan; a SAM test site near Saryshagan, Kazakhstan; and the Baikonur Cosmodrome near Tyuratam, Kazakhstan. The plane is detected by Soviet Air Defense Forces but avoids intercepts by a MiG-19 and a Su-9. Powers lands at an Iranian airstrip at Zahedan. A 1994 CIA monograph by Gerald K. Haines, "CIA's Role in the Study of UFOs, 1947–90," claims that "According to later estimates from CIA officials who worked on the U-2 project and the Oxcart (SR-71, or Blackbird) project, over half of all UFO reports from the late 1950s through the 1960s were accounted for by manned reconnaissance flights (namely the U-2) over the United States." (Wikipedia, "1960 U-2 incident"; Gerald K. Haines, "CIA's Role in the Study of UFOs, 1947–90," Studies in Intelligence 40, no. 5 (1997): 67–84)

1960, April 25 — 9:00 p.m. Former town selectman Arnold W. Spencer watches a bright cigar-shaped object, "dark scarlet as the deepest red in a rainbow," hovering above Plymouth, New Hampshire. It is hanging low in the eastern sky, with vertical bands of pulsating light visible along its length. After 25 seconds, the UFO suddenly moves off silently toward the south at high speed, illuminating the branches of trees as it passes. (UFOEv, p. 68)

1960, April 30 — George Adamski appears on Long John Nebel's late-night TV show on WOR. ("Final Years," The Adamski Case, June 11, 2009; ("Long John Nebel, The Flying Saucer Story (George Adamski interview)," ThriftStoreVinyl YouTube channel, September 4, 2018)

1960, May — The CIA begins to recruit anti-Castro Cuban exiles in the Miami, Florida, area. Infantry training is carried out at a CIA-run base that is code-named JM Trax near Retalhuleu in the Sierra Madre mountains of Guatemala. (Wikipedia, "Brigade 2506")

1960, May — Keyhoe publishes Flying Saucers: Top Secret, again criticizing the Air Force for its censorship of credible UFO sightings. (Powell, Keyhoe, 289)

1960, May 1 — 6:26 a.m. A US U-2 spy plane, flown by CIA pilot Francis Gary Powers, takes off from Peshawar, Pakistan, and performs photographic aerial reconnaissance over Baikonur, Kazakhstan, and Chelyabinsk, Russia. Powers has orders to continue across Siberia to get a look at the new Plesetsk Cosmodrome, but at 8:53 a.m. local time he is hit by an S-75 Dvina (SA-2 Guideline) surface-to-air missile fired by a defense battalion near Kyshtym, Russia. The U-2 crashes near Sverdlovsk [now Yekaterinburg]. The Soviet Air Defense Forces have anticipated the flight and give orders to "attack the violator." Powers parachutes safely and is captured. This is the first time in five years of overflights that the US is caught. (Wikipedia, "1960 U-2 incident")

1960, May 4 — 9:15 a.m. An architect in Sarasota, Florida, sees a yellow, elliptical object with four evenly spaced, square windows. (UFOEv, p. 147)

1960, May 5 — NASA issues a press release saying a weather research aircraft has "gone missing" north of Turkey and speculates that the pilot has fallen unconscious and the plane has crashed. Under the impression that the pilot has died and that the plane has been destroyed, a U-2 plane is quickly painted in NASA colors and a photo is shown to the media at NASA Flight Research Center [now the Armstrong Flight Research Center] at Edwards Air Force Base in California. Premier Nikita Khrushchev announces the shoot-down to the Soviet parliament but does not reveal yet that the pilot has survived. (NASA, "U-2," September 4, 1997)

1960, May 7 — Khrushchev now reveals to the Soviet parliament that Powers is alive and much of the U-2 technologies have survived the crash.

1960, May 9 — Director of Central Intelligence Allen Dulles tells Congress that all U-2 flights are used for aerial espionage and are flown pursuant to "presidential directives."

1960, May 10 — House Appropriations Chair Clarence Cannon (D-Mo.) reveals to the press that the U-2 is a CIA plane engaged in aerial espionage over the Soviet Union "under the aegis" of the president. The press begins to suggest that Eisenhower has lost control of the intelligence agencies. (Wikipedia, "1960 U-2 incident")

1960, May 13 — 7:00 p.m. More than 100 people at Paracuru, Ceará, Brazil, watch a disc-shaped UFO. Flying about 600 feet in the air at low speed, the silent object maneuvers over the downtown area or a long time. About 60 feet in diameter, it hovers at an angle by a church. A strong bluish light is on top of it. The same day, 20 cities and towns in Céara state, four in Rio Grande do Norte, three in Pernambuco, two in Paraíba, two in Bahia, and one each in the states of Piauí and Maranhão report UFO sightings. (Olavo Fontes, "Orthoteny in Brazil, Part II," APRO Bulletin, September 1960, p. 5; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 220–221; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1960, The Author, 2003, pp. 92–93)

1960, May 14 — 4:00 a.m. Fisherman Raimundo Ursulino dos Santos sees two metallic discs landed on a sandy hill by the beach at Paracuru, Ceará, Brazil. As he approaches, he sees two humanlike beings outside, talking to each other. They are small and pallid. One is dressed in a blue suit with a helmet. Dos Santos turns and runs away. Marks in the sand are found later. (Olavo Fontes, "Orthoteny in Brazil, Part II," APRO Bulletin, September 1960,

p. 5; Lorenzen, FSHoax, p. 200; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1960, The Author, 2003, p. 93; Patrick Gross, URECAT, September 29, 2007)

1960, May 19 — A silver-colored round object, 20–25 feet wide with hanging appendages, hovers 50–100 feet away from Indigenous observers in the village of Ekuk, Alaska, south of Dillingham. It barely clears electric wires 12 feet above the ground. It sucks up two empty five-gallon trashcans and drags them swirling along the ground. It flies between two houses and crosses to the other side of a ridge for 100 yards, drops the trashcans and sucks up some swirling grass, makes a loud sucking sound, then ascends rapidly. Thomas M. Conrow, chief of intelligence at a nearby Air Force Base, interviews the witnesses and concludes that "there still appears to be no logical explanation of the sighting." At Wright Patterson AFB, Blue Book analysts classify it as a "weather balloon with a radar reflector," even though it is traveling against the wind. (Sparks, p. 284; Hynek UFO Report, pp. 146–149; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1960, The Author, 2003, pp. 99–101; Clark III 920; Clark IV 1030–1031)

1960, May 22 — 9:33 a.m. An observatory on Majorca, Balearic Islands, Spain, sees a white, triangular object one-quarter the size of the moon spinning on its own axis and maintaining a steady course. It cables a report to NASA in Washington, D.C. (UFOEv, p. 123)

1960, May 28 — Engineer Ronald N. Bracewell, suggests that extraterrestrials may already be in our neighborhood through an autonomous interstellar space probe (now called a "Bracewell probe") sent for the express purpose of communicating with alien civilizations. (Ronald N. Bracewell, "Communications from Superior Galactic Communities," Nature 186 (1960): 670–671)

1960, May 28–29 — Some 2,000 UFO buffs attend the annual convention in Giant Rock, California, which features George Van Tassel, Truman Bethurum, Orfeo Angelucci, and Daniel Fry. Attending for the first time is James W. Moseley, who writes up a summary of his experiences there. (James W. Moseley, "Report on the Giant Rock Convention," Saucer News 7, no. 3 (September 1960): 1, 3–9; Clark III 532; Clark IV 582)

1960, Summer — 2:00 a.m. Two brothers are alerted by their journalist relative about an elusive UFO that local police in Walkerton, Ontario, have been pursuing for about an hour. They drive out along country roads until they get within 300 feet of the object, which is hovering around a large tree. The object is circular and apparently about 3 feet in diameter. It is very bright and changes color repeated. It then circles the tree purposefully for several minutes. The brothers climb a fence and approach it, but the UFO suddenly accelerates and disappears to the south. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 54–56)

1960, June 1 — Bulkley Griffin, chief of the Worcester (Mass.) Evening Gazette's Washington, D.C., Bureau, writes a well-reasoned story about the Air Force's unilateral control of UFO information and its national security implications. He quotes Adm. Hillenkoetter's opinion that UFOs are intelligently controlled and are neither US nor USSR devices, which is why he is pushing for a Congressional investigation. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1960, The Author, 2003, pp. 111–112)

1960, June 3 — Physicist Freeman Dyson in Princeton, New Jersey, writes a speculative paper on "The Search for Artificial Stellar Sources of Infrared Radiation" in which he discusses how an advanced civilization might be visible from Earth. He suggests that the logical endpoint of the drive to capture as much energy from a sun would be for engineers to completely enclose it in a hollow sphere. Once the builders have completed it, the only light visible from their star would be the muted infrared glow of radiation heat. Such a structure, which becomes known as a "Dyson sphere," would be a sure sign of an advanced race. (Wikipedia, "Dyson sphere"; Freeman J. Dyson, "Search for Artificial Stellar Sources of Infrared Radiation," Science 131 (1960): 1667–1668; Graff 234–235)

1960, June 12 — 3:00 or 4:00 p.m. Following a sonic boom above Quebec, a fiery object falls from the sky from an altitude of 1,000–2,000 feet and splits into two pieces that fall into the St. Lawrence River near Les Écureuils, about 20 miles upriver from Quebec City, Quebec. A beachcomber runs across the pieces, one closer to the shore and visible at low tide, the other one further out and mostly submerged. He retrieves a smaller piece (800 pounds) and sells it to a scrap-metal dealer, who fails to recognize it as ferrous and possibly ships it to Japan. The other piece is picked up by the Canadian Armament Research and Development Establishment [now DRDC Valcartier] near Quebec City. Wilbert Smith's Ottawa Flying Saucer Club [later the Ottawa New Sciences Club] tells its members that the material is high-strength metal that is 6 feet in diameter and 2 feet thick at the center with an embedded tube, an "electronic potting can," and a transistor. CARDE's analysis is said to have revealed an alloy with a high manganese content, although it was identified as the "normal product of a foundry, consisting of slag with semi-molten scrap embedded in it," likely coming from Sorel Iron Foundries in Sorel, Quebec. Smith rejects those findings and conducts his own tests (although he is an electrical engineer and not a metallurgist) on a chunk the club retrieves from the river around July 1, supposedly engaging in a "tremendous amount of detective work on this metal." In November 1961, Smith tells Ohio UFO researchers C. W. Fitch and George Popovitch: "We are speculating that what we have is a portion of a very large device which came into this solar system…we don't know when…but it had been in space a long time before it came to Earth; we can tell by the micrometeorites embedded in the surface. But we don't know whether it was a few years ago—or a few hundred years ago." In June 1968, the Colorado project's Roy Craig is in Ottawa and offers to examine the club's chunk of metal because they had offered it to project director Edward Condon a year earlier. Craig obligingly takes a piece with him but does not analyze it since there is no connection to a UFO and it looks like foundry slag anyway. Later, the Montreal UFO Society's Ronald Anstee has a piece of it analyzed by an independent metallurgist, who finds that the composition "does not correspond to any known commercial manganese steel." In September 1967, Eric Smith of the Canada Department of Energy, Mines, and Resources visits the Ottawa club and examines their large artifact, but fails to report back. In 1969, the National Research Council's Peter Millman takes a look and is convinced that it is ordinary manganese steel from the Sorel plant. 1960, June 21 — NICAP sends a confidential report to the US Congress on "Dangers of Secrecy on UFOs (Unidentified Flying Objects) and Digest of Documented Evidence" urging legislators to go on the record about the reality of UFOs. (Donald E. Keyhoe, "Confidential NICAP Report to Congress: Dangers of Secrecy on UFOs (Unidentified Flying Objects) and Digest of Documented Evidence," June 21, 1960)

1960, June 22 — 6:20 p.m. John Person is setting up camp at Clan Lake, Northwest Territories, on a prospecting expedition and is waiting for his partner. He hears a noise like an aircraft approaching and something bounces on the ground and hits the surface of the lake about 1,700 feet behind him. Person sees an object 4–6 feet wide with arms or spokes is rotating rapidly in the water, but gradually slows down and stops spinning. When his partner arrives, they get into a canoe and travel to the impact area. They find an area of burned grass and another area where grass it cut up in small pieces. They use a pole to probe the lake bottom and find a channel that is one foot deeper at one end and three feet deeper at the other, RCMP Cpl. Matheson flies to the lake in a seaplane on July 19 and August 15 and finds the impact area as Person has described but no submerged object. 1960, June 25 — 11:34 p.m. The US Air Force's Ocean Range Vessel Coastal Crusader is near Ascension Island in the South Atlantic Ocean retrieving a floating data box from a missile launch at Cape Canaveral, Florida. The crew of the small boat launched to recover the box sees a steady bright glow, apparently rotating, about 300 feet away on the surface. It is visible for 10 seconds. The pilot and copilot of one of the two planes circling above the recovery operation also see the glow. Blue Book explains it as a flare, although none of the planes have released flares. (Antonio F. Rullán, "Blue Book UFO Reports at Sea by Ships: Analysis of the Blue Book Ship Database," December 10, 2002, p. 41; Dolan, USO1, 213–214)

1960, July — Members of the US Senate Preparedness Committee and the House Science and Astronautics Committee, as well as the CIA, ask for hearings on USAF's handling of UFOs. (Clark III 922)

1960, July 1 — 10:30 a.m. Four witnesses at the Leefe Mine in Lincoln County, Wyoming, see a shiny disc move in from the south and hover above a slag heap. It has a diameter of at least 185 feet and is 14 feet thick. Five transparent bubbles are visible on the bottom as it rocks gently before moving off to the south at high speed. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 221)

1960, July 2 — Early morning. A couple driving in the vicinity of Kankakee, Illinois, see the landscape light up with a bright blue light as a ball of fire approaches out of the south. It passes above their car dragging a trail of bluish light behind it. The inside of the car heats up uncomfortably, waking up their daughter and her husband who are asleep in the back. The light gradually fades and disappears in the north. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 221–223)

1960, July 3 — 4:30 p.m. Argentine Air Force Capt. Hugo F. Niotti is driving north near Villa General Belgrano, Córdoba, Argentina, when he notices a dark object hovering to the right of the road. He stops his car, grabs his camera, and takes a photo of the object, which is moving slowly over a field. As he is winding the film to take another shot, the object accelerates and disappears into the clouds. The photo shows a conical object low above the ground, as well as a horse whose attention is attracted to the object. Analysis shows that the object is about 23 feet high, 20 feet in diameter, and 56 feet above the ground. (Guillermo C. Roncoroni and Gustavo J. Alvarez, "Foto de OVNI Avalada por la Fuerza Aerea Argentina," UFO Press 1, no. 3 (April 1977): 32–38; "Cone-Shaped UFO Photographed in Argentina," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 1, no. 8 (December 1980): 1; Johannes Koch, "Correspondence," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 2, no. 2 (February 1981): 2; Willy Smith, "The Yacanto, Cordoba, Argentina, Photograph, 07-03-1960," UFO Casebook; Willy Smith, "UFOs in Latin America," UFOs 1947–1987, Fortean Tomes, 1987, pp. 104–106)

1960, July 6 — Responding to NICAP's "Dangers of Secrecy on UFOs" report, Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) states that he has ordered the staff of the Senate Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee to keep a close watch on UFO developments. ("NICAP UFO Report: Extension of Remarks of Hon. Leonard G. Wolf of Iowa in the House of Representatives, Wednesday, August 31, 1960," Congressional Record, Proceedings and Debates of the 86th Congress, Second Session, vol. 106, Part 14, pp. 18955–18956)

1960, July 11–15 — The Air Force gives major briefings on UFOs for congressional staffers: Chief Counsel Robert Smart (House Committee on Armed Services); Spencer Beresford, Richard Hines, and Frank Hammill (House Science and Astronautics Committee). Charles S. Sheldon II, technical director of the House Science and Astronautics Committee, is also present. The USAF reps are Robert Friend, Lawrence J. Tacker, Hynek, and Maj. Gen. Arno H. Luehman. CIA officers Richard Payne and John S. Warner are possibly there as well. The staffers are skeptical; Smart accuses the Air Force of withholding information and wants to be kept informed of sightings and investigations. ([documents], "11–15 July 1960, Congressional Briefings (Mr. R. Smart)," USAF Historical Archives; Jacobs, UFO Controversy in America, Signet ed., 1976, pp. 156–159; Marcia S. 1960, July 13 — The Air Force gives a preliminary briefing to associate counsel Stuart French, staff member of the Senate Preparedness Committee, who wants to know about USAF explanations for the Washington National Airport and Levelland cases. (Jacobs, UFO Controversy in America, Signet ed., 1976, p. 156)

1960, July 15 — 7:15 p.m. Above the Wewak area at the Maralinga nuclear test site in South Australia, during a static balloon test, a police constable sees a light in the sky and suspects one of the balloons has caught fire. The object grows larger and turns red. None of the balloons report and damage. ("Unidentified Light, Wewak Area," July 24, 1960; Coulthart 2023, pp. 45–46)

1960, July 24 — 8:45 p.m. While State Policeman Fred Porcello is playing in the yard with his children in Portville, New York, his youngest son Fred Jr., 7, points out two lights in the sky. Porcello looks and sees two glowing reddish objects moving toward them in the southern sky. When not glowing, they appear to be dumbbell-shaped, silvery, and metallic. They change course to the north-northwest, then stop and hover, followed by a sharp right turn to the east. Then they swing back toward the south and move out of sight. The objects are visible 4–5 minutes. (UFOEv, p. 64)

1960, July 26 — Lt. Col. Lawrence J. Tacker writes to Stringfield that "There is absolutely no truth in the charge that the Air Force or any other governmental agency is withholding information on the subject of UFOs from the general public." (Stringfield, Situation Red, Fawcett Crest, 1977, p. 167)

1960, August — The US severs diplomatic relations with the Dominican Republic. The CIA's Special Group decides to arm Dominicans in hopes of an assassination of generalissimo Rafael Trujillo. The CIA disperses three rifles and three .38 revolvers, but things pause in 1961 as John F. Kennedy assumes office.

1960, August 9 — Contactee Gabriel Green announces his candidacy for the presidency of the United States at a press conference at the Los Angeles Biltmore Hotel. He publishes his Space Age Platform at the second meeting of his Amalgamated Flying Saucer Clubs of America convention in the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles, California, on August 13–14, but soon drops out and lends his support to John F. Kennedy. (Wikipedia, "Gabriel Green"; Jack Smith, "Flying Saucer Man Runs for President," Los Angeles Times, August 10, 1960, p. III-2; "Whittier 'Flying Saucer' Candidate Opposes Nixon," *Pomona (Calif.) 1960, August 10 — The Discoverer 13 Corona KH-1 photoreconnaissance satellite is launched from Vandenberg AFB [now Vandenberg Space Force Base], California. The primary goal of this series of satellites is to replace the U-2 spy plane in surveilling the Sino-Soviet Bloc, determining the disposition and speed of production of Soviet missiles and long-range bombers assess. The Corona program is also used to produce maps and charts for the Department of Defense and other US government mapping programs. On August 11, after 17 orbits, the satellite splashes down in the North Pacific and its payload is recovered. It represents the first-ever successful recovery of an object from orbit. (Wikipedia, "Discoverer 13")

1960, August 11 — 3:10 p.m. Ray Hawks is operating a farm tractor at Left Hand Canyon near Altona, Colorado, when he hears a muffled explosion. Looking up, he watches a disc dropping vertically out of the cloud cover. It stops in midair about 650 feet away from him and 200 feet above the ground, wobbling a bit. When it stabilizes, he sees it looks like two concave discs joined together at the rim and dull aluminum in color. Bluish smoke is issuing from an apparent gap in its surface. An electric hum seems to come from inside the object. The section where the smoke is issuing is withdrawn inside, and a new section appears to replace it, settling in with a click. The hum increases in intensity, and the object appears to be surrounded by a heat haze. It then shoots up into the clouds and vanishes. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 223–225)

1960, August 12 — NASA's Echo 1 balloon satellite is launched by a Thor-Delta rocket and becomes the first passive communications satellite. Microwave signals are bounced off the satellite from one point on earth to another. (Wikipedia, "Project Echo")

1960, August 13–14 — 11:50 p.m.–2:05 a.m. California Highway Patrol officers Charles A. Carson and Stanley E. Scott are on patrol on a rural road 2 miles east of Corning, south of Red Bluff, California, when they see what they think at first is an airliner about to crash. It turns out to be a maneuvering, silent, football-shaped object, perhaps 150 feet long, with a red light at each end and as many as five white lights, descending to 100–200 feet altitude. Instead of reaching the ground, the object suddenly reverses course, climbs to 500 feet, and hovers. The officers radio the Tehama County sheriff's office, and the dispatcher alerts all police cars in the area. The object starts moving towards them to a distance of 450 feet and sweeps the ground with a red beam apparently 6 feet in diameter that projects from the red lights on the end and flashes occasionally. Static appears on the police radio. When Scott switches on the patrol car's own red beam and directs it at the object, it moves away instantly and drifts east. Carson and Scott try to follow in the patrol car as the object moves sometimes slowly, at other times swiftly, then they continue to watch it from an unoccupied fire tower. It is joined by a similar object from the south, then it disappears in the east. A duty officer at the Red Bluff Air Force Station [now closed] confirms tracking the UFO at the time but the commanding officer, Maj. Malden Leroy, denies it the next day. Two Tehama County sheriff's officers on patrol see the object from a distance at Los Molines, and police dispatcher Clarence Fry in Red Bluff goes outside the station with four others to observe the lighted object. Other witnesses in the area continue to report odd lights and objects through August 19. (NICAP, "Red Bluff Incident"; Sparks, p. 284; "Mystery Flying Object Puzzles," *Red Bluff (Calif.) 1960, August 15 — Air Force Information Policy Letter for Commanders, vol. 14, no. 12, is issued by Office of the Secretary of Air Force. In "AF Keeping Watchful Eye on Aerospace," it states, "There is a relationship between the Air Force's interest in space surveillance and its continuous surveillance of the atmosphere near Earth for unidentified flying objects—'UFOs.'" (UFOEv, p. 108)

1960, August 17 — The trial for downed U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers begins in Moscow. (Wikipedia, "1960 U-2 Incident")

1960, August 18 — The Discoverer 14 Corona KH-1 spy satellite is launched. It is the first completely successful mission and returns images of the Mys Schmidta airfield in Siberia. (Wikipedia, "Discoverer 14")

1960, August 18 — 9:58 p.m. A woman in Charleston, West Virginia, takes a time-lapse photo of a mystery satellite that is in the same part of the sky as NASA's Echo I communications satellite, which is also in the photo below it. (Michael D. Swords, "Gazing at the Moons," IUR 32, no. 4 (October 2009): 13)

1960, August 25 — The "dark satellite" is seen and photographed five times by Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corporation at Bethpage, Long Island, New York. It is supposed to be three times faster than the Echo 1 satellite and travels east to west in a retrograde orbit, rather than west to east. Its inclination to the equator is about 135°. The color of the object varies from "carrot to straw." The Grumman observers estimate that the object is in an eccentric orbit with an apogee of as much as 4,200 miles and a perigee of about 300 miles. They immediately produce a proposal to the US Air Force to share data in the hopes of plotting a firm orbit for the mystery satellite. (NICAP, "Grumman Mystery Satellite"; Gordon W. Creighton, "Unidentified Satellites," Flying Saucer Review 7, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1961): 3–6; "The Unidentified Satellite: Grumman Aircraft Writes to One of Our Readers," Flying Saucer Review 7, no. 2 (March/April 1961): 29; Blue Book files, "Grumman Proposal for Optical Surveillance of the Retrograde Satellite," 1961; UFOEv, p. 138; Michael D. Swords, "Gazing at the Moons," IUR 32, no. 4 (October 2009): 13; Center for UFO Studies, "Moonwatch Mystery Satellites, 1958–1962")

1960, August 25 — The National Security Council recommends to President Eisenhower the establishment of a top secret National Reconnaissance Office to coordinate USAF and CIA reconnaissance satellite activities because of management problems with the USAF satellite program. (Wikipedia, "National Reconnaissance Office")

1960, August 26 — 9:00 p.m. Director Robert I. Johnson and other staff at the Adler Planetarium in Chicago, Illinois, observe a faint reddish object in the sky moving from east to west, apparently the same mystery satellite seen and photographed by the Grumman observers. ("It's Official! A New 'Thing' Is Circling Sky," Chicago Tribune, August 31, 1960, p. 17; "Moonwatchers See Strange Object in the Sky," Clinton (Ill.) Daily Journal and Public, August 31, 1960, p. 6; Michael D. Swords, "Gazing at the Moons," IUR 32, no. 4 (October 2009): 13; Swords 294; Center for UFO Studies, "Moonwatch Mystery Satellites, 1958–1962")

1960, August 31 — Rep. Leonard G. Wolf (D-Iowa) makes a statement in the House on NICAP's "Dangers of Secrecy on UFOs" report, saying that it is "imperative to end the risk of accidental war from defense forces' confusion over UFOs." He mentions NICAP board member Adm. Roscoe Hillenkoetter's request that "Congress inform the public as to the facts." Based on a there-year NICAP study, Wolf states that all defense personnel "should be told that the UFOs are real and should be trained to distinguish them—by their characteristic speeds and maneuvers—from conventional planes and missiles…. The American people must be convinced, by documented facts, that the UFOs could not be Soviet machines." ("NICAP UFO Report: Extension of Remarks of Hon. Leonard G. Wolf of Iowa in the House of Representatives, Wednesday, August 31, 1960," Congressional Record, Proceedings and Debates of the 86th Congress, Second Session, vol. 106, Part 14, pp. 18955–18956; Good Need, p. 261)

1960, Late August — Two men in a car near Butte Falls, Oregon, see a pale-white light hovering 300 feet ahead of them. They watch it for 15 minutes, then decide to drive closer. The light then rises to 100 feet and recedes, then changes to orange. No sound is heard. The light performs geometrical maneuvers, creating rectangle paths and other zig-zags. It then accelerates, changes back to white, and zooms off. (Swords 294)

1960, Late August or early September — Evening. Rhodes McCarroll and his grandfather, sitting on the upstairs back porch of their home in Memphis, Tennessee, notice a glowing basketball-sized globe in the soil by the hedge. They watch it for 5 minutes, then see a figure standing behind the ball. It is a glowing nude, generally humanlike figure, about 6 feet tall, holding a light at chest level. The figure is square-shouldered and has disproportionately long legs that are narrow and pointed between the knees and ankles. The witnesses watch another 5 minutes, at which point the globe and the entity begin to fade and are gone from sight in another 5 minutes. (Clark III 279–280; Clark IV 319–320)

1960, September — Groom Lake in Nevada receives the name "Area 51" when A-12 test facility construction begins, including a new 8,500-foot runway (Runway 14/32) to replace the existing one built for the U-2. (Wikipedia, "Area 51")

1960, September — CIA officer Richard M. Bissell Jr. and DCI Allen W. Dulles initiate talks with two leading figures of the Mafia, Johnny Roselli and Sam Giancana. Later, other crime bosses such as Carlos Marcello, Santo Trafficante Jr., and Meyer Lansky become involved in the first plot against Fidel Castro. The strategy is managed by Sheffield Edwards. Robert Maheu, a veteran of CIA counterespionage activities, is instructed to hire the Mafia to kill Castro. The advantage of employing the Mafia for this work is that it provides the CIA with a credible cover story. The Mafia are known to be angry with Castro for closing their profitable brothels and casinos in Cuba. On September 14, Maheu meets with Roselli in a New York City hotel and offers him $150,000 for the "removal" of Castro. James O'Connell, who identifies himself as Maheu's associate but is really the chief of the CIA's operational support division, is present during the meeting. Declassified documents do not reveal if Roselli,

Giancana, or Trafficante accept a down payment for the job. According to CIA files, it is Giancana who suggests poison pills to add to Castro's food or drinks. Such pills, manufactured by the CIA's Technical Services Division, are given to Giancana's nominee named Juan Orta. Giancana recommends him as being an official in the Cuban government with access to Castro. Allegedly, after several unsuccessful attempts to introduce the poison into Castro's food, Orta abruptly demands to be let out of the mission, handing over the job to another unnamed participant. Later, a second attempt is mounted through Giancana and Trafficante using Tony Varona, the leader of the Cuban Exile Junta, who has, according to Trafficante, become "disaffected with the apparent ineffectual progress of the Junta." Varona requests $10,000 in expenses and $1,000 worth of communications equipment. However, it is unknown how far the second attempt goes, as it is canceled due to the launching of the Bay of Pigs Invasion. (Wikipedia, "Sam Giancana"; Wikipedia, "Assassination attempts on Fidel Castro")

1960, September — MKUltra chief Sidney Gottlieb brings a vial of poison concealed in toothpaste to the Democratic Republic of the Congo with plans to place it on Prime Minister Patrice Lumumba's toothbrush. The plot is abandoned, allegedly because CIA station chief Larry Devlin refuses permission. (Wikipedia, "Patrice Lumumba")

1960, September — The USAF Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence turns down ATIC's request for one additional staffer for Project Blue Book (raising it to 3) and additional funding. (Clark III 922; Clark IV 1032)

1960, September 2 — 11:30 p.m. Richard Ireton and his wife are driving on US Highway 1 in Westbrook, Connecticut, when they notice what seems to be an aircraft about to crash. It veers close to the shore and the Iretons drive to the beach to look for it. They see a triangular-shaped object flying silently at the speed of a Piper Cub airplane, alternately hovering and moving horizontally and vertically. When it reaches the public beach, it takes off at great speed toward Long Island, New York. They see a similar object the next evening around 9:30 p.m. at Chalker Beach in Old Saybrook, Connecticut. ("'Flying Triangle' Seen in State," Hartford (Conn.) Courant, September 17, 1960, pp. 1–2)

1960, September 4 — 2:00 p.m. J. H. Kirkpatrick and Warren Specht are monitoring an unpiloted Navy test drone at the China Lake Naval Ordnance Test Station [now Naval Air Weapons Station China Lake] near Ridgecrest, California, when they notice an object following their drone. The drone is at 8,000 feet and the UFO is several feet above and pacing it. The object is dumbbell-shaped and seems to be composed of a shiny red metal that reflects the sun. After 2 minutes, the object makes a sharp 45° turn and climbs out of sight within a few seconds. (Powell, Scientist, 51–52)

1960, September 8 — Night. Witnesses in Consett, South Shields, and Newcastle upon Tyne, England, see a triangular formation of lights with a red light in the center. (London Evening Chronicle, September 9, 1960; Marler 76)

1960, September 10 — A married couple in Scituate, Massachusetts, sees a trio of brilliant discs parked in a triangle formation in the sky. About 12° to the objects' left is a huge cylinder. One witness watches them through binoculars, and the brilliance hurts his eyes for two hours. Two more discs seem to be attached to the top of the cylinder. Small domes sprinkle their surface. The large object disappears too quickly for the eye to follow. (Swords 294)

1960, September 10 — 9:50 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Evans see two light-gray glowing objects, saucer or boomerang-shaped, that swish when accelerating, over Ridgecrest, California. (Sparks, p. 285; Swords 294)

1960, September 14 — 2:50 a.m. A dispatcher in Lorain, Ohio, is taking a coffee break when he sees a light that he thinks is the Echo 1 satellite. As he watches it, knowing it is not the right time for Echo 1, he sees four objects traveling in a perfectly spaced line of flight. It makes a surprising right turn, after which the objects move on their way, apparently at a great height. (Michael D. Swords, "I've Seen the Light…But What Was It?" IUR 32, no. 3 (July 2009): 3; Swords 294–295)

1960, September 15 — 7:30 a.m. A witness sees a UFO hovering 300–400 feet above the Douglas Aircraft plant in Santa Monica, California, and calls it into the West Los Angeles police station. Desk Officer Don Anderson goes outside and sees a dark triangular object moving slowly to the northeast at 3,000 feet. It disappears in the vicinity of Santa Monica Boulevard and Beverly Glen Street. ("Officer Reports Flying Triangle," San Pedro (Calif.) News-Pilot, September 15, 1960, p. 1)

1960, September 15 — Ruppelt dies of a heart attack in Long Beach, California, at age 37. ("Capt. Ruppelt Is Dead," UFO Investigator 1, no. 11 (Dec./Jan. 1960–1961): 8; Clark III 1024; Clark IV 1138)

1960, September 29 — 9:25 p.m. Five people are out looking for the Echo 1 satellite in New Westminster, British Columbia. After they spot it, they remain for a few minutes talking. One of them sees three objects come up from the southeast, pass overhead, and disappear over the rooftops in 10 seconds. The objects are luminous, round-cornered triangles. (Michael D. Swords, "Timmerman's Triangles," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 16)

1960, September 30 — Tiffany Thayer's widow Tanagra Thayer formally disbands the Fortean Society. (Clark III 516; Clark IV 565)

1960, October — Reynolds Electrical and Engineering Company begins construction of "Project 51" at the Nellis AFB complex in Nevada with double-shift personal schedules. They mark an Archimedean spiral on Area 51's dry lake approximately two miles across so that an A-12 pilot approaching the end of the overrun can abort instead of plunging into the sagebrush. Area 51 pilots call it "The Hook." For crosswind landings, they mark two unpaved airstrips (runways 9/27 and 03/21) on the dry lakebed. (Wikipedia, "Area 51")

1960, October 4 — 6:10 p.m. Rev. Lionel Browning and his wife are looking at a rainbow outside their rectory in Cressy, Tasmania, when they see a gray, cigar-shaped object emerge from a raincloud. It has 4 or 5 vertical, dark bands around its circumference and an aerial array that projects from the top. Browning estimates it to be 100 feet long and about 4 miles distant. It moves north at about 60–70 mph at about 400 feet altitude. After one minute, it stops and is joined by 5–6 smaller objects that emerge from a cloud. After another minute, all the UFOs abruptly reverse back into the rain squall at the same speed. ("'Flying Saucer' Seen at Cressy," Launceston (Tas.) Mercury, October 10, 1960; "Mysterious Ships in the Sky," Australian Flying Saucer Review 1, no. 4 (February 1961): 1–2; "Flying Saucers over Tasmania," Flying Saucer Review 7, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1961): 27–28; Bill Chalker, "The Australian Government and UFOs," IUR 22, no. 3 (Fall 1997): 19–20; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: July–December 1960, The Author, 2003, pp. 104–107; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1961, The Author, 2003, pp. 35–36; Swords 385–388; Clark III 350–352; Clark IV 395–396)

1960, October 5 — A formation of UFOs is detected by the new Ballistic Missile Early Warning System at Thule Site J in Greenland. The objects appear to be heading directly toward North America from the direction of Russia. Within seconds, Strategic Air Command headquarters in Omaha, Nebraska, scrambles the crews of B-52 bombers armed with nuclear warheads to prepare a retaliatory strike. But at the last moment checks reveal that the objects are spurious radar echoes. Unusual atmospheric conditions create phantoms on the BMEWS that cannot be seen by other radars. (Eric Schlosser, Command and Control: Nuclear Weapons, the Damascus Incident, and the Illusion of Safety, Penguin, 2013, pp. 253–254, 542)

1960, October 10 — The first test of a Soviet mission to Mars, Mars 1M No. 1, is lost in a launch failure before it can begin its journey to study the interplanetary environment between Earth and Mars. (Wikipedia, "Mars 1M No. 1")

1960, October 14 — The second Soviet attempt to explore Mars, Mars 1M No. 2, this time in a flyby trajectory, is destroyed after its carrier rocket fails to achieve orbit. (Wikipedia, "Mars 1M No. 2")

1960, October 20 — Australian MP Gil Duthie asks Frederick Osborne, Australian Minister for Air, whether he has read the account of the UFO seen at Cressy, Tasmania. Osborne responds that he has, and he admits that the Department of Air receives UFO reports and shares them with the RAF and the US Air Force. However, all of them are "explainable on a perfectly normal basis." ("Flying Saucer Inquiry," Canberra Times, November 18, 1960, p. 10; Swords 387; Clark III 352)

1960, October 31 — Most guerrilla infiltrations and supply drops directed by the CIA into Cuba have failed; these are replaced by a plan to mount an initial amphibious assault with a minimum of 1,500 men.

1960, November 3 — 4:30 p.m. Two 8-year-old boys are walking over a small hill in rural Price County, Wisconsin, when they hear an odd high-pitched, humming noise. The air has become unusually warm. They look back and see an aluminum-colored object on the hill behind them. They run back toward it, but it lifts off and shoots away. They find the soil of the hill to be warm to the touch. ("Small Boys See Warm, Landed UAO," APRO Bulletin, January 1961, pp. 1, 4)

1960, November 4 — House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D-Mass.) writes to Keyhoe that "it was pretty well established by some, in our minds, that there were some objects flying around in space that were unexplainable." ("Congressmen Confirm AF Secrecy: Pressure for Investigation Increasing," UFO Investigator 1, no. 11 (Dec./Jan. 1960/1961): 1; UFOEv, p. 175)

1960, November 15 — 10:40 a.m. A USAF B-57 Canberra reconnaissance aircraft operating out of RAAF Base East Sale, Victoria, Australia, encounters a UFO 15 miles north of Launceston, Tasmania. Capt. Douglas G. Ludlam and Capt. Joseph W. Ivins say it looks like a balloon about 70 feet in diameter and is flying at 35,000 feet, just below the B-57, and traveling at about 920 mph. It is in sight for 5–7 seconds before it disappears under the left wing. (Sparks, p. 285; Bill Chalker, "Australian A.F. UFO Report Files," APRO Bulletin 30, no. 11 (December 1982): 4; Bill Chalker, "The Cressy Affair," in UFOs Sub Rosa Down Under, Part Five, Project 1947, 1997; Keith Basterfield, "Cold UFO Cases: Stratospheric Balloons, Part 2," Unidentified Anomalous Phenomena—Scientific Research, November 16, 2010; Clark III 352)

1960, November 18 — Director of Central Intelligence Allen Dulles and CIA Deputy Director for Plans Richard Bissell brief President-elect John F. Kennedy on the Cuban invasion. Dulles is confident that the CIA can overthrow the Cuban government.

1960, November 20 — 2:45 a.m. Remy Carbonnier is dozing at his home in the Forêt de La Londe southwest of Rouen, France, when he is awakened by a green light shining into his room. It is coming from a round, domed object about 20 feet across standing on three thin legs on the railway track some 980 feet away. Flashes of orange light are coming from it. Around 3:30 a.m., the dome begins turning, the legs fold up, and the object takes of silently and is gone in 20 seconds to the southwest. ("Flying Saucer with 'Legs' Lands in Normandy," Flying Saucer Review 7, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1961): 9)

1960, November 29 — Eisenhower meets with the chiefs of the CIA, Defense, State, and Treasury departments to discuss the new concept of a Cuban invasion. No one expresses objections, and Eisenhower approves the plans with the intention of persuading John F. Kennedy of their merit.

1960, December 5 — Pentagon UFO spokesman Lt. Col. Lawrence J. Tacker publishes Flying Saucers and the U.S. Air Force, in which he blisteringly attacks critics of Project Blue Book, depicting them all as charlatans and opportunists and gullible believers. ("Editorial," APRO Bulletin, November 1960, p. 2; Lawrence J. Tacker, Flying Saucers and the U.S. Air Force, Van Nostrand, 1960; "AF Disavows Tacker Book As Official," UFO Investigator 2, no. 2 (October 1961): 7; Clark III 922; Powell, Keyhoe, 290, 300)

1960, December 5 — Keyhoe debates Lt. Col. Lawrence J. Tacker on the Today show, hosted by Dave Garroway. Tacker says he wrote the book Flying Saucers and the US Air Force because "I felt the Air Force was being set upon by Maj. Keyhoe, NICAP, and other hobby groups who believe in spaceships as an act of pure faith." Keyhoe repeatedly challenges Tacker, whose statements ring hollow, and even Garroway asks Tacker pointed questions and coolly notes Tacker's apparent ignorance of basic physics. The show generates numerous phone calls and letters to NBC, most of them critical of the Air Force. ("New Debunking Campaign Backfires," UFO Investigator 1, no. 11 (Dec.–Jan. 1960/1961): 1–2; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: July–December 1960, The Author, 2003, pp. 129–135; "Dave Garroway Show NBC-TV UFO Discussion: Tacker vs. Keyhoe, December 5, 1960," Journal of UFO History 1, no. 4 (Sept./Oct. 2004): 3–6; Clark III 922; "Lt. Col. Lawrence Tacker Interview, UFOs in the Air Force, December 4, 1960," The Black Vault YouTube channel, May 23, 2019; Powell, Keyhoe, 289–292; Clark IV 1032)

1960, December 8 — Richard Bissell presents an outline for the Cuban invasion to the Special Group, while declining to commit details to written records.

1960, December 9 —8:30 p.m. Mme. Dhelens in the Château des Mailles (31 miles south of Carignan-de-Bordeaux), Gironde, France, sees a luminous oval object twice the size of an automobile hovering just above the ground in the château's park. It has two round portholes, behind which she sees indistinct shadows moving. It takes off, leaving a 12-foot circle of yellowed grass, which later dies. ("Nos Enquêtes: Carignan (Gironde), 9 déc. 1960)," Ouranos, no. 27 (August 1961): 7–12; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: July–December 1960, The Author, 2003, p. 138)

1960, December 14 — The Brookings Research Institute in Washington, D.C., releases a 186-page report prepared for NASA titled Proposed Studies on the Implications of Peaceful Space Activities for Human Affairs. It is later published as a 272-page Committee Print for the House Committee on Science and Astronautics on March 24, 1961. The report includes a section on "Implications of a Discovery of Extraterrestrial Life." It is sent to the House Committee on Science and Astronautics for approval by Rep. Overton Brooks (D-La.) and discusses the effects of meeting extraterrestrial life: "It is possible that if the intelligence of these creatures were sufficiently superior to ours, they would choose to have little if any contact with us." It also speculates on the possibility of finding alien artifacts on earth and the possibility that contact might result in social disintegration. (Wikipedia, "Brookings Report"; Proposed Studies on the Implications of Peaceful Space Activities for Human Affairs, committee print prepared for NASA by the Brookings Institution, Report of the US House Committee on Science and Astronautics, 87th Congress, First Session, March 24, 1961, pp. 215–216, 225–226 (note 34))

1960, December 14 — The first Single Integrated Operational Plan, titled SIOP-62, is completed. It describes a massive strike with the entire US arsenal of 3,200 warheads, totaling 7847 megatons, against Russia, China, and Soviet-aligned states with urban and other targets being hit simultaneously. Nine weapons are to be "laid down" on four targets in Leningrad [now St. Petersburg], 23 weapons on six target complexes in Moscow, and 18 on seven target areas in Kaliningrad. Weapons scientist George W. Rathjens looks through SAC's atlas of Soviet cities, searching for the town that most closely resembles Hiroshima in size and industrial concentration. When he finds one that roughly matches, he asks how many bombs the SIOP "laid down" on that city. The reply: one 4.5 megaton bomb and three more 1.1 megaton weapons in case the big bomb is a dud. The execution of SIOP-62 is estimated to result in 285 million dead and 40 million casualties in the Soviet Union and China. Presented with all the facts and figures, USAF Gen. Thomas D. White finds the plan "splendid." Disregarding the human aspect, SIOP-62 represents an outstanding technological achievement. (Wikipedia, "Single Integrated Operational Plan"; Daniel Ellsberg, The Doomsday Machine, Bloomsbury, 2017, pp. 90–103)

1960, December 24–25 —Midnight. At least a dozen observers at the Wade Folsom ranch near Durango, Colorado, see an object on the brow of a mountaintop to the north. Folsom says it is round, about 20 feet in diameter, filled with tiny blinking lights, has a dome on top, and hovering low above the ground in a clearing about 400 feet north of Florida Road. The top of the object looks like a "giant plastic dome" about 25 feet square. It is surrounded by a glow that changes from white to green, but after 15 minutes it dims suddenly and disappears. In the morning, Folsom takes his dog and two grandsons to the top of the mountain to look for traces, but finds nothing except broken tree limbs. About 3:00 p.m., the family's pet dog comes running to the house, hurls herself at the door, dashes around the living room as if frightened, then drops dead. Disturbed, Ruth Stephenson and three other women go up the mountain to the estimated landing spot and find the damaged trees. They are about to turn back when a second family dog begins barking furiously. They climb higher up, following the dog until he stops at a spruce tree. Stephenson notices some strange giant human-shaped tracks leading up to the tree and toward a clump of cedar trees beyond. Another set of tracks imprinted in the snow resemble a hoof, although there are three hoofmarks together, in a cloverleaf patter, leading from the clump of cedars. She notes more broken limbs and scraped-off bark in this area. Another set of tracks look like a deer's but with four toes instead of two. Other tracks look like a "giant frog" and a kangaroo's trail moving in a straight line. Another set of tracks were human, but only 5 inches long. The women follow the tracks to a deserted mountain cabin, which the tracks have circled. Undersheriff Myron Darmour and Deputy Bill Hiser visit the site on December 27 and find some of the tracks but discount them, saying they are not in the area where the light was seen. Folsom thinks the dog has been poisoned. (Durango (Colo.) Herald, December 28, 1960; "UAO Parked on Colorado Mountain Top," APRO Bulletin, January 1961, pp. 1–3)

1960, December 25 — 11:45 p.m. A man visiting relatives in Cottonwood, Minnesota, goes outside and sees an unusual light traveling in the north. The object obligingly comes closer, and 30 seconds later he can see it is a tan color and shaped like a hemisphere with a dome on top and a porthole on the left with light shining from it. A silvery glow outlines it. At its base is an opening that shows a whitish color. The object flutters down, rocking gently from side to side like a falling leaf. It stops, hovers, and ejects a whitish object from its rear. The smaller object floats to the west until it appears to be the size of a star. The larger UFO drops further down and releases two reddish objects that fly southeast and appear to flash green light beams at each other. Finally, they separate and go in different directions. The large object ascends, and the two red objects apparently reenter it, followed by the white object. The portal closes and the original object leaves in the same direction it has come. The duration of the sighting is 10–15 minutes. ("1960 Sighting of UAO Carrier," APRO Bulletin, November 1962, p. 2)

1960, December 27 — Blue Book officer Maj. Robert Friend and his boss at ATIC, Philip G. Evans, write a memo to Air Force Intelligence in the Pentagon. Friend complains about civilian UFO organizations supported by people for "financial gain, religious reasons, pure emotional outlet, ignorance, or possibly to use the organization as a 'cold war' tool." He is upset by their accusations that the Air Force is withholding UFO information. (Swords 292)

1961 — The first American to publish on the microwave auditory effect is biophysicist Allan H. Frey. In his experiments, the subjects are able to hear appropriately pulsed microwave radiation from a distance of 328 feet from the transmitter. This is accompanied by side effects such as dizziness, headaches, and a pins-and-needles sensation. (Allen H. Frey, "Human Auditory System Response to Modulated Electromagnetic Energy," Journal of Applied Physiology 17 (July 1, 1962): 689–692; Wikipedia, "Microwave auditory effect")

1961 — Ray Palmer begins publishing The Hidden World, a quarterly magazine in trade-paperback format that runs through 1964. It consists of reprints of Richard Shaver stories and readers' contributions. (Clark III 873, 1070; Clark IV 967, 1185)

1961 — George Adamski publishes Flying Saucers Farewell, signaling his intention to refocus his efforts on teaching about life and consciousness. (George Adamski, Flying Saucers Farewell, Abelard-Schuman, 1961; "Final Years," The Adamski Case, June 11, 2009)

1961 — Contactee Dorothy Martin moves from Peru to Southern California. (Clark III 720; Clark IV 788)

1961 — Antonio Ribera publishes the first successful UFO book in Spain, Objetos desconocidos en el cielo. He expands it in 1966 into El gran enigma de los platillos volantes, which becomes a classic in UFO literature. (Antonio Ribera, Objetos desconocidos en el cielo, Librería Editorial Argos, 1961)

1961 — An Antonov AN-2P mail biplane takes off from an airfield at or near Sverdlovsk, Russia, bound for Kurgan with seven people on board. About 80–100 miles from Sverdlovsk, the aircraft disappears from the radar screen. Ground control cannot regain contact, so a search is launched with helicopters and troops. The aircraft is found in a small clearing in a dense forest, completely intact. The authorities state that it looks like it was placed there gently from above. All the mail is intact, and there is no sign of anyone on board. No marks or footprints are seen. A 100-foot wide, clearly defined circle of scorched grass and depressed earth is found at a distance of 328 feet from the plane. A report by the Moscow Aviation Institute claims that a UFO was tracked on radar at the control tower and that strange radio signals were heard at the time of the disappearance. (Good Above, pp. 228–229)

1961 — A UFO appears above the iron-ore mine of Catalina Huanca, owned by the Marcona Mining Company, near Apongo, Peru. It hovers for 5–15 minutes, only about 300 feet away from a young mining engineer. It is round and glowing, with windows on the upper part. The engineer gets a look at it through his theodolite, but it still looks fuzzy. The object reappears throughout the day, allowing all the mine workers (about 70) to view it. The following day it follows a supply truck for several hours as it exits the mine heading south over a dirt track. (S. Parker Gay Jr., "Peru, 1961," IUR 24, no. 3 (Fall 1999): 29)

1961, January — Day. Government topographer Adolfo Paolini Pisani is driving a jeep along the highway between La Victoria and El Vigía, Mérida, Venezuela, when a truck passes him. A few minutes later, a brilliant metallic disc like polished blue steel swoops down and passes dangerously close above the hood of the truck. The truck rises a few feet into the air and overturns in the direction taken by the object, falling in a sandbank with its wheels in the air. The object ascends and is lost to view in a few seconds. Pisani stops his jeep to assist, but fortunately the lone driver has only a few scratches. (Horacio Gonzales, "Disc Upsets Truck," APRO Bulletin, September 1961, pp. 1, 3)

1961, January 3 — President Eisenhower severs diplomatic relations with Cuba.

1961, January 3 — 9:01 p.m. An explosion at the US Army's SL-1 nuclear power reactor in Idaho Falls, Idaho, causes a meltdown, killing three operators. The direct cause is the improper withdrawal of the central control rod, responsible for absorbing neutrons in the reactor core. The event is the only reactor accident in the US that results in immediate fatalities. (Wikipedia, "SL-1")

1961, January 4 — The CIA Deputy Director of Plans Richard Bissell plans for a "lodgement" by 750 men at an undisclosed site in Cuba, supported by considerable air power.

1961, January 6 — 3:00 a.m. Luis G. Ferré Casas, his mother, and his sister notice a bright, disk-shaped object on a mountain about one mile from an estate at Torroja del Priorat, Tarragona, Spain. After watching it for 20 minutes, they get tired and retire to bed. (Vicente-Juan Ballester Olmos, "Twelfth Night…And a UFO," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 18 (February 1974): 10–12)

1961, January 8 — Pravda asserts that "some regions" (including Uzbekistan and Tajikistan) of the USSR are reporting UFOs, but dismisses these reports as reflections on water, rainbows, atmospheric reflections, self-deception, or disinformation. It quotes physicist Lev Artsimovich saying that "it is about time that these tales be stopped no matter how breathtaking they may be." (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1961, The Author, 2003, pp. 5–6; Mikhail Gershtein, "A Short History of UFO Research in the Former Soviet Union," UAP Check, July 6, 2024)

1961, January 10 — A US Navy A-1 Polaris missile is launched from a ground pad at Cape Canaveral, Florida. A large disc appears somewhat close to the rocket and causes the tracking mechanism to lock on to the UFO. The diameter of the disc is approximately 20–25 feet and it is about 6–8 feet thick at its center. The tracking system returns to focus on the Polaris a bit downrange. The object is visually lost to ground observers and the primary witness (Clark C. McClelland, with 10x50 binoculars) as it continues to move away. The original investigation is conducted by McClelland and his Florida NICAP subcommittee. (NICAP, "UFO 'Alters' Tracking of Navy Polaris Test"; Sparks, p. 286; "UFO Blocks Tracking of U.S. Rocket," UFO Investigator 2, no. 6 (Oct./Nov. 1962): 1; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1961, The Author, 2003, pp. 6–7)

1961, January 12 — In a press conference in Moscow, Russia, Minister of Merchant Marine Viktor Bakaev charges that US military aircraft and ships are systematically conducting "provocative actions" against Soviet vessels around Cuba. He is probably referring to close approaches to Cuban airspace by Fort Bliss–based reconnaissance aircraft that are testing the responses of Soviet electronic countermeasures. (Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 155–157)

1961, January 17 — DRC Prime Minister Patrice Lumumba is executed by firing squad near Élisabethville [now Lubumbashi], Democratic Republic of the Congo. CIA Station Chief Larry Devlin has helped direct the search to capture Lumumba for his transfer to his enemies in Katanga, he is involved in arranging Lumumba's transfer there, and he is in direct touch with the killers the night Lumumba is killed. The Congolese leaders who kill Lumumba, including Mobutu Sese Seko and Joseph Kasa-Vubu, receive money and weapons directly from the CIA. John Stockwell writes in 1978 that a CIA agent had the body in the trunk of his car in order to try to get rid of it. Stockwell, who knows Devlin well, feels Devlin knows more than anyone else about the murder. However, documents released in 2017 reveal that the US role in Lumumba's murder was only under consideration by the CIA and never carried out. (Wikipedia, "Patrice Lumumba")

1961, January 17 — Eisenhower delivers a farewell address in a TV broadcast. Perhaps best known for advocating that the nation guard against the potential influence of the military–industrial complex, a term he is credited with coining, the speech also expresses concerns about planning for the future and the dangers of massive spending, especially deficit spending, the prospect of the domination of science through federal funding, and, conversely, the domination of science-based public policy by what he calls a "scientific-technological elite." (Wikipedia, "Eisenhower's farewell address"; Dwight D. Eisenhower, "Farewell Address," January 17, 1961)

1961, January 17 — 6:17 p.m. A former weather officer at Holloman AFB is driving with some companions near Cimarron, New Mexico, when they see three different groups of amber UFOs flying in V-formation about 15 miles away at 30,000 feet. There are six lights in the first group and eight in the second and third. They fly away to the southwest and then return to where they first appeared. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 226–227)

1961, January 19 — A USAF press release proclaims that "not even a minute fragment of a so-called 'flying saucer' has ever been found." (Frank Edwards, FS Serious Business, Bantam ed., 1966, p. 48)

1961, January 22 — 4:45 p.m. An elliptical, metallic-looking UFO approaches Eglin AFB near Valparaiso, Florida, from over the Gulf, makes a U-turn and speeds back over the Gulf. Harry Caslar is filming his son on the beach with 8mm movie film and captures the UFO. ("UFOs Continue Earth Observation," UFO Investigator 1, no. 12 (April/May 1961): 5; UFOEv, p. 95)

1961, January 28 — President Kennedy is briefed, together with all the major departments, on the latest plan (code-named Operation Pluto) that involves 1,000 men landed in a ship-borne invasion at Trinidad, Cuba, about 170 miles southeast of Havana at the foothills of the Escambray Mountains in Sancti Spiritus province. Kennedy authorizes the active departments to report progress.

1961, February (or April 17) — Forester Vasili Brodski finds a mysterious crater 100 feet long, 50 feet wide, and 10 feet deep on the bank of a frozen lake (possibly Lake Onega, or a lake nearby) in Karelia, Russia. It had not been there two days earlier. The base is remarkably smooth, and around the edge are lumps of grass and soil but no trace of the excavated dirt. Six investigators from Leningrad [now St. Petersburg] arrive and find odd, crumbling black pellets on the edge of the lake. Divers discover a 330-foot strip where the soil has been displaced along the floor of the lake, as if something slid along the ground and submerged, ploughing up the soil. Geologist Vsevolod Charmov examines ice, water, and soil samples but cannot explain a green discoloration on some of the submerged pieces of broken ice. The pellets seem to be an inorganic substance. (Hobana and Weverbergh 61–63; James D. White, "UFO Research in Russia," APRO Bulletin 24, no. 12 (June 1976): 5; Dolan, USO1, 216–219)

1961, February 5–7 — Many people report strange lights flashing around in the sky over Maine. Some blink and move up and down. A Portland Press Herald editorial, February 9, says: "Mysterious objects 'lit up like a ball of fire and going fast' zoom over Portland. Unidentified shapes with green, yellow, and red lights hover over Brunswick, then dart away with 'unbelievable quickness.' Strange things are happening. . . The military had us just about convinced that no such objects existed. The only trouble was that many people—good, reliable observers—continued to see these things." (UFOEv, p. 138)

1961, February 16 — House Majority Leader John W. McCormack suggests to the press that the House Committee on Science and Astronautics might hold hearings on UFOs because he feels "the Air Force has not been giving out all the information it has on Unidentified Flying Objects." (Bulkley Griffin, "McCormack Asks Hearing on UFOs," Worcester (Mass.) Evening Gazette, February 16, 1961; "Is Air Force Hiding UFO Data?" Bangor (Maine) Daily News, February 18, 1961, pp. 1–2; Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott, "Flying Saucers," Bucyrus (Ohio) Telegraph-Forum, February 21, 1961, p. 9)

1961, February 16 — 9:30 p.m. An object with two powerful beams of red and white light hovers at treetop level near Nugent's Airport and Sporting Camps in Millinocket, Maine. Observers watch for nearly five minutes as it appears to fall to the ground and vanish. Allen O. Nugent pinpoints the sighting near Donnelly Point and the tramway leading toward Allagash Stream and Mountain. Jerome Dickinson of Houlton first spots the object and informs others at camp. Witnesses include James Pierce, Jack Chisholm, Arthur Augustine, William Cameron, James Leighton, Norman Hathaway, and William Cyr. Dickinson and Hathaway later fly over the area in search of the object but find no evidence. Earlier that evening, Mildred Steeves of Bangor reports seeing a large bright object, describing it as softball-sized, fast-moving, and giving her an eerie feeling. ("Sportsmen Mystified by Red, White Beams in Sky," Bangor (Maine) Daily News, February 18, 1961, pp. 1–2)

1961, February 28 — 3:20 a.m. Clarence Blackwood and his wife hear a roaring sound in the sky at their home in Lakeville, Massachusetts. They look out the bedroom window and see a fiery cigar-shaped object moving at low altitude to the northeast. It is bright yellow in the middle with a bright red edge and surrounded by thin clouds of black smoke. The object rolls back and forth rapidly and travels slowly to the southwest. It passes directly above their house, illuminating the bedroom. The lights that they have left on in the kitchen dim three times and go out for 4–5 minutes. The object returns at 3:40 and the kitchen lights repeat their previous actions. ("Low-Flying UFO Puts Out Lights," UFO Investigator 2, no. 1 (July/Aug. 1961): 5; Schopick, pp. 115–117)

1961, March — In an article in Argosy, Lt. Col. Lawrence Tacker says that critics of the Air Force investigation are "absolutely erroneous," "a hoax," "sensational theories," and the work of "amateur hobby groups." NICAP's evidence is "drivel," its claims "ridiculous," and it is making "senseless accusations." (Lawrence J. Tacker, "'Flying Saucers Are Fakes!' '—U.S. Air Force,'" Argosy, March 1961, pp. 58, 125–126; UFOEv, p. 108)

1961, March — House Majority Leader John W. McCormack tells Keyhoe privately that he has urged the House Science and Astronautics Committee, headed by Rep. Overton Brooks (D-La.), to investigate Air Force UFO secrecy. (Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, p. 76)

1961, March 10 — 8:45 p.m. Mr. F. Reynolds and his 15-year-old son Lloyd are camped in their trailer 900 feet from the Murray River, at Bowna, New South Wales, when they see what appears to be a huge trailer with four windows and a red light at the end standing by the water. A fire is visible to the right of the object, and they can see four figures moving quickly between the object and the fire. Reynolds watches through binoculars and sees the entire array moving sideways in a jerking manner. After 45 minutes, it is all gone from sight. In the morning they can find no traces on the soft mud flat. ("UFO Landing?" Australian Flying Saucer Review, no. 5 (July 1961): 1–2)

1961, March 16 — 6:15 p.m. Brazilian meteorologist Rubens J. Villela, on the deck of the USS Glacier, watches a tear-shaped fireball over Admiralty Bay, South Shetland Islands, Antarctica, in slow, level flight. It leaves a long orange trail like a tracer bullet, then abruptly divides in two as if exploding. It disappears after 10 seconds. (UFOEv, pp. 53–54; Ed Hyde, "U.F.O.'s—at 450 Fathoms," Man's Illustrated, March 1966, pp. 34–35, 48–50; James E. McDonald, "Statement on Unidentified Flying Objects," in Symposium on Unidentified Flying Objects, Hearings, US House Committee on Science and Astronautics, 90th Cong., 2nd Sess., July 29, 1968, pp. 64–65; Sanderson, InvRes, p. 3; Timothy Good, Unearthly Disclosure, Century, 2000, pp. 20–25; Rubens J. Villela, "A Further Antarctic Myth," Polar Record 44, no. 1 (January 2008): 83–84; Dolan, USO1, 215–216)

1961, March 17 — USAF Public Information Officer Lt. Col. Lawrence Tacker writes to Col. Philip G. Evans, deputy for science and components, that Blue Book is utilizing a group of four officers who are on call, rather than one full-time officer. The officers selected for the duty have backgrounds in physics, chemistry, and electronics. ([documents], "11–15 July 1960, Congressional Briefings (Mr. R. Smart)," USAF Historical Archives; Clark III 922; Clark IV 1032–1033)

1961, Spring — Late evening. A couple parking in Millville, New Jersey, watch a bright light silently moving northward. It hovers, reverses direction, and maneuvers for 5 minutes. At one point it races directly at a star, abruptly stops, draws a neat, right-angled, half-box around it, and goes racing on. Finally it speeds out of sight in about 5 seconds. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, p. 44; Michael D. Swords, "We Know Where You Live," IUR 30, no. 2 (January 2006): 10)

1961, April — Lt. Col. Tacker is removed from his job as Pentagon UFO spokesman and reassigned to Europe. He is replaced by Maj. William T. Coleman. ("Tacker Replaced As Spokesman," UFO Investigator 1, no. 12 (April/May 1961): 1–2; UFOEv, p. 108; Powell, Keyhoe, 299–300)

1961, April 4 — President Kennedy approves the Bay of Pigs plan (also known as Operation Zapata) for the invasion of Cuba because it has an airfield that does not need extending to handle bomber operations, it is farther away from large groups of civilians than the Trinidad plan, and it is less noisy militarily, which would make any future denial of direct US involvement more plausible. (Wikipedia, "Bay of Pigs invasion")

1961, April 12 — Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin becomes the first human to go into outer space when his Vostok spacecraft completes an orbit of the earth. (Wikipedia, "Yuri Gagarin")

1961, April 17 — The Bay of Pigs invasion takes place in Cuba. A counter-revolutionary military (made up of Cuban exiles), trained and funded by the CIA, Brigade 2506 fronts the armed wing of the Democratic Revolutionary Front (DRF) and intends to overthrow the increasingly communist government of Fidel Castro. Launched from bases in Guatemala and Nicaragua, the invading force is defeated within three days by the Cuban Revolutionary Armed Forces under the direct command of Castro. (Wikipedia, "Bay of Pigs invasion")

1961, April 18 — 11:00 a.m. Joe Simonton hears a whining sound on his farm four miles from Eagle River, Wisconsin, and sees a silvery object, 30 feet in diameter and 12 feet high, with exhaust pipes around the periphery, land nearby. A door opens and a man appears, about 5 feet tall and wearing a black, turtle-neck pullover with a white band at the belt, and black trousers with a vertical white band along the side. Two other figures are visible inside. The creature is holding a metallic jug and making gestures suggesting he wants a drink. Simonton takes the jug into his basement, fills it with water, and returns it to the man. Simonton notices one man frying on a flameless grill and motions for some food. Simonton receives four ordinary pancakes or cookies, 3 inches in diameter, perforated with small holes. The object takes off after 5 minutes. Simonton gives one of the pancakes to Judge Frank Wellington Carter, who then passes it on to the National Investigations Committee on Aerial Phenomena; another he gives to J. Allen Hynek for Project Blue Book; and the third he keeps for himself. A thorough analysis is performed on one of the pancakes by the US Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and the food is found to be made of terrestrial but tasteless ingredients, including hydrogenated oil and buckwheat flour. The Air Force concludes that Simonton is honest but has mistakenly conflated the reality of his breakfast with a dream. (Sparks, p. 287; Center for UFO Studies, [Hynek case documents]; Center for UFO Studies, [case photos]; Center for UFO Studies, [Lex Mebane case files]; Center for UFO Studies, [NICAP case documents]; "The Case of the Interplanetary Cookies," APRO Bulletin, May 1961, pp. 1–3; "Facts Behind the 'Pancake' Story," UFO Investigator 2, no. 1 (July/Aug. 1961): 8; "The Eagle River Incident: A New Contact Claim," Flying Saucer Review 7, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1961): 7–8; "A Re-Examination of the Simonton Case," APRO Bulletin, September 1961, pp. 2–3; Waveney Girvan, "Claimants, Ridicule, and a Piece of Cake," Flying Saucer Review 7, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1961): 12–14; "The Eagle River Incident: The Air Force Comments," Flying Saucer Review 7, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1961): 20; "'Cakes' from Saucer Men," Saucerian Bulletin 6, no. 1 (December 31, 1961): 1, 3–10; "Saucers, Pancakes, and Such," Science 135 (February 16, 1962): 518; "The Eagle River Incident: A Letter from Joe Simonton," Flying Saucer Review 8, no. 3 (May/June 1962): 9–10; Vallée, Magonia, pp. 23–25; Jerome Clark, "The Pancakes of Eagle River," IUR 21, no. 1 (Spring 1996): 3–8, 27; Loren E. 1961, April 19 — 7:40 p.m. Commanding Officer C. J. Peterson of the minesweeper HMS Maxton sees a swiftly moving object as the ship is 33 miles off San Vito Lo Capo, Sicily, Italy. It is green and leaves an orange trail as it moves higher and disappears to the northwest. The ship's crew sees a similar object on April 20 at 4:50 a.m. when it is 25 miles south of Capo Carbonara, Sardinia, Italy. (1Pinotti 112–113)

1961, April 25 — US Air Force Intelligence Collection Guidance Letter no. 4, originally classified Confidential, describes and provides guidance for Project Moon Dust reporting. Several items of interest appear in the document: classification level of Moon Dust Alerts and reports, focus of Moon Dust on "foreign earth satellite vehicles," and destination agencies for Moon Dust reports among them. Project Moon Dust is a covert project to exploit the discovery of Soviet hardware when it temporarily lands in American hands. (Department of the Air Force, "MOON DUST Reporting," Intelligence Collection Guidance Letter, no. 4, April 25, 1961; Kevin D. Randle, A History of UFO Crashes, Avon, 1995, pp. 157–169)

1961, April 29 — Around 4:00 p.m. Contractor John P. Gallagher is working at a home adjacent to Bailey's Beach, Newport, Rhode Island. He sees a red spherical object bobbing on the ocean waves about 600 feet from the shore. Suddenly the object rises into the air to 60 feet and moves out to sea at about 100 mph. ("'Head' Floats—Flies," APRO Bulletin, July 1961, p. 4; Dolan, USO1, 220)

1961, May — Rep. Overton Brooks (D-La.) appoints Rep. Joseph Karth (DFL-Minn.) head of a Subcommittee on Space Problems and Life Sciences. Karth and two other members plan for hearings in early 1962. The plan calls for a statement by Roscoe Hillenkoetter. NICAP releases a joint statement by 21 American scientists that calls for an open investigation by UFOs without secrecy. It says the Air Force should have a more straightforward information policy that releases all facts on major UFO sightings. ("Scientists Urge Check on AF Investigation," UFO Investigator 1, no. 12 (April/May 1961): 7; "UFO Inquiry behind Closed Doors: NICAP Asks Right to Question Air Force," UFO Investigator 2, no. 1 (July/Aug. 1961): 1)

1961, May 5 — Astronaut Alan Shepard becomes the first American in space (for 15 minutes and 22 seconds) when his Freedom 7 capsule is launched from Cape Canaveral, Florida, as the first manned Project Mercury launch. (Wikipedia, "Mercury-Redstone 3")

1961, May 10 — Late evening. Richard Vogt, driving on a rural road south of Osakis, Minnesota, sees a "ball of fog approximately 3 feet in diameter" swiftly descending toward him at a 45° angle from a clear sky. Unable to take evasive action, Vogt can only stare as the object hits the upper part of his hood and windshield. The noisy impact generates a tremendous amount of heat; the windshield becomes extremely hot to the touch. The object leaves pit marks burned in the windshield, circular tracks on the glass, and burned specks in the finish of the hood. (C. W. Fitch, "Monitoring and Scanning UFOs," APRO Bulletin, July 1963, p. 5; Clark III 716; Clark IV 784)

1961, May 15 — An order approved by President Kennedy results in the dispersal of four machine guns to insurgents in the Dominican Republic. President Rafael Trujillo dies from gunshot wounds on May 30. In the aftermath, Robert Kennedy writes that the CIA has succeeded where it has failed many times in the past, but in the face of that success, it is caught flatfooted, having failed to plan what to do next. (Wikipedia, "Rafael Trujillo")

1961, May 22 — 10:00 a.m. An oval, aluminum-colored object flies silently over the hills near Santa Teresa del Tuy, Venezuela, and lands on a hill near the site of earth-moving operations in the Paraiso del Tuy area. More than 20 witnesses, including engineers and surveyors, say the object is weaving through the hills, dodging trees, and flying at slow speed, before it stops above a patch of tall Guinea grass (Megathyrsus maximus). Rino del Negro jumps into his jeep and follows the path of the object, catching up with it just as it disappears behind a small hill. Driving further, he sees it take off and vanish behind some hills further away. On finding the patch of grass, he finds it flattened toward the ground in a roughly circular area about 60 feet in diameter. Three similar objects had been seen flying along the same route on May 21. (Horacio Gonzales, "Venezuelan Reports," APRO Bulletin, September 1961, pp. 4–5; Lorenzen, FSHoax, p. 185; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 72–73)

1961, Summer — Near Rybinsk, Yaroslavl Oblast, Russia, crews are setting up new missile batteries as part of Moscow's defensive network. A huge disc-shaped object allegedly appears at an estimated altitude of 12.5 miles, surrounded by a number of smaller objects. A nervous battery commander panics and gives unauthorized orders to fire a salvo at the disc. All the missiles explode at an estimated distance of 1.2 miles from the target. A third salvo is not fired, because at that point the smaller objects stall the electrical apparatus of the entire missile base. After the smaller disc rejoin the big UFO, the electrical systems return. (Flying Saucers, no. 47, May 1966, pp. 6–10; Good Above, pp. 227–228)

1961, Summer — Capt. Robert Filler and Lt. Phil Lee, based with the 82d Fighter Interceptor Squadron at Travis AFB in Fairfield, California, are scrambled in their F-102 Delta Dagger jets to intercept a radar target that has been hovering at 50,000 feet for 30 minutes. They get a radar lock-on 20 miles out above the Sacramento Valley. The target is still stationary until they are 5 miles away, then the target moves quickly several times to a higher altitude. Filler estimates it is moving at 36,000 mph. (Good Need, pp. 245–246)

1961, Summer — Day. Glenn E. Bradley watches a group of six metallic discs pass over his farm near Beloit, Ohio, at a low altitude. They are traveling in single file at about 30 mph and are spaced 1–2 miles apart. The objects are each about 60 feet in diameter at the bottom with a 30-foot dome on top. Within a transparent section in the center he can see two figures on each side. The objects begin banking to the left about 200–300 feet away. ("Soup Bowls over Ohio," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 6, no. 1 (Feb./March 1985): 4, 6)

1961, June 3 — 6:35 a.m. Giacomo Barra, Giuseppe Pordoi, Filippo Marin, and Silvano Guardinfante are in a motorboat off Savona, Italy, when the boat begins to roll badly. More than one-half mile away, they notice the surface of the sea is "bulging like an enormous ball, with long billows going out." An object emerges from the sea and stops still for a few seconds at a height of 30 feet and rocks slightly. A halo forms around the base and it shoots away quickly across the sea and vanishes towards the northwest. (Gordon W. Creighton, "The Italian Scene: Part 4," Flying Saucer Review 9, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1963): 11–12; Olsen, sec. 3, p. 73; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1961, The Author, 2003, p. 50; 1Pinotti 117–118; Dolan, USO1, 220–222)

1961, June 3 — A civilian weather observer sees an object through a theodolite at Mercury, Nevada. It remains in sight for 2 hours at an altitude of 80,000–120,000 feet. Project Blue Book evaluators correctly identify the object as a probable U-2 aircraft flying out of Nellis AFB. (Mark Rodeghier, "The U-2 Spy Plane and Blue Book: Another Look," IUR 27, no. 3 (Fall 2002): 21)

1961, June 4 — Mrs. James W. Annis, a librarian, sees a large, narrow, elliptical object hovering low in the sky to the north of Blue Ridge Summit, Pennsylvania. Farther to the east, a cluster of smaller objects is hovering. She then watches the smaller objects streak across the sky to the larger one. All then move out of sight behind trees to the north-northwest. ("Increased UFO Observation Shown by Reports," UFO Investigator 2, no. 1(July/Aug. 1961): 7; UFOEv, p. 71; Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects: A Further Look," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 25)

1961, June 5 — 2:30 a.m. Patrolman Jaime de Miranda and Astrogildo de Medeiros are called to the scene of a sighting on the Rodovia Anchieta highway 30 miles northwest of Santos, São Paulo, Brazil. When they arrive, they find about 20 cars stopped along the road and people watching a luminous disc-shaped object maneuvering in the area. The patrolmen try to signal the object by shining a spotlight on it, but they get no response. When they focus a red light on it, the object moves toward the cars at high speed. They take cover. Another responder, Marshal José Otavia Leite, is about to shoot at the object but other police prevent him. After 3 hours, the object gets dimmer. At 5:30 a.m., it is still visible through binoculars when it lands on the ground some distance from the highway. By daybreak it is no longer visible. ("Object Dives on Highway Patrolman," APRO Bulletin, July 1961, p. 5; "No. 20," Boletim SBEDV, nos. 22/23 (July/Nov. 1961): 11; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 227–228)

1961, June 9 — A second USAF/NASA flight evaluation of the Avrocar is conducted on a modified second prototype at the Avro facility in Mississauga, Ontario. During these tests, the vehicle reaches a maximum speed of 20 knots and shows the ability to traverse a ditch 6 feet across and 18 inches deep. Flight above the critical altitude proves dangerous if not nearly impossible due to inherent instability. The flight test report further identifies a range of control problems. (Wikipedia, "Avro Canada VZ-9 Avrocar")

1961, June 11 — 11:00 p.m. José-Gregorio Darnaude y Rojas Marcos, 28, is lying in a hammock in the front of his house on the Fuenteluega Estate in Sevilla, Spain, when he feels a peculiar prickling sensation throughout his whole body but particularly in his head. His dogs are cowering, the sheep go completely crazy, and the crickets and cicadas become silent. Suddenly, a luminous disc about 15 feet in diameter appears from behind the house, flying from northeast to southwest. It makes an abrupt 90° turn and moves directly toward him, hovering about 400 feet away from him and 80 feet in the air, changing colors from white to orange to red to purple several times. Darnaude runs inside, but the disc turns bright white and shots away at enormous speed. (Vicente-Juan Ballester Olmos, "Twelfth Night: And a UFO," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 18 (September 1974): 11)

1961, June 19 — A flying object hovers for more than an hour above an airport at Exeter, Devon, England. Officials say: "We do not know what it is. It was seen on the radar screen and we have had it under observation for some time. We think it is pretty big. It appears to be shining brightly and is about 50,000 feet up." (UFOEv, pp. 80, 139)

1961, June 28 — A dubious memorandum from President Kennedy asks the director of the CIA for a summary of "MJ-12 Intelligence Operations as they relate to Cold War Psychological Warfare Plans." (National Security Memorandum, John F. Kennedy to CIA Director Allen Dulles, June 28, 1961)

1961, June 30 — 2:00 p.m. Residents of Warsaw, Poland, see a large, luminous, roughly spherical, slowly moving object in the sky. It supposedly remains visible for more than 8 hours. (Poland 29–31)

1961, July or August — Dusk. Florin Gorănescu is staying at a villa in Lacul Roşu, Romania. He and two colleagues notice on top of a nearby high cliff an intensely red light that remains motionless until it begins moving slowly northeast. (Romania 13)

1961, July 1 — The USAF Aerospace Technical Intelligence Center at Wright-Patterson AFB becomes the Foreign Technology Division and is reassigned to Air Force Systems Command. Project Blue Book is included in the reorganization. FTD intelligence estimates are subsequently provided to the National Security Council through the 1962 United States Intelligence Board. FTD's additional location at the Tonopah Test Range Airport conducts test and evaluation of captured Soviet fighter aircraft. (Sparks, pp. 12–13; Wikipedia, "National Air and Space Intelligence Center"; Clark III 938; Clark IV 1048)

1961, July 1 — A new squadron that will become the 1st Aerospace Surveillance and Control Squadron becomes operational under the USAF Air Defense Command at Ent AFB [now the US Olympic Training Center], Colorado Springs, Colorado, part of NORAD's Space Detection and Tracking System. The first squadron commander is Col. Robert Miller. The Space Track organization at Hanscom Field, Bedford, Massachusetts, assumes a backup role for squadron operations. (Wikipedia, "1st Space Operations Squadron")

1961, July 4 — 12:15 a.m. A woman and her daughter are on the roof of a flat in Ryde, Isle of Wight, England, when they notice five faraway lights in a row approaching them. Another light is above the others. Soon they can see that the lights are apparently portholes on an object shaped like a hovercraft (although their sketch looks more like a domed disk). The base of the object glows with an orange light. (Leonard G. Cramp, "Did a Scout Ship Touch Down on the Isle of Wight?" Flying Saucer Review 7, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1961): 16–17)

1961, July 11 — 10:35 p.m. Jacques Vallée and others at the Paris Observatory in Meudon, France, see a mystery satellite as part of Project Moonwatch. The following day the director of the project confiscates all their data and destroys it, apparently in fear of being laughed at by the press, scientific colleagues, and the Americans. (Jacques Vallée, Forbidden Science, North Atlantic, 1992, pp. 41–42; Michael D. Swords, "Gazing at the Moons," IUR 32, no. 4 (October 2009): 11–12)

1961, July 17 — 2:00 a.m. Two people driving about one mile north of Bonnie Springs Ranch [now the Ranch at Red Rock] in the Red Rock Canyon National Conservation Area, Nevada, see in the rear-view mirror a low-flying object that overtakes their car, followed by a rush of cold air. It stops, circles the vehicle, flies off, and is lost to sight behind the mountains, where it might have landed, but an investigation by the military finds no trace. (Sparks, p. 288; Vallée, Magonia, p. 282)

1961, July 17 — After an FBI staffer in New Orleans inquiries about the propriety of joining NICAP, the Special Agent in Charge writes to J. Edgar Hoover saying that, although it has not been investigated by the FBI, "NICAP is not the type of organization with which the Bureau's name should become connected." (SAC, New Orleans to Director, FBI, "National Investigations Committee on Aerial Phenomena, Miscellaneous—Information Concerning," July 17, 1961)

1961, August — Construction of essential facilities is completed at Area 51 in Nevada; three surplus Navy hangars are erected on the base's north side. The original U-2 hangars are converted to maintenance and machine shops. Facilities in the main cantonment area include workshops and buildings for storage and administration, a commissary, control tower, fire station, and housing. The Navy also contributes more than 130 surplus Babbitt duplex housing units for long-term occupancy facilities. Older buildings are repaired, and additional facilities are constructed as necessary. A reservoir pond surrounded by trees serves as a recreational area one mile north of the base. Other recreational facilities included a gymnasium, a movie theater, and a baseball diamond. (Wikipedia, "Area 51")

1961, August 4 — Rep. Thomas N. Downing (D-Va.) advises NICAP that the House Science and Astronautics Committee is considering hearings on UFOs by a three-man subcommittee headed by Rep. Joseph Karth. Meanwhile, Rep. Overton Brooks (D-La.) contacts Hillenkoetter and Keyhoe, asking them to prepare the best UFO cases and proof of official censorship for a meeting on August 24. (UFOEv, p. 139; Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, pp. 77–78)

1961, August 5 — 8:20 a.m. John Lee-Steere sees a "snowy white meshlike substance" float to the ground from 12 white metallic discs traveling in pairs over the Mount Hale shearing station, 50 miles northwest of Meekatharra, Western Australia. Sheep-shearing contractor Edwin C. Payne picks up the material and it fades away in his hands. ("Discs Trail White Fibrous Stuff," APRO Bulletin, January 1962, p. 1; Keith Basterfield, "Angel Hair: An Australian Perspective," IUR 27, no. 1 (Spring 2002): 7; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: July–December 1961, The Author, 2003, p. 23; Clark III 124; Clark IV 151)

1961, August 11 — Keyhoe writes a letter to Rep. Overton Brooks that details NICAP's proposal to end UFO secrecy as a means of avoiding an "accidental war." He proposes creating a UFO information agency that would release all UFO reports "from Dec. 8, 1941 to date, these not to be summaries but complete reports." (Donald E. Keyhoe to Overton Brooks, August 11, 1961; Powell, Keyhoe, 306–307)

1961, August 12 — 9:00 p.m. College seniors J. B. Furkenhoff and Tom Phipps see a large oval object with a fin extending from one edge to the center, like a sled with lighted car running boards, near Old Mission High School on 50th Street in Kansas City, Missouri. It hovers at 50 feet altitude for 3–5 minutes, then flies straight up, disappearing in about 5 seconds. (Sparks, p. 289; Patrick Gross, "Kansas City 1961, a Blue Book 'Unknown'")

1961, Mid-August — House Committee staff consultant Richard P. Hines visits ATIC in Dayton, where Col. Robert Friend, Hynek, and other officials give him a tour, tell him that Project Blue Book has the UFO problem at hand, and that Rep. McCormack has been pressured by NICAP to hold hearings. Hines leaves ATIC "favorably impressed." (Jacobs, UFO Controversy in America, Signet ed., 1976, pp. 160–161; Swords 293)

1961, August 16 — George Hunt Williamson, now going by the name of Michel d'Obrenovic, arrives in Japan at the invitation of the Cosmic Brotherhood Association and its contactee leader Yusuke Matsumura. (Zirger and Martinelli, The Incredible Life of George Hunt Williamson, Verdechiari, 2016, pp. 129–130)

1961, August 17 — Keyhoe writes a letter to Rep. Joseph Karth (D-Minn.), chair of a three-man House UFO Subcommittee, and offers to send him a copy of NICAP's proposal for a UFO information agency. (Donald E. Keyhoe to Joseph E. Karth, August 17, 1961)

1961, August 22 — Adm. Roscoe Hillenkoetter signs a NICAP letter to Congress urging "immediate congressional action to reduce the dangers from secrecy about UFOs, including accidental war and the Russians falsely claiming UFOs are Soviet weapons. (Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, p. 85)

1961, August 25? — Five people at Toulouse, France, see a luminous, yellow object, 24 feet in diameter, flying about 30 feet above a road. The object has horizontal and vertical bands of darker tone that give the appearance of "windows." The UFO flies upwards very quickly when the car reaches town. (Vallée, Magonia, p. 282)

1961, August 28 — Rep. Karth, after receiving a copy of NICAP's plan to end UFO secrecy, writes a harsh letter to Keyhoe and attacks him for trying to defame and ridicule the Air Force. He had thought Keyhoe would be proving the existence of spaceships, but he knows now he cannot do this. Therefore, he is no longer interested in holding hearings. He tells a newspaper reporter that he will not be part of Keyhoe's "cheap scheme to discredit the Air Force." (Letter from Joseph E. Karth to Donald E. Keyhoe, August 28, 1961; Jacobs, UFO Controversy in America, Signet ed., 1976, pp. 161–162; Powell, Keyhoe, 307–308)

1961, September — A National Intelligence Estimate concludes that the USSR has no more than 25 ICBMs and will not possess more in the near future, effectively discrediting the missile gap myth. (Wikipedia, "Missile gap")

1961, September 2 — 4:40–4:50 p.m. A man named Ziegler is reclining outside his home in the northeast section of Albuquerque, New Mexico, when he sees a shiny round white object moving erratically to the west. At two different times it emits several small silvery objects about one-sixth the size of the main object. It fades out of sight to the south. (NICAP, "Silver Object and Smaller Ones Emitted"; Sparks, p. 289; Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects: A Further Look," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 25)

1961, September 6 — The National Reconnaissance Office is officially launched with headquarters in Chantilly, Virginia. It designs, builds, launches, and operates the reconnaissance satellites of the federal government, and provides satellite intelligence to several government agencies, particularly signals intelligence (SIGINT) to the National Security Agency, imagery intelligence (IMINT) to the National Geospace-Intelligence Agency, and measurement and signature intelligence (MASINT) to the Defense Intelligence Agency. Its existence remains top secret until September 18, 1992. The move creates a protocol that requires the CIA deputy director and the undersecretary of the Air Force to co-manage all space reconnaissance and aerial espionage programs. The public face of the NRO is the Office of Space Systems. (Wikipedia, "National Reconnaissance Office"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 168–169)

1961, September 12 — After Richard H. Hall on September 1 sends Rep. Karth an interim response to his August 24 letter, Keyhoe also replies with a conciliatory letter, admitting he used "poor choice of words" and holding out a hope for congressional hearings on UFOs. (Richard H. Hall to Joseph E. Karth, September 1, 1961; Donald E. Keyhoe to Joseph E. Karth, September 12, 1961; Powell, Keyhoe, 308)

1961, September 16 — Rep. Overton Brooks (D-La.) dies of a heart attack; the August 24 meeting about UFO evidence has not taken place. He is replaced on the House Science and Astronautics Committee by Rep. George Paul Miller (D-Calif.) who indicates he will not order UFO hearings. ("Rep. Brooks Dies in Washington," Shreveport (La.) Journal, September 16, 1961, p. 1; Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, p. 78)

1961, September 18 — Fourth Officer G. Gendall of the cargo ship Queensland Star, in the Indian Ocean, sees a white UFO through a cloud formation. It vanishes into the clouds and then reappears, dropping toward the sea. The water in the surrounding area grows intensely bright. Particles of white matter continue to fall into the sea after the object disappears, and the sky and water are illuminated for several minutes. (Sanderson, InvRes, pp. 47–48; Dolan, USO1, 222)

1961, September 19 — 5:22 a.m. The North Concord Air Force Station [now closed] at East Mountain, Vermont, picks up an unidentified radar target at 62,000 feet for 18 minutes. It moves at a slow speed on an erratic course. (NICAP, "Radar Tracks Object before and after Hill Abduction")

1961, September 19 — Keyhoe has smoothed things over with Rep. Karth, who writes: "Now that we better understand each other, I would hope we could properly proceed with a hearing early next year—providing the new chairman [Miller] authorizes hearings." (Joseph E. Karth to Donald E. Keyhoe, September 19, 1961; "Majority Leader Support Indicates Early Congressional Action: Chairman Karth Backs Open Hearings," UFO Investigator 2, no. 2 (October 1961): 1–2)

1961, September 19–20 — 10:30 p.m. Barney and Betty Hill are driving home to Portsmouth, New Hampshire, from a vacation in Quebec, going south on US Highway 3. Near Groveton, New Hampshire, Betty sees a bright light moving upward and erratically, growing larger. Later, Barney stops the car at a scenic picnic area south of Twin Mountain. Through binoculars, Betty sees a solid object against the moon that "appeared to be flashing thin pencils of different colored lights." Barney thinks it's a plane, though it might be "playing games" with them. Barney drives slowly through Franconia Notch, watching the object. At one point it passes near the Old Man of the Mountain. About one mile south of Indian Head (north of Lincoln), the object rapidly descends toward their vehicle, causing Barney to stop in the middle of the highway. The huge, silent craft hovers approximately 80–100 feet above the Hills' 1957 Chevrolet Bel Air and fills the entire field of view in the windshield. It reminds Barney of a huge pancake. Carrying his pistol in his pocket, he steps away from the vehicle and moves closer to the object. Using the binoculars, Barney claims see about 8–11 humanoid figures who are peering out of the craft's windows, seeming to look at him. In unison, all but one figure move to what appears to be a panel on the rear wall of the hallway that encircles the front portion of the craft. The one remaining figure continues to look at Barney and communicates a message telling him to "stay where you are and keep looking." Barney has a recollection of observing the humanoid forms wearing glossy black uniforms and black caps. Red lights on what appears to be bat-wing fins begin to telescope out of the sides of the craft, and a long structure descends from the bottom of the craft. The UFO approaches to within 50–80 feet overhead and 300 feet away from him. Barney tears the binoculars away from his eyes and runs back to his car. In a near hysterical state, he tells Betty, "They're going to capture us!" He sees the object again shift its location to directly above the vehicle. He drives away at high speed, telling Betty to look for the object. She rolls down the window and looks up. Almost immediately, the Hills hear a rhythmic series of beeping or buzzing sounds which seem to bounce off the trunk of their vehicle. The car vibrates and a tingling sensation passes through them. At this point in time they experience the onset of an altered state of consciousness that leaves their minds dulled. A second series of beeping sounds return them to full consciousness. They find that they have traveled nearly 35 miles south, but have only vague, spotty memories of this section of road. They recall making a sudden, unplanned turn, encountering a roadblock, and observing a fiery orb in the road. At 5:00 a.m., they arrive home, about two hours later than expected. Barney feels compelled to examine his genitals, and they both take long showers. Betty notices a pinkish powder and a tear in her dress. There are shiny, concentric circles on their car's trunk that were not there the previous day. Betty and Barney experiment with a compass, noting that when they move it close to the spots, the needle whirls rapidly. But when they move it a few inches away from the shiny spots, it drops down. 1961, September 20 — 2:14 a.m. Pease AFB [now Pease Air National Guard Base] in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, picks up an unidentified radar blip 4 miles away from the base, with no visual contact. (NICAP, "Radar Tracks Object before and after Hill Abduction")

1961, September 21–22 — Betty Hill calls Pease AFB and reports her UFO incident (without mentioning the figures). Maj. Paul W. Henderson of the 100th Bomb Wing calls back with a few questions.

1961, September 24 — 11:35 p.m. Czeslaw K. Kawecki is walking along the sand dunes separating Łebsko Lake from the Baltic Sea to the west of Łeba, Poland. He hears the noise of rushing water and sees the surface of the sea rising from a spot about 1,000 feet from shore. Water gushes from the top, then a black object like an elongated triangle emerges and hovers, apparently sucking up water. A belt of white lights becomes visible, as well as a bent antenna on the object's rounded top. He estimates it is 16 feet across and 20 feet high. After one minute, a second light appears on the underside, much brighter than the belt. The object then tilts for 30 seconds, then glides about 150 feet eastward, stops, and returns to its first position. Its base has some hook-shaped streaks, nd three triangular spikes, and a gleaming disk like polished silver that reflects the light. The object then moves north and upward at an angle, diminishing in size until it disappears. It is in view for 4–5 minutes. Two fisherman have also seen the display. (Leonard G. Cramp, Piece for a Jig-saw, Somerton, 1967, pp. 129–130; Dolan, USO1, 223–224)

1961, September 26 — Betty Hill writes to Donald E. Keyhoe (mentioning the figures Barney remembers seeing) and asks for more information. She mentions that she and Barney are considering hypnosis. (Mark Rodeghier, "Hypnosis and the Hill Abduction Case," IUR 19, no. 2 (March/April 1994): 4–6, 23–24; Michael D. Swords, "Radio Signals from Space, Alien Probes, and Betty Hill," IUR 29, no. 4 (July 2005): 15)

1961, September 27 — Allen Dulles resigns as director of central intelligence; John A. McCone replaces him.

1961, September 27 — 7:57 a.m. The radar operator on a USAF Airborne Early Warning and Control aircraft off the California coast spots five targets on his scope. Four of the objects are on a heading of 90°, and all of them are moving at a high rate of speed. They soon disappear into sea clutter. Three minutes later, two objects appear heading 70° then also disappear into sea clutter. The speed of one of the objects is measured at about 2,070 mph over a distance of 230 miles. While the two objects are on the scope, a single stationary object also appears. After remaining stationary for about two minutes, it moves on a heading of 265° at 70 mph and is lost in the sea clutter. The objects can only be painted with the IFF on. The radar is an APS-95. (NICAP, "Uncorrelated Targets on APS-95"; Sparks, p. 290)

1961, September 29–October 3 — Betty Hill has a series of intensely vivid dreams in which she and Barney encounter a strange roadblock and are approached by a group of men. She loses consciousness and awakes on board a craft where they are given a medical examination by "intelligent, humanoid beings." (Clark III 581–583; Clark IV 639–641)

1961, Autumn — Evening. Emanoil Manoliu, son of the prominent novelist Mihail Sadoveanu, is at the Neamț Monastery west of Târgu Neamț, Romania, when he sees a blinding, multicolored light. After a few seconds it rises quickly and he can see it looks like a disc with a concave base about 20–23 feet long and 10 feet broad. It vanishes "like a tornado in the air" and he feels the rush of wind. The next day he goes to the site with a priest and finds an area of singed grass and a light imprint in the soil. (Hobana and Weverbergh 167–168)

1961, October 1 — The Defense Intelligence Agency, created at the request of Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara to integrate all military intelligence operations, begins work with a handful of employees in borrowed office space. Its mission is the continuous task of collecting, processing, evaluating, analyzing, integrating, producing, and disseminating military intelligence for the Department of Defense and related national stakeholders. Other objectives include more efficiently allocating scarce intelligence resources, more effectively managing all DoD intelligence activities, and eliminating redundancies in facilities, organizations, and tasks. (Wikipedia, "Defense Intelligence Agency")

1961, October 2 — Around 12:00 noon. Waldo J. Harris, private pilot and real-estate broker, is getting ready to take off in a Mooney M20A from Utah Central Airport [now closed] in Granger, Utah, when he sees a bright spot in the sky. After he takes off, he notices that the light is still in the same location. He flies toward the object to get a better look, and sees that the UFO has no wings or tail and is hovering with a slight rocking motion. He later estimates the diameter at 35–50 feet, with a thickness of about 4 feet, and the appearance of sand-blasted aluminum. Harris estimates he has approached within 2 miles of the object before it rises abruptly and zooms away for 10 miles before it resumes a rocking hover. He approaches again, but it departs in about 2–3 seconds. Several other people, including airport controller Jay Galbraith, also see the UFO from the airport. Investigators from Hill AFB near Ogden arrive quickly. Airport attendant Russell M. Woods tells them he thinks the object was at 2,500 feet altitude. On October 9, Douglas M. Crouch forwards the Hill AFB official report, including transcripts of interviews, to Wright-Patterson AFB in Ohio, saying "No unusual meteorological or astronomical conditions were present to account for the sighting." Nonetheless, Blue Book wanders from Venus to a research balloon to a sundog (an assessment James E. McDonald calls "nonsensical") as explanations. ("'Flying Saucer' Observed over Valley," Deseret News (Salt Lake City), October 3, 1961, p. 1B; "Pentagon Calls Utah Saucer 'Ballooney,'" Deseret News (Salt lake City), October 11, 1961, p. 12; "Pilot Ground Crew, Observe Disc," APRO Bulletin, January 1962, pp. 1, 3; UFOEv, pp. 1–2; James E. 1961, October 4–5 — Two IBM engineers, C. D. Jackson and Robert E. Hohmann, have lunch in Washington, D.C., with Donald Keyhoe, who shows them the letter from Betty Hill. (Michael D. Swords, "Radio Signals from Space, Alien Probes, and Betty Hill," IUR 29, no. 4 (July 2005): 15)

1961, October 12 — After 8:00 p.m. Television commentator Frank Edwards is leaving the WTTV studio in Indianapolis, Indiana, when he notices a strange object in the distance. It is spherical and has a band of light around its middle. Red lights are blinking on the bottom of the object. The UFO itself is silvery, apparently metallic, and reflects the city's lights. As Edwards watches, the UFO spirals upward, stops, hovers again, and speeds away to the south. The crew of a train on the Indianapolis Belt Railroad (fireman Jerry Carter and engineer Nolan S. Garman) say that the band of light is a row of square portholes from which a bright, pulsating white light is flashing. Two security guards at a meat-packing plant (Bud Kaesel and Walter Jamison) see the object pass directly overhead, rotating clockwise. ("Frank Edwards Sights UAO," APRO Bulletin, November 1961, p. 1; "Frank Edwards, Many Witnesses, Sight UFO over Indianapolis," UFO Investigator 2, no. 3 (Jan./Feb. 1962): 5; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 76–77)

1961, October 14 — 5:00 p.m. Mrs. Erwin Riley, a summer resident in Two Harbors, Minnesota, sees a large object slide into the water of Lake Superior about one mile from shore and bob about on the surface. She summons a neighbor, Jack Ray, and they both watch through binoculars, but they can't make out what it is. At dusk, the Lake County Sheriff responds to their call, but he can't see much due to swells on the lake surface. He calls the Air Force and Coast Guard to make sure it's not part of a training exercise. Shortly afterward, Riley sees the object rise into the air and travel southeast at about the speed of a car. A Coast Guard search the next day turns up only a floating log. ("Flying Log?" APRO Bulletin, November 1961, p. 3; Dolan, USO1, 225)

1961, October 14 — 5:30 p.m. Mayor Michael Burson and his wife watch two pairs of UFOs move to the east above Sunset, Utah. The first pair looks like puffy cotton joined together by "stringy stuff," and the second pair are metallic discs. ("More Discs in Utah," APRO Bulletin, March 1962, p. 2)

1961, October 14–15 — George Van Tassel holds the 8th Annual Spacecraft Convention at Giant Rock, California. On the second day is an air show featuring Hollywood stunt flyer Cliff Winters. ("1961 Giant Rock Convention Is Disappointing," Saucer News 8, no. 4 (December 1961): 1, 12–13)

1961, October 15 — 5:00 p.m. Mrs. John P. Vanicky and Norine Gribble are driving from Marquette, Michigan, to Hurley, Wisconsin, when they see a brown cigar-shaped object spouting fire from its rear and moving southeast. They stop the car and watch for 20 minutes until it disappears. (Mrs. John P. Vanicky, "Tells of Seeing Strange Object in Sky Sunday," Duluth (Minn.) News-Tribune, October 19, 1961, p. 28; "Flying Log?" APRO Bulletin, November 1961, p. 3)

1961, October 19 — NICAP secretary Richard H. Hall writes to Walter N. Webb at Hayden Planetarium in Boston, Massachusetts, and asks him to talk to Betty and Barney Hill. (Clark III 578–579; Clark IV 636)

1961, October 21 — 2:00 a.m. A brilliant fireball flashes in front of Richard and Rhonda DuBois's car on US Highway 60 as they are driving between Datil and Pie Town, New Mexico. It then veers into the sky. Later, as they approach a canyon they see that the light is traveling along in front of them. It breaks into four lights that move along with the car, even as DuBois drives at 100 mph, until they stop at a roadside motel. The lights then zoom straight up and disappear. ("Woman Says Flying Objects Chase Car," Garden Grove (Calif.) News, October 23, 1961; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 231; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: July–December 1961, The Author, 2003, p. 97)

1961, October 21 — Webb, initially skeptical, winds up interviewing the Hills for 6 hours. He finds that their amnesia concerning some parts of the episode has unsettled them, and Betty tells him she had vivid nightmares for six straight nights a couple weeks after the incident. (Clark III 581; Clark IV 639)

1961, October 26 — Walter Webb's report to NICAP concludes that the Hills are telling the truth. (Walter N. Webb, "A Dramatic UFO Encounter in the White Mountains, N.H., September 19–20, 1961," NICAP Massachusetts Subcommittee, October 26, 1961; Mark Rodeghier, "Hypnosis and the Hill Abduction Case," IUR 19, no. 2 (March/April 1994): 4–6; Clark III 581; Clark IV 639)

1961, October 30 — The Soviet RDS-202 hydrogen bomb, the 50-megaton Tsar Bomba, is supposedly the most powerful nuclear weapon ever tested. It is detonated at the Sukhoy Nos Cape of Severny Island, Novaya Zemla, Arkhangelsk Oblast, Russia. It flattens entire villages in surrounding areas and breaks windows in Finland 1,000 miles away. (Wikipedia, "Tsar Bomba")

1961, October 30 — Engineer Carl H. Geary Jr. watches four luminous blue discs, each with a band of different-colored lights or portholes, moving slowly in a straight-line formation above Derry, Pennsylvania. They are apparently oscillating with a sideways motion. When they reach a hill, they give off a blue flash. Geary jumps in his car and paces them on a parallel road, but the objects finally disappear behind a mountain. ("Frequent UFO Operations, Many at Night," UFO Investigator 2, no. 3 (Jan./Feb. 1962): 6)

1961, November 1 — A small, informal conference on SETI is held at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory's facility in Green Bank, West Virginia, with astronomer Frank Drake as the host. The group includes J. Peter Pearman, Otto Struve, Carl Sagan, Melvin Calvin, Philip Morrison, Dana W. Atchley Jr., Bernard M. Oliver, John C. Lilly, and Su-Shu Huang. Drake has written this equation on a chalkboard: $N = R\, f_p\, n_e\, f_l\, f_i\, f_c\, L$. The equation, the Green Bank Formula, summarizes the main concepts that scientists must contemplate when considering the question of extraterrestrial life capable of communicating by radio across space. The equation estimates the number (N) of detectable civilizations in space as equal to the rate (R) of star formation, times the fraction (f_p) of stars that form planets, times the number (n_e) of planets hospitable to life, times the fraction (f_l) of those planets where life actually emerges, times the fraction (f_i) of planets where life evolves into intelligent beings, times the fraction (f_c) of planets with intelligent creatures capable of interstellar communication, times the length of time (L) that such a civilization remains detectable. It is more properly thought of as an approximation rather than as a serious attempt to determine a precise number. (Wikipedia, "Drake equation"; "The Drake Equation Revisited, Part I," Astrobiology Magazine, September 29, 2003; H. 1961, November 3 — 4:30 p.m. Mr. E. Adkins observes a brilliant object with an orange center flying south over Eyres Monsell, Leicester, England, at an estimated 600 mph. It is triangular in shape and about 300 feet wide. ("Triangular Object over Eyres Monsell," Flying Saucer Review 8, no. 2 (March/April 1962): 24)

1961, November 13 — The AFCIN-1E-0 Draft Policy letter (Betz Memo) is prepared by Lt. Col. Norman M. Rosner for Col. Ward Reid Betz. Among other things, it specifies three peacetime functions of the 4602d Air Intelligence Service Squadron at Ent AFB [now the US Olympic Training Center], Colorado Springs, Colorado: UFO investigations, Project Moon Dust (an exploitation program to locate, recover, and deliver descended foreign space vehicles), and Operation Blue Fly (to facilitate delivery to the Foreign Technological Division of Moon Dust and other items of great technical intelligence interest). These three functions involve "employment of qualified field intelligence personnel on a quick reaction basis to recover or perform field exploitation of unidentified flying objects, or known Soviet/Bloc aerospace vehicles, weapons systems, and/or residual components of such equipment." (US Department of the Air Force, "AFCIN-1E-D/Colonel Betz," November 13, 1961; Howard Blum, Out There: The Government's Secret Quest for Extraterrestrials, Simon & Schuster, 1990, pp. 71–72; "AFCIN- Paul Dean, "The Rejuvenated 'Betz Memo,'" UFOs: Documenting the Evidence, May 8, 2016; Kevin D. 1961, Late November — Evening. A group of four friends are hunting on a Sunday in the area of Harvey, North Dakota. As they are returning in the car, the two men in the front seat notice a descending glowing object in the sky ahead of them. Assuming they are witnessing a plane crash, they rush to the scene of its landing, where they find at 150 yards distance, a "silo-appearing craft which was sticking in the ground with this glow around it." The men shine a hand spotlight and shine it on the object, whereupon they see four human-looking individuals standing around it. At this point they seem to hear an explosion and "everything went out." The principal witness wakes up from dozing in the back seat as the car is negotiating soggy ground looking for the craft and crew. They return to the spot where the landing takes place, and they see the figures again, wearing white coveralls and standing 5 feet high. They get out of the car and one figure waves them away. Eventually, the men agree to return to a small town, possibly Martin, North Dakota, 11 miles away, where they find a police officer, who listens to the story and agrees to accompany them back to the site. They see red lights moving in the field and both cars go in pursuit of them. The lights go out, the police officer drives away, and the four men resume driving home. Two miles down the highway, the silo-like object reappears, landing gently 150 yards away with two of the figures watching them. Two of the men get out of the car again and shine the spotlight on the craft. One of the men is carrying a rifle; he drops on the ground and shoots, apparently hitting one of the figures in the right shoulder. The figure spins around, goes down on his knees, gets help from the other figure, then yells, "Now what the hell did you do that for?" Weirdly, as soon as the men return to the car, the two who have remained inside insist the rifle had not been removed and no shot was fired. The primary witness (who remains in the car) has no recollection of what happened to the craft and figures. By the time they get home, dawn is breaking, and their wives are waiting for them. They all know it has taken longer than it should have to return. A few hours later, around 12:00 noon, the principal witness is at work when three well-groomed, official-looking men visit him. He presumes they are Air Force intelligence officers who say they have a "report" about the previous night's event. They ask him what clothes he was wearing and what the object looked like, but they never ask about the shooting. Later, they show up at his house and ask to see his hunting gear and boots. They tell him not to say anything more about the incident. In January 1968, US Border Patrol agent [later BATF agent] Donald E. Flickinger manages to interview the primary witness, who works as a supervisor at Minot AFB hospital, and two of the others, one a small-town high school superintendent and the other an active-duty Air Force sergeant. They all are "extremely reliable and responsible," Flickinger says. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 164–165; Clark III 825–827; Clark IV 906–909)

1961, Late November — 9:30 p.m. Real estate agent Cavalheiro Mendes is walking along the beach in Balneário Pinhal, Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, when he sees a huge light 900 feet away. As he walks toward it, he sees it is a huge disc resting on the sand. He feels compelled to approach it and sees two helmeted figures come from behind the object. They seem to be telling him telepathically not to resist. Mendes finds he is completely unable to move. He feels one of them scratching his forearm with an instrument, then he blacks out. When he wakes up, he is nearly back to his beach house and it is 11:30 p.m. After a few weeks he feels anxious and sad for no apparent reason. He refuses to be hypnotized. (Lorenzen, Flying Saucer Occupants, Signet, 1967, pp. 199–200)

1961, November 22 — US Navy pilot Robert G. Robinson reaches an airspeed of 1,606 mph in a McDonnell-Douglas F4H-1F Phantom II over Edwards AFB, California. (Wikipedia, "Robert G. Robinson")

1961, November 25 — IBM engineers C. D. Jackson and Robert E. Hohmann interview the Hills. One of them expresses surprise at how long the drive took. They are mysteriously interested in whether nitrates or chemicals containing nitrates are in their car. For the first time, Barney and Betty realize that there are two hours they cannot account for. Also present is a friend of the Hills, retired USAF Maj. James McDonald, a former intelligence officer. He suggests that Betty and Barney consult a hypnotist. Boyle, "Forbidden Science Dispatches #1," Getting Spooked Substack, October 4, 2023; Clark IV 641)

1961, November 28 — President Kennedy presides over the dedication of the new CIA headquarters in Langley, Virginia. (Wikipedia, "George Bush Center for Intelligence"; CIA History Staff, 50 Years in Langley: Recollections of the Construction of CIA's Original Headquarters Building, 1961–2011, January 2012)

1961, November 30 — Covert operations against Fidel Castro are officially authorized by President Kennedy after being given the name Operation Mongoose at a White House meeting on November 3. The operation is led by USAF Gen. Edward Lansdale and goes into effect after the failed Bay of Pigs Invasion. A document from the Department of State confirms that the project aims to "help Cuba overthrow the Communist regime," including Castro, and it aims "for a revolt which can take place in Cuba by October 1962." One of Lansdale's ideas is to project a huge image of the Second Coming of Christ above the island, spread the word that Castro is the anti-Christ, shoot starburst shells from a submarine into the air, and hope far an uprising. US policymakers want to see "a new government with which the United States can live in peace." (Wikipedia, "Operation Mongoose"; Kremlin 131–133)

1961, December — Funding runs out for the Avrocar and it and related WS-606A supersonic VTOL programs are officially cancelled by the US military. (Wikipedia, "Avro Canada VZ-9 Avrocar"; Joseph Trevithick and Tyler Rogoway, "No, This Is Not A Secret UFO Crash Retrieval," The Drive: The War Zone, November 29, 2023)

1962 — According to a "former Project Blue Book Chief" (probably Maj. Friend) gun-camera films obtained during jet interceptor UFO chases are routinely referred to the CIA's National Photographic Interpretation Center (established in 1961) for analysis. Richard H. Hall writes, "This cannot be documented at present, but I heard him say so to a UFO researcher colleague. None of the photoanalysis data in these cases has been released, nor has the existence of these films ever been acknowledged." (Richard H. Hall, Uninvited Guests, Aurora, 1988, p. 179)

1962 — The Air Force tries once again to get rid of the UFO program, but its attempts to get NASA or the National Science Foundation to handle the program prove futile. It finally gives up the entire idea. The program remains at the Foreign Technology Division as a special project and without expanded resources. (Jacobs, UFO Controversy in America, Signet ed., 1976, p. 164)

1962 — Day. An Air Force pilot is flying a brand new B-52 with a full crew out of Wichita, Kansas, headed for an air base in the southwest. He notices a bright flash of sunlight in his left side and turns to see a metallic object "like polished chrome." It is pacing the aircraft near its left wingtip. The object is 4–8 feet in diameter and has no seams or markings. His First Officer is watching an identical object off the right wing, and the crewman in the tail reports that there is a round shiny metal ball following close behind the B-52. The top and bottom gunners also see spheres above and below the plane. The pilot goes into an evasive maneuver, but after 10–15 minutes the objects are maintaining their positions. He returns to his previous assigned altitude and heading. After a few minutes, the five objects leave, one at a time, first the bottom one, then the top, then the tail. The two objects on the wings shoot away at the same time and climb out of sight parallel to each other. After landing, the crew is told not to talk about the sighting at all. (Richard F. Haines, "NARCAP's Project Sphere: Are Spherical UAP a Threat to Aviation Safety?" IUR 33, no. 2 (July 2010): 5–6)

1962 — The Australian Navy's destroyer HMAS Voyager is cruising in the Bass Strait when it detects a large underwater object with its sonar (and possibly visually as well). The ship gives chase, but it disappears from the sensors traveling at a speed of more than 100 knots. (Sheryl Gottschall, "Third Australian National UFO Conference Review," UFO Research Queensland, 2003; "Seeing Is Believing," UFO Encounter, no. 222 (Feb./Mar. 2005); Carl Feindt, "Report #912," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 228–230)

1962 — 12:00 midnight. Actor Jamie Farr and his wife Joy Ann are driving through the desert near Yuma, Arizona, when they notice a light moving erratically at the top of a mountain. It zig-zags across the sky as it approaches them, moving to within 150 feet, then 60 feet of their vehicle. They can see two lights, red and blue, revolving beneath the silent object. It paces them for a short time then moves away at incredible speed. ("Jamie and Joy Farr Report UFO Sighting," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 1, no. 8 (December 1980): 3, 5)

1962 — The Argentine Navy creates a permanent commission for the study of UFOs, and the Argentine Air Force establishes a division for the same purpose. (Vicente-Juan Ballester Olmos, "Argentina: UFO Declassification," UAPSG–GEFAI, July 29, 2020)

1962 — The first UFO book to be published in Russia is a translation of Harvard astronomer's Donald Menzel's Flying Saucers (1953). (O letayushchikh tarelkakh, Izdatelstvo Inostrannoy Literatuiy, 1962)

1962 — René and Françine Fouéré establish the Groupe d'Étude des Phénomènes Aériens in Paris, France, with an initial group of 60 interested members. The following year GEPA launches a magazine, Phénomènes Spatiaux, which is published through 1978. In 1964, Lionel-Max Chassin, now retired from the army, takes over as president. (Wikipedia, "Group d'Étude des Phénomènes Aériens")

1962 — French composer Paul Misraki writes Les Extraterrestres using the pseudonym Paul Thomas. He links modern UFO sightings with biblical and mythological tales and claims that angels are aliens, that the Bible and other ancient texts are filled with many UFO flying saucer sightings, and that throughout human history extraterrestrial visitors have intervened in human affairs. Misraki is also one of the first authors to suggest that apparitions may be UFO-related phenomena. (Paul Thomas [Paul Misraki], Les Extraterrestres, Plon, 1962; Jerome Clark, "Vimanas Have Landed: Ancient Astronautics in Ufology," IUR 22, no. 3 (Fall 1997): 28–29; Clark III 109; Clark IV 136)

1962 — Contactee Dorothy Martin moves from southern California to Mount Shasta in the northern part of the state. There she establishes the Association of Sananda and Sanat Kumara. Under the name Sister Thedra, she continues to practice channeling and participate in contactee groups until her death in 1992. (Clark III 720; Clark IV 788)

1962, January — The Federal Aviation Administration expands the restricted airspace in the vicinity of Groom Lake, Nevada, and the lakebed becomes the center of a 600-square-mile addition to restricted area R-4808N. (Wikipedia, "Area 51")

1962, January — The IBM 7950 Harvest computer, designed to be used for cryptanalysis, is delivered to the National Security Agency. It includes Tractor, a large automated tape cartridge library. An NSA-conducted evaluation finds that Harvest is more powerful than the best commercially available machine by a factor of 50–200, depending on the task. It remains in use until 1976. One purpose of the machine is to search text for keywords from a watchlist. From a single foreign cipher system, Harvest is able to scan more than 7 million decrypts for any occurrences of some 7,000 key words in under four hours. The computer is also used for codebreaking, and this is enhanced by a system codenamed Rye, which allows remote access to Harvest. (Wikipedia, "IBM 7950 Harvest"; "Timeline of the IBM Stretch/Harvest Era (1956–1961)," computerhistory.org)

1962, January 29 — A Royal Dutch Air Force pilot flying an F-86 Sabrejet sights a UFO over eastern Netherlands. The jet's radar also picks up the object and control tower radar (somewhere) is also tracking it. He attempts to give the object an urgent warning by radio, but it goes unheeded. He arms a Sidewinder rocket and tries to close in, but the UFO pulls away swiftly before he can fire. ("New Sightings by Navy, FAA, and Airline Observers: Dutch Jet Pilot Tries to Down UFO," UFO Investigator 2, no. 5 (Aug./Sept. 1962): 1–2)

1962, February — Richard M. Bissell Jr. leaves the CIA and is replaced as head of the Directorate of Plans by Richard Helms.

1962, February — Maj. William T. Coleman is replaced as Pentagon UFO spokesman by Maj. Carl R. Hart.

1962, February — Vice-Admiral Roscoe Hillenkoetter resigns from NICAP, stating that NICAP has gone as far as it can and should no longer criticize USAF investigations. (Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, pp. 85–86; Powell, Keyhoe, 311)

1962, February — The Hills begin making numerous trips over several months to try to find their encounter site but are unsuccessful. (Clark III 583; Clark IV 641)

1962, February — Alex Birch, 14, snaps an out-of-focus photo of five domed discs that he and two friends see hovering 500 feet above his backyard in Mosborough, Sheffield, England. Alec and his father show the photo later to the Air Ministry, which pronounces them "temperature inversions" in October. However, in an interview on BBC-2 television on October 6, 1972, Alex confesses that he had superimposed images painted on glass over the backyard scenery, fooling even his father. ("Schoolboy Snaps Saucer," Flying Saucer Review 8, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1962): 4; "The Alec Birch Photograph," Flying Saucer Review 9, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1963): 29; Gordon Creighton, "'No Kidding This Time. 1962, February 6 — The US Air Force issues the last of its UFO fact sheets (no. 179-62). In the future it will issue press releases. ("Relax! Flying Saucers Belong to This World," Boston (Mass.) Globe, February 7, 1962, p. 21; "Answer to the AF Release," UFO Investigator 2, no. 3 (January/February 1962): 4; UFOEv, p. 108)

1962, February 9 — 3:30 a.m. Ronald Wildman is driving a new Vauxhall car through Aston Clinton, Buckinghamshire, UK, when see sees a silent, white, oval-shaped object with black vents spaced at regular intervals around it. It is about 20–30 feet above the ground and at least 40 feet wide. When Wildman is within 60 feet of it, his car slows to 20 mph, but his headlights do not fade. The object keeps ahead of him by 20 feet for a while, then comes lower and a white haze appears around it. It veers off to the right at terrific speed and vanishes, brushing particles of frost from the tree tops onto his windshield. ("The Ivinghoe Flying Saucer: Mr. Ronald Wildman's Sensational Story," Flying Saucer Review 8, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1962): 18, iv; Charles Bowen, "Silently, Out of the Night Sky," The Unexplained, no. 5 (1980): 100)

1962, February 10 — CIA pilot Francis Gary Powers is exchanged for Soviet spy Rudolf Abel on the Glienicke Bridge that connects Potsdam to West Berlin, Germany.

1962, February 20 — Astronaut John Glenn pilots the Friendship 7 Project Mercury capsule for three orbits and just short of 5 hours flying time, becoming the first American to orbit the earth. (Wikipedia, "Mercury-Atlas 6")

1962, February 24 — NORAD Requirement 64-73 states that its radar coverage "would provide warning from all directions, not just northern approaches." (Clark III 811; Clark IV 903)

1962, February 28 —The first A-12 test aircraft covertly arrives at Groom Lake, Nevada, from Burbank, California. (Wikipedia, "Area 51")

1962, March — Chemical engineer Leon Davidson writes a two-part article in Saucer News explaining how he has become convinced that the CIA, especially under the influence of Allen Dulles, has engineered disinformation about UFOs and even manufactured some seemingly legitimate radar sightings as a tool in the Cold War. Its aim is to cause the Soviet Union to waste time and effort in preparing defenses against fictitious aircraft and weapons that the US might be developing. Furthermore, UFOs can be used to capture headlines, diverting attention from unwelcome news coverage of espionage operations. Davidson writes that Dulles has resorted to using contactees and UFO organizations as a propaganda vehicle. Messages supposedly from spacemen calling for a halt in nuclear testing could influence public opinion in a test ban treaty that, in effect, would benefit the US more than the Russians, since the Soviets were seen as overtaking the American lead in weapons development. Davidson attributes CIA involvement in the claims of George Adamski and Daniel Fry. He also points out that electronic countermeasures (ECM) equipment is capable of creating fake radar returns and goes so far as to say that secret working models of saucers, perhaps piloted by "midgets," are responsible for some sightings. (Leon Davidson, "ECM + CIA = UFO: Or, How to Cause Radar Sightings," Flying Saucer Review 6, no. 2 (March/April 1960): 9–12; Leon Davidson, "An Open Letter to Saucer Researchers, Part One," Saucer News 9, no. 1 (March 1962): 8–11; Leon Davidson, "An Open Letter to Saucer Researchers, Part Two," Saucer News 9, no. 2 (June 1962): 8–10; Gerald K. Haines, "CIA's Role in the Study of UFOs, 1947–90," Studies in Intelligence 40, no. 5 (1997): 67–84)

1962, March — Betty and Barney Hill meet with Patrick J. Quirke, a psychiatrist at the Baldpate Sanitarium in Georgetown, Massachusetts, but he is unsympathetic and discourages them from undergoing hypnosis. (Clark III 583; Clark IV 641)

1962, March 25 — The Hills meet with a psychiatrist (Duncan Stephens of the Exeter Clinic, New Hampshire) who rules out simultaneous hallucination. Around this time, Barney develops a series of warts in an almost geometrically perfect circular ring in his groin but does not associate his malaise with the UFO incident. (Clark III 583–584; Clark IV 641–642)

1962, March 26 — 1:35 p.m. USAF Capt. J. M. Lowery, from an unspecified aircraft, sees a thin, cylindrical object, 1/3 snout, 2/3 tail fins, fly at an estimated Mach 2.7 (1,800 mph) at Ramstein Air Base near Ramstein-Miesenbach, Germany. At first sight the object appears like a small delta-wing fighter. When it reaches the 3 o'clock position, the object appears more like a sidewinder missile. As the object travels from the 3 o'clock position to the 5 o'clock position, the pilot has the impression of shape changing to the appearance of a dart target. The duration is 5–8 seconds. (NICAP, "Missile-Like Object Observed from Aircraft"; Sparks, p. 291; John Greenewald, "Project Blue Book: Ramstein Air Force Base UFO Encounter, March 26, 1962 (Unidentified),” The Black Vault, August 7, 2024)

1962, March 27–30 — George Adamski claims to attend a Twelve Counsellors Meeting on Saturn that addresses the threat of nuclear war on Earth. In the report that he publishes in June, Adamski writes that the “present explosions of atomic energy are going in the wrong direction, and if these experiments do not stop, the only results will be a lost civilization… This is even affecting their planets.” Ridiculed by many, some of Adamski’s descriptions in the report about his trip clearly show this was a deeply spiritual experience for him, which may have unbalanced him for some time. (George Adamski, George Adamski’s Special Report: My Trip to the Twelve Counsellors Meeting That Took Place on Saturn, March 27–30, 1962, Science of Life, 1962; “Final Years,” The Adamski Case, June 11, 2009)

1962, March 29 — 11:32 a.m. A group of six men (E. P. Taylor, R. C. Bauld, V. Watkins, M. Lush, R. E. Goodall, and M. Dentice) on a fishing trip at Kinloch, New Zealand, see a UFO hovering above Whangamata Bay from their boat, Ponui, which was about a half mile away from the Kinloch Marina. It resembles a parachute at first as it hovers for about 2 minutes, but through binoculars it appears to be rotating counterclockwise, and soon changes to the shape of a cross. It speeds away suddenly, disappearing in 4 seconds. (“Fishermen See UFO,” Flying Saucer Review 8, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1962): 23)

1962, Spring or summer — All base personnel on flying status attend a briefing in the theater at the Clinton-Sherman AFB [now the Clinton-Sherman Industrial Airpark] near Burns Flat, Oklahoma. The airmen are shown a short 20–30-minute Air Force film showing, spliced together without interpretation, five or six gun-camera clips apparently documenting attempts by aircraft to intercept UFOs. Afterward, the commander of the 4213d Strategic Wing reads a statement (probably JANAP 146(D)) stipulating fines and jail sentences for anyone publicly reporting a UFO sighting and hands out UFO sighting forms in the event of an incident. One technician recalls there is a section on reporting any electronic signature emitted from the UFO picked up by specific ECM devices. (Nukes 123–125)

1962, April — An informant of Leonard H. Stringfield, a captain in the US Naval Reserve attached to the 354th Tactical Fighter Wing deployed to Wright-Patterson AFB as an exchange pilot, is leading his crew on a running trip through the base. They enter a hangar that they think contains an equipment room, but they are confronted by an air police sentry with a submachine gun. Nearby on two engine test stands is a strange object resembling a disc 12–15 feet long and 8 feet deep. It has no markings, insignia, or rivets. The object is roped off and eight guards are standing parade around it. The guard turns them away and they exit the hangar. The crew returns to its base in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, one week later, and the captain is reprimanded by the brigadier general of the combat wing, saying that he has broken security. He agrees that he has seen nothing. (Leonard H. Stringfield, UFO Crash Retrievals: Status Report III, Amassing the Evidence, The Author, June 1982, pp. 88–89)

1962, April 18 — Evening. A red, glowing object is first seen at a great height over Oneida, New York, heading west silently. There are reports from Kansas and Colorado. NORAD radar picks up the object; ADC alerts several bases, including Nellis AFB near Las Vegas, Nevada. Fighters are scrambled from Luke AFB near Phoenix, Arizona, and the jets are possibly heard over Nephi, Utah, after the object passes overhead. Capt. Herman Gordon Shields, flying a C-119 two miles west of Levan, Utah, sees it as a slender object. A man in Silver City, Utah, claims that the object is a glowing ball of light about the size of a soccer ball. He says it is white with a yellowish tint and a bright yellow jagged flame coming from the rear: “As the object passed over Robinson [in Ogden, Utah?], it slowed down in [the] air, and after, [a] gasping sound was heard, the object spurted ahead again. After this procedure was repeated three or four times, the object arched over and began descending to earth after which the object turned bluish color and then burned out or went dark. After the object began to slow down it began to wobble or fishtail in its path.” Several people see the object over Eureka, Utah, apparently crashing and interrupting electrical service from a power plant close to the landing site. It is described as a “glowing, orange oval which emitted a low, whirring sound.” It takes off a few minutes later, continuing to the west. The object lights up the streets of Reno, Nevada, and then turns to Las Vegas. It blares brightly like a “tremendous, flaming sword” over Nellis AFB and then disappears from their radar scopes at 10,000 feet. Witnesses say the object is traveling almost horizontally northeast of Las Vegas until a final explosion occurs from the direction of Mesquite, Nevada. Sheriff’s deputy Walter Bun, who leads the search and rescue unit, moves the unit into the Spring Mountain area in jeeps to search for wreckage. They search through the night, and when the sun comes up they continue using aircraft. They do not find anything of importance except some ashes that might easily be the remains of a campfire started by a hunter some weeks earlier. When no one reports a downed or missing aircraft, Bun and the other deputies call off the search. The object seems to have changed direction, because at Reno it passes west to east, in Utah it is seen going southeast to northwest, and at Nephi it travels west. The duration of the sighting, from New York to Nevada, is only 32 minutes, giving a speed of 4,500 mph, below the speed of meteors. On May 8, the Air Force sends Hynek and Lt. Col. Robert Friend to Utah with Douglas M. Crouch, chief of criminal investigation at Hill AFB, south of Ogden, Utah. They determine it is a bolide. Blue Book lists it as two sightings: a multiple radar sighting at Nellis on April 18 with no visual (despite hundreds of observers in Las Vegas), and a bolide over Utah that it claims occurs on April 19. In reality, the Utah and Nevada sightings are only minutes apart (8:15 p.m. Mountain Time). However, there is quite a bit of information from numerous sources concerning this major incident, including Project Blue Book documents, and now possible confirmation by a radar man at ATIC. The case is also not explained in a Blue Book monthly sighting listing for April 1962. It is interesting that every one of these states except Utah has or was in the process of obtaining ICBM bases: New York (Plattsburg AFB); Kansas, (Forbes AFB and McConnell AFB); Utah (Minuteman production at Air Force Plant 77 at Hill AFB); Idaho (Mountain Home AFB); Montana (Malmstrom AFB); New Mexico (Walker AFB); Wyoming (F. E. Warren AFB); Arizona (Davis Monthan AFB); California (Beale AFB). (NICAP, "National Air Defense Alert"; Sparks, p. 291; "Brilliant Red Explosion Flares in Las Vegas Sky," *Las Vegas (Nev.) 1962, April 24 — 7:45 p.m. Alice W. Gasslein and her mother, Estelle W. Wilkinson, are driving near their home in Springfield, Delaware County, Pennsylvania, when they see a large domed object emitting flashes of green light moving over the roofs of nearby homes. A rotating band around the main body consists of a series of square windows from which come shafts of bright white light. They drive back home to alert her husband, Joseph A. Gasslein, an aviation worker at Boeing. By that time, the UFO is about a half-mile distant, giving off colored lights. Around 8:10 p.m., the object returns, flying toward the Gassleins' home (south of Walsh Park) only 20 feet above ground level and passes over their backyard before making a sharp left turn and moving away to the east. (Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 78–80; "Out of the Past: A Very Close CE-1," IUR 10, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1985): 9–10, 14; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1962, The Author, 2005, pp. 56–57)

1962, April 25 — The A-12 is taken on its first (unofficial and unannounced) flight with Lockheed test pilot Louis Schalk at the controls. Intended as only a taxi run, the A-12 unexpectedly takes flight and Schalk lands it 2 miles past the runway. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed A-12"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 177–178)

1962, April 26 — Schalk makes another unofficial low-altitude, 40-minute test flight with the A-12. The takeoff is perfect, but after the A-12 gets to about 300 feet it starts shedding all the "pie slice" fillets of titanium on the left side of the aircraft and one fillet on the right. (On later aircraft, those pieces are paired with triangular inserts made of radar-absorbing composite material.) Technicians spend four days finding and reattaching the pieces. Nonetheless, the flight pleases Kelly Johnson. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed A-12"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 178–179)

1962, April 30 — Schalk takes the A-12 up to 30,000 feet on its first official flight at Area 51 for 59 minutes. His top speed is 400 mph. (Jacobsen, Area 51, p. 179)

1962, April 30 — Just before 10:00 a.m. During a free-flight test (Flight 52) of the X-15 to a height of 246,700 feet (46.7 miles) by NASA pilot Joseph A. Walker from Edwards AFB, California, to Ely, Nevada, the instruments photograph 5–6 cylindrical objects. No visual confirmation. On May 11, at NASA's Second National Conference on the Peaceful Uses of Space in Seattle, Washington, Walker mentions the objects photographed (and perhaps shows the slides; it is not mentioned in the proceedings). NICAP is unable to obtain the photos. NASA claims the objects are ice flaking off the aircraft ("fireflies"). They are described by a NASA spokesman as "barbell shaped, bright-orange in color, and passing in groups up to six behind the X-15." Opinion ranges from "definitely something up there," to "film spots," to "sun rays on the lens." Jacobsen implies it was the A-12 test the same day. 1962, Late April or early May — Three women and a 10-year-old boy are driving home to Granby, Connecticut, when two bright yellow lights appear in the sky ahead. The lights cross the road and disappear behind some shrubbery.

Driving nearer and stopping, the witnesses see the lights hovering above a field, one above the other. The objects realign horizontally and move toward the car. The driver starts the car up and speeds away, but the lights are right behind her, only a few feet from the rear window and matching the car's speed. The yellow lights are only a few feet in diameter and have a reddish patch that rotates. They follow the car for four minutes then turn away. (Swords 299–300)

1962, May 4 — The A-12 achieves supersonic speed of Mach 1.1 at 40,000 feet during a test at Groom Lake, Nevada.

1962, May 11 — 7:40 p.m. Argentine Rear Adm. Eladio M. Vázquez and Capt. Aldo Molinari watch a UFO from the US Military Mission at the Comandante Espora Air Naval Base in Bahía Blanca, Argentina. ("In Argentina," APRO Bulletin, July 1963, p. 4; UFOEv, p. 170)

1962, May 13 — 4:00 a.m. Near Oncativo, Córdoba, Argentina, two women driving from Rosario see a long object flying at moderate altitude and emitting a powerful, multicolored light. They enter a fog and see through the trees a sort of "little house" on the ground, with green, red, and yellow lights set in an arrow-shaped arrangement. (Oscar A. Uriondo, "Preliminary Catalogue of Type 1 Cases in Argentina," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 12 (December 1972): 10; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1962, The Author, 2005, p. 62)

1962, May 13 — 4:20 a.m. Three truckers (Valentino Tomassini, Guro Tomassini, and Humberto Zenobi) are driving from Bahia Blanca to Jacinto Aráuz, La Pampa, Argentina, when they see a lantern-like light resting in a nearby field. It brightens and dims alternately. As they slow down, a row of 20–30 lights come on. When they approach to within 210 feet of the object, it rises up and crosses the road at a height of 12 feet. Its lights go out, a reddish flame comes from the bottom, and it makes a soft humming noise. The UFO then divides into two parts that fly off in different directions. Navy Capt. Luis Sanchez Moreno, chief of intelligence at the Port Belgrano Naval Base, interviews the witnesses. At the landing site, grass is burned over an area 180 feet in diameter, and there are damp, gray-colored patches. These are taken for analysis to either or both the Port Belgrano Naval Base and Universidad Nacional del Sur, both in or near Bahia Blanca. It consists of calcium carbonate and potassium carbonate. 1962, May 18 — 7:00 p.m. Elizabeth Scott sees a cigar-shaped object hovering in the northwest sky at Pompano Beach, Florida. The underside is brilliantly lit and the top is dark. The object remains motionless for 9 minutes, moves slowly south for 30 seconds, then speeds up and disappears rapidly to the south "like a flash of lightning." (UFOEv, p. 71; Powell, Scientist, 66)

1962, May 21 — Miguel Thomé, a reporter for La Nueva Provincia, takes several photos of a luminous object above Bahia Blanca, Argentina, one of which is exactly at a point when the object changes course. ("Fotografióse un objeto luinoso que cruzó ayer el Cielo Bahiense," La Nueva Provincia (Bahía Blanca), May 22, 1962, p. 5; UFOEv, p. 170; ClearIntent, pp. 138–139; "Un avistaje de OVNI en Bahía Blanca aparece en los archivos de la CIA de Estados Unidos," La Nueva (Bahía Blanca), February 3, 2016)

1962, May 21 — Day. Capt. Gordon Pendleton and First Officer J. P. Murphy are flying an Aer Lingus Vickers Viscount airliner above southern England at 17,000 feet when they see a brown globe-shaped object approaching head-on. It speeds 3,000 feet below the aircraft at about 700 mph. The object has a number of antenna-like projections on its surface. 1962, May 22 — 7:10–7:45 p.m. A formation of Navy planes, led by flight instructor Lt. Rodolfo César Galdos, near Comandante Espora Air Naval Base in Bahia Blanca, Argentina, observes several UFOs over a 35-minute period. Witnesses at the control tower also see an object. Student pilot Roberto Wilkinson sees a luminous object trailing his plane. It lights up his cockpit and his radio transmission is disrupted as it passes underneath. 1962, May 22 or 24 —A woman is hospitalized after she and her husband see an object land near Winifreda, Las Pampas, Argentina. Two large "robot-like creatures" emerge. Argentine Air Force investigators find a circle of scorched grass. (Lorenzen, Encounters with UFO Occupants, Berkley Medallion, 1976, p. 152)

1962, May 25 — USAF Pentagon spokesman Maj. Carl R. Hart tells NICAP that Air Force investigations involve hundreds of intelligence officers, as well as "the best scientific brains available in the laboratories of all government agencies," also scientific investigators in commercial laboratories, wherever needed. He adds that Hynek has consulted with the "world's leading scientists." Around the same time, Lt. Col. Spencer Whedon from ATIC informs NICAP that the Air Force spends about $10,000 on each major sighting investigation. ("AF Admits UFO Probe Still in Full Operation," UFO Investigator 2, no. 4 (March/July 1962): 2)

1962, May 31 — 2:06 a.m. Second Officer C. J. Boyes and Midshipman M. Hibbert of the SS Telemachus are traveling south-southeast at the entrance to the Gulf of Thailand when they notice some beams of light moving across the surface from the southwest at a rate of 3 per second. Five minutes later, the beams change from straight lines to curved lines that rotate clockwise around a center point on the horizon. The beams change their orientation twice more, then disappear completely at 2:26 a.m. (Notice to Mariners, new ser., no. 38 (September 22, 1962); Sanderson, InvRes, pp. 105–106; Dolan, USO1, 226)

1962, Summer — Col. Joseph J. Bryan III, special assistant to the Secretary of the Air Force and advisor to NATO, joins the board of NICAP. In 1959 he had contacted Keyhoe and asked to see some of his "really hot cases." It is later revealed that he was also founder of the CIA's psychological warfare staff. Bryan never discloses his CIA background to NICAP or Keyhoe. Although Bryan, the father of later UFO author C. D. B. Bryan, makes strong pro-UFO statements, he is later suspected of helping to discredit Keyhoe and undermine NICAP; his son and Richard H. Hall deny it. Bryan Dies," Rigorous Intuition, December 18, 2009)

1962, Summer — Around 9:00 p.m. Harvey Packard and five other men are fishing near East Peru, Maine, when three orange globes show up across the pond and begin dancing about. The globes move toward the witnesses, who get scared and jump in their car and speed away. The globes follow the car, one in the rear and the others on each side. The objects appear to be transparent, 3-foot spheres that easily pace the speeding vehicle. Occasionally they leave their positions and form into a triangle with squarish bridges between them, then split up and continue the car chase. The car radio is filled with static. Finally, they veer off and fly into the woods. (NICAP case file; Swords 300)

1962, Summer — Donald MacKenzie, a shepherd, discovers some strange wreckage in a remote moor near Ardgay, Sutherland, Scotland, that he thinks is related to Sputnik. In October, a team from RAF Kinloss [now Kinloss Barracks] on the Moray Firth arrives to investigate. They find a strange box-shaped object, large enough to have carried a person and containing spaces for cameras and a brass panel that explains, in pictures, what the finder should do in the event of discovery to claim a reward. Buried nearby are a number of bottles of colorless fluid. The team is mystified and suspects something Russian but can't confirm it. The debris now seems likely to have come from a secret spy balloon, one of many launched in 1955–1956 by the US Air Force from RAF Evanton [now closed], to take reconnaissance photos of Russian military and nuclear facilities. Once clear of Soviet territory, the balloons were designed to drop into the Pacific Ocean where its VHF beacon would guide recovery efforts. (David Clarke, "The Scottish Roswell?" Dr. David Clarke: Folklore and Journalism, July 29, 2012)

1962, June 5 — Contactee Gabriel Green runs for the US Senate in California and receives more than 171,000 votes in the Democratic primary, but at only 8.45% of the total votes, that is not enough to make it as the Democratic candidate. (Wikipedia, "1962 United States Senate election in California"; Sam Gordon, "Candidates: 'Why You Should Vote for Me,'" Los Angeles Evening Citizen News, June 2, 1962, p. 23; S. D. Tucker, False Economies: The Strangest, Least Successful, and Most Audacious Financial Follies, Plans, and Crazes of All Times, Amberly, 2018, chapter 3, excerpted in "Taxing Credulity," Fortean Times 367 (June 2018): 52–55)

1962, June 6 — 11:20 a.m. Six silent objects are seen at intervals over Caroda, New South Wales. A trail of shiny, web-like filaments falls and gradually disintegrates as they drift through the air. Witnesses say they are up to 5 feet long. (Keith Basterfield, "A Catalogue and Analysis of Australasian 'Angel Hair' Cases," March 2001; Keith Basterfield, "Angel Hair: An Australian Perspective," IUR 27, no. 1 (Spring 2002): 7)

1962, June 7 — A brilliant white light, approximately 20 times brighter than first magnitude stars, is seen at Hallett Station [now closed], Cape Hallett, East Antarctica, at 250° (true) azimuth, and 30° elevation. Over 5 minutes it remains stationary and is viewed both with binoculars and the naked eye. It appears circular. It is a dazzling gold color and observed between two mountain peaks. The sun at the time is below the horizon. After 5 minutes it moves in a southerly direction and is lost to view behind a peak. Project Blue Book concludes it is Jupiter, even though that planet's position is only at 5° elevation. (NICAP, [Blue Book documents]; Sparks, p. 292; Swords 298; Keith Basterfield, "Dr. Paul E. Tyler's Interest in UAP," Unidentified Aerial Phenomena—Scientific Research, August 14, 2022)

1962, June 19 — 6:03 p.m. C. L. Davis is walking due west on a footpath running adjacent to the railway from West End Lane to Ravenshaw Street in West Hempstead, London, England, when he sees a dull gray object in the shape of an inverted cup passing from north to south. It is moving at about 400–600 mph in shallow loops and disappears after about 6 minutes over Hammersmith. ("London Sighting," Flying Saucer Review 8, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1962): 21)

1962, June 25–26 — 9:00 p.m.–2:00 a.m. John, 14, and James Westmoreland, 12, are camping out in their backyard at 7466 East 18th Street, Tucson, Arizona, with a friend, Ronald Black, 11. About 9:00 p.m. John notices a bright star in the west that moves occasionally, dips, and hovers. Around 11:45, they notice that the star is brighter and has moved closer, taking the shape of a triangle. At 12:15, the object noiselessly emits three green flares that take on a speedy horizontal flight path. They notice a second, ball-shaped object that races from west to east, flips, and stops at a higher elevation than the first. A "flare-like" light approaches the second and seems to be absorbed by it. The first UFO spits out more green flares, two of which disappear into the second object a few minutes later. The second object shoots out a rocket that disappears in the sky. A third whitish object, larger and disc-shaped, appears above Pontano Wash with a cone-shaped superstructure. Three stilt-like protuberances appear briefly then are drawn back in. The third object also drops something like a rope that extends to the ground for 3–5 minutes. The boys soon get sleepy and retire after a while, telling the mother, Pansy Westmoreland, about it in the morning. ("Saucers, Rockets Inhabit Night Sky," Tucson (Ariz.) Daily Citizen, June 26, 1962, p. 17; Coral E. Lorenzen, "Saucers Shoot Rockets over Tucson, Arizona," APRO Bulletin, July 1962, pp. 1, 3–4; Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 114–118)

1962, July — APRO refers to NICAP as merely a "lobbying" effort in APRO Bulletin, while APRO is "gradually drawing the endorsements of the scientific community." The Lorenzens state that the Air Force investigation is merely a public relations office and not worth attacking. ("Support NICAP?" APRO Bulletin, July 1962, pp. 1–2; Clark III 50; Clark IV 68)

1962, July 7 — Soviet Col. Georgy Mosolov reaches 1,665 mph in a Mikoyan Gurevich Ye-166 (a modified Ye-152) over Russia. (Wikipedia, "Georgy Mosolov")

1962, July 7 — 11:10 p.m. Claude B. Taylor, chief scientist at Hallett Station [now closed], Cape Hallett, East Antarctica, sees an intense light followed by two smaller lights pass over the facility in a few seconds leaving a clearly visible trail. Its passage is registered by an all-sky camera used for the study of auroras. Probable bolide. (NICAP, [Blue Book documents]; NICAP, "Object Filmed by All Camera (IFO)"; "Seven Men Will Never Scoff Again," Antarctic, September 1962, p. 120; Keith Basterfield, "Dr. Paul E. Tyler's Interest in UAP," Unidentified Aerial Phenomena—Scientific Research, August 14, 2022)

1962, July 9 — 9:00 p.m. An object larger than the moon speeds to the west in seconds above Whakatāne, New Zealand, leaving a fiery trail that persists for several minutes. Constable Douglas Gray sees the object coming from north of White Island off the coast, lighting up the sky. ("Mystery Object over Whakatane, NZ," APRO Bulletin, May 1962, p. 6)

1962, July 10 — 7:10 a.m. A group of Grumman S-2 Trackers are making touch and go landings at Naval Air Station New Iberia [now Acadiana Regional Airport] in Louisiana when suddenly a disc-shaped object comes in very fast and low, slows over the runway and hangar, then speeds out of sight while climbing at a 20°–30° angle. It has a rotating dome on top that appears to be equally divided into two sections—one half light gray, the other black. ("New Sightings by Navy, FAA & Airline Observers," UFO Investigator 2, no. 5 (Aug./Sept. 1962): 1–2)

1962, July 17 — Maj. Robert Michael White is piloting Flight 62 of the X-15 at Edwards AFB, California. He flies it to 314,750 feet (59 miles), qualifying him for USAF astronaut wings. For this, he is featured on the cover of the August 3 issue of Life. At the top of his climb he sees a small grayish object "like a piece of paper" about 30–40 feet away. He exclaims, "There are things out there. There absolutely is!" ("Space: Inside the Sky," Time, July 27, 1962; Good Above, p. 366; Leonard Stringfield, "Roswell and the X-15: UFO Basics," MUFON UFO Journal, no. 259 (November 1989): 3–7)

1962, July 19 — 9:30 p.m. C. T. Loftus and H. Wilbert are fishing off Bay Head, New Jersey, when they see a star-like light moving faster than a jet. Soon three or more other lights appear, each from a different direction. Each light stops momentarily, then darts away a great distance generally in a straight line, its luminosity increasing as it moves. One object that is moving from south to north zig-zags as it darts about, but returns to a straight path eventually. The lights soon fade out after 7–10 minutes. (Sparks, p. 292; Olsen, sec. 3, p. 81)

1962, July 28 — Before dawn. The skipper of a chartered fishing boat 6 miles southeast of Avalon, Santa Catalina Island, California, sees several stationary lights low in the water dead ahead. Through binoculars he sees a squat, lighted structure in which several men are working, apparently the stern of a submarine with no markings and decks almost awash. He and another crew member see five men, "two in all-white garb, two in dark trousers and white shirts, and one in a sky-blue jumpsuit." The craft swept in their direction toward the open sea, still on the surface, and the skipper has to turn hard to keep clear. It makes no noise and leaves no wake. (Marvin Miles, "Report Studied on Soviet Sub off Catalina," Los Angeles Times, October 25, 1962, pp. 1, 10; "Submarine Saucers," APRO Bulletin, May 1963, p. 2; Dolan, USO1, 230–231)

1962, July 29 — 12:20 a.m. Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Barton and their family see a bright, cherry-red object shaped like a diamond flying slowly over Ocean Springs, Mississippi. It is first seen an estimated 2,000 feet from their house, moving from right to left and sometimes hovering. Its apparent shape changes to round, and its movements change to patterns of loops and squares in as little as one second. After 10 minutes of maneuvers, it fades away. (Sparks, p. 292; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 81–82)

1962, August — 7:00 p.m. Three witnesses are driving south toward San José de Métan, Salta, Argentina, when they see a light against the mountains to the west. It approaches, growing as large as the full moon when it is 300 feet ahead of them. It has a bulge at the top and reddish-pink, green, and white blinking lights. It continues to approach and passes above a Fiat truck in the road ahead of them. The truck stops, and the witnesses stop their car as well, two of them walking into some nearby bushes to observe. The object now seems to be the diameter of a DC-3's wingspan and is 150 feet in the air. The truck's lights go out, and the object rocks back and forth, taking off to the north at a great rate of speed. Five minutes later, they drive up to the stopped truck, whose driver is scooping up dirt to cool its overheated engine down. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 157–158)

1962, August — Night. Marilyn Chenarides, her younger brother Roger, and their mother Mildred Anderson are vacationing in a cabin on Movil Lake, Minnesota. The two women see a glowing red, domed disc with large windows hovering above the boat dock 50 feet away. Silhouetted in the windows are three entities who seem to be looking at them. The women shut off the cabin lights for a better look, and the UFO switches off its own lights. Anderson runs out of the cabin toward the object, which lifts and disappears rapidly. ("The 1962 Occupants Case," APRO Bulletin 21, no. 2 (Sept./Oct. 1972): 6)

1962, August — Truck driver Vicente Bardoli frequently sees luminous objects entering and leaving the ocean as he drives his route on National Route 3 south of Bahia Blanca, Argentina. (Gordon W. Creighton, "Argentina 1962: A Massive UFO Visitation," Flying Saucer Review 10, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1964): 10, 11–13; Dolan, USO1, 232–233)

1962, August 1 — After 11:00 p.m. Three men are fishing in two boats off the village Le Brusc, Six-Fours-les-Plages, Var, France, when they notice an elongated metallic object with a turret moving slowly on the surface about 980 feet away. It stops, and they see about a dozen "frogmen" come out of the sea and climb aboard the craft. The fishermen hail them, and the last diver to go inside turns and waves. The object then lifts out of the water and hovers above the waves. Red and green lights appear, along with a white searchlight beam that reaches their boats. The lights go out, the object glows orange, rotates, and rises to about 65 feet. Suddenly it shoots off horizontally, but circles back once as it climbs higher. ("Sindbad the Sailor," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 14 (April 1973): 13–15; Dolan, USO1, 231–232)

1962, August 2 — Around 12:00 midnight. Air traffic control operators at Cambá Punta Airport [now Doctor Fernando Piragine Niveyro International Airport], near Corrientes, Argentina, see an unidentified light approaching the airport. They call the airport manager, Luís Harvey, who arrives from home in a hurry and sees the light circling at high speed. Harvey orders a landing strip freed up but the light, apparently a spherical object, comes down, hovering and revolving a few feet above the same spot on the runway for 3–4 minutes, emitting strong blue, green, and orange flashes. Then it climbs and vanishes at staggering speed. ("Argentina Confirms Navy Pilots' Sightings to NICAP," UFO Investigator 2, no. 6 (Oct./Nov. 1962): 4; Gordon W. Creighton, "Argentina 1962: A Massive UFO Visitation," Flying Saucer Review 10, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1964): 10, 11; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: July–December 1962, The Author, 2005, pp. 18–19; Patrick Gross, "Camba Punta, Argentina, August 2, 1962")

1962, August 7 — Midnight. A contract worker at the not-yet-operational Titan II launch complex of the 570th Strategic Missile Squadron near Oracle, Arizona, sees a brilliant light descending over the site. He is joined by a colleague as the light gets larger. Both men go inside and contact Davis-Monthan AFB outside Tucson, which sends out two jet interceptors. When the aircraft arrive, the light takes off to the north and disappears rapidly. After the jets circle and head back, the light returns, descends toward the silo, and takes off vertically. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, pp. 235–236; Nukes 220–221)

1962, August 17–19 — Evening. Walking home, diamond prospector Rivalino Mafra da Silva sees two small beings, about three feet tall, digging a hole near Duas Pontes, 17 miles north of Diamantina, Minas Gerais, Brazil. On August 19, Mafra da Silva and his sons are in bed when they are awakened by sounds and see a shadowy figure, apparently floating in the room. In the morning, he and his son Raimundo see two humming balls floating outside. They merge into one larger ball that moves toward Rivalino, enveloping him in yellow smoke. Raimundo says: "Then the yellow smoke dissolved. The balls were gone. The ground below was clean as if the dust had been removed by a big broom." He tells his story to Lt. Wilson Lisbõa, chief of police at Diamantina, who conducts a search for 10 days. Only a few drops of blood are found. (Olavo T. Fontes, "Man Kidnapped by Globes," APRO Bulletin, September 1962, pp. 1, 3–5; "The Brazilian Abduction: Boy's Story Unshaken," Flying Saucer Review 8, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1962): 10–12; Clark III 418–419; Brazil 123–127; Patrick Gross, URECAT; Eghigian, After, p. 156; Clark IV 463–464)

1962, Late August — 2:00 p.m. Ann Druffel and Aileen Cummings are at Long Beach, California, when they see a small rectangular cloud over the Santa Catalina Channel. Its vapor appears to churn and it doubles in size, then elongates to 20–30 times its original size. (Ann Druffel, "Santa Catalina Island Recurring 'Cloud Cigars,'" in Proceedings of the 1976 CUFOS Conference, Chicago, 1976, pp. 63–64; Ann Druffel, "Santa Catalina Channel Cloud Cigars," IUR 31, no. 1 (January 2007): 12–13)

1962, Late August — 7:00 p.m. Three witnesses are driving in a rural area about 87 miles from Salta, Argentina, when two of them (the third sleeps through the event) see a light against the mountains to the west that grows larger and moves about 300 feet above the road ahead of them. It is a domed disc with flashing reddish-pink, green, and white lights around its perimeter. The object illuminates a truck ahead of them. The truck stops, and the two witnesses get out of their car and hide in some bushes to see what happens next. The object appears to be nearly 100 feet wide and 150 feet above the truck. The truck's lights go out and the object takes off to the north at a high rate of speed, climbing out of sight within seconds. They drive up to the truck, whose drivers are throwing dirt into its smoking engine compartment and are more concerned about an insurance claim than a UFO encounter. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 12–13)

1962, August 26 — 12:05 a.m. Geraldo Bichara, 18, is standing guard at the Escola de Sargentos das Armas in Três Corações, Minas Gerais, Brazil, when an electrical blackout occurs in the city. Suddenly he is paralyzed by a light beam from an unseen object, apparently for a few minutes. In 1980, Bichara undergoes hypnosis and discovers that the incident was an abduction in which he is taken aboard a UFO by beings wearing pumpkin-colored jumpsuits and subjected to a medical examination. He attempts to flee at one point and grabs his rifle lying nearby, but he is still paralyzed. After about 2 hours he is returned to the guardhouse. ("Caso Giraldo Bichara," Grupo de Amigos que Estudam Mistérios e Ufologia, May 2014; Brazil 60–66)

1962, August 26 — 12:30 a.m. Walter T. Jones Jr. watches a triangular formation of 6 white lights and one green light pass silently over Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, for 3–5 minutes. ("Another 'Mother' Ship?" APRO Bulletin, July 1963, p. 3)

1962, August 27 — The US launches Mariner 2 to Venus, the first successful robotic space probe. En route to Venus, Mariner 2 measures the solar wind and interplanetary dust. As it flies by Venus on December 14, it scans the planet with its pair of radiometers, revealing that Venus has cool clouds and an extremely hot surface. (Wikipedia, "Mariner 2")

1962, August 29 — Afternoon. A U-2 spy plane flying over Cuba spots an SA-2 surface-to-air missile site under construction at La Coloma, eight Komar-class guided missile patrol boats, and a cruise missile site at Banes. (Kenneth Michael Absher, Mind-Sets and Missiles, US Army War College, 2009)

1962, August 30 — 7:35–7:55 p.m. While having supper at an outdoor restaurant near Port-au-Prince, Haiti, three men, one of whom works for Techint Engineering Company, watch a UFO that approaches and hovers for 20 minutes. The engineer has a portable theodolite with him, and they set it up and track the object. It is a silvery-gray disc, like two rounded hubcaps together, and is spinning on its axis. It has an antenna on the top and exhaust ports all around its mid-line, and it is surrounded by gaseous emissions that run through all the colors of the spectrum. The object flips to a vertical alignment, showing its base, and then tips over so that its original topside is on the bottom. The object silently accelerates and disappears in 5 seconds. Project Blue Book concludes that the men were watching the planet Venus. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: July–December 1962, The Author, 2005, pp. 33–34; Swords 298–299)

1962, September — California contactee Gloria Lee takes channeled blueprints for a spaceship to Washington, D.C., to show to government officials. She gets nowhere, but while in town she gets messages from her space contact J.W. saying that the space people are upset with human wars and nuclear weapons. J.W. orders her to go on a fast for peace until he sends a "light elevator" to take her to Jupiter. Her fast lasts from September 23 to November 28. No one pays attention. After about 66 days without eating, Lee's husband, aircraft engineer William H. Byrd, summons an ambulance to take her to George Washington University Hospital. She dies there on December 3. Lee continues to channel post-mortem information through a medium named Nada-Yolanda (Pauline Sharpe) in the Miami-based Mark-Age MetaCenter. (Tristan, "The Airline Stewardess Who Starved Herself to Death for Aliens," Bizarre and Grotesque, December 18, 2016; Clark III 682–683; Clark IV 758)

1962, September — Thomas M. Comella, writing under the pseudonym "Peter Kor," proposes that UFOs originate, not from space (as he apparently thought when he favored the extraterrestrial hypothesis in the December 1955 issue of Fate), but from a reality "so strange that it cannot be confined to our three-dimensional world." (Thomas M. Comella, "Why the Real Saucer Is Interplanetary," Fate 8, no. 12 (December 1955): 17–23; Peter Kor [Thomas M. Comella], "The Solution to the Flying Saucer Mystery," Flying Saucers, September 1962, pp. 68–74; Clark III 877; Clark IV 971–972)

1962, September 1 — The USSR publicly announces an agreement to supply arms and military technicians to Cuba. Construction begins on SS-5 IRBM sites in Guanajay. (Wikipedia, "Cuban Missile Crisis")

1962, September 5 — U-2 photos reveal for the first time the presence of MiG-21 jet fighters in Cuba.

1962, September 15 — Construction begins on Soviet SS-4 MRBM sites at San Cristobal, Cuba.

1962, September 15 — 5:00 p.m. Two bright discs are seen over Oradell, New Jersey. At 6:00 p.m., former Navy flying officer J. J. McVicker sees two discs just across the state line near Oradell. At 7:50 p.m., Victor Cipolla sees a glowing object descend toward Oradell. Two other witnesses see one round object with a fin on top and another under it darting back and forth near Oradell Reservoir. At 7:55 p.m., three teens see and hear a bright, oval object land in the reservoir with a loud splash. A moment later, it lifts off and climbs silently at high speed. (Sparks, p. 292; "Disc Landing Reported in New Jersey," UFO Investigator 2, no. 6 (Oct./Nov. 1962): 3–4; "Saucer 'Flap' in Northern New Jersey," Saucer News 9, no. 4 (December 1962), pp. 14–15; UFOEv, p. 140; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: July–December 1962, The Author, 2005, pp. 48, 49; Dolan, USO1, 233–234)

1962, September 18 — 5:00–5:15 a.m. Six police officers in five separate locations in northeast Ohio observe UFOs moving generally to the northeast or east, but in two of the observations the objects take off at high speed. State policeman David McCurry sees two white, oval-shaped objects near Minerva, Ohio. (UFOEv, p. 62; Wendy Connors, "Cops and Saucers: Law Enforcement and UFO's, 1957–1981 Guide," November 20, 2013, audioclip 6; "Ohio State Patrolman David McCurry's Eyewitness Testimony on His Sighting of 2 UFOs, Sept. 18, 1962," Eyes On Cinema YouTube channel, February 5, 2025)

1962, September 19 — During a test launch of an Avco Mark 4 reentry vehicle by an Atlas 8F missile at Cape Canaveral Launch Complex 11, an unidentified object is seen following the Mark 4 for 90 seconds. The post-flight report acknowledges the object's presence but admits its origin or identity cannot be determined. (National Archives, "Unidentified Flying Object (UFO) Sighting," 1962; Geoff Cruickshank, "The Hidden Truth behind a 1960s Nuclear Test: A Non-Human Craft Fell Down to Earth," Liberation Times, December 21, 2024)

1962, September 20 — Construction begins on Soviet SAM sites at Los Angeles, Chaparra, and Juguani, Cuba.

1962, September 29 — A CIA U-2 mission over the Isle of Pines and Bay of Pigs, Cuba, reveals additional Soviet SA-2 and cruise missile sites. (Kenneth Michael Absher, Mind-Sets and Missiles, US Army War College, 2009; Jacobsen, Area 51, p. 183)

1962, Fall — Arlene Cook is awakened by her young, terrified son, at their home in Anaheim, California. He says something is in his bedroom, so they go to investigate and see a half-dollar-sized light on his bed. The spot stays visible when she puts her hand on the bed or when she removes the covers, but she can find no source for the light. It then just switches off and does not return. (Michael D. Swords, "A Trick of the Light," IUR 31, no. 2 (June 2007): 8)

1962, Fall — Patricia Ellingson is seeing "glowing, flame-like lights" in her bedroom in Azusa, California, every evening. She thinks they appear only when she is mentally calm. The lights are the size of a quarter, sometimes switch off abruptly, and other times fade out slowly. At times they do not appear for months, and she feels sad when they are not there. (Michael D. Swords, "A Trick of the Light," IUR 31, no. 2 (June 2007): 8)

1962, October — The CIA and USAF instruct Lockheed to study a high-speed, high-altitude drone concept. Kelly Johnson specifies speeds of Mach 3.3–3.5, an operational altitude of 87,000–95,000 feet, and a range of 3,500 miles. It would make a one-way trip, eject its camera payload at the end of the mission for recovery, then self-destruct. It has a double-delta wing similar to the A-12's wing design. The Q-12 is to be air-launched from the back of an A-12 and uses key technology from the A-12 project, including titanium construction and radar cross-section reduction design features. Johnson wants to power the Q-12 with a ramjet engine modified to operate at high temperatures for at least 90 minutes at high altitude. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed D-21")

1962, October 2 — Night. A Boeing security guard at an unidentified Minuteman missile site near Moore, Montana [likely the M-01 launch site that is part of Malmstrom AFB complex], sees a tear-shaped object with a blue top and a red bottom. ("Flying Objects Reported in Separated Areas," Helena (Mont.) Independent-Record, October 3, 1962, p. 7)

1962, October 2 — Night. Airmen on security patrol at Larson AFB [now Grant County International Airport] near Moses Lake, Washington, see a white light hovering a few hundred feet in the air near where the ICBM storage bunkers are located. It silently shoots into the air as the guards approach it. ("Flying Objects Reported in Separated Areas," Helena (Mont.) Independent-Record, October 3, 1962, p. 7; Nukes 145–147)

1962, October 7 — New U-2 flights show there are now 19 Soviet SA-2 missile sites in Cuba.

1962, October 10? — Twilight. Residents of Spring Park Road in Jacksonville, Florida, watch small fireballs with fuzzy outlines moving around their houses. Some house lights dim and others go out entirely as the lights move about. J. P. Baker sees a fireball moving through a field behind his house. He goes inside to tell his wife, and she looks out the kitchen window a sees a brilliant "round ball, big as a No. 2 wash tub" and pinkish in color. It hovers outside the window less than 6 feet away, then floats around the corner of the house. One man sees a light moving along utility wires. Another woman reports a glow moving through her house; at one point it envelops her and her hand tingles. Gladys Faucette on Cascade Road sees a brilliant glow descend to within 3 feet of the ground. An electrical circuit goes out about the same time. ("Glowing Lights Invade Home," APRO Bulletin, November 1962, p. 1; "Great Balls of Fire! We Had a Glow On," NICAP Reporter 1, no. 4 (January 1963): 4; Covert 56)

1962, October 12 — Dawn. An object like an orange or yellow meteor is observed over Forbes AFB [now Topeka Regional Airport], Topeka, Kansas. Its flight path is curved upward, with an occasional jerky motion; it moves quickly at first but slows down as it reaches the zenith. It is visible for 5 minutes before fading out. [Blue Book documents]; Nukes 145)

1962, October 14 — A U-2 (loaned to the Air Force by the CIA because the CIA U-2s have better surveillance capabilities) piloted by USAF Major Richard S. Heyser out of Laughlin AFB, Del Rio, Texas, takes 928 pictures on a path selected by DIA analysts, capturing images of what turn out to be an SS-4 MRBM construction site at San Cristóbal, Pinar del Río Province [now in Artemisa Province], in western Cuba. (Wikipedia, "Cuban Missile Crisis"; "U-2 Pilot's Cuba Photos Made History," Wilmington (N.C.) Star-News, October 9, 2005)

1962, October 15 — The CIA's National Photographic Interpretation Center reviews the U-2 photographs and identifies objects that they interpret as medium-range ballistic missiles. The CIA notifies the Department of State. National Security Advisor McGeorge Bundy chooses to wait until the next morning to tell the President. Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara is briefed at midnight. (Wikipedia, "Cuban Missile Crisis")

1962, October 16 — 6:30 p.m. Kennedy gathers a select group of advisors known as the ExComm (Executive Committee of the National Security Council) to discuss a strategic response. McNamara presents him with three basic options: a political option of approaching Castro and Khrushchev; a naval blockade to stop Soviet ships carrying weapons to Cuba; and "military action directed against Cuba, starting with an air attack against the missiles." The ExComm's initial discussions focus on a massive US military assault on the nuclear installations and other bases in Cuba, and whether the Soviets would counterattack in Berlin or elsewhere. Kennedy rejects an attack, favoring a quarantine to buy time to negotiate a missile withdrawal. (Wikipedia, "Cuban Missile Crisis")

1962, October 17 — A U-2 takes the first photo of an IRBM site under construction in Cuba. ("The Cuban Missile Crisis, 1962: The Photographs," National Security Archive)

1962, October 22 — 7:00 p.m. President Kennedy addresses the American public for 18 minutes and announces his plan to implement a naval blockade of Cuba. US military alert is set at DEFCON 3, and Castro mobilizes all of Cuba's military forces. US ambassador to the Soviet Union Foy D. Kohler delivers to a letter from JFK to Khrushchev, saying, "the one thing that has most concerned me has been the possibility that your government would not correctly understand the will and determination of the United States in any given situation, since I have not assumed that you or any other sane man would, in this nuclear age, deliberately plunge the world into war which it is crystal clear no country could win and which could only result in catastrophic consequences to the whole world, including the aggressor." (Wikipedia, "Cuban Missile Crisis"; John F. Kennedy, Letter to Chairman Nikita Khrushchev, October 22, 1962)

1962, October 23 — Khrushchev writes to Kennedy, rebuffing his demand that the Soviets remove the missiles, which the Soviet leader insists "are intended solely for defensive purposes." Kennedy writes back, bluntly reminding Khrushchev that he started the crisis by secretly sending missiles to Cuba. As US ambassador Adlai Stevenson explains the matter to the United Nations Security Council, US ships already are moving into position in the waters around Cuba. Soviet submarines menacingly move into the Caribbean as well, positioned as if they might try to break a blockade. But Soviet freighters bearing military supplies headed for Cuba stop in their tracks.

(Nikita Khrushchev, Letter to President John F. Kennedy, October 23, 1962; John F. Kennedy, Draft letter to Chairman Nikita Khrushchev, October 23, 1962)

1962, October 23 — 5:00 p.m. R. O. Christensen is duck hunting near the Farmington Bay Waterfowl Management Area in Utah when he hears what sounds like a flock of ducks approaching. He looks west from his blind, he notices a silvery round globe about 3 feet in diameter moving from the west at the speed of a jet aircraft. It seems to be trailing some gray or silver cobwebby material. After it passes overhead, it swerves to the southeast and accelerates to a tremendous speed and disappears in 1–2 seconds. (Sparks, p. 293; Olsen, sec. 3, p. 82)

1962, October 24 — Khrushchev sends an indignant letter to Kennedy, accusing him of threatening the Soviet Union: "You are no longer appealing to reason, but wish to intimidate us." (Nikita Khrushchev, Letter to President John F. Kennedy, October 24, 1962)

1962, October 24 — A Soviet spacecraft, Mars 2MV-4 No. 1, intended to make a flyby survey of Mars, is destroyed in Earth orbit due to a problem with the rocket that has launched it. (Wikipedia, "Mars 2MV-4 No. 1")

1962, October 25 — The US raises the readiness level of SAC forces to DEFCON 2. For the only confirmed time in US history, B-52 bombers go on continuous airborne alert, and B-47 medium bombers are dispersed to various military and civilian airfields and made ready to take off, fully equipped, on 15 minutes notice. The Soviet arms freighters turn back toward Europe, but the Soviet oil tanker Bucharest approaches the US quarantine zone, directly headed for Cuba. Two American warships, the USS Essex and the USS Gearing, prepare to intercept it, which could have led to war. Instead, Kennedy decides to let the Bucharest through the quarantine because it isn't carrying any contraband. (Wikipedia, "Cuban Missile Crisis"; McGeorge Bundy, "Record of Action of the Fourth Meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Security Council," October 25, 1962; Wikipedia, "Cuban Missile Crisis")

1962, October 26 — 12:00 midnight. The Bluegill Triple Prime nuclear test, part of Operation Fishbowl, takes place at Johnston Atoll in the North Pacific Ocean. It is officially reported as being in the submegaton range (less than one megaton), and most observers of the US nuclear testing programs believe that the yield was about 400 kilotons. More than 15 minutes after the blast, David Noble Whitecrow and others of the crew of the Naval destroyer escort USS Finch observes a huge cigar-shaped object moving past the ship at 400 mph. When it comes directly in front of the ship it picks up speed and disappears. Radar has tracked the object and it exhibits a significant heat signature and apparently plunges into the ocean. A high-speed film taken of the blast, Kettle 1, seems to show an object tumbling out of the nuclear fireball; another film, Kettle 2, features a conspicuous white triangular sanitization mark applied during a declassification review. Some years later, Whitecrow meets a senior Navy diver who tells him that he was part of a team that attempted to retrieve the object. (Wikipedia, "Operation Fishbowl"; Richard Dolan, UFOs for the 21st Century Mind, 2nd ed., The Author, 2022, pp. 101–105; Geoff Cruickshank, "The Hidden Truth behind a 1960s Nuclear Test: A Non-Human Craft Fell Down to Earth," Liberation Times, December 21, 2024; Dolan, USO1, 234–237)

1962, October 26 — Castro sends a letter to Khrushchev, urging him to launch a nuclear first strike against the US, which the Soviet leader disregards. Instead, Khrushchev sends a letter to Kennedy, in which he offers to work with him to deescalate the conflict and ensure that they do not "doom the world to the catastrophe of thermonuclear war." The CIA reports that the construction of Cuban missile sites is continuing and accelerating. Robert Kennedy meets secretly with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin and agrees after a phone call to the president that the removal of US missiles from Turkey is negotiable as part of a comprehensive settlement. (Fidel Castro, Letter to Chairman Nikita Khrushchev, October 26, 1962; Nikita Khrushchev, Department of State Telegram Transmitting Letter to President John F. Kennedy, October 26, 1962; Wikipedia, "Cuban Missile Crisis"; Daniel Ellsberg, The Doomsday Machine: Confessions of a Nuclear War Planner, Bloomsbury, 2017, chapters 12–13)

1962, October 26 — 6:15 a.m. Mrs. Alvie Frank sees several flat, glowing objects moving slowly about 11 miles south of Monte Vista, Colorado. ("Variety of Objects in Colorado," APRO Bulletin, January 1963, p. 1)

1962, October 26 — 7:16 a.m. Bessie Rogers of Fort Collins, Colorado, spots a large, black parachute-shaped object weaving back and forth over the mountains somewhere between the south end of Horsetooth Reservoir and Masonville. It flies around for about 10 minutes, disappears, and then returns. ("Variety of Objects in Colorado," APRO Bulletin, January 1963, p. 1)

1962, Late October — Day. Two Air Force B-52 Stratofortress bombers are returning to Loring AFB [now the Loring Commerce Centre] near Limestone, Maine, following an Operation Chrome Dome mission. They are on final approach to landing when a huge, metallic-gray, cigar-shaped UFO descends over the flight line and hovers for a few minutes. It stretches halfway across the aircraft ramp area, which would make it half a mile wide. Jet engine mechanic Sgt. Christopher Smith is watching the scenario from the ground and notes that the UFO is silent and has no lights or visible openings. After the second B-52 lands, the UFO silently zooms away toward the east and disappears. All the ground witnesses and the flight crews do not talk about the incident afterward and act as if nothing happened. (Nukes 132–136, 138–139)

1962, October 27 — A U-2 piloted by Maj. Rudolf Anderson is shot down over Cuba. However, Kennedy correctly concludes that Khrushchev has not himself given the order to shoot down Anderson's plane. The incident prompts both leaders to realize the situation is spiraling dangerously out of control. Khrushchev sends another letter to Kennedy, in which he demands that the United States withdraw missiles from Turkey as part of the deal. JFK responds by offering to promise not to attack Cuba after the Russians withdraw. In the evening, Robert Kennedy tells Soviet ambassador Dobrynin, "You have drawn first blood.... The president had decided against advice ... not to respond militarily to that attack, but he [Dobrynin] should know that if another plane was shot at ... we would take out all the SAMs and antiaircraft.... And that would almost surely be followed by an invasion." However, he also says that the US already plans to remove its missiles from Turkey but cannot say so publicly. This is the moment when both nations step back from the brink of war. (Wikipedia, "Cuban Missile Crisis"; Nikita Khrushchev, Letter to President John F. Kennedy, October 27, 1962; Anatoly Dobrynin, Cable to the Soviet Foreign Ministry, meeting with Robert Kennedy, October 27, 1962; John F. 1962, October 28 — In a speech aired on Radio Moscow, Nikita Khrushchev announces the dismantling of Soviet missiles in Cuba and does not insist on his demands concerning the removal of US missiles from Turkey. (Wikipedia, "Cuban Missile Crisis"; Nikita Khrushchev, Letter to President John F. Kennedy, October 28, 1962)

1962, October 28 — 7:30 p.m. Mrs. Ellen D. Sylvester is driving with her three children in Norwood, South Australia, east of Adelaide, when they see an orange glow on the ground, perhaps 2–3 miles away. It has three legs, round windows, and the boy remarks that he can see people in it. One of the "men" gets out and descends to the ground. He appears to be doing something to one of the landing legs. He seems to have some trouble in making it retract, which finally he overcomes. He is about 6 feet tall, as his head reaches the outer fringe of the craft. He wears a helmet like a gas mask. He returns to the UFO, which begins to move slowly away, then very fast, and disappears in a northerly direction. Total time of observation is 40 minutes. (Keith Basterfield, "'This Is One of the Most Remarkable Cases of a Flying Saucer…,' Adelaide, 1962," Unidentified Aerial Phenomena—Scientific Research, September 22, 2014)

1962, October 29 — Defense Department Assistant Secretary Arthur Sylvester admits that withholding evidence on UFOs from the public is necessary if the means justifies it. He cites USAF "administrative practices" Air Force Regulation 11-30, where withholding information "in the public interest" is allowed, and AFR 11-7, which states that sometimes information requested by Congress may not be furnished "even in confidence." (UFOEv, p. 106; Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, p. 86)

1962, October 29 — Vera Rogers sees a round, shiny object flying low over Fort Collins, Colorado. The object, heading south, makes a soft, whirring sound followed by a popping noise. ("Variety of Objects in Colorado," APRO Bulletin, January 1963, p. 1)

1962, November — Evening. A French businessman is driving along a minor road in Var department, southeastern France. It is raining heavily. Rounding a bend, he sees a group of figures in the road 260 feet ahead. He slows down to drive around them and sees that they are actually bizarre animals with the heads of birds and covered in plumage. Terrified, he speeds ahead and stops about 500 feet further ahead. Turing around, he sees the entities heading toward a luminous, dark-blue object hanging in the air over a field on the other side of the road. It resembles two plates upside down. The entities are sucked into the bottom of the object. He hears a "clack," and the UFO takes off at "prodigious speed." (Lyonel Trigano, "Strange Encounter in Var," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1968): 18; Clark III 280; Clark IV 320)

1962, November 1 — The Soviet Union launches Mars 1, an automatic interplanetary station, in the direction of Mars with the intent of flying by the planet at a distance of 6,800 miles. It is designed to image the surface and send back data on cosmic radiation, micrometeoroid impacts, and possible organic compounds. After five months, communications cease 90 days before it is scheduled to reach the planet. (Wikipedia, "Mars 1")

1962, November 13 — Two IBM engineers, C. D. Jackson and Robert E. Hohmann, present a paper at the American Rocket Society annual meeting in Los Angeles, California, noting the alleged extraterrestrial signals detected by Nikola Tesla, Guglielmo Marconi, and David Todd between 1899 and 1924. They speculate that the signal source was 11 light years away, perhaps the Epsilon Eridani system. (C. D. Jackson and Robert E. Hohmann, "An Historic Report on Life in Space: Tesla, Marconi, Todd," paper presented at the 17th Annual Meeting of the American Rocket Society, Los Angeles, November 13–18, 1962; Michael D. Swords, "Radio Signals from Space, Alien Probes, and Betty Hill," IUR 29, no. 4 (July 2005): 10–15)

1962, November 15 — Stanford astronomer Carl Sagan presents a paper at the American Rocket Society annual meeting in Los Angeles, California, that explores models for the distribution of technical civilizations in the galaxy. Using Frank Drake's equation to suggest that 0.001% of stars in the sky have a planet on them on which an advanced civilization resides, Sagan suggests the nearest such advanced civilization is several hundred light years away from earth. From there, he explores the feasibility of interstellar spaceflight as a means for traversing such distances. The paper ends in consideration of the possibility of extraterrestrial contact with Earth in the past, including the ancient Mesopotamian myth of Oannes (Apkallu), a mythical being who taught mankind wisdom. Berossus describes Oannes as having the body of a fish but underneath the figure of a man. (Carl Sagan, "Direct Contact among Galactic Civilizations by Relativistic Interstellar Spaceflight," Planetary and Space Science 11 (May 1963): 485–498; Carl Sagan, [handwritten draft of paper]; Wikipedia, "Adapa"; Stanton Friedman and Kathleen Marden, Captured! The Betty and Barney Hill UFO Experience, Weiser, 2007, pp. 61–62)

1962, November 17 — 9:00 p.m. Frederick L. Swindal, ex-Marine captain, and his wife Virginia are sitting on the front porch of their farm between Brooksville and Dade City, Florida, when they see an object with three lights flying at a high altitude from the northeast. At first they assume it is an airplane, but it stops and hovers for 5 minutes. The lights then move southeast at a high speed, and Swindal realizes that the lights are apparently on three different objects. They bounce up and down somewhat and vary the distance between each other. They are in sight for 3–5 minutes. (Sparks, p. 293; UFOEv, p. 140; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 82–83;)

1962, November 30 — Two teenage boys in Lethbridge, Alberta, see an elliptical object hovering near a school building and decide to throw rocks at it. The object is about 8 feet in diameter and glowing blue. Their stones seem to ricochet off the UFO and forcefully returned, landing on structures behind the teens. ("Children Frightened by 'Sky Ghost,'" APRO Bulletin, January 1963, p. 6; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: July–December 1962, The Author, 2005, pp. 72–74)

1962, December — Kennedy closes the Cuban Project, the CIA's Operation Mongoose. (Wikipedia, "Operation Mongoose")

1962, December 1 — Evening. A husband and wife in East Point, Georgia, are watching the first-quarter Moon through a 6-inch reflector. In the dark area, well away from the terminator, the man sees a bright-red spot light up. It gets so bright that he points it out to his wife. She notices it starting to move across the illuminated portion of the Moon, then continues passing in a straight line across the blue Georgia sky, faster and faster until it is gone. (Michael D. Swords, "Gazing at the Moons," IUR 32, no. 4 (October 2009): 15)

1962, December 7 — A full-scale mockup of the Q-12 drone is ready at Groom Lake, Nevada, and has already undergone preliminary tests to measure its stealth quality. However, the CIA is not enthusiastic about the Q-12, mostly because the agency is overextended at the time with U-2 missions, getting the A-12 up to speed, and covert operations in Southeast Asia. The USAF, however, is interested in the Q-12 as both a reconnaissance platform and a cruise missile and the CIA finally decides to work with the USAF to develop it. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed D-21")

1962, December 12 — 4:30 p.m. Five schoolgirls in Amagasaki, Hyogo Prefecture, Japan, see a brightly glowing UFO. All five students independently sketch a Saturn-shaped object. (UFOEv, p. 124)

1962, December 18 — 2:20 p.m. Night watchman Francesco Rizzi is reporting for work at a mill on Via Santa Valeria in Milan, Italy. In the center of the mill's courtyard he hears a swishing sound and turns to see a domed metallic disc 12–15 feet in diameter with portholes hovering 3 feet above the ground. A door opens at the bottom and a small man just over 3 feet tall and wearing a luminous coverall emerges. The man motions Rizzi to come nearer, but he is frozen with fear. Another small man comes out of the disc, but they both return, the door closes behind them, and the object takes off in a cloud of white smoke. Rizzi reports the sighting to a colleague, the police, and the press, and soon loses his job. (Roberto Pinotti, "Flying Saucers over Italy," LUFORO Bulletin 3, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1962): 4, 5; "The Italian Scene—Part 2," Flying Saucer Review 9, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1963): 3, 5–6; Leonard G. Cramp, Piece for a Jig-Saw, Somerton, 1966, pp. 124–125; 1Pinotti 130–131)

1962, December 21 — Ali R. Diaz is aboard a DC-3 tourist plane on a vacation trip to Angel Falls, Venezuela. He obtains color film of a UFO rising from the base of a mountain. The film shows a yellowish teardrop-shaped object rising across the face of Auyán-tepui plateau. The UFO seems to oscillate from side to side until it is lost in clouds. The falls and mountain provide location points throughout. (UFOEv, p. 96; R. M. L. Baker Jr., "Motion Pictures of UFOs," in Carl Sagan and Thornton Page, eds., UFOs—A Scientific Debate, Cornell University, 1972, pp. 206–207; "Angel Falls UFO Film 1962," UFO History Group You Tube channel, August 30, 2014)

1962, December 22 — About 3:00 a.m. At Ezeiza International Airport [now Ministro Pistarini International Airport] at Ezeiza Partido in Greater Buenos Aires, Argentina, tower operators Horacio Alora and Mario Pezzutto are watching an Aereolíneas Argentinas plane that is about to take off. It is also seen by an approaching DC-8 jet operated by Panagra, whose captain asks what the object is at the end of the runway. Alora sees a large, round, glowing object that has evidently descended when he is watching the airliner. The UFO immediately rises about 30 feet, hovers, then accelerates on a northeast course. (UFOEv, p. 119; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: July–December 1962, The Author, 2005, pp. 75–76)

1963

1963 — Astronomer Donald H. Menzel and science writer Lyle G. Boyd publish The World of Flying Saucers, a skeptical overview of UFO sightings as misidentifications and hoaxes and a contemptuous treatment of UFO groups. (Donald H. Menzel and Lyle G. Boyd, The World of Flying Saucers, Doubleday, 1963; Eghigian, After, p. 184)

1963 — French writer Robert Charroux publishes his first book on the ancient astronaut theory, Histoire inconnue des hommes depuis cent mille ans, later translated into English as One Hundred Thousand Years of Man's Unknown History. He cites archaeological finds and references to a Great Flood and argues that no civilization emerging from a universal deluge could have persisted without extraterrestrial help. He suspects that humanity itself is of alien origin. He continued to write several more books through 1977. (Robert Charroux, 100,000 Years of Man's Unknown History, Berkley, 1970; Eghigian, After, pp. 178–179)

1963 — New Zealand saucer buff John Stuart writes UFO Warning, an extremely unlikely tale of sexual adventures with his young associate, Doreen Wilkinson, who is given the pseudonym of Barbara Turner, and their encounters with a monstrous extraterrestrial. (John Stuart, UFO Warning, Saucerian, 1963; Clark III 1057–1060; Clark IV 1172–1176)

1963, January — The A-12 fleet at Groom Lake, Nevada, is now operating with J58 engines built by Pratt and Whitney, allowing for speeds up to Mach 3.

1963, January — Night. Brothers Rosauro Antonio, Ricardo, and Victor Domingo López discover a burned area of grass in a field just over a mile from their house in Cañada de Alzogaray, near Burruyacú, Tucumán, Argentina. The burn is in the shape of two rings (each a foot wide and 10.8 feet in diameter) where the grass is burned down to its roots to a depth of 3–4 inches. They find a carbonized residue and whitish powder. Some days previously, a neighbor named Juan Gerónimo Pera, his wife, and children, had seen a luminous oval-shaped object that landed in the field. (Oscar A. Uriondo, "Preliminary Catalogue of Type 1 Cases in Argentina," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 12 (December 1972): 11)

1963, January 11 — At 11:00 p.m., at San Pietro Vernotico, Italy, farmer Antonio de Luca is awakened by restless animals and goes out to calm them. Fifteen minutes later he sees a domed disc some 132 feet long land in the village square. Dark figures are moving inside the transparent dome. He tries to approach but is paralyzed at 30 feet away. It ascends in the direction of Brindisi to the north, emitting a vertical beam of green light. (Gordon W. Creighton, "The Italian Scene—Part 4," Flying Saucer Review 9, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1963): 12; Vallée, Magonia, p. 290; Center for UFO Studies, HUMCAT Index 1963, p. 3; Pier Luigi Sani, "UFO in Italia: Analisi e commento del periodo 1955–1972," UFO Rivista di Informazione Ufologica, no. 8 (April 1990): 21–22; Loren E. 1963, January 17 — A formation of objects passes over Entre Ríos province, Argentina, and discharges angel hair. Vitreous particles are recovered, which consist of an "amalgam of silicon, boron, calcium, and magnesium." (Gordon Creighton, "Argentina, 1963–64," Flying Saucer Review 11, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1965): 15; Brian Boldman, "Angel Hair Physical Analyses: A Review," JUFOS 9 (2006): 104)

1963, February 11 — The CIA establishes a Domestic Operations Division for its clandestine services, conducted within the US against "foreign targets."

1963, February 15 — 7:10 a.m. Farmer Charles Brew and his son Trevor are in a shed, milking a herd of cows near Moe, Victoria, Australia. Charles sees an object descend very steeply out of the east from a low cloud during a heavy rain, at about a 45° angle. The UFO is about 25 feet in diameter, and about 9–10 feet high. The lower portion, about 3 feet high, is rotating in an anticlockwise direction and is bluish. The upper portion appears to be stationary, battleship-gray in color, with a transparent dome on top. Protruding out of the dome is something resembling a broom handle. A sound, described as swishing or burbling, is heard by both Charles and Trevor, and it throws the nearby cows and horses into a panic. Keith Basterfield thinks the event might have been caused by a funnel cloud. 1963, February 23 — 9:45 p.m. An oval object is seen in the sky above Highcliffe, Dorset, England. Emerald-green in color and surrounded by a glow, it hangs in the sky for 10 minutes before witnesses see two smaller objects emerge from it. These fly away and disappear over the English Channel. (Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects and Cloud Cigars," IUR 29, no. 1 (Spring 2004): 10)

1963, February 28? — 3:15 a.m. A British sonar and radar operator aboard a Royal Navy ship 30–50 miles off the coast of Svalbard in the Arctic Ocean picks up an unknown target on three radar scopes. The ship's best scope had a solid target about 100–120 feet in diameter at about 35,000 feet. A senior officer radios a nearby ship, which confirms the target. The object begins descending below the range of radar, and within seconds the two sonar operators pick up a strong echo from a fast-moving underwater object at a range of 10 miles, taking a zigzag path away from the ship. Afterward, the entire crew is reminded that they must never discuss the incident. (Walter N. Webb, "Radar/Sonar Contact," MUFON UFO Journal, no. 199 (November 1984): 7–10; Dolan, USO1, 238–239)

1963, March — Austrian ufologist Luis Schoenherr offers a paranormal explanation for UFOs, saying that they either emanate from an unobservable fourth dimension or are time machines. (Luis Schoenherr, "UFOs and the Fourth Dimension," Flying Saucer Review 9, no. 2 (March/April 1963): 10–12; Luis Schoenherr, "UFOs and the Fourth Dimension, Part 2," Flying Saucer Review 10, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1964): 16–20, 23; Clark 877–878; Clark IV 972)

1963, March — The aircraft carrier USS Wasp is on a training exercise in the North Atlantic near Puerto Rico with five smaller ships and some submarines. A sonar operator aboard a destroyer reports that one of the subs has broken formation to chase an unidentified underwater object that is moving at more than 150 knots. Twelve other ships and aircraft are also tracking the unknown, which over the course of the next four days appears and reappears, maneuvering as far down as 27,000 feet in the Puerto Rico trench. (Sanderson, InvRes, pp. 17–19; Dolan, USO1, 239–240)

1963, March 3 — The Hills are invited by their Unitarian church to discuss their UFO experience. They speak about it for the first time publicly. (Clark III 584; Clark IV 641)

1963, April — An article by J. Allen Hynek appears in the Yale Scientific Magazine. (J. Allen Hynek, "Flying Saucers I Have Known," Yale Scientific Magazine 37 (April 1963): 6–9, reprinted in Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1963, The Author, 2005, pp. 42–62)

1963, April 11 — 1:30 p.m. The pilots of a Boeing 707 airliner flying at 31,000 feet about 100 miles north of Puerto Rico see a disturbance like a "great round mound" in the sea below, more than half a mile in diameter. They watch it for more than 30 seconds, but it begins to subside as they proceed with their flight. (Lucius Farish and Dale Titler, "Mysteries of the Deep: Underwater UFOs," Official UFO 2, no. 3 (May 1977): 52–53; Carl Feindt, "Report #783," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 241–242)

1963, April 30 — Adamski arrives in Copenhagen for another scheduled lecture tour of Europe at the invitation of Hans C. Petersen, He attends the Skandinavisk UFO Information Congress in Frederica, Denmark. ("Final Years," The Adamski Case, June 11, 2009)

1963, May 15 — Sandia National Laboratories conducts the first of four top-secret, dry-surface plutonium-dispersal tests at the Tonopah Test Range in Nevada, as part of Operation Roller Coaster. The other tests are on May 25, May 31, and June 9. The intent is to investigate exposure of animals (dogs, sheep, and burros) to plutonium dispersal in a non-nuclear scenario. (Wikipedia, "Operation Roller Coaster"; Lt. Col. J. L. Dick, et al., "Operation Roller Coaster: Interim Summary Report (II)," Department of Defense, September 1963)

1963, May 24 — An A-12 piloted by Kenneth S. Collins crashes near Wendover, Utah. The CIA thinks it might have been due to pilot error and contracts with a well-known Boston, Massachusetts, psychiatrist with a specialty in hypnosis (unnamed, but possibly Benjamin Simon, of Betty and Barney Hill fame later). After a lengthy investigation it is determined that a tiny, pencil-sized part called a pilot tube, a device that controls the airspeed indicator, froze when the A-12 entered a cloud, causing the aircraft to stall. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed A-12"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 190–197)

1963, May 31 — Adamski allegedly has a private audience with Pope John XXIII in Rome, Italy. The pontiff is seriously ill and dies three days later. Adamski claims that he has received a "Golden Medal of Honor" from the pope, but skeptics note that the medal is actually a common tourist souvenir made by a company in Milan, and that Adamski displays it to his friends in a cheap plastic box—which is how it is sold in tourist shops in Rome. Adamski says his meeting is at the request of the extraterrestrials he is in contact with in order to ask for a "final agreement" from the pope because of his decision not to communicate directly with them anymore and to offer John XXIII a liquid substance in order to save him from the gastric enteritis that he suffers from. (Lou Zinsstag and Timothy Good, George Adamski: The Untold Story, Ceti, 1983; Marc Hallet, A Critical Appraisal of George Adamski: The Man Who Spoke to the Space Brothers, The Author, 2016; Colin Bennett, Looking for Orthon, Paraview, 2001, p. 189; "Vatican Visit," The Adamski Case, October 7, 2019)

1963, Summer — Allen H. Greenfield and Rick Hilberg start publishing Saucer Album in Cleveland, Ohio. It becomes UFO Magazine in mid-1964 and continues through the summer of 1970. After a few years' hiatus, it returns as UFO Magazine News Bulletin in early 1974 and continues at least until February 1979. (Saucer Album 1, no. 1 (Summer 1963))

1963, June 15 — 8:39 p.m. In the Indian Ocean southwest of India, 3rd Mate R. C. Chamberlin of the SS Thetis sees in the northwest a luminous disc travel at 1.5 times the angular speed of a satellite. Tim Printy suspects it is the Thor Agena stage used for the launch of several small satellites from Vandenburg AFB in California the same day. (Sparks, p. 294; Tim Printy, "The 701 Club: Case #8388, June 15, 1963," SUNlite 5, no. 2 (March/April 2013): 25–29)

1963, June 16 — Russian cosmonaut Valentina Tereshkova becomes the first woman in space, flying a solo mission on Vostok 6 and spending nearly three days in orbit. (Wikipedia, "Vostok 6")

1963, June 26 — Around 1:00 a.m. Enrico A. Gilberti Jr. and his wife Janet are awakened at their home on 344 Commercial Street, Weymouth, Massachusetts, by a loud roar. They look out the window and see a Saturn-shaped object moving slowly above the treetops 100 feet off the ground and 300 feet away. Gilberti describes it as "two hamburger buns one on top of another with a sandwiched piece of meat protruding around." It is about 30–40 feet across and has two brilliant lights. The UFO follows some power lines across a field and disappears to the northeast. "The roar was deafening." Neighbors hear the noise but do not see anything. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1963, The Author, 2005, pp. 84–85)

1963, June 26 — Four glowing greenish objects with halos are seen by a technician and many others at Pinecrest, California. Three objects moving westerly are approached by a similar object from the west. The fourth object stops and hovers as the three approach, split formation, and continue west. Then the fourth object continues east. (UFOEv, p. 140)

1963, June 28 — 9:30 p.m. A man is driving along the Lyndoch-Gawler Road near Sandy Creek, South Australia, when he comes across a blood-red, glowing object, 25 feet across and 12 feet high, in the road ahead. He is within 12 feet of it when he hits the brakes. The object turns a lighter reddish-yellow and rises up into the air several hundred feet. It turns on its side and speeds away. This and other UFO incidents cause Sen. Jim Cavanagh to ask the federal government to make its UFO dossier public, but Minister for Air David Fairbairn refuses, saying that the vast majority of reports are explainable. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: January–June 1963, The Author, 2005, pp. 86–87)

1963, July — The CIA has synthesized many of the findings from its psychological research into what became known as the "KUBARK Counterintelligence Interrogation" handbook, which cites the MKUltra studies and other secret research programs as the scientific basis for their interrogation methods. Donald Ewen Cameron regularly travels around the US teaching military personnel about his techniques (hooding of prisoners for sensory deprivation, prolonged isolation, humiliation, etc.), and how they can be used in interrogations. Latin American paramilitary groups working for the CIA and US military personnel receive training in these psychological techniques at places such as the School of the Americas in Fort Benning, Georgia. (In the 21st century, many of these torture techniques are used at US military and CIA prisons such as Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and Abu Ghraib, Iraq.) In the aftermath of the 1975 congressional hearings, major news media mainly focus on sensational stories related to LSD, mind-control, and brainwashing, and rarely use the word "torture." This suggests that the CIA researchers are, as one author put it, "a bunch of bumbling sci-fi buffoons" rather than a rational group of men who have run torture laboratories and medical experiments in major US universities; they have arranged for torture, rape, and psychological abuse of adults and young children, driving many of them permanently insane. (Central Intelligence Agency, "KUBARK Counterintelligence Interrogation," July 1963; Wikipedia, "Unethical human experimentation in the United States")

1963, July 2 — Nineteen-year-old NICAP member John P. Speights of Raleigh, North Carolina, writes a letter questioning the Air Force's treatment of UFOs to Rep. Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), chairman of the House Armed Services Committee. Vinson forwards it to USAF along with his own request for information on Blue Book. The Air Force treats the request gingerly because of the implication of a congressional hearing and prepares a reply to Vinson on July 18, but there is no evidence that it is sent. USAF Maj. Maston M. Jacks does reply to Speights on August 5. (Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: July–December 1963, The Author, 2005, pp. 19–20; US Air Force, Foreign Technology Division, "Congressional Correspondence on the U.S. Air Force UFO Program, Congressman Carl Vinson")

1963, July 16 — Farmer Roy Blanchard of Charlton, Wiltshire, England, discovers a strange crater on the ground overlapping his potato and barley fields. It is about 8 feet wide and 4 inches deep. A hole in the center is 3 feet deep and less than a foot in diameter. All vegetation inside the circle is burned, leaving only bare earth, and there are four slots in the ground around it, each about 4 feet long and a foot wide. A small piece of metal is found. Astronomer Patrick Moore states that a "shrimp-sized meteorite" has caused the crater. But a military investigation shows no burn or scratch marks or any trace of an explosion. (Waveney Girvan, "The Wiltshire Crater Mystery: The Meteorite That Never Was," Flying Saucer Review 9, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1963): 3–7; "Postscript to the Charlton Crater: What Mr. Salwood Saw," Flying Saucer Review 9, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1963): 8; Charles Bowen, "Back to Charlton," Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 3 (May/June 1966): 12; Loren E. 1963, July 20 — An A-1 piloted by Louis Schalk briefly achieves a speed of Mach 3 for the first time. (Jacobsen, Area 51, p. 201)

1963, July 22 — 8:30 p.m. Michael Holland, 12, and two friends, Paul Lightfoot and Keith Kerfoot, are playing on a tip of wasteland opposite Redgate Drive in Parr, St. Helens, Merseyside, UK. They notice a silvery, shining object that descends and stops at 70 feet altitude. It has a red flashing light on top like a police car light. Something like a periscope emerges from it, swivels around, returns, and the object goes up quickly into an oddly tinted cloud that moves against the wind. ("Was This the Charlton Saucer? A Contemporary Sighting in Lancashire," Flying Saucer Review 10, no. 3 (May/June 1964): 24–25)

1963, Late summer — Lorimer A. Grant, perhaps a US Navy chief petty officer, is on the destroyer USS Sarsfield steaming between Puerto Rico and Key West, Florida, when the ship's sonar picks up a large object about 300–400 feet underwater. It seems to be 200 feet long and 40 feet wide. The ship circles the object, but no known submarines are in the area. When it does not identify itself, the ship drops concussion grenades, but it does not change speed or course. The ship then drops a large grappling hook, but it fails to catch on anything. The captain abandons the chase. (Argosy, July 1970; "USO," INFO Journal, no. 9 (Fall 1972): 38; Carl Feindt, "Report #268," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 245–246)

1963, August 1 — MP Patrick Wall inquires in the House of Commons about the Charlton Crater of July 16. Secretary of State for Air Hugh Fraser responds that no further investigation is warranted, and Secretary of State for War Joseph Godber replies that the army is concerned only whether the crater contained an unexploded bomb. (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1963, August 1 — Evening. A former RAF pilot and flight instructor sees a triangular UFO that lingers for a long time over Garston, Hertfordshire, England, then climbs out of sight. Thousands of other people in the London area, including an air traffic controller four miles away and future UFO researcher Timothy Good in Beckenham, London, also see the object, which has a tetrahedral shape and glassy appearance when seen through binoculars. A USAF F-100 Super Sabre from RAF Bentwaters [now Bentwaters Parks] in Woodbridge, Suffolk, and another plane from the De Havilland Aircraft Company are sent up to investigate but cannot get anywhere near the UFO, which is at an estimated 90,000 feet. An amateur astronomer in Bushey, Hertfordshire, takes a clear photo. The official explanation is a balloon. (UFOEv, p. 141; Good Above, p. 149)

1963, August 4 — 11:30 p.m. Ronnie Austin and Phyllis Bruce are driving east on State Highway 15 past the Mount Vernon, Illinois, airport when they notice a bright white round object about 20° above the southwest horizon. It seems to be keeping pace with them for several miles. Suddenly it moves about 600 feet in front of them and to the left. When Austin drops Phyllis off at home in Wayne City, it is hanging in the southeast. They continue watching it about 15 minutes, then Austin leaves for home. As he turns east on a gravel road, it shoots ahead of him, taking on an orange hue. At one point it comes within 100 feet of his car, swerves upward, and passes above him as the car radio makes a whining noise and the car engine almost fails. The object then moves behind him from west to east. When he arrives home, it is hovering about 900 feet to the southeast. Ronnie is so shaken, he is given a sedative. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Austin, and brother and sister also see the light, which finally becomes indistinguishable with a star by 1:10 a.m. (NICAP, "The Wayne City Car Chase (EM RA Traces)"; "Keenes Boy Tells Story of the 'Flying Saucer,'" Mount Vernon (Ill.) Register-News, August 8, 1963, p. 1; Jeffrey G. Liss, "The Light That Chased a Car," Fate 16, no. 11 (November 1963): 26–35; Schopick, pp. 81–88; Clark III 950; Clark IV 1064)

1963, August 5 — The Partial Nuclear Test Ban Treaty is signed by the USSR, UK, and US governments in Moscow, Russia, before being opened for signature by other countries. The treaty formally goes into effect on October 10. The treaty prohibits all above-ground tests of nuclear weapons. (Wikipedia, "Partial Nuclear Test Ban Treaty")

1963, August 7 — The first flight of the USAF version of the A-12, the Lockheed YF-12 interceptor, takes place at Edwards AFB in California. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed YF-12")

1963, August 8 — In Bob Considine's syndicated column, Jackie Gleason firmly repeats his conviction that UFOs are interplanetary: "All I know is that they are there and have killed at least one pilot who tried to investigate them—a boy flying an F-51—and have landed in several places." ("Gleason Repeats UFO Belief," UFO Investigator 2, no. 9 (June/Sept. 1963): 4)

1963, August 10 — 9:32 p.m. Several airmen of the 91st Bombardment Wing at Glasgow Air Force Base [now closed] near Glasgow, Montana, are walking in the parking lot when a bright light appears above them, bathing everyone in an orange glow. It is coming from a disc-shaped object with a dome that has some odd characters carved in it. The object moves up, then to the right, then down and left. It makes a square, then an X within the square, stopping at all points before moving again. The underside of the object is a large panel of blue light. They watch it for 3 minutes, then it disappears. ("Out of the Past," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 6, no. 2 (April/May 1985): 3)

1963, August 12 — Night. A 10-year-old staying with his family at the Suez Hotel on Collins Avenue in Miami, Florida, is standing on the diving board of the hotel pool when he hears a churning sound and sees a disturbance in the Atlantic Ocean about 100 feet offshore. He sees a light attached to an object that is rising up into the sky. It moves parallel to the water for about 20–30 minutes before it disappears. (Carl Feindt, "Report #1583," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 242–243)

1963, August 20 — 9:30 p.m. Italian President Antonio Segni's personal driver encounters a UFO near the entrance of the Castel Porziano Presidential Estate in Rome, Italy. When he sees a metallic domed disc with portholes moving in front of him in the driveway ahead, the driver stops the Fiat 2300 immediately. The UFO, about 65 feet diameter, passes a few feet above the car, making a hissing noise and causing the body to vibrate and the instruments to go crazy, then reverses course and passes over the car again with the same effect. It then tilts 90° and darts away to the west. It leaves behind a smell of heated metal. ("Quando gli UFO arrivarona anche in Italia," Oggi Notizie, November 26, 2011; 1Pinotti 148–151; Giulio Mancini, "UFO sulla tenuta del Presidente a Castelporziano: Coinvolti gli USA," Canaledieci, November 21, 2022)

1963, August 21 or 22 — 6:30 p.m. Helge Mikalsen is fishing in Kågsund near Skjervøy, Norway, when he notices a flame shooting from a mountain on the island of Arnøya to the west. The flame is coming from an object rising vertically. When the flame dissipates, he sees a gray object that is moving against the wind to the east accompanied by a smaller object. As it hovers 50 feet above the water about 450 feet away, the larger one (105–120 feet long) appears to have five windows that are oval on top and about 6 feet tall. The smaller object is about 9 feet wide. After a few minutes a green light shoots from one of the windows toward Mikalsen, and he feels semi-paralyzed. He notices several dark things between the object and the water, as if it is drawing up some material. After 10 minutes, it tilts up and accelerates, (Nils J. Jacobsen, "A Norwegian UFO Experience in 1963," Flying Saucer Review 16, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1970): 18, 24; Dolan, USO1, 243–245)

1963, August 22 — Test pilot Joseph A. Walker reaches an altitude of 353,200 feet (66.9 miles) in an X-15 rocket plane. (Wikipedia, "Joseph A. Walker")

1963, August 28 — After the March on Washington for Jobs and Freedom, J. Edgar Hoover singles out Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. as a major target for COINTELPRO. Soon after, the FBI is systematically bugging King's home and his hotel rooms, as they are now aware that King is growing in stature daily as the leader among leaders of the Civil Rights Movement. (Wikipedia, "COINTELPRO")

1963, August 28 — 7:00 p.m. José Marcos Gomes Vidal, 7, and his friends Fernando, 12, and Ronaldo Gualberto, 7, are in the Gualbertos's backyard in Sagrada Familia, Belo Horizonte, Brazil, to wash a coffee strainer in a cistern. Suddenly, Fernando notices a glow coming from the top of an avocado tree. When he looks up, he sees a UFO hovering above the tree's branches. The craft, which is spherical and has a pair of antennas on top, is completely transparent. It holds four human-like passengers sitting inside, one of whom sits in front of a machine that appears to be a control panel. The passengers are about 6 feet tall and dressed in spacesuits. They all have only one eye like a cyclops. Three of them are thin and bald, while the other looks like an overweight woman with blonde hair. The UFO shoots out two rays of yellow light. One of the cyclops appears between the lights, slowly floating down onto the ground. Once his boots touched the earth, the creature begins to walk toward José, who is completely unaware of what is happening since he is still collecting water. Fernando panics and tackles José, who falls to the ground, and Fernando gets back up and faces the cyclops. Now all three boys are aware of the visitor. The cyclops moves his head and makes hand signals. It speaks a few sounds in a strange language. The creature then turns around and stares back at the UFO. Fernando, spotting a brick on the ground, picks it up and aims it at the cyclops, who turns around and shoots Fernando's hand with a yellow light from a triangular crest on his chest. Fernando drops the brick, and all three of the boys become calm and frozen. For a few more minutes, the cyclops speaks to them, then it points one of his fingers at the moon and begins to walk back toward the UFO. José asks if he will ever come back. The cyclops shakes his head affirmatively, plucks a plant from the ground, and then waves his hand at the UFO, which shoots out two rays of yellow light again. The cyclops slowly floats back up into the vehicle, and the UFO takes off eastward and disappears out of their sight. (Gordon Creighton, "The 'One-Eyed Entities' of Belo Horizonte," in Charles Bowen, ed., UFO Percipients, special issue no. 3 of FSR, September 1969, pp. 28–32; Tristan, "The Alien Cyclops of Sagrada Familia," Bizarre and Grotesque, March 24, 2016; Brazil 66–72)

1963, September — Lt. Col. Robert J. Friend leaves Project Blue Book and is replaced by Maj. Hector Quintanilla. (Sparks, p. 14; Hynek UFO Report, pp. 25–27; Clark III 922, 937; Clark IV 1033, 1047)

1963, September 7 — Capt. Swett gives a formal lecture on hypnosis to a meeting at the Unitarian Church in Portsmouth, New Hampshire. After the lecture, the Hills tell him that Barney was going to a psychiatrist, Duncan Stephens, whom he likes and trusts. Swett suggests that Barney ask Stephens about the use of hypnosis in his case. At his next therapy session, Barney mentions his UFO encounter to Stephens, who recommends Dr. Benjamin Simon, a well-known psychiatrist in Boston, Massachusetts, with much experience in hypnosis.

1963, September 12 — Patrick Loreno and 18 other men aboard Texas Tower 2, a USAF radar station 110 miles east of Cape Cod, Massachusetts [decommissioned later in the year and sunk], spot an object 3 miles from their location. They report the sighting to the Coast Guard and request an investigation, but the object sinks before a boat can get there. The object has a controlled light and smoke or steam appears on its surface. The men watch it for 20 minutes. There is no record of a ship or a submarine in the area. ("Texas Tower Men See Light," APRO Bulletin, May 1964, p. 8; Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 53)

1963, September 14 — Day. The Danish tender Kristine Maersk is 92 miles off Oporto, Portugal, when a starlike light appears at 25° altitude. It approaches the ship, descends about 10°, and turns a phosphorescent green. Ahead of it are 10–15 orange or red lights, ending with a purple light, most of which change positions. Second Officer Knud Rasmussen observes the object through binoculars for about 25 seconds. ("Portugal: UFO at Sea," Flying Saucer Review 10, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1964): 23–24)

1963, September 14 — 3:15 p.m. US Forest Service instructor Edward A. Grant and his son see a round object over Susanville, California, that at first seems to be a balloon, but is moving erratically. The movements are very fast and the direction changes very definite. They watch it pass overhead for several minutes. Suddenly, a long cylindrical object with fins along its sides appears from the north and passes overhead toward the south. The round object moves very rapidly to intercept the long object, ejecting a yellowish-brown trail, and merges with it. (Sparks, p. 295; Olsen, sec. 3 pp. 84–85; Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects: A Further Look," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 4)

1963, September 14 — Jacques Vallée meets J. Allen Hynek for the first time at his residence in Evanston, Illinois. He moves to Chicago and begins actively assisting Hynek in his UFO work over the next few months, helping him analyze Project Blue Book data. (Jacques Vallée, Forbidden Science: Journals 1957–1969, North Atlantic, 1992, pp. 71–80; Clark III 1213; Clark IV 1389)

1963, September 19 — Adm. Roscoe Hillenkoetter writes to astronomer Donald H. Menzel, saying that his book The World of Flying Saucers has "effectively put to rest all surmises about flying saucers being from 'outer space.'"

The letter is in the American Philosophical Society library in Philadelphia. (Christopher D. Allan, "Admiral Hillenkoetter: From Believer to Skeptic," IUR 20, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1995): 17; American Philosophical Society, "Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter, Correspondence, 1961–1965")

1963, September 19 — 6:50 p.m. More than 140 residents of Wonthaggi and South Dudley, Victoria, Australia, observe a mystery object like an orange beach ball maneuver in the sky for 25 minutes. At first it hovers, then it begins moving slowly and silently, putting on sudden and intermittent bursts of speed, before disappearing in an easterly direction into the Bass Strait. During the 25 minutes that the object is visible, TV sets malfunction in South Dudley, Wonthaggi, and lnverlock. TV sets variously display white screens, gray screens, double images, or snow and lines. Still other sets go completely blank. After the UFO leaves at 7:15, all TV sets resume normal operation. ("UAO's Upset TV Reception," APRO Bulletin, May 1964, pp. 1, 6; Schopick, pp. 109–111)

1963, September 19 — 8:00 p.m. Four children in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, see a bright, oval object hover in a field and drop something. Approaching the site, they are confronted by a man about 10 feet tall dressed in a white "monk-like" suit who holds out his hands and makes unintelligible sounds. The children flee, and one girl is admitted to the hospital in shock. (Vallée, Magonia, p. 294; Mark Cashman, "Behavioral Classification System for UFO Occupants," IUR 24, no. 1 (Spring 1999): 18)

1963, September 25 — 4:20 a.m. Police officer Galen Anderson is patrolling the streets of Sunnyvale, California, in a squad car when a radio call from other officers alerts him to a UFO. The object is moving east to west at an elevation of 45° and at the speed of a propeller-driven aircraft. The leading edge is brightly illuminated and the main body grayish with a small point of light visible on it. The object makes a turn toward the northwest, is momentarily visible edge-on, then quickly disappears from view after 45 seconds. Probable failed Atlas E rocket launch from Vandenberg AFB in Santa Barbara County, California. ("Big 'Flying Squid' Spotted over Area," *San Jose (Calif.) 1963, September 27 — Blue Book releases a statement on the Hill case, claiming insufficient information, although they strongly suspect the UFO is the planet Jupiter. (Clark III 581; Clark IV 638–639)

1963, September 27 — Night. Fred Johnson steps outside his home in Eureka, Montana, to investigate why his dogs are barking. He sees a lighted object streak across the sky, leaving a brownish-blue trail. The object stops in the southeast and hangs in the sky for the rest of the evening, until he goes to bed. He calls his neighbors, who also witness it. It resembles an undersized moon and appears to be hundreds of miles away. ("Sight Object in Sky," Tobacco Valley News (Eureka, Montana), October 3, 1963, p. 1; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: July–December 1963, The Author, 2005, p. 59)

1963, October — Maj. Hector Quintanilla is appointed director of Project Blue Book. He is assisted by Sgt. David Moody, who is particularly hostile to UFOs and tends to label every report as "possible" this or that. (Sparks, p. 14; Clark III 922–923, 937; Clark IV 1047)

1963, October — A Lisunov Li-2 airliner on the Guangdong to Wuhan, China, air route is chased by three luminous UFOs for 115 minutes. The pilots provide a minute-by-minute report by radio to the Chinese Civil Aeronautics Administration. After landing, the crew is debriefed by air traffic control, and the passengers are told not to discuss the incident with anyone. (Wendelle Stevens and Paul Dong, UFOs over Modern China, UFO Photo Archives, 1983, pp. 44–45)

1963, October — 9:30 p.m. Five members of a family in Millersport, Ohio, see what seems to be an airplane on fire, but the house-sized object approaches and hovers about 300 feet away. They see a dark disc with a dome and antenna on top and three ball-shaped protrusions on the bottom. Around the rim are evenly spaced openings that emit fiery beams. In the dome, several large windows are visible in which a figure can be seen, at least by the mother. The dome rotates as the object hovers, and it makes a low humming noise. It finally rises slowly and makes a small circle in the air before speeding away. (Michael D. Swords, "Close Encounters of the First Kind: Do We Really Care? Part Two," The Big Study, February 15, 2012)

1963, October 4 — 1:00 p.m. Connecticut State Representative Luther B. Martin sees a delta-shaped, silvery object leaving a flare-like trail at Hartland, Connecticut. A row of black markings is visible along the blunt forward edge as the object passes from south to north. He estimates its speed at 2,000 mph. ("UFO Sightings Centered in Western U.S.," UFO Investigator 2, no. 10 (Dec. 1963/Jan. 1964): 3)

1963, October 12 — 3:30 a.m. Driving in a blinding rainstorm on the road between Monte Maíz and Isla Verde, Córdoba, Argentina, Eugenio Douglas feels heat and a prickly sensation all over his body. He sees a brilliant light in front of him. Temporarily blinded, he loses control of his truck and ends up in the ditch. Shaken but not injured, he gets out of the vehicle and looks up at the road, which he finds is blocked by an oval-shaped object at least 30 feet high. A door opens on the side and three huge "robots in human form" emerge. They wear helmets with short antennas and are 12–15 feet tall. Douglas takes a few shots at them with his revolver and runs away. The robots return to the UFO, which chases him down the road and eventually flies away. The next day, police find large footprints near the abandoned truck. 1963, October 21 — 9:30 p.m. Yolié del Valle Moreno and her family at Trancas, Tucumán, Argentina, observe six strange objects for 40 minutes in the back courtyard of their house. One UFO hovers at ground level above some railroad tracks, while another with a dome and portholes is near another house. They can see some 40 humanlike figures (silhouettes) moving around within two bright lights linked by a prolongation or tube. When witnesses flash a light at the object, the house is flooded with a strong beam. The temperature rises inside the house and the inhabitants smell a strong sulfurous odor. All six objects are about 24 feet in diameter, have a white and a red beam of light, and leave a cloud of white smoke that does not disperse for 4 hours. Beneath the space where one of the objects has been rocking back and forth, the witnesses find innumerable white balls one-quarter-inch in diameter piled into a cone 3 feet high and within a circle 28–30 feet in diameter. They consist primarily of calcium carbonate. (Gordon Creighton, "Argentina 1963–64, Part II," Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1966): 23–24; Oscar A. 1963, October 23 — 11:00 p.m. Driving south of South River, New Jersey, on State Route 18, a man glimpses something like a flashlight off to his left, and three figures, 3–4 feet tall, cross the road in front of him. They are dressed in "tight-fitting silver-gray one-piece suits" that "seem to glow once they hit the headlights." Their heads are found, but the witness can see no other features. They begin quickly "fluttering" across the road, faster than the "fastest sprinter." (Center for UFO Studies, [case documents]; Clark III 278; Clark IV 318)

1963, October 31 — Eight-year-old Rute de Souza hears a strange roar and watches a silvery object coming towards her house near Iguape, São Paulo, Brazil. It soars above her, hits a palm tree, gyrates a bit in the air, then falls into the Rio Peropava near the opposite shore. She runs to get her mother and uncle, who also hear the sound. They see the river boiling up in the spot, followed by an eruption of muddy water and mud. Fishermen, including Tetsuo Ioshigawa, also view the event. The UFO is estimated to be 25 feet in diameter. Divers, both equipped and unequipped, fail to find any wreckage in the river, which is only 12 feet deep. 1963, November — 5:00 p.m. A man and his daughter are driving just north of Andover, New Jersey, when they see three strange lights in the sky. They are perfect ovals possibly a quarter mile high. The lights take off at a great speed in "perfect unison" toward the north. (Center for UFO Studies, [case documents])

1963, November 1 — A member of the CIA-trained 35th Black Cat Squadron, Republic of China pilot Yeh Changti is flying an American U-2 reconnaissance aircraft to spy on China's nuclear program when he is shot down by an SA-2 missile over Shangrao, Jiangxi, and held in mainland China until 1982. Yeh is incarcerated for four years and undergoes numerous interrogations. Although some claim he was tortured, Yeh later says he was treated humanely. After the outbreak of the Cultural Revolution, he is released and sent to work on a farm, before being transferred to work at Hanyang Arsenal in Wuhan. (Wikipedia, "Yeh Changti"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 216–218)

1963, November 3 — The Hills give a presentation at the Two State UFO Study Group in Quincy Center, Massachusetts. One of the attendees tape-records the session. Another speaker at the session is Capt. Ben Swett of Pease AFB, himself a practicing hypnotist, who tells them he thinks hypnotic regression is a good idea. (Clark III 584; Clark 641)

1963, November 12 — The crew of the Argentine Naval auxiliary transport, ARA Punta Médanos, sees a large UFO off its stern [in the Atlantic Ocean?]. It is moving at high speed; when it appears, the needles of the ship's magnetic compass suddenly and simultaneously swing off course, pointing towards the UFO, which is about 6,000 feet away. The compasses return to normal after the object leaves. ("Argentine Navy Discloses Important E-M Case," UFO Investigator 3, no. 4 (Aug./Sept. 1965): 6; Schopick, pp. 3–4; Loren E. 1963, November 16 — Evening. Four teenagers—John Flaxton, Mervyn Hutchinson, Jenny Holloway, and another youth—are in Sandling Park near Saltwood, Kent, England, when they see a moving reddish-yellow "star" above the woods. It comes down at an angle of 60°, then vanishes. Moments later, they see a bright, golden light in a field about 240 feet away, floating 10 feet above the ground, and seemingly 15–20 feet across. It seems to move along with the teens for a short while. It disappears behind trees, then a dark figure shambles out of the woods. It is all black, about the size of a human but without a head and has bat wings. The teenagers run away. Other witnesses come forward to report strange lights and giant footprints in the woods. 1963, November 20 — 6:00 p.m. Capt. J. Murray and three members of the crew of the Aberdeen collier Thrift see a flashing red light as they are traveling south in the North Sea from Aberdeen to Blyth, Northumberland, England. It passes within a mile of their port side, 15–30 feet above sea level and suddenly disappears 3 miles astern, presumably into the water. The collier, which puts about and makes for the object's vanishing point, has 2 radar contacts on its screens, but they disappear as the ship approaches. They search for 3 hours but find no wreckage. ("Mystery at Sea," Flying Saucer Review 10, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1964): 22; Janet Gregory, "UFOs Ahoy!" Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1971): 29–30)

1963, November 22 — President John F. Kennedy is assassinated in Dallas, Texas, by Lee Harvey Oswald. (Wikipedia, "Assassination of John F. Kennedy"; Wikipedia, "John F. Kennedy assassination conspiracy theories")

1963, November 23 — 6:00 p.m. Two witnesses aboard the aircraft carrier USS Kearsage in the North Pacific Ocean see a bright light on the horizon behind the ship. As it rises, five lights become visible. Shortly afterward, the lights go below the horizon. (National UFO Reporting Center, "NUFORC UFO Sighting 2906," June 2, 1998; Dolan, USO1, 247–248)

1963, Winter — A series of at least three incidents at Walker AFB [now closed] at Roswell, New Mexico, involve unidentified aerial craft maneuvering silently above an Atlas missile silo designated Site 9, northeast of Sunset, New Mexico. Three former missile personnel at the base—Jerry C. Nelson, Bob Caplan, and Gene Lamb—relay their experiences to Florida Today reporter Billy Cox in June 2001. (Billy Cox, "UFO's Haunt Missile Crews," Florida Today, June 27, 2001; "Affidavit of Jerome C. Nelson," June 25, 2010; Nukes 147–152)

1963, December 10 — 11:30 p.m. A large, bright, dome-shaped UFO lands at RAF Cosford in Shropshire, England, seen by two student cadets returning late from leave. It bathes the area in intense green light from a height of 10 feet, then disappears behind a hangar. Scorch marks are later found where the object had been. ("A Landing at Cosford? 1963, December 14 — 1:00 a.m. Leslie Immelman and W. T. Muller are driving about 12 miles north of Parys, South Africa, when they see something in the road that looks like an antelope. They turned back to investigate and saw that it was an apparently large dog. When they turn the car back toward the east, Immelman notices that the whole area has lit up so much that all the boulders and potholes in the road are visible. Suddenly a strange bright object appears ahead of them and approaches at high speed. Thinking it will hit the car, they both jump out, but the object dives over the car, ascends 50 feet, and hovers for 2 minutes. It is round and about 50 feet in diameter, glowing with an orange light and with a big blue light on one side that is illuminating the area. A long "fiery tail" protrudes from the blue light, emitting electrical sparks. Immelman can hear a low hum. The object shoots away to the south, changes course to the east, then returns to the car. This repeats 5–6 times before it disappears for good. ("On the Road to Vereeniging," Flying Saucer Review 10, no. 3 (May/June 1964): 27–28; Loren E. Gross, The Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse: UFOs, a History: July–December 1963, The Author, 2005, pp. 86–87)

1963, December 14 — The Hills have an initial meeting with Benjamin Simon, a well-known hypnotist in Boston, Massachusetts, recommended to them by Dr. Stephens. It is clear to Simon that the Hills believe they have seen a UFO, but which may have been an experimental aircraft. This has set in motion an anxiety-provoking psychological experience whose sources it might be possible to uncover through hypnosis. (Clark III 584; Clark IV 641–642)

1963, December 25 — Night. A fisherman in Libreville, Gabon, witnesses the landing of a craft from which a terrifying creature emerges. Humanoid in shape, the being produces sounds the fisherman cannot understand. It leaves footprints in the sand before returning to the machine, which then takes off. ("Atterrissage d'un engin mysterieux au Gabon," Lumières dans la Nuit, no. 70 (July/Sept. 1964): 5)

1963, December 26? — Col. Bruce Bailey is aboard an RB-47 surveillance aircraft over the Gulf of Mexico off New Orleans, Louisiana, as part of Operation Common Cause. The crew spots an unknown object visually, then picks it up on radar for a couple of "short spurts" before the ELINT equipment malfunctions, indicating radar jamming on the S-band frequency around 3000 MHz. Ground radar confirms the targets. (Clark III 996; Clark IV 1109)

1963, December 27 — At Bank's Stables on Ivy Chimneys Road in Epping, Essex, England, trainee riding instructor Pauline Abbott, 16, is riding her horse into the riding yard when the animal stops and refuses to move. She hears a "squelching" noise coming from the field and sees a shiny white UFO on the ground. It is about 8 feet long, 3 feet high at the center, and has what looks like a window on one side that is brighter than the rest of the object. It takes off, flies horizontally for 100 feet, and disappears. Grass is found flattened over a circular area. Abbott finds marks forming a square with 8-foot sides within an 11-foot circular depression that contains a 3-foot central circle. ("Landing in Essex," Flying Saucer Review 10, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1964): 22–23; G. G. Doel, "The Epping Sightings," BUFORA Journal and Bulletin 1, no. 1 (Summer 1964): 5–6; J. 1964

1964 — MKSEARCH is the name given to the continuation of the MKUltra program. The MKSEARCH program is divided into two projects dubbed MKOFTEN / CHICKWIT. Funding for MKSEARCH commences in 1965 and ends in 1971. The project is a joint project between the US Army Chemical Corps and the CIA Office of Research and Development to find new offensive-use agents with a focus on incapacitating agents. The purpose of the project is to develop, test, and evaluate capabilities in the covert use of biological, chemical, and radioactive material systems and techniques for producing predictable human behavioral and/or physiological changes in support of highly sensitive operational requirements. (Wikipedia, "Project MKUltra")

1964 — Ray Stanford founds Project Starlight International to document the existence of UFOs. He establishes a Laboratory for Instrumented Research on a 400-acre site northwest of Austin, Texas, that includes two buildings. Equipment eventually includes radar, a laser system, magnetometers, a gravimeter, microcomputer, microphones, video equipment, and still cameras. In the event of UFO activity, the Operation ARGUS (Automated Ring-up on Geolocated UFO Sightings) computer kicks in and automatically telephones all volunteers within the computed visibility radius of the UFO. Volunteers attempt to locate and photograph the UFO visually. On June 8, 1977, the FCC licenses its Raytheon Model 1700 radar system with the call sign K12XBJ. (Ray Stanford, "A Technological Approach to UFOs: A Status Report on Project Starlight International, June 30, 1977," IUR 2, no. 8 (August 1977): 5–7; Margaret Sachs, The UFO Encyclopedia, Putnam, 1980, pp. 259–260; Douglas Dean Johnson, "The Ray Stanford UFO–Alien Legacy," Mirador, April 8, 2024)

1964 — British writer W. Raymond Drake writes Gods or Spacemen?, the first of a series of books espousing his view that the world's folklore, mythology, and religion are replete with references to space beings who came to Earth in several waves: the Uranids hundreds of thousands of years ago; the Saturnians centuries later; and the Jupiterians who landed near Crete. (W. Raymond Drake, Gods or Spacemen? Amherst, 1964; Wikipedia, "W. Raymond Drake"; Jerome Clark, "Vimanas Have Landed: Ancient Astronautics in Ufology," IUR 22, no. 3 (Fall 1997): 27–28; Clark III 108, 463; Clark IV 135, 509)

1964 — Night. The lookout on board a US Coast Guard ship in the Atlantic Ocean spots a light on the horizon. At first he thinks it is an approaching ship, but the radar officer detects no target. The lookout panics and thinks the light is coming after him. The next night, Joe Pickens is the lookout, and he sees a similar light that comes to within 600–1,200 feet of the ship. Other members of the crew also see the light and take photos. It remains in one spot for 5 minutes, then emits a 100-foot-long beam of light and takes off quickly. (Bob Teets, West Virginia UFOs: Close Encounters in the Mountain State, Headline, 1994, pp. 137–138; Carl Feindt, "Report #628," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 256–257)

1964 — As the US Navy conducts an anti-submarine exercise supervised by the Atlantic Undersea Test and Evaluation Center on Andros Island in the Bahamas, hydroacoustic equipment allegedly detects an unusual pulsating sound at a depth of 5 miles. (Vladimir G. Azhazha and Evgeny P. Litvinov, Подводные НЛО: Загадочные места мира [Underwater UFOs], 2015; Dolan, USO1, 257–258)

1964? — Day. Frank S. Kinsey and his brother-in-law are looking at Lake Casitas, north of Ventura, California, when they hear a loud noise and water splashing. They notice, rising out of the water, a round object with an "observation cone" on top. Through binoculars, Kinsey can see portholes through which a humanoid form is looking out at them. It hovers in the air about 20–30 feet from the surface. Kinsey grabs his camera, but the object starts moving away, making a loud noise like a jet, its outer cylinder rotating quickly as it changes colors from dark lavender to bright orange-yellow. He snaps a photo on Kodak Infrared film as the UFO speeds up and disappears over the mountains about 10 miles away. After it is developed, the photo shows something in the air above the lake on the left. (MUFON case file; "Witness Says UFO Came out of Water," Skylook, no. 82 (September 1974): 8; Dolan, USO1, 256–257)

1964, January — Lionel Beer begins publishing Spacelink, a newsletter of the Isle of Wight UFO Investigation Society. It folds in April 1971. (Spacelink 1, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1964))

1964, January 1 — Many witnesses in Shanghai, China, see a huge cigar-shaped UFO flying toward the southwest. MiG fighters are scrambled in pursuit but fail to intercept it. The official explanation is that it is a US missile. (Wendelle Stevens and Paul Dong, UFOs over Modern China, UFO Photo Archives, 1983, p. 45)

1964, January 4 — Barney Hill has his first hypnosis session with Benjamin Simon. The sessions will continue until June 6. The Hills undergo sessions separately, and for the most part are instructed not to remember their experiences afterwards. Barney's sessions are particularly intense. However, by the end of the sessions, although they disagree with Simon on the nature of the experience, both the Hills and Simon agree that the therapy is successful. The stress and anxiety are gone. Simon submits a statement to the Hills' insurance company, which initially declines to pay, until Simon explains that he was treating them for what will later be called PTSD. 1964, January 16–17 — Hynek and Vallée meet with Blue Book's Capt. Hector Quintanilla and T/Sgt. David Moody at Dearborn Observatory in Evanston, Illinois. Quintanilla seems uninterested in science and Moody seems bored. (Jacques Vallée, Forbidden Science: Journals 1957–1969, North Atlantic, 1992, pp. 84–86)

1964, January 23 — The landing craft Loellen M. is in the Gulf of Carpentaria between Cape Grey and Groote Eylandt, Northern Territory, Australia, when a crew member notices the compass is malfunctioning ("haywire") and the vessel is off course, He notices an odd phosphorescence in the water on the starboard side about 6 feet away from the ship. It is a ghostly, pulsating white light that is rotating in a clockwise direction. It seems to be "miles across." As the light wheel moves to the ship's port side, another rotating light approaches the ship's starboard side. This undoubtedly involves some unusual bioluminescence, but it is significant that it is the first "unknown" in the RAAF's UFO files. 1964, January 25 — The London UFO Research Organisation merges with the British UFO Association (a consolidation of several UFO groups in the UK) to form the British UFO Research Association under the leadership of Nigel Stephenson. Its purpose is to "encourage and promote unbiased scientific investigation and research" into UFOs, "collect and disseminate evidence and data," and coordinate research nationally. It begins publishing a new magazine, BUFORA Journal, in the summer. ("Editorial: The Problems Facing Us," BUFORA Journal and Bulletin 1, no. 1 (Summer 1964): 2; Eghigian, After, p. 175)

1964, February 3 — 2:00 a.m. Doris Player wakes up to see her bedroom illuminated near Gum Creek, South Australia, about 100 miles north of Adelaide. The light is coming from a circular object hovering about 200 feet above her garden. Suddenly a 5-foot 3-inch being wearing blue-green coveralls, a brown balaclava, and an open brown jacket appears. He wears elbow-length, black gloves with a cord going from his helmet to his left shoulder. He has a red face and a big nose and holds a black box that buzzes and clicks as he points it. The light goes out, and when her eyes adjust to the darkness, she sees that the entity has also disappeared. 1964, February 10 — "The Bellero Shield" episode of Outer Limits airs on ABC-TV. It features an alien with wraparound eyes. UFO skeptic Martin S. Kottmeyer alleges that this episode influenced Barney Hill's hypnotic recounting of events, although Betty Hill says they had never watched it. (Internet Movie Database, "The Bellero Shield"; Martin Kottmeyer, "Entirely Unpredisposed: The Cultural Background of UFO Reports," Magonia 35 (January 1990); Martin Kottmeyer, "The Eyes That Spoke," The REALL News 2, no. 7 (July 1994); Clark III 29, 589; Clark IV 48, 647)

1964, February 21 — Night. Senior Constable Payne and Constable McMillan are traveling in their police car in Para Hills, South Australia, when they notice a light flash to their left. As it approaches, it reminds Payne of a "big glass bowl with a terrifically strong light in it." The spherical object is estimated to be about 8 inches in diameter. It zig-zags rapidly, slows down, and then accelerates at a great speed. The object originates from the west before it quickly turns north and vanishes. ("Two Police Officers Watch UFO," Australian Flying Saucer Review, no. 8 (June 1965): 12)

1964, February 29 — President Lyndon B. Johnson holds a press conference to announce that the US has repeatedly broken the Soviet's world record for air speed by a secret aircraft called the A-11—a fictitious name for the Air Force's YF-12, a twin-seat version of the Lockheed A-12 built as an interceptor. He says the A-11 can fly more than 2,000 mph at an altitude of 70,000 feet. The YF-12A is announced in part to continue hiding the A-12, its still-secret ancestor; any sightings of CIA/Air Force A-12s based at Area 51 in Nevada can be attributed to the well-publicized Air Force YF-12As based at Edwards Air Force Base in California. (Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 232–233)

1964, March — Allen H. Greenfield, Rick Hilberg, and Dale Rettig begin publishing the American UFO Committee Review in preparation for their first Congress of Scientific Ufologists meeting in Cleveland, Ohio. Greenfield publishes the journal in Atlanta, Georgia, for seven issues, until fall 1966. (American UFO Committee Review 1, no. 1 (March 1964))

1964, March — The UFO Investigation Centre (UFOIC) begins publishing the UFOIC Newsletter. It persists through January 1977. (UFOIC Newsletter 1 (March 1964); Clark IV 1270–1271)

1964, March 7 — Betty Hill has her first hypnosis session with Benjamin Simon. Betty's account closely matches her dreams from 2 years earlier, and her account is consistent with Barney's. Many abduction elements come to light: telepathic commands, semen extraction, a rectal probe, skin scrapings, a pregnancy test with a needle, the Star Map. The aliens are 5 feet tall with gray skin, oddly shaped heads, and broad foreheads. Simon discounts the possibility of an alien abduction and prefers to think that Betty's dream influenced Barney's memories. The Hills do not agree. (Wikipedia, "Barney and Betty Hill"; Stanton Friedman and Kathleen Marden, Captured! The Betty and Barney Hill UFO Experience, New Page Books, 2007, pp. 92, 99–103, 111–112, 123–124)

1964, April 1 — The UK Air Ministry, Admiralty, and War Office are consolidated into a new Ministry of Defence. The Air Ministry becomes the Air Force Department, within which is a secretariat called S4 (Air) that deals with, among other things, UFO reports from the public. Another office, Defense Secretariat 8, is created under the authority of the Secretary of State and also has authority over UFO reporting. (Wikipedia, "Ministry of Defence (United Kingdom)"; Good Above, pp. 58–59)

1964, April 3 — 9:00 p.m. R. Wold, a graduate student in anthropology at the University of Wisconsin, and three others are heading west on County Highway C about one mile west of Monticello, Wisconsin. They notice two blinking red lights in the distance that they think might be police cars. However, they are too far above the ground and begin approaching. The object slows down to a hover behind some telephone wires about 300 feet from the car. By this time they have stopped the car and can see four red lights in a rectangular formation and one white light in front of the others, but no underlying structure. The object passes slowly beyond them, so Wold turns the car around and tries to chase the lights but they disappear to the east. (Sparks, p. 296; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 88–89)

1964, April 11 — 6:30 p.m. Physiotherapist Warren B. Ochsner and his wife and two children are having a picnic on a hill about 10 miles northwest of Homer, New York. They see an unusually wide vapor trail in the sky stretching from northeast to southwest. At the far end of the white trail is a smoky, spiral portion about one mile long. The vapor trail drifts off. After 10 minutes, Ochsner notices that the spiral portion is still visible, having moved a bit to the west. With binoculars, he sees wisps of smoke streaming out of it. It changes from a horizontal to a vertical position with greater smoke activity. It stops and hangs there for 2–3 minutes before sinking into the clouds. After another 3 minutes, they see a horizontal pencil-shaped object moving from left to right on the horizon. A flash of white light erupts from its end and shoots forward a short distance then stops. It becomes thick in the middle, a cloud of smoke emanates from it, and it shoots backward rapidly. Again it hovers and changes to a saucer shape. It then divides into two parts, one above the other. The top object slowly recedes into the distance, while the bottom objects heads downward at a 45° angle, divides in two again, with the top part fading away and the bottom part assuming a vertical pencil shape, which fades away. The whole display takes 45 minutes. (Sparks, p. 297; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 89–92; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 60–61; Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects and Cloud Cigars," IUR 29, no. 1 (Spring 2004): 7–9)

1964, April 13 — About 8:45 p.m. In Walthamstow, London, a bus driver sees a silver, cigar-shaped UFO rapidly descend, slicing through telephone wires before splashing into the River Lea. The object gouges a deep scar into the concrete towpath as it goes down. Police drag the river but find nothing, claiming the shallow water—only four to six feet deep—makes ducks a more likely explanation. The witness firmly rejects that possibility. (Walthamstow Guardian, April 17, 1964; "Walthamstow 'Object from Space,'" Flying Saucer Review 10, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1964): 21; Janet Gregory, "UFOs Ahoy!" Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1971): 29, 30)

1964, April 20 — Early morning, During Operation Deep Freeze VII, six members of a US Coast Guard aircraft sight a V-formation of 9 glowing-white objects speeding at an estimated 35,000 feet altitude. They are flying a in a C-130 turbo-prop transport from McMurdo Station, Antarctica, with supplies. The right-side observer first sees the objects approaching at about 460 mph from above and to their right side. When they come abreast of the airplane, they slow to its speed. After a short time, they fly above the airplane and take up position above and to its left side. The pilot attempts to radio the ground but the radio is dead, and their radar also stops working. When the pilot tries to switch to auxiliary power, it too is not functioning. At one point the airplane's engines stop (the oil begins to congeal in the cold air). Instead of losing altitude, it maintains "a steady altitude and course." The airplane allegedly continues flying in complete silence, then it enters a "strange haze" (like a white-out) with the air filled with static electricity. There is electrical arcing from one observer's body to metal inside the fuselage. The haze vanishes after about 20 minutes. The power suddenly returns, and the crew can restart the engines in sequence. The airplane has covered a distance of 305 miles during the 45–50 minutes at indicated airspeed of 184–218 knots. 1964, April 22 — 9:00 p.m. Marie Morrow, Ruth Ovelette, and Morrow's son are driving west about 10–15 miles east of Lordsburg, New Mexico, when a brilliantly luminous object sweeps about 10 feet above their car from behind, illuminating the interior and emitting a whirring, whining sound. The UFO then rises but maintains its course along the highway before veering toward the north and vanishes. (Wendell Faught, "Plain Talk," Deming (N.Mex.) Headlight, May 7, 1964, p. 1; "Huge Light Buzzed Car in New Mexico," APRO Bulletin, May 1964, p. 10; Clark III 1091–1092; Clark IV 1208)

1964, April 24 — 10:00 a.m. Dairy farmer Gary Wilcox of Newark Valley, New York, is driving a tractor on his property when he sees a shiny object on the inside edge of a nearby patch of woods. He gets off the tractor and approaches the object, which is egg-shaped, 20 feet long, 16 feet wide, and four feet high. It is hovering two feet above the ground and making a sound like a car idling. He touches it and feels a hard metal. Two figures suddenly appear from under the object. They are 4 feet tall and 2 feet wide, dressed in seamless silvery garments. Each carries a tray filled with alfalfa, roots, soil, leaves, and brush. Wilcox hears a voice say, "Do not be alarmed. We have talked to people before." They ask him what he is doing, and Wilcox says he is spreading manure. One humanoid asks if he can have some and converses some more about space exploration. They claim they are from Mars. After a while, the UFO takes off in a horizontal direction. Wilcox notices some small depressions where the figures were standing, as well as a thin, red, jellylike substance. (Olga M. 1964, April 24 — Around 5:50 p.m. Socorro, New Mexico, police officer Lonnie Zamora, while chasing a speeder, hears a continuous roaring sound and sees a brilliant blue "cone of flame" in the sky to the south-southwest. The bottom of the flame is out of sight behind a hill. Thinking there has been an explosion, he tries to pursue it, turning off to the right on a rough gravel road, but loses sight of it while trying to get the car up a steep hill. By the time he reaches the top, the sound stops and the flame is no longer visible. He then notices a metallic object in a ravine about 450 feet away. At first, he thinks it is an overturned car, but then he sees "two figures in what resembled white coveralls, pretty close to the object on the northwest side, as if inspecting it." One seems to turn in a startled way as if he hears Zamora's car approaching. The figures are small, and the object is oval-shaped and positioned so its long axis is horizontal. Zamora loses sight of object as he drives through a dip in the road. He radios headquarters that he is investigating a possible car accident. He stops a second time and gets out, hearing 2–3 loud thumping noises like a door shutting hard. He walks three steps to the front of the car to possibly 50 feet away from the object when he hears a very load roar increasing in volume and sees a smokeless blue-orange flame coming from beneath. He notes a red insignia or lettering on the side of the object. Zamora thinks it is going to explode and runs away, putting the car between him and the object and dropping to the ground. He feels some slight heat from the flame. The roaring noise stops, and Zamora looks up to see the UFO flying away to the southwest at a level height, just clearing an 8-foot dynamite shack. He runs back to the patrol car and radios headquarters, just as the object climbs slowly and goes past Box Canyon or Six Mile Canyon Mountain (about 6 miles away). The entire incident takes place in less than 2 minutes. Police Sgt. M. S. Chavez arrives, and they find burning brush (including a badly damaged creosote bush) where the UFO has been, as well as four asymmetrically placed, trapezoidal imprints 12–16 inches long, 6–8 inches wide, and 4–6 inches deep. An FBI agent, D. Arthur Byrnes Jr., who has heard about it on the police radio, speaks with Zamora in the evening. He notifies army intelligence at White Sands Missile Range, who sends Capt. Richard T. Holder. Military police arrive and collect samples, working by flashlight. The next morning, Holder gets a call from a colonel at the war room of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, asking for a report. T/Sgt. David Moody from ATIC and Maj. William Conner from Kirtland AFB check the area for radioactivity on April 26. Hynek arrives on April 28 and interviews Zamora and Chavez. Richard H. Hall and Ray Stanford arrive for NICAP and obtain some metal traces on a rock in the landing area; they take the sample to NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center, where metallurgist Henry E. Frankel agrees to analyze the material. His tentative analysis suggests a zinc-iron alloy, perhaps from a zinc pail. In 1966, Blue Book chief Maj. Hector Quintanilla writes in a classified article in Studies in Intelligence that "This is the best-documented case on record, and still we have been unable, in spite of a thorough investigation, to find the vehicle or other stimulus that scared Zamora to the point of panic." Some investigators think the case might involve a test of a Lunar Surveyor module from White Sands. 1964, April 25 — Morning. J. D. Hatch is driving on US Hwy 70 between Mescalero and Tularosa, New Mexico, when a bright oval object descends and seemingly lands on the other side of Round Mountain east of Tularosa. (Clark III 1092; Clark IV 1208)

1964, April 25 — Evening. Two motorists driving on US Hwy 84 between Abiquiu and Espanola, New Mexico, see a strange object that is definitely not an airplane fly straight toward their car before shooting away. All they can see is a blue-flamed exhaust. (Clark III 1092; Clark IV 1208)

1964, April 25? — Night. Two Spanish-speaking people 9 miles away from Golden, New Mexico, watch a light come down from the sky and leave three "smelted" circles some 2 feet in diameter and separated from each other by 20 feet. They mention this story to James Scartacinni, 15, and his grandfather visit the site the next day and find the circles, which they estimate must have been subjected to a temperature of 2,300° F. They return to town and call the state police, who notify the military. Almost immediately, men in uniform cordon off the area, dig up the burned areas to a depth of one foot, and carry the material away. ("Hunting Old and New UFOs in New Mexico," IUR 7, no. 2 (March 1982):12)

1964, April 26 — Around 1:00 a.m. Orlando Gallegos steps outside his father's ranch at La Madera, New Mexico, to chase away some horses in the yard. He sees a peculiar structure in the Rio Vallecitos creek bed some 900 feet away. It looks like a butane tank "as long as a telephone pole" about 14 feet in diameter, metallic, and shooting blue flames out of holes in the sides. As he watches over the next minute, the flames subside. It is still there when he goes inside, where no one else believes him. It is gone the next morning, but state police (including Capt. Martin E. Vigil, David Kingsbury, and Albert Vega) investigate and find the ground still smoldering and scorched with four depressions, one of them 8 by 12 inches in size. The charred area is in the shape of two overlapping circles and about 20 feet across. Hynek is refused authorization to go visit the site. 1964, April 28 — Early evening. A round, whitish object hovers then darts away over Anthony, New Mexico. State policeman Raúl Arteche sees it moving west over the Port of Entry near El Paso, Texas. He says it looks like the object Lonnie Zamora saw. ("Other Recent Sightings," UFO Investigator 2, no. 11 (July/Aug. 1964): 7)

1964, April 28 — Early morning. Don Adams is driving in Edgewood, New Mexico, when his car stalls. He sees a glowing, greenish object 100 feet overhead and fires six rounds from a .32 pistol at it with no effect. He can hear the bullets bouncing off. It silently moves away to the north. ("Other Recent Sightings," UFO Investigator 2, no. 11 (July/Aug. 1964): 7; "Green Object at Edgewood," APRO Bulletin, September 1964, p. 3)

1964, April 30 — A B-57 pilot at Holloman AFB, Alamogordo, New Mexico, radios to the control tower that he is watching an egg-shaped, white UFO with markings that match the Socorro object. He continues to watch it as it lands at the base. Coral and Jim Lorenzen insist they heard the story from a reliable source. In addition, a ham radio operator claims to have heard the exchange between the pilot and control tower. Holloman AFB denies the incident occurred. Shortly afterward, an airman walks into a clothing store in Alamogordo and spins an incredible story of a UFO parked in a hangar under heavy guard at Holloman. A couple days later, he returns to the store and denies everything. (Coral Lorenzen, "UAO Landing at Air Force Base," APRO Bulletin, July 1964, pp. 1, 3–4; Coral Lorenzen, "UFO Lands at Air Force Base," Fate 17, no. 10 (October 1964): 45–52; Clark III 332; Clark IV 369)

1964, April 30 — 10:30 p.m. Several children living in Canyon Ferry, Montana, see a lighted, egg-shaped object the size of an automobile land about 150 feet away, then take off. The witnesses are Linda Davis, 11, and children of the Harold Rust family. It leaves four 8 x 10 inch rectangular indentations in the ground, 4–8 inches deep, about 13 feet apart, and a burned area. (Sparks, p. 298; "Kids Called Hoaxers by U.S.A.F," APRO Bulletin, July 1964, pp. 1, 5; Lorenzen, FSHoax, pp. 223–224)

1964, May — NICAP publishes its special 184-page report, The UFO Evidence, but due to a printing delay, copies are not actually available until late June. Copies are sent to the media and to every member of Congress on July 1. Edited by Richard H. Hall, it consists of a summary of hundreds of unexplained reports studied by NICAP investigators through 1963. Sightings are systematically broken down by witness category and special types of evidence. Individual chapters are devoted to sightings by military personnel, pilots and aviation experts, and scientists and engineers. Another chapter is devoted to evidence of intelligent control and another to physical evidence or interactions, such as electromagnetic effects, radar tracking, photographs, sound, physiological effects. Another section examines observed patterns, such as descriptions of shape, color, maneuvers, flight behavior, and concentrations of sightings. House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D-Mass.) requests two copies, one for his Capitol Hill office and another for his state home office. (Richard H. Hall, ed., The UFO Evidence, NICAP, 1964; Wikipedia, "National Investigations Committee on Aerial Phenomena"; Richard Hall, "NICAP and Lessons from the Past," IUR 17, no. 3 (May/June 1992): 17, 24; Powell, Keyhoe, 324–326; Clark IV 998)

1964, May 5 — 8:30 a.m. Alfred Ernst, a farmer near Comstock, Minnesota, sees a luminous UFO like a child's top from about 1,500 feet away. It rises straight up and disappears into the overcast sky after a few seconds. Ernst and his brother find a crater-like depression, about 3 feet in diameter and 6 inches deep at the center, at the spot where the object was sitting. A series of smaller holes form an X around the larger depression. The earth seems burned on the perimeter of the hole and a whitish substance is found. ("Mystery 'Ship' Lands," *Barnesville (Minn.) 1964, May 13 — 10:15 p.m. Mrs. M. Walter McKarley and her children see a large round object that appears in their headlights after they pull into a driveway at Rio Vista, California. It seems to be resting on the ground about a quarter of a mile away. Higher in the sky is a small star-like object (probably Venus). As they drive away, the large object seems to pace their car for a short time. It then moves swiftly to the left and disappears behind a water tank. 1964, May 15 — Between 11:30 a.m. and 12:15 p.m. Two targets are simultaneously tracked on surveillance and FPS-16 radars at Stallion Site, the most northerly range of the Army-controlled Holloman–White Sands complex a few miles east of San Antonio, New Mexico. The targets are north of the radar site, performing "perfect, precise flight maneuvers" in tandem, involving separations and rejoins and "up-and-down 'pogo' maneuvers." One radar operator obtains a visual sighting of two brown-colored, football-shaped objects that are flying at very low altitude and are lost from view behind buildings at the site. The two targets are displayed as skin paints. However, IFF transponder codes are also received on two different frequencies alternately. (NICAP, "UFO Auto-Tracked, Sends Phony IFF"; Coral Lorenzen, "UFO Lands at Air Force Base," Fate 17, no. 10 (October 1964): 45, 48; Lorenzen, FSHoax, pp. 225–226)

1964, May 19 — 7:00 a.m. Mike Bizon, 10, sees a square or spindle-shaped, bright-silver UFO on the ground in Hubbard, Oregon, while he is leading a cow out to pasture. The cow, normally eager to be let out, acts very reluctant and nervous. The object is resting on four legs in an adjacent wheat field. It rises slowly off the ground to the height of a telephone pole, then zooms straight up emitting a soft beeping sound. Bizon smells an odor like gas fumes. Three imprints in the shape of an equilateral triangle are found in an area of flattened wheat about 4 feet wide. (Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, pp. 53–54)

1964, May 20–23 — The First All-Union Conference on Extraterrestrial Civilizations is held at the Byurakan Astrophysical Observatory on Mount Aragats in Armenia on the initiative of astrophysicist Nikolai Kardashev. It brings together many Soviet astronomers to assess the likelihood of communicating with intelligent life in outer space. Kardashev believes that Project Ozma in the US is incapable of detecting intelligent signals on the hydrogen line and that Russian efforts should focus on infrared and millimeter-wave ranges of the spectrum. He also proposes a three-tiered hypothetical method, the Kardashev scale, to measure the evolution of extraterrestrial civilizations based on the amount of energy consume and manipulate. Type I (planetary civilization) with "technological level close to the level presently attained on earth"; Type II (stellar civilization), "a civilization capable of harnessing the energy radiated by its own star"; and Type III (galactic civilization), "a civilization in possession of energy on the scale of its own galaxy." Various extensions of the Kardashev scale have since been proposed, including the use of metrics rather than pure power. (Wikipedia, "Byurakan Conference"; Wikipedia, "Kardashev scale"; Byurakan Astrophysical Observatory, "Extraterrestrial Civilizations"; Nikolai S. Kardashev, "Transmission of Information by Extraterrestrial Civilizations," Soviet Astronomy 8, no. 2 (Sept./Oct. 1964): 217–221; Frank Edwards, FS Serious Business, Bantam ed., 1966, pp. 84–85; Graff 179–181)

1964, May 21 — 4:30 a.m. At Altus AFB, Oklahoma, Missile Site 7, southeast of Ranchland, Texas, a large bright light is seen directly over the facility below 10,000 feet. The light is bright enough to light up the silo cap. Its apparent size is as large as a basketball held at arm's length. The object is first noticed hovering over the south fence of Site 7 for 8–10 minutes. (NICAP, "Light Hovers over Missile Silo"; Nukes 159–160)

1964, May 24 — James P. Templeton, using a Pentacon camera with Kodacolor X stock, takes a photo of his 5-year-old daughter Elizabeth when his family is picnicking on the marshes at Burgh by Sands, Cumbria, England. When the film is developed, a man, encased in a white spacesuit and helmet, is clearly visible behind Elizabeth's head. Templeton and his family claim they had seen no one when the photo was taken. He tells the Carlisle police, who are puzzled. Kodak is intrigued enough to conduct an inquiry. They rule out a double exposure. However, one possibility is that the image is an overexposed view of the back of Templeton's wife. After the photo receives some local publicity, Templeton gets a call from someone describing himself as an investigator. Templeton agrees to meet with him and an associate and visit the marsh. Two men dressed in dark business suits show up and drive him to the site. They refuse to give Templeton their names, referring to themselves only as "9" and "11." They are mostly interested in finding out if any nearby animals had been agitated. Then they insist that the figure was just a passerby, get angry, and drive away, leaving Templeton stranded and having to walk home 5 miles away. (Gordon W. Creighton, "The Mysterious Templeton Photograph," Flying Saucer Review 10, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1964): 11–12; Jenny Randles, "The Riddle of the Templeton Photograph," IUR 20, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1995): 12–15; "The Templeton photograph" [in color], Flying Saucer Review 46, no. 2 (Summer 2001): inside cover; Jenny Randles, "Casebook: The Solway Spaceman," Fortean Times 196 (May 2005): 29; Andy Roberts and David Clarke, "Farewell to the Solway Spaceman?" Fortean Times 286 (April 2012): 28–29; Jenny Randles, "Moderations, Part One: Lost and Found Files," Fortean Times 292 (September 2012): 29; Clark III 1126–1127; Patrick Gross, "The Solway Firth Photograph, 1964"; "The Solway Firth Spaceman Mystery," Very Nearly Interesting YouTube channel, June 2023; Clark IV 1256–1258)

1964, May 26 — 7:43 p.m. Paul Wańkowicz, RAF pilot and ex-Smithsonian satellite tracker, sees a thin, white ellipsoid, estimated at 15–20 feet in length at 1,000 feet altitude, at Cambridge, Massachusetts. It flies straight and level from nearly overhead to the east-northeast, where it disappears behind the roof of a Sears Roebuck store as viewed from his car in the parking lot to the south. He briefly loses sight of it as it passes behind cumulus cloud cover. No noise or trail. The tops of cumulus clouds are at least 3,500 feet altitude, thus the UFO's speed is at least 700 mph and length 50–70 feet. (Sparks, p. 299; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 96–98; NICAP, [Blue Book documents])

1964, May 26 — 10:00 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. Terry Balliet, their family, and two neighbors see two UFOs in the northwest sky near Palmerton, Pennsylvania. One is a large, stationary, dome-like object emitting hazy whitish light from the underside. A smaller disc-like object is intermittently visible maneuvering around the larger one. It finally merges with the large object, which moves away to the east. The large object is seen twice more in the evening, moving back and forth from east to west. ("Other Recent Sightings," UFO Investigator 2, no. 11 (July/Aug. 1964): 7)

1964, May 26 — 11:00 p.m. Rev. H. C. Shaw sees a yellow-orange light shaped like the bottom of a ball in a field at Pleasant View, Pennsylvania, and chases it down the road for two miles. (Sparks, p. 299)

1964, Summer — 10:00 p.m. A meteorologist at Westford, Massachusetts, sees a bright lightning flash 5 miles to the south. At the same time, his car headlights and the headlights of an approaching car go out, as well as his radio. No thunderclap is heard. He notes that the sky is clear and there are no thunderstorms in the entire Boston area. ("Astronomers and UFO's: A Survey, Part 2, Sightings," IUR 2, no. 4 (April 1977): 4)

1964, June — 2:00 a.m. A young couple is driving home from a dance at a small place north of Santa Barbara, California, when a circular, glowing object silently appears above their car. They stop to watch. It is about 100 feet high and 40 feet in diameter and seemingly emits some heat. It hovers for 2 minutes then speeds off ahead of them, lighting up the valley as it goes and apparently traveling about 1,800–2,400 mph. ("Correspondence," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 3, no. 4 (Aug./Sept. 1982): 3)

1964, June — 6:30 p.m. Bert Gammie, his mother, and his daughter Lynn are driving along the northern shore of Green Lake, British Columbia, when they see a light above a mountain across the lake to the south. Soon they notice it is moving and is now almost directly overhead. He stops the car and gets out for a closer look. The object is circular, dull metallic, and has a series of vents in the tail trailing white, blue, red, and orange exhaust. They watch it for 3 minutes moving slowly to the north at about 50 mph and making a whistling noise. It makes a sharp right-angle turn, proceeds west, and disappears from sight. Gammie reports the sighting to the RCAF in Vancouver, and a senior air force officer visits him later and shows him a bulky portfolio of glossy UFO photos, many of them showing detailed features. Gammie tells him that the UFO he had seen did not exactly resemble any of the photos, and the officer tells him that the RCAF would not admit to interviewing him if the case receives any publicity. ("'That Awful Looking Shooting Star,'" Canadian UFO Report 3, no. 5 (1975): 14)

1964, June — BUFOI magazine (Belgian UFO Information) is launched by a George Adamski group in Anvers, Belgium, and edited by May and Patrick Morlet. It runs until 1979. (BUFOI Magazine, no. 1 (June 1964))

1964, June 2 — 4:00 p.m. Charles Keith Davis, 8, is outside his grandmother's home in Hobbs, New Mexico, when a small, tan, top-shaped object with a soot-like trail appears and hovers above the boy's head, enveloping him in a cloud. He starts crying and screaming, and the object shoots straight up and disappears. His hair is singed and his face and ears are swollen and burned, although he does not feel any pain. They take him to the hospital, where doctors notice the soot embedded in his flesh. The burns respond well to treatment and he stays 5 nights in the hospital. 1964, June 2 — 10:30 p.m. Mrs. Bruce A. Holmes is driving about a half block from her home at 1105 McKinley Avenue in Sunnyvale, California, when she sees a blimp-shaped object hovering 150 feet in the air about one block away from her. The object has a square box area underneath it with light shining downward. She runs into her house to get her husband and they both watch the object, which is moving slowly to the east at a 40° angle. Suddenly it zips to the left behind a tree at high speed, then back across the same path and to the right, behind another tree. When it moves back to the center, another object has joined it. They continue toward the east and disappear. (Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 98–99)

1964, June 8 — 9:30 p.m. Helen Reed is in her back yard about 2.5 miles west of Lawrenceville, Illinois, when she looks up and sees a strange object near the shed behind her barn about 10–15 feet above the ground. It has a number of circular lights around its perimeter and a blue light on top, and it seems to be 12–15 feet in diameter. She watches it move slowly east several hundred feet, make a sharp left turn, move a few hundred feet north, make a sharper turn, and return to about 50 feet away, where it hovers silently a few seconds. She notices that its yellow lights are quickly rotating counterclockwise. The object finally disappears to the north after 10 minutes. (Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 98–99)

1964, June 14 — 8:35 p.m. Charles Englebrecht, 18, is watching TV at home in Dale, Indiana, when the house lights and TV suddenly go out. He notices that a small, bright orange-colored, basketball-sized object has landed in his back yard. As he goes out the side door and tries to approach it, he feels a tingling sensation and has difficulty moving. After a few seconds the sphere takes off and goes over the nearby barn. Several items in the backyard have been moved (lawn mower, chicken feeder). He smells sulfur or burning rubber and find three imprints in a triangle with the dimensions of 2 feet by 4.5 feet by 4.5 feet. 1964, June 27 — Teenage UFO buffs Allen H. Greenfield, Rick Hilberg, and Dale Rettig hold the first Congress of Scientific Ufologists in Cleveland, Ohio. It becomes an annual meeting and changes its name to the National UFO Conference, which runs until 2005. (Wikipedia, "National UFO Conference"; "Ufologists to Meet," Lexington (Ky.) Herald, June 22, 1964, p. 20; National UFO Conference, "Congress of Scientific UFOlogists"; Story, p. 91; David Halperin, "Cleveland 2015: 'Congress of Scientific Ufologists' 50th Reunion," davidhalperin.net, June 25, 2015)

1964, June 30 — 1:00 a.m. Beauford E. Parham is driving near Lavonia, Georgia, on his way back from a business trip when he notices a brilliant light in the sky. It is moving towards his car at a 45° angle. In an instant it appears right in front of his headlights, no more than 5 feet away and a foot above the ground. Shaped like a giant top, it emits a "hissing sound like a million snakes." The amber-colored UFO has a sharp, steeple-like cone rising from its top midsection. It moves above his car leaving a strong odor of embalming fluid and a gaseous vapor that leaves an oily substance over his car, even after repeated washings. After several passes over his car, it starts spinning and takes off vertically. Parham now notices his arms are beginning to burn. He immediately reports his sighting to the mayor of Lavonia, then personnel at the Anderson Regional Airport in South Carolina, where he meets local FAA officials who check his car for radiation. They get readings from the oily stains, as well as both his arms from the shoulder down. (NICAP, "Lavonia / Tallulah Case (Radiation)"; "Man Claims Car Buzzed by an Unknown Object," Greenwood (S.C.) Index-Journal, July 3, 1964, p. 5; "'Flying Object' Blisters Car, Burns Arm, Man Says," *Atlanta (Ga.) 1964, July 7 — Around 9:00 p.m. Three members of the Henry Ivester family in Turnerville, Georgia, are watching TV when sudden interference prevents them from further viewing. They go out on the front porch and see an object moving silently above the trees 300 feet away. It stops to hover a few feet above a neighbor's garden across the highway. Its bottom side is fully visible; on the dark upper side are three lights: red, clear, red. The red lights are blinking. As the object ascends, the lights go out. A brilliant green light then shines from the bottom, illuminating the trees. A foul odor "like embalming fluid or brake fluid" hangs in the air after the object leaves. ("Unearthly Objects Hovering in Sky?" Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, July 17, 1964, p. 23; Schopick, pp. 72–73; "An Interesting UFO Story from Georgia," The Paranormal Effect, October 3, 2010; Clark III 679)

1964, July 12 — Assistant Professor Vyacheslav Zaitsev is aboard a Tupolev Tu-104 airliner above Bologoye, Tver Oblast, Russia, when he sees a huge disc with a domed cabin suddenly appear below the aircraft, fly a parallel course for a while, then swerve abruptly and speed away. (Felix Ziegel, "Unidentified Flying Objects," Soviet Life, no. 137 (February 1968): 28; "Russian Scientist Confirms Important Cases," UFO Investigator 4, no. 5 (March 1968): 6; Good Above, p. 220)

1964, July 14 — After 11:00 p.m. Atlanta Constitution reporter Tom Winfield sees a top-shaped, misty-orange object circling above the southeast section of Gainesville, Georgia, at about 500 feet. It stops and hovers a few moments then shoots up out of sight. He takes a photo, but nothing registers on the film. ("Unearthly Objects Hovering in Sky?" Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, July 17, 1964, p. 23)

1964, July 15 — MP Arthur Henderson in the UK House of Commons asks the former Secretary of State for Air Hugh Fraser about cooperation between the RAF and USAF in UFO investigations. Fraser says he is aware of the US Project Blue Book, and that 10% of the cases are insufficient evidence. (Good Above, p. 60; Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1964, July 16 — Shortly after noon. Five boys (Edmund Travis, Randy Travis, Floyd Moore, Billy Dunlap, and Gary Dunlap) are playing around an apple tree at Conklin, New York, when they notice a shiny, dome-shaped object in a field along the roadside. Looking for the source of a whistling sound, the boys spot a 3-foot-tall humanoid figure crouching in a tree about 150 feet away. It is dressed in a shiny black uniform, short-sleeved shirt, and black helmet. The whistling appears to emanate from his stomach. The boys throw stones and apples at it, but the figure is too far away. After about 15 minutes, the figure, moving stiffly, falls backwards out of the tree and floats slowly into the bushes. They can see it crawling through the weeds back to the UFO. A round, flattened area is found in the field where the grass is crushed and bushes are broken. In the middle is dried, yellow moss that apparently has been subjected to great heat. Three depressions are where the UFO legs apparently were. ("Water Boys for 'Spaceman,'" Binghamton (N.Y.) Evening Press, July 17, 1964, p. 3; Story, pp. 86–87; Patrick Gross, URECAT, July 10, 2007; Clark III 296–297; Clark IV 336–337)

1964, July 16 — 11:15 p.m. Northern Air Service pilot Kenneth Jannereth is flying at 4,500 feet 15 miles south of Houghton Lake, Michigan. He sees four lights coming up behind him to his left, speed up, and begin to overtake him. Two more lights join the others and stay on his wing about 200–300 feet away, following him for 5 minutes. They are flying in an echelon formation, stepping up to the rear. Suddenly they begin to dim and drift away. (NICAP, "Maneuvering Echelon Formation Closes on Airplane"; Sparks, p. 299)

1964, July 20 — 4:45 a.m. Joseph J. Winkel is driving east through a wooded area on State Highway 101 about 2 miles west of Littleton, Illinois. He notices a shadowy, cone-shaped object about 60 feet in diameter with reddish-purple flames coming from its end. It climbs to about 1,500 feet and levels off, coming directly toward him, then makes a sharp turn upward and nearly levels out again at 3,500 feet. The sparks turn bluish-yellow, making a ball of fire, and a few seconds later it shoots out of sight. Around the same time, a USAF Airman 1st Class sees a similar cone of light as he is driving east on US Highway 30 about 7.5 miles west of Clinton, Iowa. (Sparks, p. 299; "UFO Sighting Wave Persists," UFO Investigator 2, no. 12 (Sept./Oct. 1964): 5; Jacques Vallée and Janine Vallée, Challenge to Science: The UFO Enigma, Henry Regnery, 1966, pp. 40–41; Olsen, sec. 3, pp. 100–101, 103)

1964, July 20–21 — Evening. Many witnesses, including four police officers, in Madras, Oregon, see umbrella-shaped UFOs for more than 7 hours. The objects alternately hover and move at high speed, usually glowing red while stationary and changing color while accelerating. A daylight witness sees four clam-shaped objects moving silently in formation. ("UFO Sighting Wave Persists," UFO Investigator 2, no. 12 (Sept./Oct. 1964): 5)

1964, Late July — 4:30 p.m. Richard H. VanPelt and his teenage son are driving on Beeler Road south of Shawnee High School in Lima, Ohio, when they see a Saturn-shaped metallic object hovering above Breese Road 600 feet away. It is about 1,200–1,500 feet in the air and has a revolving ring around its center. It suddenly starts to move to the southwest, then tips on end and with tremendous speed goes straight up and out of sight. (Richard H. VanPelt, "Letter," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 5, no. 3 (June/July 1984): 2)

1964, July 27 — 8:50 p.m. Engineer Louis Daubert sees an unusual metallic object as he is driving on a rural road 17 miles northwest of Norwich, New York. It is spherical with a diameter of 25–30 feet and has a luminous ring surrounding it. It remains motionless for 4–5 minutes, then emits three blinding flashes of light and disappears. (Sparks, p. 299; "New York and Montana Flurries," UFO Investigator 2, no. 12 (Sept./Oct. 1964): 6; Olsen, sec. 3, p. 101)

1964, July 28 — 9:10 p.m. The crew of the Argentine tanker ship Cazador sees a "signal flare light" and hears voices as if from a ship in distress in the South Atlantic Ocean outside the Golfo San Jorge, Argentina. The Norwegian ship Sumber observes a very bright object traveling horizontally in the same area. (Joseph M. Brill, "Are UFOs Operating from Underwater Bases off the Coast of Argentina?" MUFON UFO Journal, no. 130 (September 1979): 3, 4; Dolan, USO1, 259)

1964, August — 7:00 p.m. Raimo Blomqvist is visiting with his parents at their summer cottage at Kallavesi lake, Finland, when he suddenly notices a strange, colorful ball of light coming from the sky. The light approaches and turns out to be an oval glowing object. While it is hovering above the shallow water of an island he sees something fall from the object and hears a sound resembling hot metal touching cold water. The object shoots straight upward. Blomqvist recovers a 2–2.5-inch piece of stone. In 1975, Blomqvist contacts UFO investigators and gives them the stone. The fragment is x-ray analyzed at Åbo Akademi University in Turku, which states that it appears to be volcanic. Analysts at the University of Turku look at it with a mass spectrometer and conclude it is mostly iron, not a piece of ore, not volcanic, not a meteorite, and not machined, although it has been subjected to a temperature of around 650° C. ("Fragment Fell from UFO," APRO Bulletin 26, no. 6 (December 1977): 1, 3; "Foreign Forum," IUR 3, no. 3 (Mar. 1978): 2)

1964, August — Midnight. Air Policeman Arthur McEnaney and other guards see a round UFO hovering above a four-silo Atlas complex near Francis E. Warren AFB, Cheyenne, Wyoming. (Nukes 159)

1964, August 9 — 9:00 p.m. Baltazar Flores, Franciso Perez, Ruben Lozaya, and Elpidio Salas are camping near the Cerro Viejo, Sonora, Mexico, where they plan to explore for minerals. Suddenly a "dark, cloud-like object" approaches at high speed. As it passes by, the trees shake and they hear an explosion. They return the next day and less than 2 miles from their campsite they find a compact, gelatinous mass of green-turquoise color about 8 inches long. When they poke it with a stick, the stick becomes covered with a sticky substance like chewing gun. They report the incident to the authorities, but no one is interested. One of the witnesses returns 3 days later and finds most of the mass gone, with some residue on the rocks and grass. ("Strange Gelatinous Fall in Mexico," APRO Bulletin, November 1964, p. 1; Clark III 1102; Clark IV 1228)

1964, August 10 — 5:16 a.m. Aircraft Commander Capt. B. C. Jones and Navigator 1/Lt. H. J. Cavendar are in a parked USAF C-124 transport plane on Wake Island in the Pacific Ocean. They see a reddish, blinking light approach the runway, stop, and reverse direction several times over a period of 2 minutes. (UFOEv II 53)

1964, August 11 — 5:30 p.m. John Dodson, 15, and Frankie Jimenez, 14, are walking near the railroad tracks south of State Highway 281 east of Defiance, Ohio, not too far from the General Motors foundry. They see a slowly rotating whitish disc apparently hovering above a GM water tank. The object has a lighted flange-like base, a dome on top, and is making a whirring or hissing noise. It begins to move horizontally at a moderate speed, then shoots up vertically and disappears. ("Maney Reports Boys' Sighting," APRO Bulletin, November 1964, p. 5)

1964, August 15? — 2:44 a.m. Two brothers are headed to a fishing location on Upper Nemahbin Lake near Delafield, Wisconsin. Both see a "shooting star" that enters the water at a 75° angle about 3,000 feet away from their boat. It appears to be 200 feet in diameter. After being submerged for 10 seconds, it emerges from the water, accelerates, and disappears upward in 5–7 seconds. (Carl Feindt, "Report #1003," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 260–261)

1964, August 15 — 8:15 a.m. Edward J. Haug and C. R. Bubb are camping on the southeast side of Benson Lake in Yosemite National Park in California when they hear a sound of rushing air. They look up and see three silver spheres moving in a parallel course from east to west at a fantastic speed, disappearing in 3–4 seconds. (Sparks, p. 300; Olsen, sec. 3, p. 102–103)

1964, August 18 — 12:35 a.m. USAF Major D. W. Thompson and First Pilot 1st Lt. J. F. Jonke are flying a C-124 transport with the 31st Air Transport Squadron, 1607th Air Transport Wing, 200 miles east of Dover AFB in Delaware at 9,000 feet over the North Atlantic. A blurred reddish-white glare appears ahead and 500 feet below them on a collision course. Thompson takes evasive action, and the light makes a right turn and disappears. Air traffic control shows nothing on their radar in that location. (NICAP, "Object on Collision Course with C-124"; Sparks, p. 300; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 50–51; Tim Printy, "The 701 Club: Case #9053," SUNlite 5, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 2013): 33–34)

1964, August 22 — 9:35 p.m. Robert D. Briele, an engineer for WFBR-AM radio, and a friend watch a lighted triangular object pass directly overhead in Baltimore, Maryland. Through binoculars he can see a steady white light at each corner. A small green light is also on one corner and a red light in the center. The object moves slowly and silently from northeast to southwest, disappearing in 10 minutes. ("UFO Sighting Wave Persists," UFO Investigator 2, no. 12 (Sept./Oct. 1964): 5)

1964, August 30 — Night. Clifford Runyon and Connie Thies are driving from Tipton to Bennett, Iowa, when they see a cigar-shaped object with two bright lights hovering 500 feet up in the eastern sky. The UFO climbs as they drive toward it, and their radio goes out and the car engine sputters. ("UFO Sighting Wave Persists," UFO Investigator 2, no. 12 (Sept./Oct. 1964): 5)

1964, September 4 — Declassified documents show that from 1962 through 1964, the CIA has spent a total of $2.6 million to finance the campaign of Eduardo Frei Montalva for the presidency of Chile and spent $3 million in anti–Salvador Allende propaganda "to scare voters away from Allende's FRAP coalition." Richard Helms coordinates the action. The CIA considers its role in the victory of Frei a great success. They argue that "the financial and organizational assistance given to Frei, the effort to keep [Julio] Durán in the race, the propaganda campaign to denigrate Allende—were 'indispensable ingredients of Frei's success,'" and they think that his chances of winning and the good progress of his campaign would have been doubtful without the covert support of the US. Thus, in 1964 Allende loses once more as the FRAP candidate for president. (Wikipedia, "Salvador Allende")

1964, September 4 — 7:30 p.m. Two unidentified witnesses see a red glowing object in an oak forest near Glassboro, New Jersey, according to two boys who encounter the men the next day. The men show the boys some odd markings like a landing on the ground. Their father, NICAP member Ward Campbell, goes to the scene, takes measurements of a hole (30 inches across and just over 19 inches deep) surrounded by scorched earth, and finds broken branches of a sassafras tree and small metal fragments. Soon the Glassboro police visit the site, followed by curiosity seekers, Air Force personnel from McGuire AFB [now Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst], various ufologists, and a group of high school kids who examine the site as a science project. The Air Force rather summarily declares a hoax, but by then the marks have been irretrievably altered by visitors. ("Air Force to Probe Glassboro 'Mystery,'" *Camden (N.J.) 1964, September 5 — Early morning. Donald Schrum and his friends are bow-and-arrow hunting in an isolated area of Placer County, California, near the Loch Leven Lakes in the vicinity of Cisco Grove. Schrum becomes separated from his companions. At sunset on September 4 he decides to sleep in a tree for the night. Later he sees a white light zigzagging at low altitude and, thinking it is a helicopter, jumps out of the tree and lights fires to attract its attention. The light turns toward him and stops about 50–60 yards away. The object's strange appearance frightens Schrum, so he climbs back up in the tree. After a while two humanoid beings and a robot-like creature approach the tree. From then on, Schrum is in a state of siege as the beings try to dislodge him from the tree. At one point a white vapor emanates from the robot's mouth and Schrum blacks out, but wakes up again, nauseous, and begins lighting matches and throwing them down to frighten the beings away; they back away. Finally, he shoots an arrow at the robot; when it hits, there is an arc flash and the robot is knocked backwards. This is repeated two more times, and the humanoids scatter each time. A second robot appears and a vapor renders Schrum unconscious. When he awakes, he discovers that the two humanoids are climbing up the tree toward him, so he shakes the tree and throws things down at them to ward them off. The same actions are repeated all night. Near dawn, more beings approach and "large volumes of smoke" drift up and he blacks out. He awakes hanging from his belt, and the creatures are gone. Later, when reunited with his companions, Schrum finds that one of the other hunters, who also have gotten lost and separated from their camp, saw the UFO. (NICAP, "Cisco Grove /

1964, September 14 — 10:55 p.m. Astronomers Luis Ferro and Renato Matteassi at the San Miguel Observatory, Buenos Aires, Argentina, watch an object with the apparent size twice that of the Moon passing across the constellation Lyra. The central portion is white and green, while the rear looks like half-rings of blue. Its speed is estimated as three times the speed of sound. They watch it for 3 minutes moving toward Jupiter. (Gordon Creighton, "Argentina 1963/1964: Part IV," Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 3 (May/June 1966): 28)

1964, September 15 — 8:27 a.m. USAF Lt. Robert Jacobs is officer-in-charge of photo-optical instrumentation for the 1369th Photographic Squadron at Vandenberg AFB [now Vandenberg Space Force Base] near Lompoc, California. His crew films an SM-65F Atlas missile launch where a UFO allegedly causes the ICBM's warhead to malfunction over Big Sur, California. At the time of the filming, apparently no one knows anything about a UFO sighting. But the next morning, Jacobs is ordered to report to the office of Maj. Florenz J. Mansmann, First Strategic Aerospace Division, his commanding officer, where he is shown the film, which shows a UFO chasing the warhead as it travels downrange. It circles the warhead and shoots a beam of light at it at four different points. The warhead then tumbles away. Jacobs is told to forget it ever happened and the film is confiscated. Kingston George, the project engineer for the experiments and who probably never saw the film, "identified" the object as "nothing to do with UFOs" in an article in the Skeptical Enquirer. Before Mansmann's death, and 40 years after the actual event, the major confirms the UFO incident in writing. The controversy centers on the opinions of some researchers who suggest that the telescope imaging system is not adequate enough to produce the results described by Jacobs and Mansmann. However, several other researchers have shown that, with the viewing conditions at the height of the equipment used, and the imaging systems operating at that shoot, the incident could have occurred as described. 1964, September 16 — 6:55 p.m. Several teenagers at Little Hulton, Greater Manchester, England, watch a noiseless, pearly white triangular object traveling with its base forward toward the north. ("Manchester Disbeliever's Testimony," Flying Saucer Review 10, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1964): 25)

1964, September 18–24 — Numerous high-speed UFOs are reported and tracked on radar in an area between Surabaya, Malang, and Bangkalan, Java, Indonesia. Antiaircraft batteries and Air Force pilots reportedly open fire on them, even though officials suspect they could be British aircraft from the HMS Victorious protecting Malaysia. (Good Above, p. 429; Rahadian Rundjan, "Mencari UFO di Langit Indonesia," Historia, June 19, 2017)

1964, September 30 — Night. A man is driving north from Caleta Olivia, Santa Cruz, to Comodoro Rivadivia, Chubut, Argentina, when he sees three or four orange objects fall one after the other into the Golfo San Jorge. He stops his car and sees flames appear behind the objects. Driving on, he observes other luminous objects emerge from the gulf and circle rapidly before rising up into the sky. (Joseph M. Brill, "Are UFOs Operating from Underwater Bases off the Coast of Argentina?" MUFON UFO Journal, no. 130 (September 1979): 3, 4; Dolan, USO1, 259–260)

1964, Late 1964 — Deputy Missile Combat Crew Commander 1Lt. Philip E. Moore is on duty in Site 7 (east of Hagerman, New Mexico), one of the 579th Strategic Missile Squadron's underground Atlas missile launch facilities at Walker AFB [now closed] in Roswell, New Mexico. He gets a call from an adjacent missile silo around 10–15 miles away, saying that a UFO is hovering and maneuvering over their site. Maj. Dan Gilbert sends three enlisted crew members—T/Sgt. Jack Nevins, Airman1C Bob Garner, and Airman 1C Mike Rundag—above ground to see what is going on. They see a silent light that moves very quickly (instant stop and instant go) back and forth between Site 6 and Site 8. Gilbert goes up and sees the same activity. (Robert Hastings, "Three Former U.S. Air Force ICBM Launch Officers Speak Out about UFOs," UFOs and Nukes blog, October 6, 2013; Nukes 152–157)

1964, October — An engineer and three technicians at the Wallops Flight Facility on Wallops Island, Virginia, see a triangular-shaped object speed in from the north, make a 90° turn, and disappear in under a minute. They all agree that it moved faster than a jet. (Harold H. Deneault Jr., "UFOs Return to Washington," Fate 18, no. 7 (July 1965): 48–49)

1964, October 7 — 11:10 p.m. R. Shannon and his wife see a blood-red triangle in the sky above Dulwich, London, England. They watch it for 10 minutes before it begins revolving swiftly, almost to a blur, then explodes silently and disappears. (R. Shannon, "Dulwich De-Materialisation?" Flying Saucer Review 11, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1965): 28)

1964, October 11 — 4:00 p.m. Engineer David Hanson, accountant Vincent Flaherty, and a third friend are in Brockton, Massachusetts, when they hear two sonic booms and see two jet fighters leaving contrails. Behind them is a whitish, dome-shaped object. When it catches up with the jets, the object descends slowly and levels off onto a horizontal path. Finally it accelerates up and out of sight in seconds. ("Disc Chases Jets," UFO Investigator, May/June 1966, p. 4; Raymond E. Fowler, Casebook of a UFO Investigator, 1981, p. 31; UFOEv II 155; Powell, Scientist, 66)

1964, October 22 — Flying Saucer Review editor Waveney Girvan dies, and Charles Bowen takes control and oversees the magazine until 1982, its most influential period. (Charles Bowen, "Our Friend Waveney Girvan," Flying Saucer Review 10, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1964): 5; Clark III 498; Clark IV 547)

1964, October 29 — 12:00 midnight–3:00 a.m. Irene Page watches a sparkling ball of light that maneuvers around her yard, illuminating her property in Brimfield, Massachusetts. When she first sees it, the TV set fades, and lights in the room blink on and off several times. ("Flashing UFO Seen Three Hours," APRO Bulletin, July/Aug. 1965, p. 7)

1964, November — 2:00 a.m. An informant (later identified as Aaron David Kaback) of Leonard H. Stringfield, a PFC at Fort Riley, Kansas, is on guard duty at the motor pool with three other soldiers of the 1st Army Division when they are summoned by the officer of the day to join him by a vehicle in a remote area on the base described as a training area in Camp Forsyth. After parking the vehicle by the side of the road, they hike about a half mile across an open field. Ahead, the searchlight beam from a Huey helicopter plays down on the field and is focused on a large, round object resting on the ground. About 10 other Army personnel are already on site, including a major general. The PFC is ordered to patrol the grounded craft by circling around it and to "shoot anyone if they tried to force their way to the craft." He is sharply told to keep this incident secret. The helicopter circles overhead while personnel check the craft with instruments. On several occasions during his 2.5 hours of guard duty, the PFC gets close to the metallic craft and it seems warm. The craft is stuck in the soil at a tilt, is about 35–48 feet in diameter and 12–18 feet high. In the middle of its smooth, aluminum-like surface is a black band made up of squares, each jutting out about 10 inches. A fin-like device protrudes from the rear and beneath it is an aperture that may be an exhaust valve. The next day, he hears that UFOs had been seen in the area prior to the landing. Kendrick contacts Leonard Stringfield about his story. A subsequent investigation by Citizens Against UFO Secrecy finds many discrepancies in Kaback's account and very little credibility. ("Ft. Riley Landing: Hoax or Delusion?" Just Cause 1, no. 6 (September 1978): 11–14; Leonard H. 1964, November 3 — 8:15 p.m. A barking dog alerts the caretaker of the Butano Creek Girl Scout Camp near Pescadero, California. He goes outside and sees a bright light maneuvering erratically in the northeast. He flashes an SOS signal at it with a flashlight, and the light silently moves toward him. He flashes more SOS signals and it moves even closer, hovering above some trees a half mile away and moving back and forth. It lights up the sky like a full moon. The caretaker and another employee run into a cabin to get their wives. The four watch for a while longer, then flash another SOS. The light approaches again, then retreats, dims, and takes off. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 242)

1964, November 5 — J. Allen Hynek writes to a citizen interested in the Socorro, New Mexico, case and affirms his opinion that Lonnie Zamora's story was "told by a man who obviously was frightened badly by what he did see." He says he cannot dismiss it as a hoax or hallucination. (Bill Murphy, "The Swamp Gas Aftermath: Some Notes from the Gerald Ford Files," IUR 33, no. 2 (July 2010): 12–13)

1964, November 9 — 8:00 p.m. Trevor Foss responds to his son's call to watch a light in the northern sky over Kailoa Station, Gisborne, New Zealand. Through night binoculars he sees a ball of light traveling south toward him. It takes 5 minutes to reach the southern horizon and has rotating light beams that project downward and to the rear, as well as 6 jet-like blue flames. ("Farmer Observes Sphere," APRO Bulletin, January 1965, p. 8)

1964, November 14 — Midnight. Astronomers at the San Miguel Observatory, Buenos Aires, Argentina, see an elongated, flat, reddish-orange object crossing the sky from east to west and then back again at a speed 4.5 times that of a satellite. ("Mystery Object over Argentina," APRO Bulletin, January 1965, p. 2; Gordon Creighton, "Argentina 1963/1964: Part IV," Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 3 (May/June 1966): 28)

1964, November 19 — 9:00 p.m. The USS Gyatt destroyer is stationed in the Atlantic Ocean about 220 miles northwest of Puerto Rico for training exercises when its radar detects a target approaching the island from the northeast. Anomalous targets that respond to an IFF code have been detected on radar on November 16–18, although no other aircraft are in the training area. The ship relays a message to Roosevelt Roads Naval Station [now José Aponte de la Torre Airport] in Ceiba, Puerto Rico, which then contacts Lt. Cmdr. K. H. Woodsbury, pilot of an F-8C aircraft of Utility Squadron Eight that is already flying in the neighborhood at an altitude of 30,000 feet. The aircraft reports a stranger closing in very fast. The pilot describes the object as delta-shaped and about the size of a fighter. Its color is black or gray and it has no contrail or lights except for a light source emitting from the tail during periods of acceleration. The pilot pursues the object but cannot intercept. The target accelerates out of sight in a wide starboard turn climbing through 50,000 feet at about an 18°–20° angle in excess of Mach 1. The commanding officer of the squadron, T. D. Fosdick, summarizes: "There is no reasonable explanation for this target. Its speed, acceleration, ceiling and ability to decelerate exceed any aircraft I have ever seen or heard of." During the encounter the SPS-49 radar is jammed for a short period of time. A final radar encounter takes place in the Caribbean on November 24. (NICAP, "U.S.S. Gyatt Tackles Bogey"; Sparks, p. 302; Antonio F. Rullán, "Blue Book UFO Reports at Sea by Ships: Analysis of the Blue Book Ship Database," December 10, 2002, pp. 43–44; Powell, Scientist, 93)

1964, November 21 — The FBI sends Martin Luther King Jr. a "suicide package" note that contains audio recordings of his sexual indiscretions and a letter telling him, "There is only one way out for you." The FBI's COINTELPRO program is also targeting Malcolm X. (Wikipedia, "COINTELPRO")

1964, November 22 — 10:45 p.m. Private pilot George Henry Lissauer is driving near Georgetown, South Carolina, when he sees two large, silvery, oval-shaped UFOs, each accompanied by 6–8 smaller objects. The formations are moving slowly at about 3,000 feet altitude. After 2–3 minutes, the smaller objects go into the larger objects and disappear. Lissauer goes directly to Myrtle AFB [now Myrtle Beach International Airport] and reports them. ("Increased Landings Hint New UFO Phase," UFO Investigator 3, no. 3 (June/July 1965): 2; Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects: A Further Look," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 3)

1964, November 25 — 12:45 a.m. A 29-year-old woman sees two lighted objects land on a hilltop near New Berlin, New York. Through binoculars she can see some 9–11 humanoid beings apparently engaged in repair work on a round object with landing struts for four hours. Some of them are holding boxes filled with unusual gadgets. The next day, she and her husband and father-in-law find two equilateral triangular imprints on the site, as well as a cable with some thin aluminum strips and insulation. Around 4:55 a.m., one UFO shoots straight up and abruptly disappears, while the other rises straight up a minute later and follows the other one. Schwarz, "New Berlin UFO Landing and Repair by Crew," Flying Saucer Review 21, no. 3–4 (November 1975): 22–28; Covert 26)

1964, November 26 — 11:00 p.m. A family of five in Adams, Wisconsin, is returning home from Thanksgiving dinner when an extremely bright light appears over their car, completely shutting off its headlights and radio. The father jumps out of the car and looks straight up into the light, shading his eyes with his hands, but he is persuaded to come back. Suddenly the light disappears and the electrical systems return. No one talks about the incident for 16 years, when the father says the light was "motionless like a floodlight of gigantic proportion." ("Recently Reported," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 2, no. 10 (October 1981): 5; "Out of the Not-Too-Distant Past," IUR/Frontiers of Science 3, no. 6 (Jan./Feb. 1982): 13–14)

1964, November 28 — The US launches Mariner 4, a probe designed to conduct closeup observations of Mars and transmit them back to Earth. It captures the first images of another planet ever returned from deep space, and its depiction of a cratered, dead world largely changes the scientific community's view of life on Mars. Initially expected to remain in space for eight months, Mariner 4's mission lasts about three years in solar orbit, terminating on December 21, 1967. (Wikipedia, "Mariner 4"; Walter Sullivan, "Mariner 4's Final Photos Depict a Moonlike Mars," New York Times, July 30, 1965, pp. 1, 9)

1964, November 30 — The Soviet Union launches the Zond 2 probe to Mars, but loses communications with it long before its flyby. (Wikipedia, "Zond 2")

1964, December — New York Times Science Editor Walter Sullivan writes the best-selling We Are Not Alone, an in-depth study of the search for life on other worlds, from the Orgueil meteorite of 1864 to Project Ozma and experiments on the building blocks of life in the primordial atmosphere. (Walter Sullivan, We Are Not Alone, McGraw-Hill, 1964; Eghigian, After, pp. 187–188)

1964, December 19 — 3:50 p.m. Naval Air Station Patuxent River in Maryland tracks two large targets on radar moving at 6,900 mph. 1964, December 21 — 4:50 p.m. Kenneth Norton Jr., 14, is looking out his bedroom window in Staunton, Virginia, when he sees a "fast-moving object without wings or tail structure." He describes it as cigar-shaped and about 125 feet in diameter, in view for 5 seconds. (Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, January 15, 1965; "'Saucer' Reports Are Flying," Staunton (Va.) Daily News Leader, January 15, 1965, p. 2; Clark III 493)

1964, December 21 — 5:00 p.m. Driving east on US Highway 250, Horace Burns is approaching Fishersville, Virginia, when an enormous cone-shaped object appears from the north and descends slowly in a gradual slant. Just before it crosses the highway 200 feet in front of him, the UFO narrowly misses power lines. It is so huge that when it passes nearly in front of him, it fills his entire windshield. The UFO comes down gently and lands in a field to Burns's right. Meanwhile, Burns's car engine has shut off. The object appears to be at least 125 feet in diameter and 80–90 feet high. After 60–90 seconds, it rises up several hundred feet, makes a sound like rushing air, and shoots off to the northeast, vanishing from sight. A high level of radioactivity is detected at the site December 30 by investigators German professor Ernest G. Gehman and engineer Harry M. Cook. They obtain a Geiger counter reading of 16–18 milliR/hr. Two Blue Book investigators—T/Sgt. David N. Moody and S/Sgt. Harold T. Jones—visit the site with Gehman on January 12 and take further readings (1.5 milliR/hr on Burns's left rear car door). They dispute Gehman's earlier results, but a possible 11x–12x drop in radiation level in 13 days possibly indicates a radionuclide with a 3–4 day half-life. 1964, December 22 — A D-21 drone (renamed from Q-12 in its transition to Project Tagboard) mounted on an M-21 begins captive flight-testing at Area 51 in Nevada. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed D-21")

1965? — A-12 pilot Ken Collins continues to test A-12s at Groom Lake, Nevada. One night (in 1964 or 1965 maybe), he is awakened by base commander Col. Hugh "Slip" Slater and asked to take an A-12 up to find a Russian reconnaissance balloon that is floating in American airspace in a westerly direction with the prevailing winds. Collins is tasked with finding the balloon visually and using radar. In the air, he realizes it is a wild goose chase because, flying at 2,200 mph, even if he sees the balloon briefly it would be behind him in a second. He identifies an object on radar 350 miles away. He circles it as closely as he can, which is a circle with a radius of 400 miles. He never makes visual contact and returns to Area 51. Jacobsen says that this Soviet violation of US airspace has "never been declassified." (Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 195–196)

1965? — Night. The crew of a surfaced Soviet nuclear submarine in the North Atlantic Ocean is on the outside deck. They see a cigar-shaped object that does not register on their radar. Suddenly it shoots out three rays of light and descends to the surface of the ocean about a half mile away and dives underwater. The sonar registers a hissing sound. (Vladimir G. Azhazha and Evgeny P. Litvinov, Подводные НЛО: Загадочные места мира [Underwater UFOs], 2015; Stonehill and Mantle, Russia's USO Secrets, Flying Disk, 2020, p. 50; Dolan, USO1, 264–265)

1965 — USAF Gen. Curtis LeMay writes in his autobiography that some UFOs are not explained very easily: "There is no question about it. These were things which we could not tie in with any natural phenomena known to our investigators." He expresses his dislike of NICAP's position that USAF is trying to muzzle the media. "There were some cases we could not explain," he writes. "Never could." (Curtis E. LeMay, Mission with LeMay, Doubleday, 1965, pp. 541–543)

1965 — The Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory's Prairie Meteorite Network, set up in 1964, is a system of 16 camera stations in the Midwestern US to monitor meteorite falls. Between 1965 and 1967 it tracks 14 cases of possible UFOs. None of these are relayed to the Colorado project. (Clark III 1053; Clark IV 1168)

1965 — Less than 20% of the public believes in UFOs, according to polls and private Air Force and NICAP estimates. This soon rises to 33% by July. (Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, p. 94)

1965 — John Harney begins publication of the Merseyside UFO Research Group Bulletin in Liverpool, England. (Merseyside UFO Research Group Bulletin, no. 2 (June 1965); Clark III 706; Clark IV 772)

1965 — Jean-Pierre D'Hondt founds Groupement Nordiste d'Études des OVNI in Lestrem, Pas-de-Calais, France. It publishes Recherches Ufologiques from 1977 to 1983. (Recherches Ufologiques, no. 1 (1977))

1965 — Jacques Bonabot, Jean-Gérard Dohmen, and Roger Lorthioir found Groupement pour l'Étude des Sciences d'Avant-Garde in Bruges, Belgium. It publishes Bulletin du GESAG. (Margaret Sachs, The UFO Encyclopedia, Putnam, 1980, p. 135)

1965 — G. J. Kok and S. Sluis found the Werkgroep Nederlands Onderzoek Bureau voor UFOs (later UFO-Workgroep Nederland) in Uithuizermeeden, Netherlands. It publishes Tijdschrift voor Ufologie. (Margaret Sachs, The UFO Encyclopedia, Putnam, 1980, p. 215)

1965 — Tomezo Hirata founds the Japan UFO Research Association in Kobe, Japan. It publishes JUFORA from 1967 to 1991.

1965 — Ross Liverton reports a ring of bare earth, 8 feet wide, in the ground on Waiheke Island, New Zealand, where a UFO is seen. It remains visible for 4 years. The site contains some unidentified whitish material that resolves into fibers during a soil immersion test. Vallée says the material is "vegetal in nature." (Ted Phillips, "Landing Report from Delphos," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 9 (February 1972): 10; Vallée, Invisible College, pp. 36–37)

1965 — Jerry Kroth, a fifth-grade teacher in an elementary school near Ann Arbor, Michigan, is handed a sheet of shape-memory material by a girl student in his class, who tells him that her father said she should show it to him. The material resembles a sheet of aluminum foil 4 feet wide and 5 feet long but is only as thick s 20-pound stationery paper (0.081 millimeters). He squeezes it and attempts to puncture and cut it but it snaps back to its original shape. (Jerry Kroth, The Roswell Foil, Genotype, 2017; "How One Man Became a Believer in UFOs," Roswell (N.Mex.) Daily Record, July 7, 2024)

1965 — A couple is driving on a country road in Buenos Aires province, Argentina, when their car engine begins to fail, so they pull over in front of a tree. They notice an object behind the tree that emits a luminous ray toward them that bends at three places, vertically and horizontally, to avoid the tree. The woman's cheek feels as if something is probing her. (Jean Bastide, La Mémoire des OVNI, Mercure de France, 1978; "Beam of Light with Three Corners," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 4, no. 6 (Dec. 1983/Jan. 1984): 4)

1965 — A short color film of a "huge, windowed, hovering craft" with three smaller objects attached to it "as a kind of tail" is taken by a converted RAAF aircraft during a photo-mapping flight over central Australia. A door on the large object opens—two vertical panels and two horizontally aligned panels slide apart—and the three smaller objects fly inside. A US Air Force sergeant with a top-secret clearance is shown this clip at a CIA screening in Texas in 1967. He says the filmed image of the UFO is extraordinarily clear, filling the entire screen. (Budd Hopkins, Missing Time, R. Marek, 1981, p. 253)

1965, January — A mysterious artifact allegedly falls near the village of San Miguel, said to be 2.5 miles from San Rafael, Mendoza, Argentina. The provincial government sends a Cessna aircraft over the site and locates a cigar-shaped object, 26 feet long and 3 feet in diameter, on the ground. Several photos are taken. It emits a bright white light and seems to be half buried. Reportedly the object is delivered to Argentine Air Force personnel in Mendoza and from there to the Comisión Nacional de Investigaciones Espaciales in Buenos Aires. (Charles Bowen, "Crash-Landed UFO near Mendoza," Flying Saucer Review 11, no. 3 (May/June 1965): 7–9; Clark III 332–333; Clark IV 369)

1965, January 5 — 5:56 p.m. NASA engineer Dempsey Bruton, head of the Wallops Flight Facility on Wallops Island, Virginia, observes a round, bright-yellow light rising from the horizon. The apparent size of the object is that of a nickel held at arm's length. As the object reaches an overhead position, it disappears. The length of observation is approximately 8–9 seconds. The witness claims that his wife and brother-in-law also see the object. (NICAP, "Bright Yellow Light Flies Ahead"; "Strange Flying Objects Sighted," Salisbury (Md.) Daily Times, January 13, 1965, p. 1)

1965, January 11 — Mrs. Paul Zimmerman Gearhart and her two sons see a triangular UFO that flies slowly out of the southeast and then "suddenly plunged into the sea some miles offshore" at Tillamook Head, Oregon. It leaves behind two trails of fire. (Seaside (Oreg.) Signal, January 12, 1965; Sanderson, InvRes, p. 50)

1965, January 11 — 4:20 p.m. At least 12 persons, including six Army Signal Corps communications system specialists, at the Munitions Building at Nineteenth Street and Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C., observe 12–15 white oval objects maneuvering erratically at 12,000–15,000 feet altitude above the US Capitol Building. Two delta-wing jets, apparently from Andrews AFB in Maryland, are seen in pursuit, but the objects easily outmaneuver them. Among the witnesses are Paul M. Dickey Jr., Edward Shad, Sam Webb, Jack McBride, and Sam Marrone. The objects are also tracked on radar. The Defense Department denies the incident, but the witnesses publicly maintain their story. The Pentagon forces a TV crew about to interview the witnesses to shut down that evening. (NICAP, "Over a Dozen Ovals Chased by AF Jets"; Washington Post, January 13, 1965; "UFOs over D.C.," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1965, pp. 1, 5; Harold H. 1965, January 12 — 1:00 a.m. Donald E. Flickinger, an agent of the US Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, is driving near Lynden, Washington, when he sees a low-flying object, 30 feet in diameter, that avoids collision with his car at the last moment. He gets out and sees it hovering for one minute, then it flies off at high speed with a sound of rushing air. He learns that nearby Blaine Air Force Station [now closed] is tracking the UFO. (NICAP, "Driver Avoids Collision with 30′ Object"; Sparks, p. 303; "New Sightings Put AF on Spot," UFO Investigator 3, no. 1 (March/April 1965): 4)

1965, January 12 — 10:58 a.m. The Kiwi Transient Nuclear Test is conducted at Area 25 of the Nevada Test Site as part of Project NERVA. The nuclear rocket engine code-named Kiwi is allowed to overheat until it bursts, sending fuel hurtling skyward. Deadly radioactive fuel chunks as large as 148 pounds shoot up into the sky and last as far away as a quarter mile. A radioactive cloud rises up to 2,600 feet, then drifts out over Los Angeles, California, and out to sea. The AEC calls it a "safety test," but the USSR says it violates the test ban. (Wikipedia, "NERVA"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 309–310; "Kiwi TNT: An Explosive Nuclear Rocket Test," Historian Alan B. Carr YouTube channel, January 6, 2023)

1965, January 12 — 6:30 p.m. A NASA public relations employee named Milliner and her husband are walking toward their house when they see a bright yellow object moving swiftly over the Wallops Flight Facility at Wallops Island, Virginia. They watch it for 2 minutes. (Harold H. Deneault Jr., "UFOs Return to Washington," Fate 18, no. 7 (July 1965): 48)

1965, January 12 — 8:20 p.m. A Mrs. Jubert in Custer, Washington, sees through her window what seems to be the landing lights of an airplane apparently coming into her yard. She herds her three teenage girls outside in the opposite direction. The four lights merge into one intense white light, which moves in a straight line toward the house, lifts several hundred feet and clears a clump of evergreens, then dips down on the far side and touches the ground. A border patrol officer also sees the object after he is alerted by radio. He is buzzed by the UFO, which is low enough that he stops his car, gets out, and watches it move out of sight. Where the object lands in 16 inches of snow, they find a large circular imprint about 10–12 feet in diameter. The ground beneath the melted snow ring shows evidence of having been scorched. Oval-shaped tracks 8 inches long and 8 inches apart, in a single file, are found leading from the landing site to the evergreens, where they disappear. One month later, the circular area still shows traces. (NICAP, "Case 188s"; "New Sightings Put AF on Spot," UFO Investigator 3, no. 1 (March/April 1965): 4; Frank Edwards, FS Serious Business, Bantam ed., 1966, pp. 54–55; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 152–153; Ted Phillips, Physical Traces Associated with UFO Sightings, CUFOS, 1975, p. 34)

1965, January 14 — Around 12:00 midnight. Old Dominion college student James Myers sees a diamond-shaped object rise from the ground to 1,500–2,000 feet near Norfolk, Virginia. He loses sight of it behind a church and when it reappears it looks round, bright, and silvery. ("UFO Spotted by Student," Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, January 18, 1965, p. 2; Harold H. Deneault Jr., "UFOs Return to Washington," Fate 18, no. 7 (July 1965): 49)

1965, January 15 — 9:45 p.m. Mathew Rybczyk is watching TV at his home in Manchester, New Hampshire, when the set goes blank. Going outside to see if the antenna is damaged, he sees a flashing light moving across the tree line to the east and making a humming noise. When the light disappears, the TV set comes on again. (Manchester (N.H.) Sunday News, January 17, 1965; Schopick, p. 148)

1965, January 15 — 10:00 p.m. Charles Knee Jr., a former newsman, is driving on State Highway 4A between Wilmot and Enfield, New Hampshire, when the radio suddenly stops, the lights on the car go out, and the engine quits. He loses control of the car and pulls to the side of the road and then hears a loud humming sound like a high-frequency electrical whine. He opens the car door, steps out, and sees a bright light below the cloud cover at around 2,000–5,000 feet altitude. It seems to hover for a moment and then takes off to the south. As the light leaves and the whine dies away, the headlights and radio come on and the motor starts by itself. The whole thing lasts about 15–20 seconds. (Manchester (N.H.) Sunday News, January 16, 1965; Schopick, pp. 148–150)

1965, January 19 — NICAP Acting Director Richard H. Hall meets with a CIA agent and passes on some UFO case information and other materials to OSI for preparation of a paper on UFOs. Hall is given a direct phone number for the agent's office. He uses the phone line only once to "report some high-quality UFO sightings to the CIA." He is also given a CIA security clearance without his consent or knowledge. A January 25 CIA memo confirming the meeting shows an inordinate amount of interest in NICAP, given the CIA's mandate for acquiring foreign intelligence. (ClearIntent, pp. 231–234; Richard H. Hall, Uninvited Guests, Aurora, 1988, pp. 11, 354–358; Good Above, pp. 349–350)

1965, January 19 — Hall also meets for 90 minutes with retired Navy Capt. John Lawrence Counihan who is on the staff of Sen. Thomas J. Dodd (D-Conn.). Counihan says that the Committee on Astronautics and Space Science would be considered "nutty" if it took up hearings, but it might be willing to consider an informal briefing by NICAP. (Swords 306)

1965, January 19 — 6:15 p.m. William Blackburn, a draftsman at a General Electric plant, is chopping wood at an archery range east of Staunton, Virginia, in an area known locally as Brands Flats. He sees two saucer-like shapes in the sky at 2,000–4,000 feet altitude. The larger one seems to be about 80 feet across. The smaller one, 20 feet across, descends quickly and silently and lands 45–55 feet away from Blackburn. A door opens, making a slight noise and revealing an interior light. Three figures, each 3 feet tall and wearing tight-fitting metallic-looking suits, emerge. They have reddish-orange skin and piercing eyes. One has an extra-long finger on its left hand. They speak in an unintelligible language, then return to the UFO. The door closes so perfectly that an outline cannot be seen, and the object takes off. The entire episode lasts only 5 minutes. Blackburn sees no traces in the snow, but thinks the object and humanoids are hovering. (NICAP, "Two Humanoids Approach Witness"; "Local Man Claims He Saw Spaceman," Wayneboro (Va.) News-Virginian, January 23, 1965, pp. 1–2; Center for UFO Studies, HUMCAT Index 1965, p. 7; Donald B. 1965, January 23 — 8:40 a.m. Two separate cars driving in different direction stall out near the intersection of US Hwy 60 and State Route 614 in Lightfoot, Virginia. One of the drivers, Thomas F. Mains, sees a lightbulb- or mushroom-shaped object 75–80 feet tall and 10–25 feet wide, hovering over nearby field about 4 feet off the ground. It is metallic gray, with red-orange and blue lights and is making a vacuum cleaner noise. It suddenly accelerates horizontally to the west against the wind and disappears. (NICAP, "UFO Hovering over Field Stalls Cars"; Sparks, p. 304; "UFO Reported Seen near Williamsburg," Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, January 24, 1965, p. 1; "Langley Team Investigating UFO, But Report Unlikely," Newport News (Va.) Daily Press, January 26, 1965, p. 3; Hynek UFO Report, pp. 177–178)

1965, January 25 — Night. Policeman Woody Darnall, his family, and several neighbors see a glowing object hovering on a mountainside near Marion, Virginia. It seems to explode and take off in a shower of sparks. A group of Marion residents and state forest officials climb to the area and find several treetops bent over and one green tree on fire where the UFO was seen. (Harold H. Deneault Jr., "UFOs Return to Washington," Fate 18, no. 7 (July 1965): 52)

1965, January 25 — Night. Nine persons near Fredericksburg, Virginia, see a UFO that resembles a "Christmas sparkler." One witness says it looks like a spinning top spitting sparks out of the bottom as it moves up the Rappahannock Valley at treetop level. (Harold H. Deneault Jr., "UFOs Return to Washington," Fate 18, no. 7 (July 1965): 52)

1965, January 26 — Evening. Rev. H. Preston Robinson and others in Marion, Virginia, watch an object hovering 600 feet above the city. The object makes a steady buzzing sound and has several lights on its round bottom. Spinning clockwise, it shoots out of sight at fantastic speed. It emits a ball of fire as it disappears. (Harold H. Deneault Jr., "UFOs Return to Washington," Fate 18, no. 7 (July 1965): 47, 52)

1965, January 26 — Evening. Steven Houffer, 16, and six friends are driving on US Highway 250 near Brands Flats, Virginia, when they see a small man walking toward the road from a field. He sits down and peers intently at passing cars. Houffer stops the car and he and his friends get out. When they approach, the being runs up a hill. Two other entities appear and run in the same direction. They are all about 3.5 feet tall, wear silvery one-piece garments, and leave no footprints. Police officers conduct a search with local photographer Charles Weaver, but find nothing. Some time later, Houffer and Weaver see a "glowing aluminum barn," which they go down to investigate. Weaver is walking around inside when something hits him on the head. The two turn to run after Weaver snaps a photo. In the light of the flashbulb, they see a little man standing by the barn. The photo is allegedly confiscated by government agents. A local man, Donald Cash, 6 feet tall, confesses to dressing up in overalls to pose as an alien, although his story does not completely match the details of the account. 1965, January 27 — 6:00 p.m. NASA research engineer A. G. Crimmins Jr. observes an object at Plum Tree Island Wildlife Refuge, near Poquoson, Virginia, that is approximately 75 feet across and 10–15 feet in height. The object has 3–7 lights colored red and orange and appears to rotate. It moves approximately a quarter mile west of its original position on a zigzag course and then appears to land on the ocean shore. It remains still for about 5 minutes, then takes off to the north and turns right to depart to the east at a high rate of speed. Crimmins watches it through 20x binoculars. The same object is apparently seen by retired USAF Maj. John R. Nayadley, another NASA research engineer, who observes a V-shaped object with blinking red-orange lights over Hampton, Virginia. (NICAP, "Zig-Zagging Object Lands / Takes Off"; "New Sightings Put AF on Spot," UFO Investigator 3, no. 1 (March/April 1965): 4; UFOEv II 156)

1965, January 27 — 11:15 p.m. Donald Keyhoe and NICAP board member Joseph Bryan III appear on the Les Crane Show and are questioned skeptically by Crane, who ridicules both men and NICAP, which he pronounces "kneecap." (Donald E. Keyhoe, "The Crane Show Fiasco," UFO Investigator 3, no. 1 (March/April 1965): 6; Wendy Connors, "Profiles 11," Profiles in Ufology: Major Donald E. Keyhoe, Dr. James E. McDonald, and Frank Edwards Guide, November 21, 2013; Powell, Keyhoe, 327–328)

1965, January 29 — In Monterey, California, Mayor George Clemens and his family see a bright light performing acrobatics in the northern sky. It hovers, then shoots straight up about 500 feet, fades, drops down, and hovers again. Then it drops toward the water and disappears. The Coast Guard finds nothing. (Sanderson, InvRes, p. 50)

1965, January 30 — 2:00 a.m. TV repairman Sid Padrick is walking along Manresa Beach near his home in Watsonville, California. He hears a jet-like noise and sees a huge UFO moving slowly towards him. He hears a voice saying, "We are not hostile," and inviting him aboard. He enters the craft and sees a human in a flying suit who calls himself "Xeno" and gives Padrick a tour of the ship and other crew members that culminates in a deeply spiritual experience. Padrick reports his experience to Hamilton AFB [now closed] on February 4 and receives a 3-hour visit from Maj. Damon B. Reeder on February 8, and perhaps other officers after that. (Wally Trabing, "He Said: 'I Talked to a Spaceman,'" Santa Cruz (Calif.) Sentinel, February 21, 1965, p. 3; Bill Strobel, "The Visitors from Outer Space," *Oakland (Calif.) 1965, January 31 — 6:15 p.m. William E. Bolson and two other musicians sight two discs hovering over some high-tension power lines between Kent and Renton, Washington. The UFOs appear to be connected to each other. ("Musicians Spot UAOs," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1965, p. 1)

1965, February — George Langelaan, ex-secret service officer and author of the short story "The Fly," gives a lecture at Mourenx, Pyrénées-Atlantiques, France, and declares that the Russian and US secret services have collaborated on the UFO problem and concluded that the objects are extraterrestrial. (Good Above, p. 133)

1965, February 3 — 8:45 p.m. A man sees a light on the beach near Penguin Street, South New Brighton, New Zealand, and gets out of his car to observe it. He hears a modulated whistling sound and sees an object, 22 feet wide, rise from the beach to an altitude of 60 feet. He returns with other witnesses and a dog that gets restless at a spot where grass is flattened. Another witness sees the UFO as it is rising above the suburb. ("Sighting Reports, New Zealand," Australian Flying Saucer Review, May 1965, p. 15; Vallée, Magonia, p. 305)

1965, February 8 — 12:47 a.m. Susan Crowley is driving home along Harmony Lane in Elk Grove Village, Illinois, when she notices a large domed disc silently hovering above her house. She jumps out of the car and goes inside to wake up her husband, but by that time the object is gone. ("Flying Saucer Reported," Cook County (Ill.) Herald, February 11, 1965; "Flying Object Reported over Elk Grove Village, Illinois," NICAP Reporter 3, no. 8 (May 1965): 7; "UFO Hovering above a House Witnessed by Susan Crawley, February 8, 1965," Eyes on Cinema YouTube channel, September 11, 2023)

1965, February 11 — Night. A Flying Tiger Line cargo aircraft (Flight F-169) en route from Anchorage, Alaska, to Tachikawa Airfield, Tokyo, Japan, encounters three gigantic, glowing, red UFOs, at least 200 feet in diameter, about 4 hours out of Anchorage. The aircraft radar also picks them up about 5 miles off the wing. They pace the plane for 30 minutes, then speed away at 1,380 mph. (NICAP, "Radar/Visual over Pacific Ocean"; "Three Huge UFOs Pace U.S. Airliner," UFO Investigator 3, no. 2 (April/May 1965): 1; Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, pp. 128–129; Richard H. Hall, Uninvited Guests, Aurora, 1988, pp. 249–250; UFOEv II 56)

1965, February 11 — The Pentagon sends Blue Book chief Maj. Hector Quintanilla to Richmond, Virginia, on a debunking tour. Stressing delusions and hoaxes, he tells reporters that not a single UFO report is genuine. His press conference display includes false UFO photos and fake debris. "I am a facts man," Quintanilla says. "I cannot explain why people want to see UFOs." ("AF Misleads Senator," UFO Investigator 3, no. 2 (May/June 1965): 4)

1965, February 12 — A strange-looking plane dives into the Bristol Channel near Minehead on the North Devon coast in England. Four witnesses observe it from two different locations. Despite a 90-minute search by a lifeboat, two RAF helicopters, and a Shackleton marine patrol aircraft, nothing is found, and no planes are reported missing. A strange, low-flying plane is reported also over Swainswick, near Bath, Somerset, England, around the same time. The ash-gray object flies about 100 feet above the road in a west-southwest direction. It has a misty appearance, even though there is no fog or mist at the time. It emerges from behind some trees and then literally vanishes. A witnesses notes, "The strange part was that it made no sound, and did not appear to have an engine, but it was certainly not a glider." (Bristol Evening Post, February 13, 1965; "World Round-Up," Flying Saucer Review 11, no. 3 (May/June 1965): 27)

1965, February 14 — 7:00 p.m. C. H. Watson and F. Pursey of Dover, England, are driving home from Whitstable with their wives. As they begin ascending the hill from Bridge to Dover, they see a dark object, which they assume is an unlit van, crossing the road from left to right about 65 feet ahead. The unlit and silent object seems to vanish into a churchyard. The two women, chatting in the back seat, notice nothing. ("Mystery Object near Dover," Flying Saucer Review 11, no. 3 (May/June 1965): 27–28)

1965, February 16–18 — Astronauts Neil Armstrong, Richard F. Gordon Jr., Buzz Aldrin, David Scott, and Rusty Schweikart visit Sedan Crater and Buckboard Mesa at the Nevada Test Site to practice carrying out geological observations in preparation for a moon landing. (Nevada National Security Site, "Apollo Astronauts Train at the Nevada Test Site," July 2019)

1965, February 26 — 3:00 p.m. George Adamski takes his last film of a spaceship at Madeleine Rodeffer's house in Silver Spring, Maryland. 1965, February 27 — The first conference of Australian UFO organizations takes place in Ballarat, Victoria, Australia. It is arranged by W. Howard Sloane of the Ballarat Astronomical Society to share information and remove some of the stigma of UFO research. The conference is held at the Ballarat Municipal Observatory in Mount Pleasant. Representatives of the Perth UFO Research Group, the Victorian Flying Saucer Research Society, the UFO Investigation Centre NSW, and the Flying Saucer Research Society of South Australia are in attendance. Witnesses include Rev. William Gill and Charles Brew. Former Air Marshal George Jones attends, and the Royal Australian Air Force is represented by B. G. Roberts, senior research scientist at the Operational Research Office, Department of Air. Roberts says that the RAAF has determined that 90% of reports are explainable, but that only those that might be a threat to national security are worth investigating and "there are no documents, files, or dossiers held by the Department which prove the existence of 'flying saucers.'" The researchers quiz him on the 1953 Drury photographic case, but Roberts is unaware of that one. Jones insists on keeping an open mind about reports like those by Gill and Brew. 1965, March 2 — 1:55 p.m. John F. Reeves, 65, retired, while walking in the woods east of Weeki Wachee Springs, Florida, sees a bluish-green and reddish-purple object 20–30 feet in diameter, 6 feet thick, saucer-shaped, and with an outer rim and a stairway, two 2-foot windows on top, landed on the ground on four 4-foot legs about 2,000 feet away. He approaches to 100 feet. After watching the object for 10 minutes, he sees a robot-like being about 200–300 feet away, about 5 feet tall, wearing a gray-silver uniform, glass dome headgear, wide-spaced eyes, and pointed chin. It walks to 15 feet away from Reeves, stares at him for 1.5 minutes, points a box or 6–7-inch black object at Reeves that emits a flash 3 times, then walks back to the landed vehicle and climbs in. The object has Venetian blind–like blades on the rim that open and close; the rim starts rotating counterclockwise, the landing gear retract, then it takes off with a whooshing-rumbling sound and disappears vertically in less than 10 seconds, dropping two sheets of paper with indecipherable writing, and leaving indentations and footprints in the ground. The case is investigated by MacDill AFB in Tampa. Richard Hall supervises the investigation for NICAP and concludes it is a hoax. 1965, March 5 — Two Air Force radar technicians are repairing the height-finder antenna at Benton Air Force Station [now Ground Equipment Facility QRC] in Ricketts Glen State Park near Red Rock, Pennsylvania, when they see a small, saucer-shaped object land nearby. As they approach it, a beam of light comes out and strikes both of them. That is the last thing they remember, and they fail to report to the command post. Their equipment is left behind at the antenna, but air police cannot locate the men. Pennsylvania State Police assist in a search of the area. About 16 hours later, a state trooper locates the two men walking along State Route 487 south of Lopez, about 10 miles away. They seem dazed, so they are taken to a hospital in Williamsport, where they are found to be dehydrated and confused. No alcohol or drugs are found. They are then taken to an Air Force hospital at Stewart AFB [now Stewart Air National Guard Base] in Orange County, New York. Trace amounts of alpha radiation are found on their clothing and strange marks are on their necks. AFOSI special agents interview them, but the men cannot remember anything. After 2 weeks in the hospital, they are released back to their unit. ("Pennsylvania Abduction from Air Force Base," Filer's Files, September 9, 1999; Good Need, pp. 251–252)

1965, March 8 — 7:40 p.m. J. H. Martin, an instrument maker for the National Bureau of Standards, and his two sons observe in Mount Airy, Maryland, six lights he estimates to be 1,000 feet away and moving at a speed of 20 mph with no sound. They appear as three pairs of lights, all with the same intensity. They are comparable to a traffic signal. The lights pass between the barn and the house at an estimated altitude of 100–500 feet, flying in a straight line toward the hills two miles away. They are in view for approximately 3 minutes. (NICAP, "Six Lights Just Miss House"; Sparks, p. 304)

1965, March 15 — Around 1:00 a.m. James W. Flynn is deep in the Everglades in his swamp buggy, somewhere east of Immokalee, Florida, with his four hunting dogs. He sees a hovering object like an upside-down cone about 200 feet above some cypress trees slightly over a mile away. It moves back and forth from its original position. Through binoculars it looks 25 feet high and 50 feet in diameter, with square windows emitting a yellowish glow. Around its base an orange-red glow extends downwards and illuminates the ground some 75 feet around the rim. Some 40 minutes into the sighting, Flynn decides to approach it in his buggy. A high-pitched ringing sound bothers one of his dogs. He stops 600 feet away and walks, waving his arms, toward the UFO, which is hovering 4 feet off the ground. A blast of wind from the object nearly knocks him off his feet. He continues, and at 75 feet from the UFO he waves his arms again. The object beams a light like a "welder's torch" that hits his forehead. He blacks out twice. When he wakes up he is temporarily blinded. In the morning he finds a symmetrical circle of burned ground. The tops of trees are burned. Flynn makes his way to the home of Henry Osceola (or Henry Billy) later in the day and arrives at his own home in East Fort Myers on March 17 and spends 5 days in the hospital with damage to his right eye, bruises, burns, deep muscle tissue damage, and loss of hearing. His eye damage is permanent. The landing marks and burned trees are verified by the Lee County sheriff's office. 1965, March 17 — 10:00 p.m. Walter Jacobs, steward on the freighter Iron Duke, sees a bright orange object with a dent on top and a knot on the bottom as the ship is approaching the Margaret Brock [Cape Jaffa] Lighthouse off Kingston, South Australia. He takes a photograph, but it is apparently a hoax. He never actually saw the object at the time, finding it only after the prints are developed, contradicting his verbal testimony. A camera lens reflection from the moon caused the object in the print, and the steward took immediate advantage of the situation and had the radio operator send telegrams to the papers. There is no sighting event. ("'Moon Object' Pictures," *Newcastle (N.S.W.) 1965, March 18 (or 21) — 7:06 p.m. Capt. Yoshiharu Inaba is flying a TOA Airlines Convair 240 from Osaka to Hiroshima, Japan, at an altitude of 6,500 feet. Just after the aircraft passes Himeji, Hyogo, an elliptical luminous object appears and follows the plane. Inaba makes a 60° turn to avoid a collision, but the object makes a similar maneuver then follows along the plane's left wing for about 56 miles. Emitting a greenish light, the object affects the automatic direction finder and the radio. As copilot Tetsu Majima radios the Matsuyama control tower, he hears frantic calls from Joji Negishi, the pilot of a Tokyo Airlines Piper Apache, who says he is being chased by a luminous object over Matsuyama. The object shoots away and disappears. 1965, April 4 — 4:05 a.m. A/2C Corum, a weather observer at Keesler Air Force Base in Biloxi, Mississippi, along with student R. Pittman. Watches a black, 40-foot-diameter, oval object with four body lights. It flies in and out of clouds for about 15 seconds. (NICAP, "40′ Black Oval Object 500 ′ Away"; UFOEv II 53)

1965, April 12 — Soviet astronomer Gennady Sholomitskii sends a telegram to the Information Bulletin on Variable Stars, announcing his discovery that radio emissions from stellar object CTA-102 are variable. The announcement creates a worldwide sensation with the implication that the emissions are caused by an extraterrestrial civilization. However, that explanation is rejected when the radio source is later identified as a quasar, a rotating neutron star with variable emissions, a term coined by Hong-Yee Chiu in May 1964 to describe these objects. 1965, April 20 — John Carstairs Arnell, scientific advisor to the Canadian Chief of Air Staff, prepares a four-page "Suggested Statement by the Minister of National Defence," Paul Hellyer. It reiterates the US opinion that UFOs do not constitute a national security threat because most sightings involve natural phenomena seen by unreliable witnesses. 1965, April 24 — 5:30 p.m. Ernest Arthur Bryant is walking toward Scoriton Down near Scoriton (or Scorriton), Devon, England, when he sees a saucer-like object approach him. It stops nearby and a door opens. Three beings appear and beckon to him. He approaches the saucer. Two of the three beings appear to be nonhuman, but the third seems to be a youth in his teens. The youth speaks with an accent that Bryant thinks might be Russian and calls himself Yamski. He says that he is from Venus, and then remarks that he wished "Des" was there, as he would understand what is happening. At the close of their conversation, he says that in a month he will return and bring proof of "Mantell." Ufologists who eventually hear the story immediately associate Yamski with George Adamski, the controversial contactee who died on April 23. Adamski was of Polish background and had a noticeable accent. If this were Adamski, he has lost any signs of aging. Adamski's friend Desmond Leslie was a coauthor of his first book. Captain Thomas F. Mantell, piloting an F-51, had been killed in 1948 when he began chasing what he thought was a UFO. According to Bryant, the saucer returns June 7 and leaves some items, including several pieces of metal, allegedly from an F-51. He reports the story to the British UFO Research Association, which launches an investigation. The various items Bryant turns over to the two investigators (a turbine fitting, metal parts, a broken bulb and fitting, a phial containing silver sand, and a piece of paper on which the words "Adelphos Adelpho" are written) prove to be mundane and irrelevant to the F-51, according to aeronautical engineer Leonard G. Cramp. In spite of problems with the story, one of the investigators, Eileen Buckle, rushes into print with a book, The Scoriton Mystery. Shortly afterward, Bryant unexpectedly takes ill and dies from a brain tumor on June 24, 1967. The other investigator, Norman Oliver, visits his widow. She says that she is familiar with the story in the book, as her husband had presented it to her first as the script for a science fiction novel. It is only after the investigation is well along that she realizes her husband was trying to sell the story as a real event. She indicates that the supposed items related to Mantell were purchased at a naval surplus store. Alice Wells, head of the Adamski Foundation, dismisses the Scoriton story from the beginning, as does Desmond Leslie. Between their rejection and Oliver's uncovering of the hoax, few remain to support Bryant except Buckle. 1965, May — Hayden C. Hewes's Interplanetary Intelligence of Unidentified Flying Objects publishes the first issue of the Interplanetary Intelligence Report, which lasts through September/October 1966. (Interplanetary Intelligence Report 1, no. 1 (May 1965))

1965, May 1 — Pilots Robert L. Stephens and fire control officer Daniel Andre reach a speed of 2,070 mph in a Lockheed YF-12A at Edwards AFB, California. The YF-12A also reaches an altitude record of 80,257 feet. (Wikipedia, "Robert L. Stephens")

1965, May 5 — 1:10 a.m. The crew of the USS Hassayampa, a US Navy fleet oiler, in the Philippine Sea notices an aircraft approaching. At 1:14 a.m., the SPS-6C air search radar detects four targets at ranges up to 22 miles for the next 6 minutes at extremely high speed (3,500 mph), making various maneuvers. As seen through binoculars, they appear as three lighted objects, one of 1st stellar magnitude the others 2nd magnitude. The objects hover directly over the ship for 3 minutes. There is no IFF response. One object to starboard appears larger on radar. The objects depart to the southeast at extremely high speed. (NICAP, "Radar/Visual by U.S. Flag Ship in the Philippines"; Sparks, p. 305; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 93–94; Martin Shough, RADCAT: Radar Catalogue: A Review of Twenty-One Ground and Airborne Radar UAP Contact Reports Generally Related to Aviation Safety for the Period October 15, 1948, to September 19, 1976, National Aviation Reporting Center on Anomalous Phenomena, NARCAP Report TR-6, December 8, 2002, pp. 111–115)

1965, May 24 — 12:05 a.m. John Burgess, James Tilse, and Eric Judin are playing cards at the Epsom Retreat Hotel near Epsom, Queensland, when their attention is drawn to something on or near the ground. It appears to be a disc-shaped object with banks of lights underneath it to their southeast. Tilse estimates its diameter to be 30 feet, Judin

as 20 feet, and Burgess as 6 feet. In the moonlight, its color seems to be charcoal. At times, it seems to approach them, then recede. Finally, it rapidly rises to about 300 feet, then it accelerates away to the northeast. Burgess and Judin hear a buzzing sound. Total duration is 40 minutes. Two days later, a circular depression is found nearby close to a telephone line. Tilse says that "tops of trees appear to be burned." 1965, May 28 — 3:25 a.m. An Ansett-ANA DC-6b airliner piloted by Capt. John Barker is flying over Bougainville Reef off the coast of Queensland, Australia, when it is paced for 10–15 minutes by an oblate UFO with exhaust gases coming from it. The copilot and a stewardess also see the object. Barker takes photos of the UFO, but when he lands in Port Moresby, Papua New Guinea, he is not allowed to have the film processed until he returns to Australia. When he eventually arrives in Brisbane, he is flown directly to Canberra where both the film and the flight recorder are confiscated. The Directorate of Air Force Intelligence in Canberra later denies that any such incident took place. However, an official statement by Barker to the RAAF surfaces, in which he says: "I had always scoffed at these reports, but I saw it. We all saw it. It was under intelligent control, and it was certainly no known aircraft." 1965, June — Systems analyst Jacques Vallée publishes Anatomy of a Phenomenon, which generates particular excitement for its sober, scientific treatment of the UFO phenomenon. Well reviewed, it plays a significant role in the renaissance of interest in UFOs as scientists express a willingness to examine the UFO problem. It is the first book by a working scientist to argue for the extraterrestrial hypothesis. (Jacques Vallée, Anatomy of a Phenomenon, Regnery, 1965; Clark III 1213; Clark IV 1389)

1965, June — 6:30 p.m. Mrs. J. Whitehead is in the garden at her cottage in Flasby, North Yorkshire, England, when a large disc-shaped object passes over, making a slight swishing noise. On the underside are three "windows" in a triangular formation. She feels a strange calming sensation as the UFO passes by. (Jenny Randles, "Fake Photographs, Real Sightings," IUR 11, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1986): 11)

1965, June 4 — During the Gemini 4 mission, astronaut James McDivitt spots an object that he describes as a "white cylindrical shape with a white pole sticking out of one corner of it." He takes two photos of it. His partner, Ed White, is asleep at the time. McDivitt maintains that it was some unknown but man-made piece of debris, while James Oberg, flight controller at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, Texas, argues that it is most likely the Titan II second stage of the craft. 1965, June 5 — 11:30 p.m. Josephine Brundage is driving 4 miles north of Kent, Washington, when her car suddenly comes to a stop, the headlights fail, the radio stops playing, and the car's clock and her wristwatch stop running. She sees a bright orange, lens-shaped object with a dome descend and hover 8–12 inches above the hood. It revolves clockwise at least 10 times. Brundage feels "hypnotized" as she watches it. When the disc flies away, the headlights and radio come on immediately and she is able to start the car again. (NICAP case file; "'Flying Object' Encounter Reported East of Kent," *Kent (Wash.) 1965, June 7–8 — 7:50 p.m. Meteorological officer Jorge Stanich is performing a routine observation at the Argentinian Deception Station on Deception Island in the South Shetland Islands, Antarctica, when he notices a stationary, bright, yellow light at an altitude of 25° above the horizon. He estimates its distance at 1.2 miles. The object is visible for 5 seconds. Six and a half hours later, at 2:20 a.m., he again sees a stationary light in the northwest at an altitude of 40° above the horizon for 4 seconds. (Daniel A. Perisse, "Deception Island UFO Sightings," MUFON 1987 International UFO Symposium Proceedings, Mutual UFO Network, 1987, pp. 142–146)

1965, June 18 or 20 — 4:20 p.m. The Commander of the Chilean Aguirre Cerda Research Station [destroyed in 1967] on Deception Island in the South Shetland Islands, Antarctica, Mario Jahn Barrera, together with Chilean Air Force pilot Lt. Benavidez, a meteorologist, and seven other witnesses, observe a UFO that maneuvers rapidly on an oscillating course for 25 minutes. (Daniel A. Perisse, "Deception Island UFO Sightings," MUFON 1987 International UFO Symposium Proceedings, Mutual UFO Network, 1987, p. 146; Good Above, p. 309)

1965, June 25 — The Phoebus 1A nuclear rocket engine is tested at Area 25 of the Nevada Test Site as part of Project Rover. It runs at full power for 10.5 minutes. Unfortunately, the intense radiation environment causes one of the capacitance gauges to produce erroneous readings. When confronted by one gauge that says the hydrogen propellant tank is nearly empty, and another that says it is a quarter full, and unsure which is correct, the technicians in the control room choose to believe the one that says it is a quarter full. But the tank is indeed nearly empty, and the propellant runs dry. Without liquid hydrogen to cool it, the engine, operating at 2,000° C., quickly overheats and explodes. About a fifth of the fuel is ejected and most of the rest melts. The whole decontamination effort takes 400 people two months to complete, and costs $50,000. (Wikipedia, "Project Rover")

1965, June 25 — Frank Stavano and 24 other witnesses hear a loud, inexplicable explosion at his father Joseph's farm near Carrollton, Ohio. Two days later, Joseph Stavano is cutting hay when he discovers a strange circular formation from which the wheat is completely missing in the center for a diameter of 26 feet; at the edges the stubble is bent or broken outward at an angle of 20–30° from the horizontal. No other path leads into the circle but his own. Soil samples show no evidence of explosives or other foreign matter. 1965, Summer — 8:30 a.m. An Italian radiologist is in a dinghy on the Adriatic Sea near Cattolica, Rimini, Italy, when he sees five luminous disks emerge from the water, one after the other, about 1.2 miles away. They fly away at a 45° angle. (Roberto Pinotti, UFO: Missione Uomo, Armenia, 1975, p. 137; Carl Feindt, "Report #292," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 266–267)

1965, Summer — Night. A prospector who lives in a cabin on a hill in the vicinity of Apache Junction, Arizona, is startled by a high-pitched electrical sound. A bright light then fills his cabin, hurting his eyes. After 2 minutes the light goes out and the noise seems to fade to the north. The next morning, he makes a systematic search of the area around his cabin and he finds in front of the porch a "tiny spindle-shaped bright yellow object with a bright red stripe down one side, about an inch long." He keeps the artifact for 5 years before reporting the incident to APRO in 1970. The Lorenzens give the object to University of Arizona metallurgical engineer Walter W. Walker for analysis. Walker determines that it is a manufactured object with a wire made of an iron-manganese alloy at its core, surrounded by fibrous insulation and a sheath made of polycrystalline calcite. He concludes that the object is unusual but not extraterrestrial. ("New Physical Evidence Case," APRO Bulletin, January/February 1970, pp. 1, 3; Walter W. Walker, "The Apache Junction Physical Evidence Case," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1970, pp. 1, 4)

1965, July — Hynek writes a letter to the Air Force calling for a systematic study of UFOs. He writes that "enough puzzling sightings have been reported by intelligent and often technically competent people to warrant closer attention than Project Blue Book can possibly encompass at the present time." (J. Allen Hynek, "Are Flying Saucers Real?" Saturday Evening Post, December 17, 1966, p. 20)

1965, July — 12:30 a.m. An airman serving with the Air Force Security Service at Goodfellow Air Force Base in San Angelo, Texas, is outside his barracks when he notices a light moving toward the west. At first he thinks it is a high-altitude aircraft, but after 4–5 seconds the light makes a 90° turn to the south. After another 10–15 seconds it abruptly turns east, then after a similar interval it turns again to the west. Soon it seems to be stationary, but he notices the light is growing dimmer until after 10 seconds it is no longer visible. Throughout the sighting he can hear no engine noise, and until the end the light maintains a consistent brightness. (NICAP Nocturnal Light cases)

1965, July — 11:30 p.m.–midnight. Talking on the phone in her second-floor bedroom in Lake Forest, Illinois, Pat Harvey sees a flash and hears a commotion or "rustle" outside. When she finishes the conversation, she looks out the window toward her neighbor's lawn and sees a transparent bubble of light about 100 feet away. Inside the globe are several individuals who look like normal human beings, though slightly shorter (5 feet tall) and with skin that looks tanned. They are lying down in a somewhat haphazard arrangement. There are no visible instruments or seats. The object bobs up and down slightly, and the beings' arms are moving in a way that reminds Harvey of "rowing motions." (Patrick Gross, URECAT, June 21, 2008; Clark III 277; Clark IV 317)

1965, July 1 — 5:45 a.m. Maurice Masse is farming just north of Valensole, Alps-de-Haute-Provence, France, when he is startled by a whistling sound and sees an elliptical object resting on four legs some 200 feet away from him in his lavender field. Squatting on the ground near the object are two figures about the size of 8-year-old boys, apparently looking at a lavender plant. Masse approaches them to about 20 feet and the figures stand up. They are dressed in gray-green overalls and have smooth, pumpkin-like heads. Their eyes are large and slanted, their mouths have no lips and look like little holes. He hears some grunting sounds, and Masse hints that there is a telepathic communication. One of the figures points a pencil-like object at Masse and he is paralyzed. They enter the UFO through a door and the object shoots off at enormous speed with a whistling sound. It takes Masse another 20 minutes to regain control. Tracks left by the landing gear are found later by Masse and confirmed by gendarmes. 1965, July 2 — 7:15 p.m. Five garrison members of the British Antarctic Station B [abandoned in 1969] on Deception Island in the South Shetland Islands, Antarctica, have a UFO sighting while conducting routine meteorological observations. The witnesses see a light in the north quadrant, zigzagging, hovering, and accelerating at times, and maintaining altitudes between 20° and 45° above the horizon. The light is green and red, at times yellow, and is observed for perhaps 15–20 minutes. The edges of the light resemble those of a bright star. 1965, July 3 — 5:03 p.m. Two meteorologists at the Argentine Orcadas Base on Laurie Island in the South Orkney Islands, Antarctica, observe for 15 seconds a round, bluish-white object moving east to west on a parabolic path. Two variometers (magnetic field measuring instruments) register sudden and strong disturbances. (Schopick, pp. 153–155; Daniel A. Perisse, "Deception Island UFO Sightings," MUFON 1987 International UFO Symposium Proceedings, Mutual UFO Network, 1987, pp. 147, 153; Richard H. Hall, "UFO Sightings at Scientific Stations in Antarctica, July 1965")

1965, July 3 — 7:20 p.m. The meteorologist and eight other witnesses at the Chilean Aguirre Cerda Station [destroyed in 1967] on Deception Island, Antarctica, watch for a total of 20 minutes a bright and apparently solid object zigzagging from the east quadrant to the south quadrant. It maintains an altitude above the horizon between 35 and 20 degrees. It is white and star-like with some orange hues. (Daniel A. Perisse, "Deception Island UFO Sightings," MUFON 1987 International UFO Symposium Proceedings, Mutual UFO Network, 1987, pp. 147, 153–154; Richard H. 1965, July 3 — 7:42 p.m. 17 people (including three visiting Chilean personnel) observe a lens-shaped disc that maneuvers erratically across the sky for about an hour at the Argentine Deception Station in the South Orkney Islands, Antarctica. The object changes colors (red, yellow, green, orange, blue, white) as it zigzags from a position about 30° above the horizon in the north-northwest. The object hovers, accelerates, reverses direction, and changes its luminosity. At times it goes behind some clouds, but it is also seen in front of some cirrus clouds. Finally, it disappears to the northwest, decreasing in size and gaining altitude. Cpl. Uladislao Duran Martinez takes 10 color photos through theodolite and field glasses. 1965, July 6 — 6:52 p.m. Chief Mate Torgrim Lien of the Norwegian ship TT Jawesta watches a star-like UFO through binoculars in the North Atlantic Ocean about 900 miles southwest of the Azores. He, the captain, and other officers see an intense blue, fiery tongue of light approaching the ship at tremendous speed. As it gets closer, he sees it is a cigar-shaped UFO with a row of square windows. It passes above the stern of the ship at a height of about 900 feet, just below the clouds, in 30–40 seconds. Possible re-entry of the Soviet Kosmos 69 reconnaissance satellite. ("'Cigar' Passes a Few Hundred Feet above Norwegian Ship," Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1966): 32; Dolan, USO1, 267–268)

1965, July 9 — 4:30 p.m. A white cylindrical object is seen flying over Santa Maria Island in the Azores islands, Portugal. All electric clocks at the Santa Maria Airport stop when the object passes overhead. Weather personnel and other witnesses all agree that the UFO is at an altitude of 24,000–30,000 feet. At no time does it make any sound. According to witnesses, the clocks stop at the same time the UFO reaches the zenith directly over the airport. Attempts to identify it are unsuccessful. 1965, July 9 — 10:00 p.m. Connie Wolferd and other residents of Bunker Hill, Lebanon County, Pennsylvania, watch a clam-shaped object, about 10 feet in diameter, with red lights around its rim hover above some nearby trees. Wolferd is sitting on the porch listening to the radio when it suddenly stops functioning. The living room lights flicker (although fluorescent lights in the kitchen and bathroom do not), and a neighbor's loud TV suddenly stops. She hears something making a "bleep-bleep" sound, looks up, and sees the object. Neighbors find the leaves of nearby trees are singed. ("Bunker Hill Girl Tells of Seeing Unidentified Flying Objects in July," Lebanon (Pa.) Daily News, August 10, 1965, p. 20; Schopick, pp. 177–178)

1965, July 12 — 4:30 a.m. Laura de Freitas Machado Fernandes gets up to go to the well for some water at her home in Porto, Portugal, near the Porto Airport. She notices a luminous red object shaped like a cardinal's hat coming from the west at high speed. It stops in mid-air and hovers above some nearby woods, rocking back and forth. She rushes back to warn her husband, Manuel Fernandes. They notice that their radio set has started making a loud noise. They estimate the object is about a quarter-mile away. Its top part is orange, and on its brim is a flickering red light. They watch it for 3 minutes before it takes off to the north at full speed. The radio goes back to normal. 1965, July 15 — 11:00 a.m. An object descends near the Canberra Deep Space Communication Complex in Tidbinbilla, Australian Capital Territory, interfering with its tracking of Mariner 4. It is also observed by control tower operators at Canberra Airport. Researcher Keith Basterfield concludes that the object is the planet Venus. 1965, July 17 — Witnesses see a UFO land on a beach near Colonia del Sacramento, Uruguay. It remains on the ground nearly 2 minutes, glowing bright red. Then it takes off vertically and silently, and stops and hovers above the Rio de la Plata for several minutes at an altitude of 35 feet. Finally it flies away horizontally. It leaves a mark on the beach "similar to a retractable mechanical foot." (La Nación (Santiago, Chile), July 18, 1965; "UFO Sighted in South America," Butte Montana Standard-Post, July 18, 1965, p. 5; UFOEv II 316)

1965, July 19 — 5:30 p.m. Denis Crowe, an aircraft artist, is strolling along a beach at Vaucluse, New South Wales, when he encounters a glowing disc resting on legs. It is about 20 feet in diameter and 9 feet high. The top and bottom are silver gray and the rim in between is glowing greenish-blue. A hollow area at the very top seems to be a glass dome. There are no windows or antennae. Dogs in the neighborhood all bark at it. When Crowe is 50–60 feet from the object, it takes off with a sound like air forced from a balloon. He watches it for about 10 seconds until it disappears into the clouds. After the object takes off, the dogs are strangely silent. 1965, July 20 — Early morning. Carlos Videla Zamudio (or Zamandio), a civil engineer staying in a hotel in Chañaral, Atacama, Chile, is awakened by a loud noise, looks out the window, and sees an intensely red object about 36 feet in diameter land on the sand. After 4–5 minutes it takes off with a violent noise, hovers briefly at 30 feet, and disappears. 1965, July 20 — 8:00 a.m. Ramón Eduardo Pereyra is driving a van along Avenida Tte. Gral. Donato Álvarez near Monte de los Curas [now called Villa La Florida], Quilmes district, Buenos Aires, Argentina, when he sees an object like a parachute drop silently into some trees on a hillside. He stops and walks over to investigate and finds a chrome-colored, egg-shaped craft standing on metal legs in a clearing. Its top part is transparent and the lower part smooth. Beside the object stands a blond young man who is studying a piece of paper. He is wearing a "diver's suit," small boots, and has something like a briefcase attached to his right leg. Pereyra walks right up to the object and looks into a porthole. Inside, he sees a second man sitting at an instrument panel. At this point the man outside notices him and walks up with an angry expression. Pereyra asks him what's going on, but the man does not answer and steps into the craft, which rises to a height of 200 feet and moves away horizontally. 1965, July 26 — 9:35 p.m. Astronomers Robert Vitolniek, Ian Melderis, and Esmeralda Vitolniek at the Baldone Astrophysical Observatory in Latvia are observing noctilucent clouds when they see a star-like object drifting slowly westwards. Through binoculars the light seems to be sharply defined, and through a telescope it looks like an array of three greenish lights around a larger, central sphere. After 20 minutes, the three smaller lights move away from the central one, and they disappear into the distance at 10:00 p.m. (Felix Ziegel, "Unidentified Flying Objects," Soviet Life, no. 137 (February 1968): 27; James E. 1965, July 26 — Night. Adilon Batista de Azevedo, 14, leaves home with two friends to go to a movie theater on the outskirts of Carazinho, Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil. When they pass a vacant lot on Rua David Canaberra between the Rua 15 de Novembro and the Rua Alexandra de Motta, they see a light beam coming from a cloud illuminating an area about 33 feet in diameter and hear a buzzing noise. The other boys run, but Adilon remains and sees an oval-shaped object landing in the vacant lot and hovering about 3 feet off the ground. Another smaller object descends and hovers next to the first. Two beings about 5 feet tall emerge from the larger object and walk around it. They are wearing dark clothing and light helmets. After 5 minutes, 3 others emerge from the smaller object and converse with the others. The beings reenter the objects, which take off several minute apart. Adilon gets a headache that remains with him for 5 days. Possible helicopters? 1965, July 28 — 9:40 p.m. A USAF Reserve major and his wife observe a manta ray–shaped object fly almost directly overhead at Carswell AFB [now Naval Air Station Fort Worth Joint Reserve Base], Fort Worth, Texas, below 1,000 feet altitude. The object moves at a constant speed on the same course. The object is approximately 40 feet long and has two brilliant white lights pulsating off and on once every second. It is completely silent and flies directly through the Carswell control zone at low altitude. The sighting is verified by three other persons on duty. The report states: "This sighting was a positive observation, under ideal circumstances, of a definite object of an unconventional nature—possibly of foreign origin, which could be a threat to national security." (NICAP, "RAPCON Fails to Identify Low Flying Manta Ray")

1965, July 31 — 1:05 a.m. Wynnewood, Oklahoma, police officer Lewis Sikes, 29, reports a UFO to the northeast. A little later, simultaneous radar fixes are obtained at Tinker AFB in Oklahoma City and Carswell AFB [now Naval Air Station Fort Worth Joint Reserve Base], Fort Worth, Texas. Both Tinker and Carswell track the object to a point 15 miles southwest of Tinker when it disappears. A few minutes later, it is tracked to a point 29 miles south of Tinker when it is lost again. (NICAP, "Gnd/Visual and AF Radar")

1965, August 1 — 1:30–4:30 a.m. Various personnel from Francis E. Warren Air Force Base west of Cheyenne, Wyoming, report more than 70 UFOs near the base's ICBM Minuteman I launch control facilities (LCFs) and launch facilities (LFs, missile silos). A Lieut. Anspaugh logs the reports and incoming telephone calls for three hours. The reports begin with a "large circular object emitting several colors but no sound" seen by civilians over Cheyenne itself at 1:30 a.m. This results in an alert at the base for all personnel to be on the watch for anything suspicious. Five objects are spotted over the Sioux Army Depot [now closed] in Sydney, Nebraska, at 1:45 a.m. Two UFOs are seen over the Echo LCF southeast of Pine Bluff at 1:48 a.m. Nine more objects are sighted at 2:50 a.m. The Echo LCF reports six UFOs stacked vertically. A Strategic Air Command team at the H-2 LF northeast of Gurley reports a white UFO directly overhead at 3:00 a.m. The Sioux Army Depot reports five objects going east at 3:35 a.m. Reports of white, round- or oval-shaped objects in various formations, continue solidly at the H-2 LF for the next 40 minutes. At 4:05 a.m., the Warren base commander calls to say that the Quebec LCF southwest of Chugwater has nine UFOs in sight: four to the NW, three to the NE, and two over Cheyenne. Sightings continue to be reported the next two nights at missile sites assigned to Warren AFB, for a total of 148 objects seen by 143 combat defense force airmen, missile maintenance men, and NCOs. The sheer scope and blatant ostentation of the UFOs' reported aerial displays over a sensitive atomic missile base is remarkable. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 209–211; Robert L. Hastings, "Remarkable Reports from the Missile Field," IUR 32, no. 1 (August 2008): 8–14, 23–27; Robert L. 1965, August 1 — 8:08 p.m. The Oklahoma Highway Patrol starts receiving 25–30 visual sightings of UFOs, many by police and highway patrol troopers from Purcell north to Norman to Chandler and back south through Meeker and Shawnee, Oklahoma. The sightings continue through dawn and vary from one to four objects that start and stop, often having a red color and varying to a white and blue luster. (NICAP, [case documents]; "Ardmoreites Spot Flying Objects in Sky," Daily Ardmoreite, August 2, 1965, pp. 1, 2; "Additional Strange Objects Reported," *Manhattan (Kan.) 1965, August 1 — 9:08 p.m. Four objects, bluish-white with a red haze, are seen from the control tower at Tinker AFB, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. T/Sgt John R. Lang, 34, is the watch supervisor. All the objects appear at approximately 22,000 feet altitude. One is moving south, and another is moving north at speeds of 150–200 mph. Two of the objects appear stationary. The 746th Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron reports radar contact with one object at 10,000 feet in the vicinity of Norman, Oklahoma, 20 miles south of Tinker AFB. The duration is 90 minutes. An Air Force weather observer, who wishes to remain anonymous, looks at a UFO through his 40x-telescope at Oklahoma City. It is tilted about 45° then straightens out. "It looked like Saturn with a flat top and flat bottom." (NICAP, "Four Lights Observed, Radar Contact on One"; "UFOs Leave Local Radar Tracks," *Wichita (Kan.) 1965, August 1 — Night. A TWA Boeing 707 airliner flying west of Topeka, Kansas, picks up 12–15 targets on Air Intercept Radar flying toward them at high speed on a 50-mile scope. They change to a 20-mile scope and observe the objects approaching in formation. The pilot, copilot, and engineer all witness this clearly. The aircraft passes the objects but cannot see them visually. Two films of the scopes are taken. (NICAP, "707 Picks Up 12–15 Targets")

1965, August 1 — Night. Two rookie police officers in Caldwell, Kansas, speed toward the airport to investigate local sightings when they see an egg-shaped machine about 300 feet long hovering above the ground. They try to get closer, but it disappears behind a hedgerow and shuts its lights off. They return the next day, but find no traces. ("Caldwell Officers Are 'Believers' Now," *Wichita (Kan.) 1965, August 2 or 3 —1:30 a.m. Mr. A. L. Smith, accompanied by his 14-year-old son Alan and three other witnesses, watch an unusual, multicolored UFO over Tulsa, Oklahoma. The UFO is slowly moving toward the witnesses. Still several hundred yards away, it pauses briefly and hovers. At that precise moment, Alan snaps a photograph with his inexpensive camera, using ASA 64 film. Alan decides not to try for a second shot. He takes his camera inside the house and runs back outside just in time to see the object rapidly flying away into the night sky. The photo is a probable fake of a color wheel for an aluminum Christmas tree. 1965, August 2 — Project Blue Book puts out an official USAF press release declaring the majority of the sightings on August 1 are "most likely" due to the planet Jupiter and the stars Rigel, Capella, Betelgeuse, and Aldebaran, "clearly visible in the eastern sky." But astronomer Robert Risser of the Kirkpatrick Planetarium in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, counters that Jupiter and the four stars are "on the opposite side of the earth" at the time of the sightings. 1965, August 2 — 2:30 a.m. Unidentified blips show up on the Weather Bureau radar screen at the Wichita Municipal Airport [now Wichita Dwight D. Eisenhower National Airport] in Kansas and continue intermittently until after 6:00 a.m. Most of the sightings are in the vicinity of Wellington, Kansas. The altitude ranges from 5,000–20,000 feet. Wichita meteorologist John Shockley tracks several UFOs on the Weather Bureau radar flying at altitudes of 6,000–9,000 feet. His assistant Ellis Pike notes that they look just like airliner blips. They brighten and dim on the screen, moving at 45 mph. At least four citizens see colored glows in the southern sky during the early morning hours. One says: "They were red and exploded in a shower of sparks and at other times fluttered like a leaf in the clear sky." 1965, August 2 — 3:00 a.m. KXWI-TV news photographer Robert Campbell hears on his radio a conversation between Oklahoma and Texas highway patrolmen that a UFO has been tracked on radar and is streaking towards the Texas border. Campbell takes his 4-by-5 Speed Graphic camera and drives into Sherman, Texas, where he locates Chief of Police Peter McCollum. Together they search for the object and soon see it hanging stationary one mile east of Bells on US Highway 82. The object has a "Mercury capsule" shape at one end, possibly rounded at the other end. Several distinct bands circle the cylinder, with disc-shaped embossments on the surface. He takes four camera exposures, two minutes each at three-minute intervals. The negatives are carefully examined by USAF scientific advisers and astronomical experts. No acceptable explanation can be found for the object recorded on the negatives. (NICAP, "The Sherman, Texas, Photo Case"; "Sherman 1965," Texas UFO Museum and Research Library, February 5, 2014; Patrick Gross, "The Sherman Case, Texas, USA, 1965")

1965, August 2 — The crew of the Russian steamship Raduga in the Red Sea watch a fiery sphere emerge from the water 2 miles away, causing an enormous pillar of water to rise and collapse. It hovers above the surface at an altitude of 490 feet. A motorboat with six Arab fishermen is in the area and also sees the object, which is apparently 200 feet in diameter. The object shoots straight up, and the boat is hit by a strong wave that overturns it. (Stonehill and Mantle, Russia's USO Secrets, Flying Disk, 2020, pp. 59–60; Dolan, USO1, 269–271)

1965, August 2 — As they patrol near Eagle Mountain Lake, two Tarrant County, Texas, deputy sheriffs see an object as bright as burning magnesium land. An extensive investigation by police finds no traces. (Sparks, p. 306)

1965, August 3 — 12:37 p.m. Los Angeles County Highway Accident Investigator Rex Heflin takes four clear Polaroid photos of a hat-shaped UFO on a lonely stretch of road near Santa Ana, California. The object is silent, and a beam of white light is rotating beneath it. He radios his supervisor, but the radio goes dead. One of Heflin's coworkers offers to send the photos to Life magazine; he does, but Life declines to use them. Soon, someone from NORAD shows up demanding the prints and Heflin turns them over. They are not seen again. The photos are most likely a prank hoax by Heflin using a hubcap, complicated by flawed photographic analyses and investigations. 1965, August 3 — Before 12:00 midnight. Three young men watch a triangular object with a light at each of its points move from north to south along the Jura Mountains from Biel/Bienne to Vignelz, Canton Bern, Switzerland. Suddenly it stops, changing color from yellow to dark red, makes a 180° turn, then takes off "like lightning" toward the east where it vanishes. ("Bright Pointed Triangle Again," Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1966): iv)

1965, August 4 — 1:30 a.m. Don Tenopir, 44, is driving a truck on State Highway 15 about 25 miles south of Abilene (near Elmo, Kansas), when all his lights go out. They come back on intermittently. A UFO passes just above his truck with a wind-like sound and hovers about 100 feet in front of him. Tenopir stops his rig, and the object slowly rises and takes off to the southwest. It seems to be 14–15 feet in diameter, 2 feet thick with a 4-foot hump in the middle, and orange-colored. It is shooting off rays in spurts. He stops in Abilene to report his sighting to Abilene Reflector-Chronicle reporter Ed Corwin. ("Beatrice Trucker Joins UFO Viewers," *Beatrice (Nebr.) 1965, August 4 — Night. Radar operators at Calumet Air Force Station [now operated by Keweenaw County] near Phoenix, Michigan, track 7–10 objects in V-formation traveling from southwest to north-northeast at about 9,000 mph over Lake Superior. The same night, radar targets at Duluth, Minnesota, are chased by USAF jets. (Sparks, p. 306; Center for UFO Studies, [case documents])

1965, August 8 — 11:30 p.m. A luminous UFO is allegedly photographed in Beaver, Pennsylvania, by James Lucci, 17. According to estimations by witnesses, the diameter of the UFO is around 42 feet. Lucci is photographing the full moon with his brother John, 23. According to them, a shining object appears from behind a hill. James manages to take two shots before the flying object leaves. His friends encourage him to send the photos to the Beaver County Times, where they are analyzed and declared authentic. However, both the Colorado project and UFO researchers determine the photo is a hoax created by holding a plate up next to the moon with a fist (probably John's) and blurring it with motion. 1965, August 9 — 6:00 p.m. A professional astronomer and his wife, along with three others, are driving eastward on Long Island, New York, when then see a silvery disc heading slowly south. Its base has a ring of bluish-white lights that make the object appear to rotate. It has a white light on top. After accelerating, the object becomes a white, starlike object far to the east. It moves up and down for another 5 minutes, then rapidly moves south and disappears over the Atlantic Ocean. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 75–76)

1965, August 10 — 8:00 p.m. Boeing aerospace engineer Francis C. Jennings and his wife are reclining in lawn chairs in their backyard on 9th Avenue West in Seattle, Washington, when they see two silvery discs hovering to the north. They remain motionless for several minutes, then the uppermost one departs rapidly upward and out of sight to the northeast. After another few minutes, the second object also speeds away in the same direction. At about 9:20 p.m., June Webb notices a reddish disk-shaped object near the horizon above the western part of Seattle. The object begins to rise, disappearing into a low cloud bank. It then reappears, moving rapidly in an arc to the north and disappears in another cloud bank. (UFOEv II 158–159)

1965, August 11? — 3:30 p.m. David Gibson is sitting in the front yard of his house in Waverly, Iowa, with his father and sister. They hear a high-pitched whine and see an object descending to the south. The silvery UFO is about 15–20 feet in diameter and looks like two saucers put together. It lands on a tree-lined hill out of view and the whining sound fades away. Gibson walks about a half-mile to take a look and briefly sees a "being," about 3–3.5 feet tall, watching him from behind a tree at the top of the hill. It quickly vanishes and he hears a rush of air. He reaches the spot but sees no footprints. About 40 feet south of the tree he finds a burned area about 15–20 feet in diameter and three rectangular impressions in the shape of a triangle. (Jerome Clark, "Iowa's Bashful Humanoid," Flying Saucer Review 21, no. 3/4 (November 1975): 52–53)

1965, August 12 — 11:15 a.m. Maj. Jack D. Bond is sitting in a passenger seat of a T-29 aircraft on a heading of 300° and descending from 4,000 feet to 3,000 feet near Springfield, Ohio. He sees a UFO ascending and descending that is slightly higher than the T-29. It appears to be 5–7 miles away and moving in a general direction of 90°. The object's speed is highly erratic during the 3 ascents and descents that the object makes. On its third descent the object appears to level off and accelerate at a speed of 690 mph or more. Project Blue Book evaluates this sighting as a solar mirage, even though the position and time of day rule that out. (NICAP, "Object Has 3 Ascents and 2 Descents"; Clark III 388–389; Clark 434)

1965, August 13 — 9:30 p.m.? Leonard Chalupiak has just put his car into his garage at Baden, Pennsylvania, when he sees a disc-shaped object about 300 feet in diameter flying in front of the moon toward the north at about 50 mph and 2,300 feet away. It is surrounded with orange lights that weaken as a blue light comes on, which is intense for about 3 seconds. Then all the lights disappear and a sort of "shock wave" that shakes the tree leaves commences. The witness goes into his house and calls the Air Force. About 20 minutes later his vision becomes hazy, his eyes grow painful, and he gradually loses vision in both eyes. He notices his entire body is sunburned. A medical examination indicates exposure to ultraviolet radiation. His vision returns gradually over several days. The Air Force labels it a hoax, perhaps confusing it with the Beaver, Pennsylvania, hoax photo of August 8. (NICAP, "Object Crosses Moon / Medical Effects on Witness"; Vallée, Magonia, p. 313)

1965, August 16 — 10:45 p.m.–12:20 a.m. A woman leaves her house on the northwest edge of Sedalia, Missouri, to drive to a drug store. As she is returning home, she sees an unusual figure in the ditch to her right. It turns and waves at her, then stumbles as it climbs out of the ditch. Something (a large bird?) flies up in the air a few feet from the car. She steps on the gas and goes home, where her husband asks her where she has been because it is now 12:25 a.m. In 1977, she undergoes hypnotic regression with hypnotist Ron Owen and recalls an abduction experience where she undergoes some type of examination. (Center for UFO Studies, HUMCAT Index 1965, pp. 46–47; Patrick Gross, URECAT, August 25, 2008; Clark III 278–279; Clark IV 318–319)

1965, August 18 — 9:50 p.m. Michael S. Henry and another college student are driving 3 miles south of Noblesville, Indiana, when a large red lighted object swoops down on their car. The radio and ignition go dead. The UFO looks like a top, with a large, gray cone and a flat or slightly domed top. (Herbert S. Taylor, "An Update on Vehicle Interference Reports, Part Two," IUR 34, no. 1 (Sept. 2011): 15)

1965, August 19 — 3:00 a.m. Thelma B. Schumaker and her mother, Mrs. W. H. Blackburn, are awakened by an explosion in their backyard in Mount Airy, North Carolina. The sound seems to rise and travel west. They see a bright golden cigar hovering in the north. The object moves to the right then to the left, then up and down, left again, then disappears behind some high oak trees. The next morning, the witnesses find a 6-inch-wide circle of depressed sod that is worn down to the soil. The circle is 12 feet in diameter. (Ted Phillips, Physical Traces Associated with UFO Sightings, CUFOS, 1975, p. 37)

1965, August 19 — 8:20–9:00 p.m. Harold Butcher, 16, is milking the cows in his father's barn in Cherry Creek, New York, and listening to radio station WKBW. Just outside, a 3-year old bull is tied by its nose to a metal pipe. Harold hears the bull make a noise "like I have never heard come from an animal before." Looking out the window, he sees the animal is bending the pipe. Simultaneously, he sees a metallic-looking, football-shaped UFO about 50 feet long and approximately 20 feet thick hovering just above the trees an estimated 450 feet from the barn. Slowly, the object descends behind a maple tree, emitting a red vapor from around its edges and a "beep-beep" sound. Meanwhile, the radio is emitting static, even though WKBW usually has a clear signal. Harold calls the house on an intercom, then runs outside. As he approaches the bull, the UFO rises and moves behind some clouds "as fast as a snap of my fingers" emitting red vapor toward the ground, then bounces back to the ship as it hovers about 10 feet in the air. The noise also increases to a level approximating a sonic boom as it goes up. As the UFO disappears, the clouds turn green. Inside, the boy's mother, Mrs. William Butcher, notes that there is "definite interference" in her radio reception. Harold's brother, Robert, also goes outside and the two boys see that the UFO has reappeared, this time hovering over a pine grove. It ascends again, emitting the red vapor and turning the clouds green. Others in the house include William Butcher Jr. and Kathleen Brougham, a friend. They do not see the object. It returns twice at 8:45 and 9:00 p.m., finally disappearing to the southwest. Trooper E. J. Haas and a fellow officer arrive on the scene shortly thereafter. As they all walk out to inspect the area of the initial sighting, they notice a pungent odor. Harold and the young daughter suffer from upset stomachs. Mrs. Butcher says the cows produce only one can of milk that evening, as opposed to their usual two and a half cans. Harold discovers a purple, oily-smelling liquid and gives a sample of it to the state police, who turn it over to Capt. James A. Dorsey and five others from Niagara Falls Air Force Base [now Niagara Falls Air Reserve Station], who come to investigate the report the following afternoon. When NICAP investigator Jeffrey Gow arrives on the scene, he notices the foot-tall grass in the area "seemed to be bent over in long curved sweeps." Radar targets are picked up between 8:00–8:30 p.m. by an AN/FPS-6 Long Range Height Finder Radar of the 763rd Radar Squadron at Lockport Air Force Station [now closed] near Shawnee, New York. The target is sighted near the upper limit of the radar. (NICAP, "Close Encounter Has Radar Evidence"; NICAP, "Cherry Creek (Butcher) Trace Case"; Sparks, p. 307; Center for UFO Studies, [case documents]; "Landing Probed by NICAP, AF," UFO Investigator 3, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1965): 7; "The Cherry Creek Incident," APRO Bulletin, Nov./Dec. 1965, p. 7; Schopick, pp. 178–184; Hynek UFO Report, pp. 170–172; Robert A. 1965, August 30 — Hynek writes to Lt. Col. John Spaulding in the Office of the Secretary of the Air Force to suggest that the Pentagon work with the National Academy of Sciences to establish a panel of physical and social scientists to study the UFO phenomenon. (Center for UFO Studies, [Hynek correspondence], p. 1; Swords 306; Clark III 924; Clark IV 1034)

1965, Late summer — After 10:00 p.m. An electronic technician on the guided missile cruiser USS Albany picks up three radar targets in the North Atlantic Ocean near the Azores during a high alert when Russian aircraft are in the vicinity. The objects are trailing the 6th Fleet at a distance of 40–50 miles. The commander dispatches three jets to intercept them; they report radar contact but fail to achieve visual contact as they cannot get any closer to the targets than 20 miles. The targets start moving away rapidly, maintaining a triangular formation, and disappear from the radar in seven sweeps. (National UFO Reporting Center, "NUFORC UFO Sighting 55295," February 24, 2007; Dolan, USO1, 271–273)

1965, September 3 — Around 1:00 a.m. Exeter, New Hampshire, Police Officer Eugene F. Bertrand Jr. comes across a woman parked on State Highway 101. "She was real upset," he says, "and told me that a red glowing object had chased her." Around 2:00 a.m., while walking home to Exeter on Route 150 (Amesbury Road) near Kensington, New Hampshire, teenager Norman J. Muscarello is terrorized by a large object with four or five bright red lights that approaches from nearby woods and hovers over a field. Horses are spooked. Muscarello gets a ride to the Exeter police station, pale and shaken, and reports the incident at 2:24 a.m. Officer Bertrand drives him back to the field along Route 150 to investigate. When he is called to investigate Muscarello's report, the earlier incident causes him to pay attention. At first Bertrand and Muscarello see nothing, but when Bertrand flashes a light around the field around 3:00 a.m., a huge dark object with red flashing lights rises up over the trees, moving back and forth, tilts, and comes toward them. They both see pulsating red lights that dim from left to right then right to left in a 5-4-3-2-1 then 1-2-3-4-5 pattern. Each cycle takes about 2 seconds. The object hovers for several minutes, and everything is silent except for the dogs and horses. Then it darts, turns sharply, slows down, and begins to move away. Another patrolman, David R. Hunt, pulls up and sees the pulsating lights and the UFO. Bertrand says the lights are always in a line and at a 60° angle; when the object moves, the lower lights are always forward of the others. In the daytime, the police station calls Pease AFB [now Pease Air National Guard Base] in Portsmouth to reconfirm the incident. By 1:00 p.m., 2–4 police officers arrive to interview the three witnesses at length. Journalist John G. Fuller investigates the case during the next month. He finds a huge gap between media coverage and local perceptions. Raymond Fowler finds that the local advertising plane operated by Sky-Lite Aerial Advertising Agency of Boston was not running between August 21 and September 10. 1965, September 3 — 11:00 p.m. Brazoria County Sheriff's Deputies Billy E. McCoy and Robert Goode are patrolling Highway 36 between West Columbia and Damon, Texas. They see a dark-gray triangular object, 150–200 feet long and 40–50 feet thick at the middle, with a long, bright, pulsing, purple light on the right side and a long blue light on the left side. It approaches swiftly to within 150 feet from the highway and 100 feet in the air. Purple light illuminates the ground beneath the object and the interior of the police car, and the object casts a shadow in the moonlight. Goode feels heat on his left arm; an alligator bite on his left index finger is suddenly relieved of pain, later healing rapidly but unnaturally. They drive away in fear but return later that night to find the object still there. 1965, September 6 — 9:30 p.m. Capt. Marcelo Cisternas is piloting a DC-6b at 8,500 feet for LAN Chile Flight 904 in northern Chile when he sees a zigzagging object change course and approach his airliner. The UFO follows the aircraft for 13–14 minutes at a distance of 1.8 miles. It is emitting a light of an intense color that shifts to radiant white. Cisternas checks with control towers in Arica and Iquque, but no other flights are expected in the area. 1965, September 10 — 8:30 a.m. Farmer Antônio Pau Ferro is working on his farm in São João, near Garanhuns, Pernambuco, Brazil, when he hears a noise and sees two metallic objects descending from the sky about 26 feet away. They touch the ground in a uniform motion, let two humanoids about 2.5 feet tall exit, then rise up again to 16 feet and hover. The beings approach Ferro, then move back to the two UFOs. They pick up a tomato and examine it. The objects descend and envelop them, then take off with a whining and then a low sound. (Patrick Gross, URECAT, May 17, 2008; Clark III 523; Brazil 76; Clark IV 571)

1965, September 14 — 1:00 a.m. Engineer Paul Green is riding a motorcycle south of Langenhoe, Essex, UK, near Langenhoe Hall Lane when he hears a high-pitched humming to the east and notices a pinpoint of blue light moving in his direction. The humming becomes a loud buzzing, and his engine sputters and dies and the headlight goes out. The light resolves into an enormous domed disc that tilts and slowly descends. The underside of the disc has numerous round items. Green walks toward the object, but he feels paralyzed as the flashing blue light becomes intense, fluctuating in rhythm with his heartbeat. He feels a tingling like an electric shock. The object seems to land in an area with farmhouses. Green notes that another cyclist has had a similar problem, but with some difficulty he gets his cycle started. The next day he notices that his hair and clothes are imbued with static electricity. (Bernard E. Finch, "The Langenhoe Incident," Flying Saucer Review 11, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1965): 3–4)

1965, September 16 — Just after 12:00 midnight. Constables John Lockem and Koos de Klerk are patrolling on the Pretoria-Bronkhorstspruit highway in South Africa when their police van headlights suddenly illuminate a domed, disc-shaped object sitting on the road. The UFO is copper colored and about 30 feet in diameter. Within seconds, the object lifts off the road, emitting tongues of flame from two tubes or channels on the underside. Flames from the macadam road surface shoot up in the air about 3 feet as the UFO departs, blazing long after it is out of sight. Later investigation shows that part of the road is caved in as if from a heavy weight, and the gravel is separated from the tar in a severely burned area about 6 feet in diameter. Lt. Col. J. B. Brits, district commandant of Pretoria North, tells the media that the incident is considered "as being of a highly secret nature and an inquiry is being conducted in top circles." Samples of the road surface are taken for analysis by a leading scientific agency; the report is never made public. 1965, September 17 — A UFO is seen hovering above Medina del Campo, Valladolid, Spain, for several hours. Heliodoro Carrión takes off in his light plane and goes to 15,000 feet. An Iberia Airlines jet passes him on the way up at 24,000 feet. Carrión estimates the UFO is at least 4 times larger than the jet. ("More Sightings over Spain," APRO Bulletin, Jan./Feb. 1966, p. 1)

1965, Late September — 9:15 p.m. Two French submarines, the Junon (S648) and the Daphné (S641), escorted by the logistic support vessel Rhône, are anchored off Fort-de-France, Martinique, when a large luminous object the color of a fluorescent tube arrives slowly and silently from the west. Michel Figuet on the Junon goes into the coming tower and gets six pairs of binoculars that he distributes to companions. There are 300 witnesses, including four officers on the Junon, three officers on the Daphné, a dozen French sailors, and personnel of the weather observatory. All witnesses aboard the Junon see the object as a large ball of light or a disc on edge arriving from the west. It moves slowly, horizontally, at a distance estimated at 6 miles south of the ships, from west to east. It leaves a whitish trace similar to the glow of a TV screen. When it was directly south of the ships the object drops toward the earth, makes two complete loops, then hovers in the midst of a faint halo. Figuet watches the object vanish in the center of its glow "like a bulb turned off." The trail and the halo remain visible in the sky for a full minute. At 9:45 p.m. the halo reappears at the same place, and the object switches on again. It rises, makes two more loops, and flies away to the west, where it disappears at 9:50 p.m. (Jacques Vallée, "Estimates of Power Optical Output in Six Cases of Unexplained Aerial Objects with Defined Luminosity Characteristics," Journal of Scientific Exploration 12, no. 3 (1998): 348–350)

1965, September 23 — Lambros D. Callimahos, a cryptologist with the National Security Agency, presents a paper on "Communication with Extraterrestrial Intelligence" at a conference on military electronics in Washington, D.C. (Nick Redfern, "UFOs, Aliens, and the Thoughts of the National Security Agency on Extraterrestrial Life," Mysterious Universe, August 23, 2022)

1965, September 23 — A major blackout in Cuernavaca, Morelos, Mexico, coincides with the appearance of a glowing, disc-shaped UFO hovering low over the city. Witnesses include the governor of Morelos state, Emilio Riva Palacio; Valentín López González, the mayor of Cuernavaca; 24th military zone chief Gen. Rafael Enrique Vega; Joaquín Díaz González, president of the Lion's Club; founder of the Folkloric Ballet of Mexico, Amalia Hernández; and future Mexican President Luis Echeverría. The power only fails as long as the UFO is there. (Frank Edwards, FS Serious Business, Bantam ed., 1966, p. 145; Schopick, pp. 192–196; Antonio Huneeus, "UFO Sighting by Mexican President Luis Echeverría," OpenMinds, October 6, 2011)

1965, September 27 — 5:15 p.m. A research chemist sees an aluminum-colored, cigar-shaped object pass across the northern sky in front of his car near Columbus, Ohio. The object silently moves from east to west, banking slightly once to the southwest. Continuing his drive home, he watches the object disappear behind the horizon after 30–40 seconds. Newspaper reports mention sightings of a cigar-shaped UFO that night in Westerville, Ohio. (UFOEv II 160)

1965, September 28 — USAF Director of Information Gen. Eugene B. LeBailly writes to the military director of the USAF Scientific Advisory Board, saying that Gen. Arthur C. Agan has found Project Blue Book to be a worthwhile program and that the Air Force should continue to investigate UFOs "to assure that such objects do not present a threat to our national security." The project will remain at the Foreign Technology Division (Wright-Patterson AFB). He also requests that a "working scientific panel composed of both physical and social scientists be organized to review Project Blue Book—its resources, methods, and findings." (Maj. Gen. E. B. LeBailly, "Unidentified Flying Objects (UFOs)," memorandum for military director, Scientific Advisory Board, September 28, 1965; Clark III 924; Clark IV 1034)

1965, Fall — 10:30 a.m. A Chesapeake & Ohio train is moving 8 miles south of Fostoria, Ohio, when the fireman and engineer see a large cigar-shaped object in the sky a considerable distance away. It is dark in color and positioned at a 45° angle from the horizon. It appears to be creating its own cloud screen. Suddenly a small object falls out of the tail and descends slowly in a fluttering fashion. Near the ground the small object stabilizes, emits coal-black smoke from its top, and then rises upward faster and faster. Three more objects leave the large one, each taking 10–12 minutes. They go off in different directions. After the last one leaves, a white cloud forms around the large object, which remains in the sky with other normal white clouds. (Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects and Cloud Cigars," IUR 29, no. 1 (Spring 2004): 3)

1965, October — The Tasmanian UFO Investigation Centre is formed in Hobart, Tasmania, by Robert Burge. It publishes the TUFOIC Newsletter for many years, but the organization folds in December 2015. (TUFOIC Newsletter, no. 7 (1971); Keith Basterfield, Vladimir Godic, and Pony Godic, "Australian Ufology: A Review," JUFOS 2 (1990): 25)

1965, October 1 — The Swedish Defense Staff transfers the responsibility for UFO investigation to the Swedish National Defence Research Institute [now the Swedish Defence Research Agency] in Sweden, where it remains. Few civilian reports are classified as secret, but sensitive reports by the military are restricted. (Swords 367–368)

1965, October 2 — John G. Fuller summarizes the Exeter sighting in his "Trade Winds" column in the Saturday Review. He writes to his editors beforehand that "reliable, but off-the-record information from the Pease AFB indicates frequent radar blips and fighters are constantly scrambled to pursue these objects. This information is not official, but it comes from a reliable source." (John G. Fuller, "Trade Winds," Saturday Review 48, no. 40 (October 2, 1965): 10, 16)

1965, October 7 — Up to 12 luminous UFOs are seen flying over Edwards Air Force Base near Lancaster, California, and at least one F-106A interceptor is scrambled from George AFB [now closed] at Victorville at 5:09 p.m. after 3–4 hours of observation. All of this action is captured on classified US Air Force audiotapes that have been

declassified and are available to the public along with official documentation. (NICAP, "UFO Alert at Edwards AFB"; "The Edwards AFB Incidents of Oct. 7, 1965 (Fran Ridge, NICAP)," NICAP Official YouTube channel, October 11, 2020)

1965, Mid-October — 9:30 a.m. Bill Hertzke, a ranch hand on the Circle J Ranch near Cochrane, Alberta, is on his horse in a pasture when he sees an object like a small airplane parked on the ground. It is silver-gray with swept-back wings, about 16 feet long, a wingspan of about 12 feet, and its fuselage is about 4-5 feet deep. He rides over and examines it. The exterior is irregular, "like a waffle." A transparent dome covers the cockpit. Through it he can see complicated instruments (knobs, dials, and switches), a TV screen, and two transparent (like Plexiglas) bucket seats. There are no visible motors, propellers, jets, insignia, or identifying marks of any kind. It has an exterior door about 2 feet wide and 3 feet high that is open about 2 inches. His horse is extremely skittish, so he ties it to a tree and returns on foot. He spends 10–15 minutes examining it and can see no landing gear (although it seems to be suspended 18–20 inches off the ground) or seams of any kind. He realizes he can go inside the door but is a bit too scared to even touch the object, and has to return to chores anyway. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 87–102)

1965, October 21 — 6:10 p.m. Five witnesses are in a car near Saint George, Minnesota, returning to their homes in Gibbon from a bow-hunting trip. Arthur A. Strauch, a Sibley County deputy sheriff, is the first to spot a strange object that seems to be 2,000 feet above the ground and a quarter of a mile distant in the northwest sky. After watching for about 10 minutes from the car, the group drives down the road about a half mile and stops. Strauch observes it both with the naked eye and through 7x35 binoculars. At first they hear no sound, but as the object flies over them, Donald Martin Grewe describes the sound as a "whistling whine." Strauch snaps a photograph just as the object begins to move. The object then flies into the wind for several hundred feet, then stops for a few seconds, at which time its lights change from bright white to dull orange, alternating several times. It then moves toward the southeast at a high rate of speed and disappears out of sight. (NICAP, "The St. George Multiple-Witness Photo Case"; "Deputy Snaps UAO Color Photo," APRO Bulletin, Nov./Dec. 1965, pp. 1, 3; Story, pp. 351–352; Patrick Gross, "The St. George Multiple-Witnesses Sighting and Photograph, USA, 1965")

1965, October 22 — Afternoon. Geof Gray-Cobb, a Canadian technician working with the Deep Space Instrumentation Facility [now the Hartebeesthoek Radio Astronomy Observatory] in Gauteng, South Africa, in tracking Mariner 4, is present when the spacecraft's signal strength begins rising at a point when it should not have. The team alerts the Jet Propulsion Lab. The signal strength is now so high that the instruments are clicking as they max out. Gray-Cobb says the "raw radio energy" is coming in indecipherable "blips and dashes." Nothing can be seen visually. Eight minutes later, everything goes silent. JPL later asks them to point their dish in the direction it was pointing when they picked up the signal. They do, but forget to correct for the earth's rotation. Nonetheless, they get the signal again, which means it is a local source. Nothing is visible in the sky, but a sound sweep reveals that the source is a perfect circle 2° in diameter. The team directs a packet of radio pulses at the source, but it falls silent. Two months later, Gray-Cobb discovers that the pages for the event are gone from the log; the tape recording of the event is also missing. The manager tells him that two men with "authorization" had come three days after the event to confiscate the tapes. (Michael D. Swords, "Gazing at the Moons," IUR 32, no. 4 (October 2009): 16)

1965, October 22 — Evening. José Camilo Filho is walking through a field near the city cemetery in Canhotinho, Pernambuco, Brazil, when he runs across two little men only 3 feet high with whitish hair sitting next to a tube 4 feet tall and resting on the ground. When they see Camilo, they jump up in a disorganized fashion, colliding with each other. One picks up the tube and the other points a straw at Camilo, who runs ahead. He decides to return and take a closer look, but the men and tube are gone. 1965, October 23 — Night. KEYL-AM radio announcer James F. Townsend, 19, is driving on State Highway 27 four miles east of Long Prairie, Minnesota, when he slams on his brakes to avoid hitting a rocket-like device resting on three legs or fins. As his car skids to a stop 20 feet from the object, the vehicle's motor and electrical system die. The object looks like it is made of stainless steel, stands 30–40 feet high, and is 10 feet in diameter. In a circle of light under it, Townsend sees three things that resemble beer cans with "tripod legs and three matchstick arms." They have no eyes, but Townsend feels as if they are looking at him. He gets out of the car to try to knock one over, but they come over to him and they stand there looking at him. Eventually they turn around and "scoot under the ship," disappearing into the light beneath it. An ear-splitting humming sound emanates from the UFO, which assumes a bright illumination and shoots off. The Todd County sheriff and UFO investigators assume that Townsend, a deeply religious man, is sincere. 1965, October 25 — The Betty and Barney Hill story is publicly revealed in an article by reporter John H. Luttrell in the Boston Traveler newspaper. He has obtained a copy of the tape recording at the Quincy Center UFO group, as well as a tape of an interview the Hills gave to UFO investigators after they completed their therapy. UPI picks up the story the same day. The Hills are caught completely by surprise. (Clark III 585; Clark IV 643)

1965, October 27 — The Air Force issues a press release that gives two basic explanations for the Exeter, New Hampshire, sightings: Some stem from a high-altitude SAC exercise out of Westover AFB [now Westover Air Reserve Base] near Chicopee, Massachusetts; others are explained by temperature inversion that causes the appearance of stars and planets to dance and twinkle. Around the same time, John Fuller hears from an Air Force pilot that pilots have been ordered to shoot down UFOs when possible, but the objects appear to be "invulnerable" and can outmaneuver any aircraft. (John G. Fuller, Incident at Exeter, Putnam's Sons, 1966, pp. 201–202, 205–206)

1965, Early November — The USAF Scientific Advisory Board meets in Houston, Texas, to discuss the UFO investigation and the possibility of an independent study. (USAF Scientific Advisory Board, Special Report of the USAF Scientific Advisory Board Ad Hoc Committee to Review Project "Blue Book," Brian O'Brien, chairman of the Advisory Board, March 1966)

1965, November 5? — Day. Mauritz Lögren and a friend see a triangular-shaped object moving back and forth for 20 minutes over Luleå, Sweden. It disappears silently to the west at great speed. ("World Round-Up," Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1966): iii)

1965, November 9 — 5:16 p.m. The Northeast power blackout, a significant disruption in the supply of electricity, affects parts of Ontario, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, and Vermont. Over 30 million people and 80,000 square miles are left without electricity for up to 13 hours. The cause of the failure is the setting of a protective relay on one of the transmission lines from the Sir Adam Beck Hydroelectric Power Station No. 2 in Queenston, Ontario, near Niagara Falls. Prior to and coincident with the blackout, there are a number of reports of unusual lights in Syracuse and Niagara Falls, New York, and Holliston, Massachusetts, and there is speculation that the blackout is related to UFO activity in some way. But there is no evidence of a direct connection. (Wikipedia, "Northeast blackout of 1965"; "New Clues to UFO Electrical Interference," UFO Investigator 3, no. 5 (Nov./Dec. 1965): 3–4; "The Question of the Power Blackouts," APRO Bulletin, Nov./Dec. 1965, pp. 4–6; John G. 1965, November 10 — Before dawn. Actor Stuart Whitman is staying in a hotel in Manhattan, New York City, during the Northeast power blackout. He hears a "sound, like a whippoorwill whistling outside my twelfth-story window." He steps to the window and sees 2 luminous UFOs hovering nearby, one orange, the other blue. He hears voices from the UFOs in his head, telling him they are fearful of earth because humans are messing around with "unknown quantities" that might disrupt the balance of the universe. They claim the blackout is a small demonstration of their power and ask Whitman to do what he can to fight malice, prejudice, and hate on earth. The objects disappear. 1965, November 13 — 11:30 a.m. Fishermen R. D. Hanning and W. J. Johnson are on the fishing boat Eleoneai about half a mile off the Rugged Islands at the south end of South Island, New Zealand. About 900 feet away, a craft with a "tapered structure" rises from the water to about 15 feet above the surface. A second object, box-shaped, appears about 30 feet away from the first. The men have them in sight for 10–11 seconds, then the water beneath the objects starts surging like a tide boil and they disappear. (H. J. Hinfelaar, "Submarine Craft in Australasian Waters," Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1966): 28–30; Dolan, USO1, 273–274)

1965, November 26 — 8:00–9:00 p.m. Numerous power outages around St. Paul, Minnesota, are accompanied by observations of white or blue lights in the sky. ("Power Outages Accompanied by Flashes," APRO Bulletin, Jan./Feb. 1966, pp. 3–4; Schopick, pp. 199–201)

1965, November 30 — 3:30 a.m. Seaman Ian Kinsey is on watch at Canadian Forces Base Cornwallis [now Cornwallis Park] in Nova Scotia. As he is passing a window, he sees a lighted yellow oval object resting on the beach. Five minutes later a sliding door on the object's side opens, emitting a white light. Then a smaller, cigarette-shaped

UFO enters the larger object through the door. The bigger object rises, pushing rocks and logs away from the center of the beach. It cruises slowly over a mountain and disappears. (Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, pp. 59–61)

1965, December 5 — During the Gemini 7 mission, the astronauts mention a "bogey." James Oberg, based on his trajectory analysis of the mission, describes the comments as referring to booster-associated debris and not a reference to a UFO. Astronaut Frank Borman later confirms that what he saw was not a UFO. When he offers to go on the television show Unsolved Mysteries to clarify, the producers tell him, "Well, I'm not sure we want you on the program." (Wikipedia, "UFO sightings in outer space"; Condon, pp. 207–208; Good Above, p. 378)

1965, December 9 — 4:47 p.m. A large, brilliant fireball is seen by thousands in at least six states and Ontario, Canada. It streaks over the Detroit, Michigan–Windsor, Ontario, area, reportedly drops hot metal debris over Michigan and northern Ohio starting some grass fires, and causes sonic booms in the Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, metropolitan area. It is generally assumed and reported by the press to be a meteor after authorities discount other proposed explanations such as a plane crash, errant missile test, or reentering satellite debris. However, eyewitnesses in the small village of Kecksburg, Pennsylvania, claim something has crashed in the woods. A boy sees the object land; his mother Frances Kalp sees a wisp of blue smoke rising from the woods and alerts local radio station WHJB. Another observer reports feeling a vibration and "a thump" about the time the object reportedly lands. Others from Kecksburg, including local volunteer fire department members (Carl Metz and Paul Shipco), report seeing an object in the shape of an acorn and about as large as a Volkswagen Beetle. Writing resembling Egyptian hieroglyphs is also said to be in a band around the base of the object. A reporter and news director for WHJB, John J. Murphy, arrives on the scene of the event before authorities have arrived, in response to several calls to the station from alarmed citizens. He takes several photographs and conducts interviews with witnesses. His former wife Bonnie Millslagle later reports that all but one roll of the film is confiscated by military personnel. WHJB office manager Mabel Mazza describes one of the pictures: "It was very dark and it was with a lot of trees around and everything. And I don't know how far away from the site he was. But I did see a picture of a sort of a cone-like thing. It's the only time I ever saw it." Witnesses further report that an intense military presence, most notably the US Army, secures the area, orders civilians out, seals the area within 2 hours of the event, and then removes an object on a flatbed truck. The military claims they have searched the woods and can find "absolutely nothing." The official explanation of the widely seen fireball is that it is a mid-sized meteor, as suggested, for example, by University of Michigan astronomer William P. Bidelman. However, speculation as to the identity of the Kecksburg object (if there was one—reports vary) include an alien craft; debris from Kosmos 96 (James Oberg), a Soviet space probe intended for Venus that fails and never leaves the Earth's atmosphere (now seen as unlikely); a General Electric Mark 2 Reentry Vehicle launched from Johnson Atoll in the Pacific Ocean on December 7 by the Air Force as a spy satellite (John Ventre and Owen Eichler); and a secret Corona spy satellite, KH-4A 1027, launched from Vandenberg AFB [now Vandenberg Space Force Base] on December 9 (Bob Wenzel Gross). 1965, December 13 — An amateur astronomer in Fort Worth, Texas, watches a UFO through several different telescopes. It has a recessed ring with small dark objects attached around its edge and a dark cross on its bottom. It moves from directly beneath the Moon and past Arcturus, then suddenly disappears. (Michael D. Swords, "Gazing at the Moons," IUR 32, no. 4 (October 2009): 14)

1965, December 15 — 8:45 p.m. C. M. W. Martyn of Worcester Park, southwest London, England, watches a "candle-wax white" triangular object, about 130 feet wide and completely silent, pass over his home toward the northwest at about 1,200 mph. ("Surrey Deltavolant?" Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 2 (March/April 1966): 35)

1965, December 20 — 11:45 p.m. Edward A. Bruns is driving his father's 1962 Ford pickup truck, heading west just south of Herman, Minnesota. He sees a bright, oval-shaped object hovering several feet above the road. It covers the entire road and is shaped like two saucers with a dome on top. A window-like structure surrounds the dome and emits a green light. Suddenly the truck engine stops, the headlights go out, and the vehicle lifts up, spins violently to the right, ending up in a ditch on the other side of the road. Stunned, Bruns stares at the UFO, which makes a whistling sound, emits sparks, shoots upward, and disappears. He runs home, scared and nervous. His father goes to the site of the crash but cannot get the truck out. A reporter later confirms seeing the truck in the ditch with a complete "absence of skid marks in the snow to account for how it got there." ("15-Year-Old Says Flying Saucer Sent Truck into Ditch," Wheaton (Minn.) Gazette, December 23, 1965; Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, p. 50)

1965, December 26 — 3:15 p.m. Jacqueline Wingfield and Lisbet Mortensen are driving near Cappoquin, County Waterford, Ireland, when they see a curved, elongated disc flying low and silently in front of them, followed by a plume of material. Wingfield stops the car and Mortensen takes one photo as the object moves away. The photo shows that the plume has a darker edge with a coarser grain than the rest of the image. (Charles Gibb-Smith, "The Cappoquin Sighting," Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 2 (March/April 1966): 4–6)

1966 — Jacques and Janine Vallée publish Challenge to Science: The UFO Enigma, a general survey of the present state of the UFO problem. The first section gives an analysis of UFO patterns by examining UFO features, the second part deals with sighting frequencies, and the third part analyzes cases according to type. (Jacques and Janine Vallée, Challenge to Science: The UFO Enigma, Regnery, 1966; Clark III 1213; Clark IV 1389)

1966 — Cornell University astronomer Carl Sagan coauthors a book with Russian astrophysicist Iosif Shklovsky on Intelligent Life in the Universe, an expansion of Shklovsky's 1962 book, Вселенная, жизнь, разум [Universe, Life, Intelligence] in which he speculates that Earth might have been visited by aliens many times in the past few billion years, at least once in "historical times." Discussing the biological as well as astronomical issues of the subject, its unique format—alternating paragraphs written by Shklovsky and Sagan—allows them to express their views without compromise. (I. S. Shklovskii and Carl Sagan, Intelligent Life in the Universe, Holden-Day, 1966; Michael D. Swords, "SETI/ETI and UFOs," JUFOS 5 (1994): 142–145; Graff 177–179; Eghigian, After, p. 187)

1966 — Roger A. MacGowan and Frederick I. Ordway III publish Intelligence in the Universe, discussing cosmology, biological origins and evolution, SETI within and outside the solar system, and speculations on intelligence. (Roger A. MacGowan and Frederick I. Ordway, Intelligence in the Universe, Prentice-Hall, 1966; Michael D. Swords, "SETI/ETI and UFOs," JUFOS 5 (1994): 145–146)

1966 — Francis Schaefer founds the Cercle Français de Recherches Ufologiques in Forbach, Moselle, France. From 1975 to 1984 it publishes Ufologia. (Ufologia, no. 1 (Nov./Dec. 1975))

1966 — Vladimir Rubtsov writes the first article published in the Soviet Union that takes UFOs seriously and encourages readers to submit their observations. (Vladimir Rubtsov, ["Guests from Space or Atmospheric Phenomena?"], Znannia ta Pratsia, 1966, no. 9; Mikhail Gershtein, "A Short History of UFO Research in the Former Soviet Union," UAP Check, July 6, 2024)

1966 — During a Soviet naval exercise in the Black Sea, a group of unknown spherical and cigar-shaped objects appear at a high altitude above the ships. A command to fire on the objects is carried out, but none of the objects are hit. One missile allegedly turns back toward the ship that launched it and strikes the vessel. (Vladimir G. Azhazha and Evgeny P. Litvinov, Подводные НЛО: Загадочные места мира [Underwater UFOs], 2015; Dolan, USO1, 286–288)

1966, January 7 — 4:10 a.m. Police Constable Colin Perks is checking business property along Alderley Road in Wilmslow, Cheshire, England, when he hears a high-pitched whine. He sees a greenish-gray glow in the sky about 300 feet away and 35 feet in the air. It comes from a glowing elliptical object about 30 feet long and 20 feet wide that remains stationary for 5 seconds before moving away quickly to the east-southeast. (R, H. B. Winder, "Wilmslow P.C.'s Report," Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 2 (March/April 1966): 3; J. Cleary-Baker, "Police Constable Observes a UFO," BUFORA Journal and Bulletin 1, no. 9 (Summer 1966): 5; UFOFiles2, pp. 73–75; Jenny Randles, "Perks of the Job," Fortean Times 344 (October 2016): 29)

1966, January 7 — 3:27 p.m. High school student Gary Finch is driving on the Wilmer-Georgetown Road about 3 miles southwest of Georgetown, Alabama. He sees a large silver ball about 15–20 feet in diameter that descends then hovers about 5 feet above the road. On top of it is a cone with a large green light, and it is making a whining sound. As he approaches it, his car engine cuts out and his watch stops. After 1–2 minutes, it disappears in a gradual climb. (NICAP, "E-M Effects on Car and Watch"; "Mobile Reports Flying Objects," Selma (Ala.) Times-Journal, January 13, 1966, p. 10; Schopick, pp. 75–76; Hynek UFO Report, p. 42)

1966, January 8 — Night. A luminous, disc-shaped object cruises low from north to southwest among the buildings of Valencia, Venezuela. At 10:00 p.m., two similar objects are seen flying at a higher altitude. ("More S.A. Sightings," APRO Bulletin, March/Apr. 1966, p. 8)

1966, January 11 —7:40 p.m. A nurse and others together in a car near Myerstown, Pennsylvania, see a luminous disc, like one saucer inverted on top of another, at relatively close range as it hovers above their car. After about 5 minutes, the object suddenly accelerates and speeds away. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 102–103)

1966, January 11 — 10:00 p.m. The third mate, helmsman, and bow lookout of the SS Morgantown Victory see a cigar-shaped object approach the ship when it is north of the Japanese coral atoll Marcus Island [now Minamitorishima] in the North Pacific Ocean. The object approaches the starboard beam of the ship from the horizon and then turns almost 180° to avoid going over the ship. It approaches the ship within 1 mile at an elevation of 400 feet and hovers for 30 seconds, then crosses in front of the ship and makes another directional change. The object is glowing with an orange-yellow color and a long, fiery tail. The body appears to have two lights on top. Its length is estimated at 200–250 feet and its height at about 35–40 feet. It is visible for 3 minutes. The master of the ship thinks that a plane has crashed in the ocean and he orders the ship to turn to conduct a search. Two turns are made and nothing is found in the searches. Project Blue Book concludes that the event was a decay of the Kosmos 53 satellite, although its actual decay date has been established as August 12, 1966. (NICAP, "Cigar-Shaped UFO Approaches Morgantown Victory"; "Three in Crew of GAA Ship Tell of Sighting of 'UFO,'" Sealift Magazine, June 1966, pp. 3, 21; Antonio F. Rullán, "Blue Book UFO Reports at Sea by Ships," The Author, December 10, 2002, p. 45; Dolan, USO1, 276–277)

1966, January 11 — 6:20 p.m. Many reports of lights in the sky are called into various police headquarters in northern New Jersey, especially in the Wanaque area. Sightings continue throughout the night. At 11:30 p.m., photographer August C. Roberts takes a dubious five-minute exposure of a light as it vanishes straight up above Raymond Dam in Wanaque. (Edward J. Babcock and Timothy Green Beckley, "UFO Plagues N.J. Reservoir," Fate 19, no. 10 (October 1966): 34–44; "What Happened at Wanaque, N.J." in Lloyd Mallan, ed., The Official Guide to UFOs, Science and Mechanics special issue, 1967; Vicente-Juan Ballester Olmos, "The Wanaque Reservoir 1966 UFO Pictures," Academia.edu, [2018]; Dolan, USO1 274–276)

1966, January 12 — Pilots Alvin S. White and Carl Cross reach a speed of 2,020 mph in a North American XB-70 Valkyrie at Edwards AFB, California. (Wikipedia, "North American XB-70 Valkyrie")

1966, January 12 — Carl Sagan sends a letter to Maj. Harold A. Steiner, assistant secretary of the USAF Scientific Advisory Board, to request certain UFO information be available for inspection and discussion at the February 3 meeting of the Ad Hoc Committee to review Project Blue Book. He requests documents on the Trindade Island photos, the Kelly-Hopkinsville encounter, the February 1949 Project Sign report, and the 1953 Robertson panel. His request is cleared with Brian O'Brien. (Letter, Carl Sagan to Harold A. Steiner, January 12, 1966)

1966, January 14 — 5:55 p.m. After his 11-year-old son runs into the house in Weston, Massachusetts, and says a flying saucer is outside, an associate laboratory director at Massachusetts Institute of Technology goes outside with the rest of the family and sees an erratically moving bright light. They observe it through binoculars for 5–10 minutes. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 43, 52–53)

1966, January 17 — A B-52G Strategic Air Command bomber collides with a KC-135 tanker during mid-air refueling at 31,000 feet over the Mediterranean Sea off the coast of Spain. The tanker is completely destroyed and the B-52G breaks apart, killing 3 of its 7 crew members. Of the four Mk28-type hydrogen bombs the B-52G carries, three are found on land near the small fishing village of Palomares, Spain. The non-nuclear explosives in two of the weapons detonate upon impact with the ground, resulting in the contamination of a 0.77-square-mile area by plutonium. The fourth, which falls into the Mediterranean, is recovered intact after a 2 ½-month-long search. Some 800 individuals with no hands-on expertise improvise search and decontamination procedures. More than 1,400 tons of radioactive soil and plant life are excavated and shipped to the Savannah River plant in South Carolina for burial. (Wikipedia, "1966 Palomares B-52 crash"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 297–300)

1966, January 18 — 4:55 p.m. Two surveyors are taking readings at China Lake Naval Ordnance Test Station [now Naval Air Weapons Station China Lake] in the western Mojave Desert, California. The surveyor using a theodolite hears a hum, looks up, and sees a UFO flying nearly straight at him from an angle of 35°–40° and from almost exact north. It passes directly overhead at less than 150 feet, then dives smoothly, turns to the east, then comes to within 10 feet of the sloping ground. The surveyor observes the object through the theodolite until it is lost in front of a lava flow about 2 miles away. Both observers (the other one is in a truck) say it is moving at 150 mph and it is a dull black color and very quiet. They attempt to report the sighting, but the radio is garbled. Their truck has difficulty starting, and the theodolite exhibits an odd change in the gravity reference indicator, requiring it to be re-leveled. ("A Professional Observation," IUR 7, no. 2 (March 1982): 7–8)

1966, January 19 — Around 9:00 a.m. A banana grower, George Pedley, is driving a tractor about one half mile from a farmhouse at Tully, Queensland, Australia, owned by Albert Pennisi. Pedley's attention is drawn by a hissing sound, clearly heard over the noise from the tractor's engine. He looks about for the source of the noise and sees an unusual object about 75 feet away. It is some 30 feet in the air, rising vertically, and is shaped like "two saucers face to face." It is light gray in color, dull, and non-reflective. He estimates its size as 25 feet long by 8–9 feet deep. The hissing diminishes as the object rises to a height of 60 feet, then departs, climbing at about an angle of 45°, extremely fast, to the southwest. The duration of his observation is only 5–6 seconds. The object appears to be always rotating. After its departure, Pedley finds a clearly defined, nearly circular depression in swamp grass, in a water-filled lagoon, at the point where he first saw it. The marking is about 32 feet long by 25 feet wide. The grass on the surface of the water is flattened in a clockwise direction. Royal Australian Air Force intelligence officers find a variety of circles in the area, ranging from 8 to 30 feet in diameter. Within each circle the plant roots are pulled completely out of the soil, as if the ground has been subjected to an intense rotary force. 1966, January 19 — 7:55 p.m. Two luminous objects pass over Acarigua, Venezuela, one from the north, the other from the east. When the paths of the two objects cross, the lights go out in the entire city. ("More S.A. Sightings," APRO Bulletin, March/Apr. 1966, p. 8)

1966, February — 10:00 p.m. The aircraft carrier USS Yorktown is in the North Pacific en route from Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, to Japan with four destroyer escorts. Patrick Dingle and another forward lookout sees a light in the sky approaching from the port side. They report it to the Combat Information Center, which responds that they have no radar target. The light stops and silently hovers nearly overhead for several minutes. The light then grows brighter until it illuminates the entire task group. The light dims and moves to starboard before shooting away and disappearing within seconds. (Carl Feindt, "Report # 1086," waterufo.net; Patrick Dingle, "USS Yorktown CV-10: An Event at Sea," April 30, 2023; Dolan, USO1, 277–279)

1966, February 3 — A six-member Ad Hoc Committee to Review Project Blue Book, headed by University of Rochester optical physicist Brian O'Brien, meets at Wright-Patterson AFB in Dayton, Ohio. All but one (astronomer Carl Sagan) are members of the Air Force Scientific Advisory Board (psychologist Launor F. Carter, industrial psychologist Jesse Orlansky, rocket scientist Richard W. Porter, computer engineer Willis Ware), and none have any sympathy with the idea that UFO reports represent anything extraordinary. Also attending is Lt. Col. Harold A. Steiner, assistant secretary to the Scientific Advisory Board. They receive a briefing from Quintanilla, review the Robertson Panel report, and examine a few UFO cases. The group recommends that Blue Book "be strengthened to provide opportunity for scientific investigation of selected sightings in more detail and depth than has been possible to date." Furthermore, USAF should negotiate contracts "with a few selected universities to provide scientific teams to investigate promptly and in depth certain selected sightings of UFOs…. The universities should be chosen to provide good geographical distribution." They also conclude that "perhaps 100 sightings a year might be subjected to this close study, and that possibly an average of 10 man-days might be required per sighting so studied. The information provided by such a program might bring to light new facts of scientific value." The group recommends that Blue Book data be given "wide unsolicited circulation among prominent members of the Congress and other public persons." The Air Force ignores their recommendations. 1966, February 6 — 6:05 a.m. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. Gulley see a tadpole-shaped object about 14 feet long and 2 feet wide with eight yellow-and-red, neon-like lights at 250–500 feet altitude in Nederland, Texas. It casts a pulsating red glow on the lawn. Her house and street lights go out as high-frequency sound assaults the witnesses' ears. The object blinks out when aircraft pass overhead, then comes on again afterward. It departed to the west about 1.5 miles to the vicinity of the airport, where an aircraft's landing lights light up the UFO. Then it disappears in a slow climb. (NICAP, "House Lights Go Out When 'Tadpole' Flies Over"; Sparks. p. 309; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 103–104)

1966, February 6 — Around 8:00 p.m. Several persons in the barrio of Aluche, Madrid, Spain, allegedly see an unusual flying object. Looking out a window, Maria Ruiz Torres watches an object descending. She sees a "gigantic eye" looking at her through a porthole. Another witness, Juan Jiminez Dias, thinks he sees a door open in the craft. Other observers include soldiers at a nearby ammunition dump. Motorist José Luis Jordán Peña gets a close, extended view of the object, which he characterizes as "enormous." Jordán Peña sends Spanish ufologist Antonio Ribera a sketch of the UFO, which has three legs and a curious symbol on its underside—something like two reverse parentheses with a vertical bar positioned between them. No other witness mentions anything like this. In 1992, Jordán Peña confesses to hoaxing his sighting, including the landing marks and physical traces, in order to prove his theory that paranoia is much more widespread in Spain that psychiatrists are willing to admit. 1966, February 25 — 10:15 p.m. Three young women—Ofelia Versoa, Maria Marlúce da Silva, and Maria Marlucy da Silva—are returning home from a friend's house along a railroad track in Quipapá, Pernambuco, Brazil. They notice some lights in the road about 300 feet ahead, but as they approach to within 150 feet, they see a bowl-shaped object with two large headlights. Next to the object are three small humanoids wearing large headgear. A large figure, more than 6 feet tall, with a glowing head is standing motionless near them. Two of the girls panic and run for cover, but Marlúce moves closer and remains there for 4 minutes until a jeep approaches from the opposite direction. This allows all three of them to slip past the object. They return a few minutes later with the da Silva girls' mother, and they all see the object flying low above the ground. Marlúce has heightened anxiety and a slight headache the next day. 1966, February 27 — A nationally broadcast public affairs interview program, The Open Mind, presents a panel discussion titled "Are Flying Saucers Only Science Fiction?" Princeton University history professor Eric F. Goldman is moderator. Panelists include astronomer Donald H. Menzel, plant physiologist Frank B. Salisbury, journalist John G. Fuller, psychologist R. Leo Sprinkle, and astronomer J. Allen Hynek. Menzel calls the Exeter police officers "hysterical subjects," although he cannot remember their names and is unfamiliar with the case. 1966, March — Kathleen Reeves and a friend are walking on a rural road near their homes in Toledo, Oregon, when they think they see a neighbor's field on fire. The fire seems oddly dome-shaped. They continue walking and see another smaller, duller light. Kathleen thinks it might be a prank, so she throws a rock at it. Suddenly, a group of much larger lights come on all around the small one. Frightened, the girls run home. Over the next few months, through October, the Reeves home experiences such poltergeist phenomena as whirring or sawing noises, rose-colored lights inside, small rings of light that crawl over the bedroom walls, and light beams. (Michael D. Swords, "A Trick of the Light," IUR 31, no. 2 (June 2007): 8)

1966, March — Day. Lookouts on a US Navy ship in the Gulf of Tonkin to the west of Taiwan, China, report a shiny silver ball, about 3–4 feet in diameter, floating just below the surface about 600 feet in front of the ship. A helicopter is called in and hovers above the object; the pilot describes it as a metallic sphere with no seams, markings, or rivets. The helicopter gunner fires at it, but the bullets bounce off of it. The object suddenly takes off. The ship's sonar stations search for it for 72 hours but find nothing. (Carl Feindt, "Report #338," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 280–281)

1966, March 1 — Alfred Quemby observes an oval domed disk circling above the Kelowna area, British Columbia. When he gets out of his car, it disappears at high speed. After dark, two teenagers parked at Black Mountain on the eastern edge of Kelowna see a saucer that emits a sound like a truck. The sound reduces to a hum, then the object releases a small diamond-shaped object that circles the saucer before re-entering it. Another witness, Clifford Cole, watches an object hovering above Okanagan Lake; a smaller craft pops up to the surface of the lake, hovers, then moves up and enters the larger object, which flies away. ("Oh, Oh, Saucers Loose Again!" Vancouver (B.C.) Province, March 2, 1966, p. 10; "'Saucers' over the Okanagan," Vancouver (B.C.) Sun, March 2, 1966, p. 3; Dolan, USO1, 279–280)

1966, March 5 — The D-21 is first launched from an M-21 off the coast of California. The drone is released but stays close to the M-21's back for a few seconds, which seems like "two hours" to the M-21 crew. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed D-21")

1966, March 6 — 2:00 a.m. Ivan de Almeida and other medical staff at the Lourenço Jorge Municipal Hospital in Barra da Tijuca, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, watch an oval object with a bright red-orange light that shines on the ocean waters below. After 2 hours it climbs up slowly, dims, and disappears. (Olavo T. Fontes, "Report from Brazil: The First UAO Sightings in 1966," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1966, p. 5)

1966, March 6 — 11:00 a.m. A woman is driving in Missouri with her St. Bernard dog sleeping in the back seat. Suddenly the dog begins barking and jumps into the front seat, then whimpers and tries to hide under the seat. She sees a bright, blue-white beam of light that extends about one foot over each side of the road ahead. The road beyond seems distorted, as if by heat waves. The car enters the beam and it slows from 50 mph to about 10 mph. She looks up through the windshield and sees a metallic, domed, disc-shaped object hovering about 1,000 feet up, from which the light is coming. She pushes the accelerator to the floor, but the car does not respond. After passing through the beam, the car runs smoothly again, and she drives away, not looking back. Her eyes bother her for three days afterward. (Carl Sagan and Thornton Page, eds., UFO's: A Scientific Debate, Cornell University, 1972, p. xxviii)

1966, March 12 — 10:40 a.m. A security guard at the Fábrica Nacional de Motores in Duque de Caxias, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, alerts 10 employees to a mysterious light that is approaching the factory. It descends to 1,500–1,800 feet and hovers above the plant. The object is approximately 18 feet in diameter and emits a brilliant white light that makes it difficult to look at directly. It periodically flashes even brighter. Plant director Col. Jorge Alberto Silveira Martins calls the Army and Air Force. After 30 minutes, the object dims and moves away at tremendous speed before the Army trucks arrive. (Olavo T. Fontes, "Report from Brazil: The First UAO Sightings in 1966," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1966, p. 5)

1966, March 14 — 3:30 –5:30 a.m. Washtenaw County sheriff's deputies Buford Bushroe and John Foster see highly maneuverable disc-shaped UFOs with flashing red and green lights over Dexter, Michigan. They call in a report that sets off a two-and-a-half hour chase that stretches over three counties and out over Lake Erie. Police from five jurisdictions are involved. Selfridge AFB [now Selfridge Air National Guard Base], near Mount Clemens, reports tracking UFOs on radar over Lake Erie. (Ann Arbor (Mich.) News, March 14, 1966; UFOEv II 184–185; O'Connell 177; "50th Anniversary of the Michigan UFO Chase," UFOlogist Magazine 19, no. 6 (Mar./Apr. 2016): 2–3; Patrick Gross, "Michigan 1966: Sheriffs Watch High-Performance Discs, Also Tracked on Radar")

1966, March 16 — 5:45 p.m. Many people see a white, oval object crash into the Atlantic Ocean close to the Ilha Cagarras off Ipanema, Brazil. Some see a few smaller white parachute-shaped objects fall from it. A thorough search turns up nothing in the sea or the island itself. (Olavo T. Fontes, "Report from Brazil: The First UAO Sightings in 1966," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1966, pp. 5–6; Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 54; W. Buhler, "UFO on the Sea near Rio," Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 3 (May/June 1971): 3, 6; Dolan, USO1, 282)

1966, March 17 — 2:45 a.m. Doctors and nurses at the Lourenco Jorge Municipal Hospital in Barra da Tijuca, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, watch as a green object appears to rise out of the ocean and hover before flying around a nearby hill. The object turns blue, then red, and two smaller discs are seen entering it. (Olavo T. Fontes, "Report from Brazil: The First UAO Sightings in 1966," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1966, pp. 5–6; W. Buhler, "UFO on the Sea near Rio," Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 3 (May/June 1971): 3, 6; Dolan, USO1, 282)

1966, March 17 — 4:25 a.m. Police Sgt. Neil Schneider and Deputy David Fitzpatrick see top-shaped objects making sharp maneuvers over Milan, Michigan. They alternatively hover, rise and fall quickly, dart around at jet-like speed, dimming and brightening periodically. Two objects are operating together, while a third UFO hovers at a lower altitude. 1966, March 18 — 4:00 p.m. Farmer Carlos Corosan is on a deserted beach 10 miles north of Puerto Deseado, Santa Cruz, Argentina, when he sees a large cigar-shaped object moving slowly over the ocean only 100 feet away. It was about 65–70 feet long, smooth, dark gray, and metallic with dark smoke coming from one end. It suddenly stops about 40 feet above the water and emits a blast of black smoke. After a few minutes it begins to hum and vibrate, followed by another blast, and it rises slowly, moving to the northeast with a chugging motion. Suddenly it explodes and crashes into the ocean, going down swiftly. (Brad Steiger and Joan Writenour, The Allende Letters, Universal, 1968; Sanderson, InvRes, p. 50; Dolan, USO1, 283–285)

1966, March 20 — 7:30 p.m. After his dogs start making a racket, Frank Mannor and his 26-year-old son Ronald see strange lights over a swampy area in Dexter Township, Michigan. They walk over to the area for a look, taking about 30 minutes, and see a pyramid-shaped object with a rounded top, corrugated surface, and blue, red, and white lights. Mannor's son-in-law Bob Wagner, back at the house, sees the object light up and rise to 500 feet, then come down again making some noise. Washtenaw County sheriff's deputies David Fitzpatrick and Stanley McFadden arrive about 9:00 p.m. drive towards the swamp on Quigley Road. They see a brilliant light that dims and then reappears. By this time a crowd has gathered. One man reports that when two flashlights appear in the distance, the object seems to react by flying away at high speed. At another point the object passes directly over the Mannors with a whistling sound like a rifle bullet ricocheting. It remains in the swampy area for 30 minutes. 1966, March 21 — 10:32 p.m. Cynthia "Pinky" Poffenberger and 16 other Hillsdale (Michigan) College students at the McIntyre dorm see a football-shaped object with red, green, and white pulsating lights descend from the sky and pass close to their dorm. It settles in a hollow in the Slayton Arboretum about 1,500 feet away. Some 87 students collect to watch the UFO, then they notify Civil Defense Director William Van Horn, who arrives with police. From the dormitory, the landed lights appear yellowish-white, dimming and intensifying. Only student Barbara

"Gidget" Kohn stays most of the night, watching the lights vanish, reappear, and recede. Around 5:10 a.m., Kohn sees a lighted object move away and disappear from sight. Radiation is later detected at the landing area of about 330–600 microroentgens/hr, roughly 10–20 times the background level. 1966, March 22 — Morning. Contactee George Hunt Williamson sees three large UFOs with brilliant, flashing, blue-white lights hover above him for one minute in Key West, Florida. He hears a familiar buzzing in his head. (Michael D. Swords, "A Little Walk in the Strange Life of George Hunt Williamson," IUR 26, no. 2 (Summer 2001): 14, 32)

1966, March 22 — 10:00 p.m. Several people standing outside the Waterfront Playhouse in Key West, Florida, during an intermission, see three UFOs ringed with flashing blue-white lights hovering nearby. They zoom off over the Gulf. ("Keys Theatre-Goers Report 'Flying Discs,'" Miami (Fla.) Herald, March 24, 1966, p. 3-C)

1966, March 23 — 5:05 a.m. As Sheppard AFB (near Wichita Falls, Texas) civilian instructor William E. "Eddie" Laxson is driving west on US Highway 70 eight miles south of Temple, Oklahoma, he finds the road blocked by a wingless aircraft, shaped like a fish, in the road. It is about 75 feet long, nearly 8 feet high, 12 feet wide, with a Plexiglas bubble on top, and bright lights forward and aft. Laxson stops his car about 300 feet away and walks to within 50 feet, noticing a designation on its side like "TLA138" or "TLA738" or "TL 4768." He sees a "man" wearing a baseball cap or mechanic's hat climbing up steps or a ladder on the object. Soon after it lifts off with a hissing or high-speed drilling sound and heads off southeast at about 700 mph. There are no landing traces. Laxson finds another witness, truck driver C. W. Anderson, parked a mile down the road. Laxson thinks it is some kind of military vehicle. 1966, March 23 — 5:00 p.m. At least a dozen adults and children in Trinidad, Colorado, see two disc-shaped objects with domes flying in-line, traveling with a bobbing motion over the terrain. ("Discs at Trinidad, Colorado," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1966, p. 1; James E. McDonald, "Statement on Unidentified Flying Objects," in Symposium on Unidentified Flying Objects, Hearings, US House Committee on Science and Astronautics, 90th Cong., 2nd Sess., July 29, 1968, pp. 51–52)

1966, March 23 — 11:50 p.m. John T. King sees a yellowish, elliptical object with a dome-like projection on top just off the ground near Bangor, Maine. It has a yellow-orange light in the center, a bluish light on the right, and a white light on the left. When the object moves toward his car, the car lights dim and his radio stops playing. King says he can hear the elderberry bushes scraping as it approaches and hovers 50 feet away. Frightened, he takes his .22 magnum pistol and fires it four times at the UFO, which glows brightly and takes off at high speed, making a "zinging" sound like the recoil of a spring. 1966, March 23–25 — Hynek spends three days in Michigan, interviewing witnesses in Dexter and Hillsdale, finding the reports contradictory and vague, and encountering a media frenzy. He participates in a police UFO chase that turns out to be the star Arcturus. A photograph taken by Deputy David Fitzpatrick on March 17 is obviously a time lapse of the Moon and Venus. He interviews two Hillsdale students, Sara Robechek and Jo Wilson. William Van Horn tells him that he at first thought the lights were marsh gas until they rose into the air 150 feet and he seemed to perceive a "convex-shaped" solid mass between two lights. (O'Connell 183–190; Graff 205–207)

1966, March 25 — Quintanilla needs quick answers, so he schedules a press conference at the Detroit Press Club for Hynek to make a statement. Hynek, disappointed with the quality of the sightings and suspecting a mundane explanation, announces: "It would seem to me that the association of the sightings with swamps, in these particular cases, is more than coincidence. No group of witnesses observed any craft coming to or going away from the swamps. The glow was localized there…. It appears to me that all the major conditions for the appearance of swamp lights were satisfied." The swamp gas theory doesn't go over very well with the witnesses, the media, or the public. ("Termed Marsh Gases by Air Force Expert," *Lansing (Mich.) 1966, March 25 — House Minority Leader Gerald Ford (R-Mich.) issues a press release proposing that Congress investigate the rash of UFO reports in southern Michigan and the rest of the country: "I think the American people would feel better if there was a full-blown investigation of these incidents, which some persons allege have taken place." (Gerald R. Ford Presidential Library, [Ford UFO news releases and other documents])

1966, March 25 — Evening. Mrs. R. H. Chappell and her sister Janie Kidd watch two triangular objects, one larger than the other, hovering 40–50 feet above the water at Saanich Inlet, British Columbia. They have flashing ruby-red lights. After two minutes, the lights change to orange and they move off silently and gracefully. Mrs. L. Austin Wright sees a stationary flashing yellow light around the same time. ("UFO's Sighted: Triangular-Shaped Objects," Saanich Peninsula and Gulf Islands Review, March 30, 1966, p. 1; Dan Lloyd, "Are They Really Seeing Things over Canada?" Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1966): 30; Marler 79)

1966, March 25 — Evening. Mrs. Robert Gorisek of LaSalle, Illinois, sees a triangular object hover above her car for more than an hour as she is driving home from work. The object keeps up with them as they drive through several towns. It has red, orange, and white lights. ("UFO Sightings Widespread over Country," Great Bend (Kan.) Daily Tribune, March 25, 1966, p. 1; Marler 79)

1966, March 27 — 5:30 a.m. Both Federal Aviation Administration operators at Muscogee County Airport [now Columbus Metropolitan Airport] and military operators at Fort Benning report a radar-visual sighting of a maneuvering, oblong, green-white object over Columbus, Georgia. The object appears to change shape from cigar to wedge to triangle. (Center for UFO Studies, [case documents]; "Glowing Object in Sky Is Sighted in Georgia," Casper (Wyo.) Star-Tribune, March 28, 1966, p. 14)

1966, March 27 — 7:30 p.m. An engineer with Memphis station WKNO-TV is driving about 60 mph between Salem and Ash Flat, Arkansas, when he encounters a large, lighted object only 3 feet above the road on a hilltop. The object is oval-shaped, 23 feet long, dark gray, and has about 30 lights around its perimeter. Before it flies off, his car engine and headlights die. The car doesn't start up again for another 10–20 minutes. The driver has to replace both a fuse and the light bulbs in his headlights after the incident. Upon reaching Memphis, he discovers that 15 reels of tape that were in the car are damaged, each with a linear magnetic void area from the outside to the center. (Sparks, p. 312; Herbert S. Taylor, "An Update on Vehicle Interference Reports, Part Two," IUR 34, no. 1 (September 2011): 19)

1966, March 28 — Gerald Ford writes to Rep. George P. Miller (D-Calif.), chairman of the House Science and Astronautics Committee, and Rep. L. Mendel Rivers (D-S.C.), chairman of the Armed Services Committee, saying he is dissatisfied with Hynek's explanation of the Michigan sightings. He "strongly recommends" a House committee investigation into the "UFO phenomena." (Gerald R. Ford Presidential Library, [Ford UFO news releases and other documents]; Clark III 924; Clark IV 1034)

1966, March 28 — University of Arizona atmospheric physicist James E. McDonald writes a 2-page letter to Thomas F. Malone, chairman of the National Academy of Sciences' Committee on the Atmospheric Sciences, urging that a panel be set up by a scientific body to study Blue Book's UFO files. He also writes to his legislator Rep. Morris K. Udall (D-Ariz.) about the idea, asking him to pass the letter on in confidence to Gerald Ford (R-Mich.). (Bill Murphy, "The Swamp Gas Aftermath: Some Notes from the Gerald Ford Files," IUR 33, no. 2 (July 2010): 11, 13; Clark III 696; Clark IV 792)

1966, March 28 — Evening. Rob Freeman, 12, leaves a Boy Scout meeting at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Sarnia, Ontario, when he sees what at first looks like a helicopter flying overhead. It has a bright light but is completely silent, moving slowly from north to south. In the blink of an eye, it reverses course to the north. At one point, Freeman can see through the bottom of the object, through what looks like a lens, and he perceives a figure or figures moving around. Some other children also see the object. ("It's a Balloon… It's a Meteor… No, It's a UFO," Sarnia (Ont.) Observer, March 29, 1966, p. 1; "Documentary Examines Southwestern Ontario Boy's 1966 UFO Claim," Sarnia (Ont.) Observer, November 15, 2022)

1966, March 29 — NICAP board member Charles A. Maney writes to Gerald Ford, imploring him to contact NICAP for proof that the Air Force is withholding evidence about UFOs. (Bill Murphy, "The Swamp Gas Aftermath: Some Notes from the Gerald Ford Files," IUR 33, no. 2 (July 2010): 12)

1966, March 29 — 4:15 p.m. A 10-year-old boy and his Dalmatian are walking familiar paths in a wood lot behind their home near Hampton Falls, New Hampshire. He notices something silver on a ridge and walks toward it. He sees an "L" shaped box, long side parallel to the ground, sitting on tripod legs. His dog runs ahead and sniffs the boxy structure, and then, appearing uninterested, the dog goes off into the woods. The boy stops about 24 feet away, not sure what he is seeing. The object makes intermittent sounds and movements in the following minutes. Then a blast of air from the object sends debris flying. A short high-pitched, then low-pitched, sound is heard as the object lifts off the ground about one foot, stops, swings in a clockwise motion, and settles back on the ground. Intermittent electric-like humming sounds are heard until the object again, with a blast of air stirring up debris and the same sounds as earlier, ascends vertically, this time to about 10 feet, where it pauses, moves horizontally, pauses and rotates clockwise again, then accelerates straight up. On the final ascent, the sound increases in pitch and loudness. The witness's mother and sister who were at some distance from him also hear the sound. When the object moved horizontally, saplings directly under it swayed. Three elongated imprints are found in the form of a triangle. Reportedly plants do not grow in the area for the next 2 years. (NICAP, "Hampton Area, New Hampshire: March 29, 1966"; "Investigators Discover 'Significant' Sighting by New Hampshire Youth," UFO Investigator, March 1972, p. 3; Raymond E. 1966, March 29 — 9:15 p.m. Charles Cozens, 13, is strolling in a field behind the Hamilton Mountain Police Station on Upper Wellington Street in Hamilton, Ontario. He sees two luminous oval objects about 8 feet in diameter descend and land, making a buzzing sound. The objects have a row of multicolored lights around their rims "flickering like a computer." He approaches for a closer look and touches the nearest object, which feels hard and smooth like metal, but neither hot nor cold. He then touches an antenna-like projection at the end of one of the objects and receives a shock. Frightened, he runs home. His parents confirm a 3-inch burn mark on his hand and question him thoroughly before reporting the incident to authorities. His first-degree burn is treated at a hospital and heals normally. 1966, March 30 — 8:35 p.m. A woman and her four children watch an oval object crossing the road as they are driving south about 9 miles north of Lewisburg, Indiana. It comes close to the car and she hears a pulsating sound, but it seems to come through the car radio, not directly from the object. She drives away, but the UFO pursues her for 8 miles. It changes from reddish-orange to blue-white before it accelerates away. (Sparks, p. 313)

1966, March 31 — 1:30 a.m. Three students at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo, Michigan, see a star-like object that looks football-shaped through binoculars. It moves in geometric angles around two bright stars until it shoots straight up and disappears. ("'Saucers' Are Back Again," Kalamazoo (Mich.) Gazette, March 31, 1966, pp. 1–2; Michael D. Swords, "We Know Where You Live," IUR 30, no. 2 (January 2006): 10–11)

1966, March 31 — 2:00 a.m. Jeno Udvardy is driving home from a late work shift near Vicksburg, Michigan. He sees a cluster of lights on the highway ahead and slows down. When he is within 10 feet, he realizes the lights are on a disc hovering a few feet above the road. It has a brilliant white light, and red, green, and purple blinking lights. Udvardy backs up and his car is buffeted by gusts of wind as the object lifts up. The car motor stalls. He rolls down the window and hears a humming sound. Moments later, the UFO speeds off at a steep angle. ("'Saucers' Are Back Again," Kalamazoo (Mich.) Gazette, March 31, 1966, pp. 1–2; "Kalamazoo's UFOs: Too Many to Be Ignored," Kalamazoo Magazine, Summer 1966; "Close-Range Sightings Increase," UFO Investigator 3, no. 7 (March/April 1966): 3; UFOEv II 207)

1966, March 31 — JANAP 146(E), a joint Canadian–US instruction, adds that photos should be sent to the US Director of Naval Intelligence and adds special CIRVIS reporting instructions for unidentifiable objects. The Canadian Air Defence Command ends its investigation of UFOs and transfers the responsibility to the Directorate of Operations. Rullán, "Blue Book UFO Reports at Sea by Ships: Analysis of the Blue Book Ship Database," December 10, 2002, pp. 8–9)

1966, April 1 — 8:45 p.m. After her two French poodles start barking and running in circles, Carol Vander Plate hears a loud rumbling sound outside her home on Hamburg Mountain in Hardyston Township, New Jersey. She looks outside and sees an object twice the size of a jet hovering above some trees about 400 feet away. It turns from white to pink and has three portholes that are black inside. Her TV set goes off, and when she turns on a porch light, the object seems to turn off two large spotlights. After 30 seconds it turns green and takes off like a "streak of lightning." Other witnesses call into radio station WLVP [now WSUS-FM] to report seeing the object. (Berthold E. Schwarz, "UFOs in New Jersey," Pursuit 7, no. 2 (April 1974): 31, 32–33)

1966, April 1 — 10:40 p.m. A man driving 5 miles south of Tangier, Oklahoma, reaches a hilltop and sees a green object wider than the road flying north at very high speed, emitting a shrieking noise and a "heat wave." The car engine dies. (Sparks, p. 313)

1966, April 2 — 2:02 p.m. James Kibel, a Melbourne businessman who is a member of the Victorian Flying Saucer Research Society, sees a shiny, hemispherical object above his garden in Balwyn, Victoria. It looks to be 20–25 feet in diameter and 120 feet in the air. "It seemed to float down towards me," he says. "It resembled a big mushroom with a stalk pointing towards the earth." He snaps a Polaroid photo, after which the object takes off and disappears to the north. However, when B. Roy Frieden, professor of optical sciences at the University of Arizona, examines the photo, he finds a jagged line of discontinuity running across the center of the image suggesting there are separate photos joined together and rephotographed. In 2017, Canadian researcher François Beaulieu reexamines the original and notices the reflection of the house below in the shiny object, and he finds that the discontinuity is actually caused by the Polaroid developing chemicals spreading unevenly across the photo. 1966, April 4 — 7:50 p.m. Businessman Ronald F. Sullivan is driving about 60 mph along the Wimmera Highway near Burkes Flat, Victoria, Australia. In the distance he sees a light near the road. Suddenly, the headlights of his vehicle bend to the right and light up a nearby fence. He brakes his car. In the middle of an adjacent field, he sees a column of light some 25 feet high and shaped like an inverted ice cream cone, 3 feet wide at the bottom and 10 feet wide at the top. It then rises to a height of 20 feet, after which the whole light complex disappears. There is no associated noise. Sullivan drives on north to Wycheproof, where he checks his lights but finds nothing wrong. On the night of April 7, 19-year-old Gary Taylor is killed at the same spot when the car he is driving leaves the road and hits a tree. Police find a circular impression about 2–5 inches deep and 5 feet in diameter in the freshly plowed field. 1966, April 5 — 1:30 a.m. A woman in Durhamville, New York, is awakened by a flash. She thinks her trailer heater has exploded, but everything is in order. The next day, three witnesses tell her a pulsating, luminous object had flown directly above her trailer. (Vallée, Magonia, p. 327)

1966, April 5 — 3:00 a.m. Lillian Louis, in Lycoming, New York, sees a spinning object from her kitchen window. It seems to be 10 feet in diameter and is shooting exhaust 20 feet above the ground near her house. It departs suddenly, leaving a trail. (Sparks, p. 313)

1966, April 5 — The House Armed Services Committee conducts the first public hearing by the US Congress on the topic of UFOs. Air Force Secretary Harold Brown testifies that while USAF has done an excellent job on UFOs, perhaps there is room for "even stronger emphasis on the scientific aspects." Hynek recommends that a "civilian panel of physical and social scientists … examine the UFO problem critically for the express purpose of determining whether a major problem exits." Quintanilla is the only other witness. After Committee Chairman L. Mendel Rivers expresses some enthusiasm for the idea, Brown suddenly realizes that maybe he has found a way to get the Air Force out of UFO investigations. Shortly after the hearing, Brown tells the USAF Office of Scientific Research to accept the February 3 O'Brien recommendation to seek a university that will accept a contract to study the 600 officially unidentified UFO sightings. (US House Committee on Armed Services,

1966, April 5 — 7:00 p.m. Four people see a landed object through binoculars at Kittery, Maine. It takes off, hovers for a while, then departs. (Sparks, p. 313)

1966, April 5 — Midnight. W. Smith and another man in Alto, Tennessee, stop to watch a 100-foot long UFO hovering 15 feet above a swamp. They try to follow it, but it flies away, flying between a high-tension power line and a row of trees. Cows, dogs, and horses are restless in all the areas where the object passes over. (Sparks, p. 313)

1966, April 6 — Around 10:15 a.m. A class of students and a teacher from Westall High School [now Westall Secondary College] in Clayton South, Victoria, Australia, are just completing a sport activity on the main oval when they see an object, described as a gray saucer-shaped craft with a slight purple hue and about twice the size of a family car. Witness descriptions are mixed: Andrew Greenwood, a science teacher, tells The Dandenong Journal at the time that he saw a silvery-green disc. According to witnesses, the object is descending and then crosses and flies over the high school's southwest corner, going in a southeasterly direction before disappearing from sight as it descends behind a stand of trees and into a paddock at The Grange in front of the Westall State School (primary students). After about 20 minutes, the object—with witnesses now numbering over 200—then climbs at speed and departs towards the northwest. As the object gains altitude, some accounts describe it as being pursued from the scene by five unidentified aircraft that circle it. Some describe one disc, others claim to see three. Soon after the incident, military trucks and jeeps arrive, and the students are taken to an assembly hall and told not to speak of the sighting. The Victorian Flying Saucer Research Society arrives on the site on April 8, speaks to students, and views the ground marking, originally described as a large patch of yellow, flattened grass with a swirly pattern. 1966, April 6 — NICAP Assistant Director Richard Hall writes to Gerald Ford, congratulating him on his call for a congressional investigation, saying, "History will record the important role you have played in helping to bring about a rational study of UFOs and public enlightenment on the subject." (Bill Murphy, "The Swamp Gas Aftermath: Some Notes from the Gerald Ford Files," IUR 33, no. 2 (July 2010): 10, 13)

1966, April 8 — 8:05 a.m. Mike Dorsey and Gary Hunt, both 12, are walking along Redcoat Road in Norwalk, Connecticut, when they see sunlight reflecting off a distant object to the west and behind them. It zooms toward them in a flash, passes overhead from west to east, turns, makes a second pass from east to west, turns again, and makes a third pass. It makes a low humming sound when it passes about 15 feet above them. The boys run to the Holy Ghost Seminary nearby and hide under a nearby bridge abutment as the object continues to maneuver. When it hovers, it does so edge down and makes a fluttering motion. The disc looks metallic, 8 feet in diameter, has a black spot on top near its rim, and a red light on top of an antenna-like protrusion. Red and white lights appear to rotate counterclockwise. Nearly 2 hours later, the object takes off in a burst of speed. ("Boys Chased by UAO," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1966, p. 5)

1966, April 11 — Keyhoe appears on the US game show To Tell the Truth, where three of the four panelists correctly identify him as "the real Donald Keyhoe." ("1966-04-11: Major Donald Keyhoe on To Tell the Truth," Tom Owens UAP YouTube channel, December 2, 2019; Powell, Keyhoe, 339)

1966, April 17 — 5:00 a.m. Portage County Deputy Sheriff Dale F. Spaur and Deputy Wilbur ("Barney") Neff are 4 miles east of Randolph, Ohio, when they see a moving light through some trees at the top of a small hill along the road. The light is headed in their direction. They have heard of a UFO reported over police radio that night and figure this must be what was seen. The object hovers 50–100 feet in the air, bathing the two officers in a bright light. Spaur's eyes water up. They rush to the cruiser and radio the station; the dispatcher says to wait there until a car with a camera arrives. The object makes some sharp maneuvers, and Spaur drives toward it cautiously. The UFO is 18–24 feet thick and about 35–45 feet in diameter. The object is so bright he hardly needs his headlights to drive. It speeds up whenever Spaur accelerates, and soon he is driving at 80 mph. As the UFO reaches Mahoning County, the pursuit is being broadcast over police radios in three counties. As they reach East Palestine, Ohio, Patrolman H. Wayne Huston sees the UFO and follows Spaur and Neff, at times reaching 100 mph. Just before 5:30 a.m., two police officers in Salem, Ohio, see the UFO as a "bright ball" much larger than a jet. They also see three jets following it, apparently Air Force Reserve planes from Youngstown, Ohio. Police officer Frank Panzarella in Conway, Pennsylvania, sees the UFO, very bright and in the "shape of a half of a football." He hears on his radio that a jet interception is in progress. Now in Pennsylvania, Spaur and Neff are given orders to abandon the chase. For most of the event, the object has remained at 1,000 feet, but now it rises to 3,500 feet and hovers. Then it shoots even higher and disappears. In 30 minutes, many police and civilians have seen the UFO. Panzarella alerts the Rochester, Pennsylvania, police operator, John Beighey, and asks him to contact the Greater Pittsburgh International Airport. Beighey calls Panzarella and says the Air Force wants to talk to the police witnesses. Spaur, Neff, and Huston go to the Rochester, Pennsylvania, police station and Spaur phones the USAF station at Pittsburgh. Spaur speaks to some colonel who tries to convince him he has seen something conventional. NICAP's William B. Weitzel, a philosophy professor, begins his own investigation, tracking down witnesses. Within a few weeks, he or his NICAP associates have interviewed all the police officers, as well as several others who have figured in the UFO chase, either as dispatchers or as those who overheard the radio communications. NICAP members also interview some civilians who claim to have seen a UFO at the same time of the chase and/or had monitored police scanners. 1966, April 18 — The US Air Force begins a cursory investigation into the Portage County, Ohio, police chase case. Initially they telephone local news outlets, seeking information. However, local newspapers and radio have only vague outlines of the case. Air Force investigators also interviewed meteorologists and weather agency personnel, hoping to learn that a weather balloon was launched in the area during the UFO chase. They learn that there were no weather balloons launched that morning, and also that the wind had been so mild that the police would have had no difficulty catching up with any wind-borne object. Quintanilla calls Spaur to ask him about "this mirage you saw." Spaur insists he has seen a clearly defined metallic object maneuvering at very low altitudes. When Quintanilla asks if they watched the object for more than a few minutes, Spaur asserts that he and Neff chased it for over half an hour, and that Huston saw the object for much of that period, and that Panzanella too had seen it. Quintanilla then, as Spaur says, "kind of lost interest." (Clark III 910; Clark IV 1020)

1966, April 18 — An egg-shaped object, 80 feet in diameter and 15 feet high, is observed from a distance of 80 feet by a 42-year-old witness driving a car near Battle Creek, Michigan. The object supports a cockpit with windows and three rows of lights, emits red flames, and makes the same noise as a heavy truck on wet pavement. The object follows the car for some time. (Sparks, p. 314; Vallée, Magonia, p. 329)

1966, April 18 — Researcher John Keel visits NICAP in preparation for writing an article on UFOs for Playboy. He meets with Keyhoe and Richard H. Hall, who offer him full access to the NICAP files and free use of the facilities. He comments, "The small staff of six is doing a remarkable job of keeping abreast of the situation and maintaining a thorough file on sightings throughout the United States." (John A. Keel, "Visit to Col. Maston Jacks, Project Bluebook, Pentagon," part 1, April 26, 1966; Powell, Keyhoe, 339; Eghigian, After, p. 251)

1966, April 19 — John Keel arrives unannounced at the Public Information Office (Room 4C922) in the Pentagon to interview Lt. Col. Maston M. Jacks about Project Blue Book. The tense, sometimes heated, encounter lasts two hours. Keel berates Jacks for his lack of knowledge of UFO history and his dubious claim that the Air Force has no photos or films of UFOs. Jacks offers to put him in touch with Hynek, but Keel remarks that "Hynek made a public fool of himself in Michigan and that the public would no longer accept him as an 'expert.'" Jacks offers to put him in touch with Quintanilla at Wright-Patterson, but Keel says he is not interested in listening to "another man parrot the Air Force line." Keel concludes in a summary report that "Project Bluebook is just a shabby cover up effort and it has now reached the end of its effectiveness." (John A. Keel, "Visit to Col. Maston Jacks, Project Bluebook, Pentagon," part 2, part 3, April 26, 1966; Powell, Keyhoe, 339–341)

1966, April 19 — 10:45 p.m. In Peabody, Massachusetts, witnesses report an oval object with red, green, and white body lights, oscillating up and down when in motion. The object appears to land in a field off State Highway 114. At 12:00 midnight, two men driving along that route see the lighted disc rise and fly away. (Vallée, Magonia, p. 329; Raymond E. Fowler, UFOs: Interplanetary Visitors, Exposition, 1974, p. 339;)

1966, April 21 — William Dean Howe, MP for Ottawa, Ontario, urges a serious investigation of UFOs in the Canadian House of Commons. ("Canadian Projects," UFO Investigator 4, no. 10 (Feb./March 1969): 6)

1966, April 21 — Rep. Gerald Ford (R-Mich.) issues a press release: "It was as a result of my call for a congressional investigation that the Air Force is now arranging for a study of UFO's by topflight scientists not connected in any way with the Air Force." ("Statement by House Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford, R-Michigan," April 21, 1966)

1966, April 22 — Quintanilla announces in a press release that the Portage County, Ohio, UFO is an Echo satellite, with later observations (in Pennsylvania) of Venus. Quintanilla calls Spaur's superior, Portage County Sheriff Ross Dustman, to give him this explanation, and Dustman laughs out loud. (Clark III 910; Clark IV 1020)

1966, April 22 — Lt. Col. Robert R. Hippler of the USAF Directorate of Science and Technology is tasked with recruiting a university for the UFO project suggested by the O'Brien committee in February. He assembles a panel of experts that suggests he bring in H. Guyford Stever, head of the Air Force Scientific Advisory Board. Stever queries MIT, Harvard, the University of California, Northwestern University, and the University of North Carolina, but all refuse to deal with UFOs. (Swords 307–308)

1966, April 22 — 9:00–9:45 p.m. Witnesses in Beverly, Massachusetts, including two police officers, see a platter-shaped object the size of a large automobile with 3 red-green-white lights hover silently over Beverly High School then depart to the southwest. At one point, witnesses see the object only 20–30 feet above the head of another witness. The Colorado project investigators thought the witnesses viewing distant objects were seeing Jupiter, but they could not explain the close encounter. (Sparks, p. 314; Condon, pp. 266–270; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 106–108; Roy Craig, UFOs: An Insiders' View of the Official Quest for Evidence, University of North Texas, 1995; Patrick Gross, "The Case in Beverly, Massachusetts, USA, on April 22, 1966")

1966, April 23 — 10:45 p.m. On hearing a listener call in a live UFO sighting on WMEX radio, Jeanne Kalnicki of Dorchester, Massachusetts, goes to the window with her two daughters and sees an oval, domed UFO with a ring of blinking red lights bobbing up and down above a building across the street. A yellow light is on top of the dome and alternately flashes on when the red lights blink off. It moves across the street and appears to be moving directly toward them at eye level. Humming, the object moves between their apartment building and the one next door, where it hovers for a few minutes. When the yellow light goes off, Kalnicki can see a glow within the dome. The object then moves erratically away to the east. The family goes to bed, but at 5:00 a.m., 11-year-old Judy Kalnicki is too upset to sleep, She wakes up when she sees a light coming in her window and realizes that the UFO is right outside, bobbing up and down, looking about the size of their 1955 Lincoln automobile, and flashing its lights as before. Thinking it is going to come inside her bedroom, Judy screams. Seemingly in response, the object speeds up its bobbing motion, and she hears a heavy thudding sound. The windows rattle, Judy's bed rocks, and all the lights in the house go off. Downstairs, their German shepherd is whining and scratching at the door. The entire family rushes to the back porch, where they watch the object for about 12 minutes moving to the north toward Boston. The lights come back on. NICAP's investigation shows that the power failure affected 2,500 homes in the area and was caused by two cables burning out a block away from the Kalnicki apartment. One particle on the window sill registered a strong radiation reading of .025 milliroentgens per hour from a Geiger counter. ("Close Approaches Frighten Observers," UFO Investigator 3, no. 8 (May/June 1966): 7; Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, pp. 45–47)

1966, April 24 — Night. Marvin and Viola Swartwood are driving in a rainstorm on State Highway 34B near Fleming, New York, when a "brilliant, flashing ball of fire" appears three feet above the front and slightly to the right of their car. The fire ball lights up the surrounding area, falls onto the car with a loud snap, and vanishes. As the ball lightning hits, Viola feels a shock in her neck and an impulse in her right arm. They drive to the sheriff's office and then to a local hospital because the right side of Viola's body is partially paralyzed. She is in satisfactory condition 5 days later. There is no damage to the car or any reports of normal lightning in the area. ("'Ball of Fire' Hits Car; Woman Passenger Hurt," Syracuse (N.Y.) Post-Standard, April 28, 1966, p. 38; "Ball-of-Fire Victim's Condition Improving," *Binghamton (N.Y.) 1966, April 25 — 8:52 p.m. Florida Gov. W. Haydon Burns's campaign airplane is paced by a UFO. Copilot Herb Bates first notices the UFO when the Convair takes off from Orlando, Florida, headed for Tallahassee. It appears as two bright yellow globes side by side. In the vicinity of Ocala, at about 6,000 feet, everyone on board is alerted and watches the object pacing the plane on the right side. The lights fluctuate in brightness but are very distinct. Burns orders the pilot to turn toward the UFO, and the lights quickly begin a steep climb then disappear. (Bill Mansfield, "I Was with Burns and Saw 'Flying Saucer,'" Miami (Fla.) Herald, April 27, 1966, p. 1; "Florida Governor Sights UFO," UFO Investigator 3, no. 8 (May/June 1966): 3; "Governor Haydon Burns Sees a UFO," Educating Humanity, April 26, 2016)

1966, Late April — When he learns that Rep. J. William Stanton (R-Ohio) has expressed an interest in the UFO chase, NICAP investigator William B. Weitzel writes him a detailed letter, outlining the inconsistencies and shortcomings of Quintanilla's explanations. Portage County (Ohio) Judge Robert Eugene Cook (an acquaintance of Spaur and Neff) also writes to Stanton, defending the police officers' judgment and characterizing the Air Force investigation as "grossly unfair" to Spaur and Neff. Stanton fails to get an answer from the Air Force, so he contacts USAF Chief of Community Relations Division Lt. Col. John Spalding, who promises to send an investigator. Stanton later writes to Defense Secretary Robert McNamara about Blue Book's treatment of his constituents. (Clark III 911; Clark IV 1021)

1966, May 4 — 4:30 a.m. An FAA air traffic controller tracks an unidentified non-transponding target for about 5 miles at Charleston, West Virginia. The crew of Braniff Airline Flight 42, headed east at 33,000 feet, sees a white-blue object giving off brilliant, flaming light of alternating white-green-red colors. The radar shows the object veering 8–10 miles away at the 10 o'clock position, then approaching the Braniff airliner to a distance of 3 miles. It then makes a 180° left turn to the northwest within a diameter of 5 miles at 1,000 mph, which the Braniff crew confirms as the object descends from 20° above the horizon. (NICAP, "Charleston R/V Case"; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 83–86; Martin Shough, RADCAT: Radar Catalogue: A Review of Twenty-One Ground and Airborne Radar UAP Contact Reports Generally Related to Aviation Safety for the Period October 15, 1948, to September 19, 1976, National Aviation Reporting Center on Anomalous Phenomena, NARCAP Report TR-6, December 8, 2002, pp. 115–118)

1966, May 8 — A Gallup Poll taken April 14–19 reveals that 46% of Americans who have heard about UFOs think they are real, although only 7% think they are from outer space. 5% of US adults have seen a UFO. ("Five Million Say They've Seen Saucers," UFO Investigator 3, no. 8 (May/June 1966): 7; Robert J. Durant, "Evolution of Public Opinion on UFOs," IUR 18, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1993): 11–12; Lydia Saad, "Eyewitnesses to Flying Saucers," Gallup Vault, April 12, 2016)

1966, May 8 — Quintanilla calls Spaur again and tells him to be ready for an interview the next day.

1966, May 9 — Weitzel is at Portage County police headquarters in Ravenna, Ohio, to record Spaur's interview and has brought two reporters and UFO researcher David Webb. Dustman is there too. Quintanilla asks Weitzel and Webb to leave, and the reporters leave as well. The interview becomes heated at times. ("Interview with Deputy Sheriff Dale Spaur, 1966," SpaceTimeForum YouTube channel, March 28, 2013; Clark III 911–912; Clark IV 1021–1022)

1966, May 10 — The documentary "UFO: Friend, Foe, or Fantasy?" appears on CBS Reports, hosted by Walter Cronkite and narrator Bill Stout. Guests include Carl Sagan, Donald Menzel, Harold Brown, Lawrence Tacker, Donald Keyhoe, and J. Allen Hynek. The tenor of the show is to debunk UFOs, although Cronkite says the CIA has been secretly tracking UFO sightings around the world, even as it denies doing so. Air Force Capt. Gary Reese claims that NORAD's satellite-tracking radar covers altitudes from 100,000 feet to 2,000 miles up but never finds any UFOs. He neglects to mention that UFOs are found in the atmosphere below 100,000 feet. (Even so, NORAD has been detecting occasional Unidentified Satellites, USATs, for years.) Reese makes a broad statement that the Air Force has never substantiated a "flying saucer" despite NORAD's covering "nearly every square foot of the US" on its radar. USAF Maj. Albert Morse of NORAD spacetrack network supports Reese. A handwritten letter by Robertson Panel member Thornton Page, discovered in the Smithsonian's archives by Michael D. Swords, confirms the CIA's long-suspected role in the CBS program. In the September 10, 1966, letter, Page relates to Frederick C. Durant that he "helped organize the CBS TV show around the Robertson Panel's conclusions." Quintanilla has spent 3 days editing and censoring the TV program's script to make sure it conforms to USAF public relations policy. 1966, May 17 — Weitzel writes to Quintanilla with another critique of the Blue Book explanation. Even Hynek urges the USAF Foreign Technology Division to change the designation to "unknown."

1966, May 21 — 3: 15 p.m. William C. Powell is flying a light Luscombe aircraft over Willow Grove, Pennsylvania, with one passenger, Muriel McCrave. He spots a bright-red circular disc with a dome on top as it is apparently following an outbound flight of Navy jets from NAS Willow Grove [now NAS Joint Reserve Base Willow Grove] at 4,500 feet. The object makes a sharp turn without banking and approaches his plane on a near-collision course, passing below the starboard wing about 300 feet away and disappearing to the rear. They both get a good look at the object, which has no wings or visible means of propulsion. 1966, May 22 — A witness driving between Blue River, British Columbia, and Jasper, Alberta, sees a gray object the size of a car and shaped like a bowl land on the road and make a whining noise. After it silently takes off, the object leaves three impressions of landing pads about 4 feet square. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, p. 184)

1966, May 27 — In the House of Commons, MP Claire Brooks asks Secretary of State for Defence Merlyn Rees how many unexplained UFO reports were logged by his department in 1964–1965. He replies 5 out of 74 for 1964 and 14 out of 56 for 1965. (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1966, June — Broadcaster Frank Edwards publishes Flying Saucers—Serious Business, and it becomes one of the best-selling UFO books of all time. (Frank Edwards, Flying Saucers—Serious Business, Bantam, 1966; Nick Redfern, "Spying on the Saucer Writers," Mysterious Universe, February 20, 2012; Clark III 435)

1966, June — 3:15 a.m. Edward Argerake is asleep at his home in Chelmsford, Massachusetts, when his bedroom explodes in light. He hears a pinging noise a light source begins pulsing with diffraction rings outside his window shades. He begins to feel numb and weak, but the sounds grows louder and he lapses into unconsciousness. He wakes up at 6:15 a.m. and the light and noise are gone. Because of this event he becomes interested in UFOs and joins NICAP's Massachusetts subcommittee. (Michael D. Swords, "A Trick of the Light," IUR 31, no. 2 (June 2007): 10–11)

1966, June — Night. A married couple in their summer home on the northeast side of Bois Blanc Island, Michigan, notice a bright white light low over the Straits of Mackinac, apparently near the shore. The man goes outside and there are two lights that seem to be higher. Suddenly multi-colored lights appear around the two original ones, and a cluster of lights rise from the water's surface toward the others. All the lights then go out. ("Multi-Colored UFOs at Mackinac," Detroit (Mich.) Free Press, March 5, 1967, magazine, p. 14; Dolan, USO1, 285–286)

1966, June 1 — 10:30 p.m. On Lake Ontario, off Clarkson, Ontario, former RCAF pilot Richard H. Plewman and Jack Grant are cruising on the lake when they see lights on the water ahead. They can see a disc with a dome on top casting an oval reflection on the lake surface. Around the dome is a row of bright yellow lights; blue-green lights are visible around the lower perimeter. After hovering briefly, the UFO takes off at high speed and disappears. ("New Reports by Space Experts Add to UFO Proof," UFO Investigator 3, no. 9 (Aug./Sept. 1966): 5)

1966, June 2 — 7:30 p.m. Harold Harper is talking with neighbors in his front yard in Massillon, Ohio, when they see a large lighted object coming from the southwest. It is about 50–60 feet in diameter, smoky in color, and cigar-shaped with a ball on one end. It stops and hovers at about 1,000 feet altitude. Then three smaller objects appear to come from it; they gain altitude, separate, and disappear at terrific speed in different directions. The large object goes straight up at terrific speed. (Massillon (Ohio) Evening Independent, June 3, 1966; Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects: A Further Look," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 25–26)

1966, June 6–8 — James McDonald has obtained a small amount of money from the Office of Naval Research to travel to Wright-Patterson AFB in Dayton, Ohio, and examine the Blue Book files. On his first visit, he is steered to an unedited copy of the Robertson Panel report. As it has not been released, McDonald is disturbed, seeing it as evidence that the CIA is directing a cover-up. (Ann Druffel, Firestorm, Wild Flower, 2003, pp. 55–65; Clark III 696, 1017; Powell, Keyhoe, 342; Graff 211; Clark IV 792, 1131)

1966, June 6–10 — The US Army releases Bacillus globigii into the tunnels of the New York City Subway system during peak travel hours as part of a field experiment on the vulnerability of subway passengers in New York City to covert attack with biological agents. (Department of the Army, U.S. Army Activity in the U.S.: Biological Warfare Programs, volume 1, February 24, 1977; "Army Report Details Germ War Exercise in N.Y. Subway in '66," Washington Post, April 21, 1980; "How the U.S. Government Exposed Thousands of Americans to Lethal Bacteria to Test Biological Warfare," Democracy Now!, July 13, 2005; John Ellis and Courtland Moon, "The US

Biological Weapons Program," in Mark Wheelis and Lajos Rózsa, eds., Deadly Cultures: Biological Weapons Since 1956, Harvard University, 2009, pp. 26–28)

1966, June 8 — McDonald visits Hynek at the Lindheimer Astrophysical Research Center in Evanston, Illinois, saying heatedly that he should have spoken up about the CIA cover-up and all the absurd explanations that he made up: "Allen, how could you have sat on this data for 18 years and not let us know about it?" Hynek's then-associate Jacques Vallée has to intervene. Hynek replies that if he did, the Air Force would just replace him and he would lose access to all the files. McDonald says Hynek should have spoken up in 1953 and cannot get Hynek to agree that he is even a little bit timid. (Jacques Vallée, Forbidden Science, North Atlantic, 1992, pp. 186–187; Ann Druffel, Firestorm, Wild Flower, 2003, pp. 67–72; O'Connell 201; Clark III 696; Eghigian, After, p. 201; Hynek IV 792–793)

1966, June 8 — X-15 pilot Joseph A. Walker is killed when his F-104 Starfighter chase aircraft collides with a North American XB-70 Valkyrie. At an altitude of about 25,000 feet, Walker's Starfighter is one of five aircraft in a tight group formation for a General Electric publicity photo when his F-104 drifts into contact with the XB-70's right wingtip. The F-104 flips over, and, rolling inverted, passes over the top of the XB-70, striking both its vertical stabilizers and its left wing in the process, and explodes, killing Walker. The Valkyrie enters an uncontrollable spin and crashes into the ground north of Barstow, California, killing copilot Carl S. Cross. Its pilot, Alvin S. White, ejects and is the sole survivor. (Wikipedia, "Joseph A. Walker")

1966, June 11 — Early morning. Several witnesses driving from Dabajuro to Coro, Falcón State, Venezuela, stop to watch a triangular object that stops and hovers in midair for short intervals. The object gives off a beam of light in various directions. ("The South American Scene," APRO Bulletin, July/Aug. 1966, p. 8)

1966, Mid-June — 1:30 a.m. Student pilot Joseph Gambucci is flying near Hibbing, Minnesota, when he sees a bright, elliptical light making three 360° turns to the left at approximately 3,000 mph. The light is white, mixed with green and red. It climbs to 40° above the horizon then disappears at a height of 31,000 feet. Gambucci checks with Duluth Air National Guard Base, which reports having a UFO on radar at the same position as his aircraft. Other radar units in northern Minnesota and southern Canada are said to track the object. (NICAP case file)

1966, June 16 — Dusk. Several witnesses in Uniopolis, Ohio, watch a domed black disc with lights and a powerful light beam shining from its bottom. One of the observers is alerted by his dog barking persistently and looking to the south. The object flies directly over the house, heading north, and is also seen by his wife, a neighbor, and the neighbor's children. The light beam shines into a nearby wood, lighting up the trees. (Michael D. Swords, "The Timmerman Files," IUR 26, no. 4 (Winter 2001–2002): 13–14)

1966, June 19 — 12:05 a.m. A group of Boy Scouts camping out at Mount Mitchell State Park, North Carolina, sees three red pulsating lights in a triangular pattern approach, then hover until about 5:00 a.m. The lights blink at different speeds, with the center one turning white every fifth pulsation. At sunrise, the object lifts up, appearing red and bell-shaped through binoculars. Six smaller objects are hovering nearby on either side of the larger object, changing formation. The group then disappears behind a mountain. When the Scouts start to explore in the direction of the objects, about 60 feet from their camp they discover trees with broken branches and some crushed undergrowth, plus three holes in the ground forming an equilateral triangle. (Sparks, p. 315; Fred Merritt, "A Preliminary Classification of Some Reports of UFOs," IUR 28, no. 3 (Fall 2003): 10)

1966, June 19 — 9:45 p.m. US Army soldiers are watching an outdoor movie at Nha Trang Air Base [now closed] on the southern edge of Nha Trang, Vietnam. The viewing is made possible by the installation of six new 100kw diesel-powered generators. A Shell Oil tanker is anchored in Nha Trang Bay, two Douglas A-1 Skyraider aircraft are warming up on an airstrip, and eight bulldozers are at work on nearby hills. Sgt. William Dalrymple sees the sky light up to the north and a bright object approaches, alternately moving at high speed and slowing down. It descends toward the soldiers, stops dead, and hovers about 300–500 feet above the ground. The surrounding valley and hills are lit up by it. Then the generators fail and everything on the base goes black for 4 minutes. The UFO finally goes straight up and out of sight in 2–3 seconds. (NICAP, "Major E-M Case over Missile Site"; Bill Beeney, "A Good Case for UFOs," Rochester (N.Y.) Democrat and Chronicle, March 17, 1967, p. 8B; "Vietnam UFO Incident Uncovered," UFO Investigator, July 1973, pp. 1–2; Raymond E. Fowler, UFOs: Interplanetary Visitors, 1974, pp. 101–103; UFOEv II 80)

1966, June 22 — Secretary of State for Defence Merlyn Rees tells the House of Commons that both military and civilian UFO reports are investigated, and that 351 reports were received between 1959 and 1965, adding that "No defence implications have been found." (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1966, June 23 — 3:42 a.m. NASA contract flight engineer Julian Sandoval and two independent witnesses see a glowing elongated object with a blunt end. It has a series of four body lights varying from brilliant green to a bluish tinge, and is hovering at an estimated 12,000 feet near Placitas, New Mexico. When the object moves its glow brightens, and it appears to be a powered craft. The witnesses watch the object for an hour and a half, after which it climbs vertically, accelerates to a high velocity, and disappears to the northeast in about 12 seconds. In a report to NICAP, Sandoval estimates the departure speed at "Mach 6 or better." ("Apollo Engineer Spots UFO," APRO Bulletin, July/Aug. 1966, p. 2; "New Reports by Space Experts Add to UFO Proof," UFO Investigator 3, no. 9 (Aug./Sept. 1966): 3)

1966, June 24 — 3:30 a.m. Officer William L. Stevens Jr. of the Richmond, Virginia, Police Department, is patrolling the northeastern section of the city in Car 625, going north on Meadowbridge Road near the city limits. About 4 blocks ahead is the Atlantic Rural Exposition Fairgrounds [now the Richmond Raceway]. Looking in that direction, Stevens notices some odd greenish-yellow lights in the distance. He radios the dispatcher and drives ahead to investigate. Above the Richmond-Henrico Turnpike, he sees a large, dirigible-like object hovering, with a row of alternating green and yellow lights around its perimeter, surrounded by a mist. The object seems to be about 100–125 feet long and 30–40 feet high with no structural details visible. Stevens accelerates toward the object, which reacts immediately by turning laterally about 90° and moving swiftly away. He continues to speed up, but the object maintains its distance. The chase continues into Hanover County, with Stevens going more than 100 mph. After 10–15 minutes, the object suddenly accelerates and disappears in a matter of seconds. (Keyhoe and Lore, UFOs: A New Look, 1968, p. 9; UFOEv II 187)

1966, June 25 — 9:30 p.m. Several objects violate the air space over the Ellsworth AFB H-01 missile launch facility southwest of Union Center, South Dakota, setting off the vibration sensors. Helicopters attempt to chase the objects, but they fly away quickly to the north-northeast. Other sightings take place over the next week. (National UFO Reporting Center, [case report]; Nukes 241–245)

1966, June 30 — On James E. McDonald's second visit to Wright-Patterson AFB in Dayton, Ohio, his request for a photocopy of the Robertson Panel report is denied. (Clark III 696; Clark IV 792)

1966, June 30 — Richard Helms becomes director of central intelligence. He is the first DCI since Dulles to push hard for results in the mind-control field. Operation MKSearch goes into overdrive. Old projects are resurrected, abandoned projects reactivated. The safe houses are told to expect a steady supply of Viet Cong expendables to experiment on. One of the projects to be revived is the less than successful Operation Mindbender. Renamed Operation Spellbinder, the assignment is to create a sleeper killer, a real-life Manchurian Candidate. A hypnotist is recruited from the American Society of Clinical and Experimental Hypnosis. He becomes known to the CIA staff as "Dr. Fingers" and is selected because his file states that he has no qualms about conducting potentially terminal experiments. The intended victim of the experiment is Fidel Castro. After attempts to program several would-be assassins, the operation is discontinued and written off as a complete failure. (Sid Taylor, "A History of Secret CIA Mind Control Research," Nexus, April/May 1992; "Project Spellbinder," in Brad Steiger and Sherry Steiger, Conspiracies and Secret Societies: The Complete Dossier, 2nd ed., Visible Ink, 2012)

1966, July — 11:00 a.m. An Air Force Douglas C-47 Skytrain is flying 25 miles southwest of Provo, Utah, when the pilot snaps two color-slide photos of a reddish disc-shaped object that briefly comes into view before speeding away. The Condon commission declines to examine the photos in detail, noting some discrepancies. (Condon, pp. 270–273; Patrick Gross, "UFOs Photographed")

1966, July 4 — The Freedom of Information Act, requiring the full or partial disclosure of previously unreleased information and documents controlled by the US government, is signed into law by President Lyndon B. Johnson. (Wikipedia, "Freedom of Information Act (United States)")

1966, July 7 — In a Blue Book briefing, Brig. Gen. William C. Garland, deputy chief of USAF Public Information at the Pentagon, again denies that NORAD radars have picked up any "spaceships," interplanetary "interlopers," or "extraterrestrial vehicles." (Clark III 808; Clark IV 901)

1966, July 9 — 2:00 p.m. Kenneth Arnold takes a 16mm film of a UFO over Idaho Falls, Idaho. The object looks like a weather balloon, but it is flying at a speed of 45–75 mph into a north-northwest wind. (Kim Hansen, "UFO Casebook," UFOs 1947–1987, Fortean Tomes, 1987, p. 53)

1966, July 13 — 2:00 a.m. Railway linesman Camillo Faieta is on duty at the crossing in Fornacette, Pisa, Italy, when he is dazzled by a powerful light coming from the Emissario Canal. The light goes out and he sees an object hovering above a small islet in the canal. Two little men emerge, but the bright light comes on again and the object takes off. Police turn up other witnesses, but Italian and US air force officers from the nearby Camp Darby military complex tell Faieta not to speak about the incident any further. (1Pinotti 147–148)

1966, July 18 — 5:30 a.m. A man living on Marischal Street in Aberdeen, Scotland, is waiting for the milkman at a window facing the North Sea. He sees a gray disk about 15 feet in diameter and rotating slowly only about 30 feet above his window. It heads silently toward the sea on a straight course. (Carl Feindt, "Report #1093," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 291)

1966, July 18 — 9:00 a.m. W. T. Jackson and Kelly Dikeman, two mechanics at a service station in Baytown, Texas, see a white object shaped like two saucers face-to-face with a row of square windows in between. The object is hovering above a store about 300 feet away, then it begins moving, rapidly accelerates, and speeds away. ("Baytonian, Witness Describe 'Saucer,'" Baytown (Tex.) Sun, July 25, 1966, p. 1; "Reflections Don't Have Windows, Flying Saucer Witness Contends," Houston (Tex.) Post, September 8, 1966; Gardner Soule, UFOs and IFOs: A Factual Report on Flying Saucers, Putnam, 1967, pp. 47–52; James E. McDonald, "Statement on Unidentified Flying Objects," in Symposium on Unidentified Flying Objects, Hearings, US House Committee on Science and Astronautics, 90th Cong., 2nd Sess., July 29, 1968, pp. 57–58)

1966, July 19 — MP John Langford-Holt asks UK Prime Minister Harold Wilson in the House of Commons whether, since the Defence Secretary is responsible only for air defense implications of UFOs, he would allocate the assessment of their wider implications to another department. Wilson says he will not, but that reports are taken seriously when there is adequate information. (Good Above, p. 60; Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1966, July 20 — James E. McDonald's third visit to Wright-Patterson AFB in Ohio. He is again denied a copy of the Robertson Panel report because it has been "reclassified." He is convinced that USAF has done a lousy job of investigating UFOs and that UFOs are actually good evidence for the ETH. (Clark III 696; Clark IV 792)

1966, July 22 — 9:00 p.m. W. J. Norton, curator of the Ludlow Museum, and his family see a UFO shaped like a silver isosceles triangle to the east of Llandrindod Wells, Powys, Wales. It hovers for 30–40 seconds and emits a low hum. ("Llandrindod Triangle," Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1966): 32)

1966, July 22 — 11:25 p.m. While driving his son home from the railway station in Fremont, Indiana, a realtor and retired WWII Navy officer see an illuminated, 25-foot diameter disc with portholes on its lower convex surface. The object descends low over the car and hovers above it. They have it in view about 5–8 minutes. When two other cars approach, the object extinguishes its lights, then shoots straight up into the sky, leaving a trail of bluish light. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 108–109)

1966, Late July — Col. J. Thomas Ratchford, an AFOSR scientist, approaches the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colorado, about contracting with the Air Force for a UFO study. Its director, Walter Orr Roberts, is interested, but William W. Kellogg, associate director of the Laboratory of Atmospheric Physics, is not. Roberts suggests the University of Colorado. Ratchford talks to prominent University of Colorado physicist Edward U. Condon, who hesitates but finds the $300,000 offered by the Air Force (plus $13,000 in operating expenses) attractive. (Robert J. Low, "Some Thoughts on the UFO Project," memo to E. James Archer and Thurston E. Manning, August 9, 1966; Swords 309; Clark III 1192; Powell, Keyhoe, 345–346; Eghigian, After, pp. 193–195; Clark IV 1366)

1966, Late July — 7:00 p.m. Raquel Jodorowsky is in a traffic jam in Mexico City, Mexico, as people are getting out of their cars and looking to the sky. A large glowing object is hanging at 45° above the horizon to the east. The object ejects smaller bright objects that fly away. After 30 minutes the large object dims, becomes smaller, and disappears. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 11)

1966, July 29 — J. Allen Hynek writes to a citizen interested in UFOs and says that he thinks the Portage County, Ohio, case should be labeled unidentified and has told the Air Force as much. Its evaluation as a satellite or Venus has not originated with him as a mere consultant. (Bill Murphy, "The Swamp Gas Aftermath: Some Notes from the Gerald Ford Files," IUR 33, no. 2 (July 2010): 12)

1966, July 30 — The fourth and final launch of a D-21 drone from an M-21 ends in disaster 150 miles off the coast of California. Unlike the three previous launches, this one is performed straight and level, not in an outside loop to assist in the separation of the drone from the aircraft. The D-21 suffers engine problems and strikes the M-21's tail after separation, leading to the destruction of both aircraft. The two crew members eject and land at sea. The pilot, Bill Park, survives, but the launch control officer, Ray Torrick, drowns. Johnson decides to refit the D-21 to launch from a B-52 bomber in order to not endanger any more M-21s. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed D-21")

1966, August 1 — Jacques Vallée meets, through his friend Aimé Michel, with physicist Yves Rocard and gives him a copy of outstanding Blue Book UFO reports, but the contact goes no further. (Jacques Vallée, Forbidden Science, North Atlantic, 1992, pp. 55, 198, 201–202)

1966, August 1 — 7:45 p.m. Several children are playing outside in Rushville, Indiana, when they see an object hovering above a tree near them. Its altitude is about 75 feet. They describe it as round, brighter than the moon, silver, and about 4 times larger than the full moon. It has a fuzzy edge and rocks slightly as it hovers. One girl, Donna Glosser, calls it to the attention of others who are about a half-block away. When she does, the object changes to reddish-orange, seems to revolve, and moves across a road so fast it seems to jump. It stops abruptly over some trees on a hill about one block away. At least one adult watches the object for 5 minutes. The same object is apparently seen by a group of teens at the Dairy Delight Drive-In about a mile and a half away. It becomes brighter after 45 seconds and speeds away. ("Children Watch Object in Central Indiana," APRO Bulletin, July/Aug. 1966, p. 8)

1966, August 7 — The Washington Star runs an article on UFOs by retired USAF Lt. Col. Charles Cooke saying that he has analyzed first-hand UFO encounters by Air Force pilots that show strong support for the ETH.

1966, August 9 — Robert J. Low, assistant dean in the University of Colorado Graduate School, is also interested in the UFO project. He consults with several scientists and reports on what they tell him in a memo to E. James Archer, dean of the graduate school, and Thurston E. Manning, university vice president. The memo, which is not sent to Condon and is intended to show university officials that the project will not embarrass them, says: "Our study would be conducted almost exclusively by nonbelievers who, although they couldn't possibly prove a negative result, could and probably would add an impressive body of evidence that there is no reality to the observations. The trick would be, I think, to describe the project so that, to the public, it would appear a totally objective study but to the scientific community, would present the image of a group of nonbelievers trying their best to be objective but having an almost zero expectation of finding a saucer." He recommends stressing the psychology and sociology of the witnesses rather than physical evidence. The memo stays under wraps for a year and a half. (Robert J. Low, "Some Thoughts on the UFO Project," memo to E. James Archer and Thurston E. Manning, August 9, 1966; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, p. 239; Swords 309–310, 321–322; Clark III 1192; Powell, Keyhoe, 346–348, 365; Eghigian, After, pp. 204–205; Clark IV 1366–1367)

1966, August 15 — 2:00 a.m. Keith Palmer happens to glance out the window at his residence on Ellenborough Road in Wood Green, London, England, and sees an object half the size of the full moon approaching from the northeast. He wakes up his wife, and they both watch as the brightly glowing disc stops 450 feet away above an old tree. After hovering a short time, it emits two smaller discs that take up positions on either side and emit beams of pure white light. When Palmer opens the window, the two small discs extinguish their lights and move back inside the larger one, which tilts slightly and moves toward the house. They hear a noise like a humming top or muffled jet, and the object appears more pear-shaped. As it passes above the house, Palmer can see a series of colored lights revolving in a random fashion on the underside. It vanishes in the distance. The next morning, Palmer notices a sunburn-like rash on his face, and his wife and son complain of a headache and sore neck. The symptoms soon disappear. (Colin McCarthy, "The Wood Green UFO," Flying Saucer Review 12, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1966): 4–5)

1966, August 15 — Office of Scientific Intelligence Deputy Director Karl H. Weber writes to Col. Gerald E. Jorgensen, chief of the USAF Community Relations Division, that "We are most anxious that further publicity not be given to the information that the [Robertson] panel was sponsored by the CIA." Weber notes that there is already a sanitized version available to the public. (Gerald K. Haines, "CIA's Role in the Study of UFOs, 1947–90," Studies in Intelligence 40, no. 5 (1997): 67–84)

1966, Mid-August — Rep. J. Edward Hutchinson (R-Mich.) introduces HR 866 for an investigation into Project Blue Book's methods.

1966, August 16 — 2:51 a.m. The crew of a Canadian Forces Hercules C-150E are flying above Regina, Saskatchewan, when they see a cigar-shaped object cross their flight path. It has 6 rectangular patches on its side. It is visible with the naked eye for about 90 seconds, then it rapidly shrinks and disappears to the southwest very rapidly. (Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Sightings, Landings, and Abductions, Methuen, 1979, p. 112)

1966, August 16 — Iraqi Air Force Col. Munir Redfa defects by flying a MiG-21 to Israel. In what is considered one of Mossad's most successful operations, Redfa's entire extended family is smuggled safely out of Iraq to Israel. The MiG-21 fighter is evaluated by the Israeli Air Force and later loaned to the US for testing and intelligence analysis at Area 51. Knowledge obtained from analysis of the aircraft is instrumental to the successes achieved by the Israeli Air Force in the Six-Day War. (Wikipedia, "Munir Redfa")

1966, August 16 — The chief of the Australian Directorate of Public Relations writes to the Directorate of Air Force Intelligence requesting reconsideration of its decision to stop making summaries of UFO sightings reported to the Department of Air available to the public. DPR hopes the summaries will be useful in responding to public inquiries and thinks that restricting them will reinforce the theory that the government has something to hide. The summaries continue to be published erratically through the end of the 1970s. (Swords 393–394)

1966, August 19 — 4:50 p.m. US Border Patrolman Donald E. Flickinger, in the process of taking two prisoners back to Canada, sees a silvery domed disc floating down the side of a hill near Donnybrook, North Dakota, about 10 feet off the ground. It moves across a valley and climbs to 100 feet, hovers over a reservoir, then appears to land in a field 250 feet away. It tilts on edge and rises into the clouds at high speed. Flickinger finds three odd indentations in the field in the form of a triangle with sides of 10–12 feet. Some stones also seem to have been moved recently. (Sparks, p. 317; Condon, pp. 273–274; Hynek UFO Report, photo betw. pp. 152–153)

1966, August 20 — Afternoon. Some boys looking for a lost kite on the Morro do Vintém in Niterói, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, discover the bodies of two dead males and report them to the authorities. The Morro do Vintém is a hill with difficult terrain, and the police are unable to reach the bodies until August 21. When a small team of police and firefighters arrive, they encounter an odd scene: the bodies are resting next to each other, partly covered by grass. Each one is wearing a formal suit, a lead eye mask, and a waterproof coat. There are no signs of trauma or struggle. Next to the corpses, police find an empty water bottle and a packet containing two wet towels. A small notebook is also identified, on which were written the cryptic instructions, "16:30 be at the specified location. 18:30 ingest capsules, after the effect protect metals await signal mask." The two men are identified as Manoel Pereira da Cruz and Miguel José Viana, two electronic technicians from Campos dos Goytacazes. Following an investigation, police reconstruct a plausible narrative of the men's last days. On August 17, Cruz and Viana leave Campos dos Goytacazes saying that they needed to purchase some materials for work (although they tell others they are on a secret mission). The two men then board a bus to Niterói and arrive at 2:30 p.m. Evidence shows that the waterproof coats were purchased at a shop there, and one bottle of water from a local bar. Upon being interviewed, the waitress from the bar described Miguel as "very nervous," and noticed he frequently checked his watch. That is the last time they are known to have been seen alive; it is presumed they go directly from the bar to the spot where they were discovered. One theory revolves around the testimony of a friend of the two men, who claims that they are members of a group of "scientific spiritualists" who are apparently attempting to contact extraterrestrials or spirits using psychedelic drugs. Believing that such an encounter would be accompanied by blinding light, the men cut metal masks to shield their eyes and may have died of drug overdoses. This account is corroborated by the esoteric diary entry found at the scene and by mask-making materials and literature concerning spirits found at the men's homes. In April 1980, Jacques Vallée locates the exact spot where the bodies were found and notes that no vegetation is growing there. (Wikipedia, "Lead masks case"; Charles Bowen, "The Mystery of the Morro do Vintem," Flying Saucer Review 13, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1967): 11–14; Jacques Vallée, Confrontations: A Scientist's Search for Alien Contact, Ballantine, 1990, pp. 3–15; Clark III 774–775; Clark IV 855–856)

1966, August 22 — Phil Klass asserts in Aviation Week that the Exeter UFO was a plasma discharge from high-voltage power lines. (Philip J. Klass, "Plasma Theory May Explain Many UFOs," Aviation Week and Space Technology 85 (August 22, 1966): 48–61)

1966, August 24 — 10:00 p.m. Airman 3d Class Michael D. Mueller reports by base radio seeing a multicolored light high in the sky above the Minot AFB M-6 Minuteman launch site southeast of Norma, North Dakota. A team goes to his location and confirms the object and sees a second white object passing in front of clouds. The base radar detects the object, which is tracked at about 100,000 feet (20 miles). The object rises and descends a number of times, and each time Maj. Chester A. Shaw Jr., in charge of the M-6 missile crew, finds his radio transmission interrupted by static, even though he is 60 feet underground. The UFO gradually descends to ground level 10–15 miles south of the base. The Air Force sends a strike team to check on it. When they are within 10 miles of the site, static disrupts their radio contact. Five to eight minutes later, the glow diminishes and the UFO takes off. Another UFO is sighted and tracked on radar; the first object flies underneath this second one. The two objects disappear separately. The entire episode lasts about 4 hours and is confirmed by two other missile launch sites, M-4 and N-7 (near Mohall). Another report from the same time period mentions that some missiles went off alert for 24 hours after a UFO sighting at the N-1 missile alert facility. 1966, August 27 — Hynek releases to the press a letter rejected by Science magazine in which he reports a pattern to UFO sightings that "suggests that something is going on" and disputing seven misconceptions about UFOs. ("Expert Criticizes Scientists for Dismissing UFOs," Miami (Fla.) Herald, August 28, 1966, p. 5-C)

1966, August 31 — Col. Ivan C. Atkinson, deputy executive director of the Air Force Office of Scientific Research, formally approaches the University of Colorado with a request to conduct a comprehensive and independent examination of the UFO problem.

1966, August or September — Mid-afternoon. Two men are returning home from bowling in Norwood, Massachusetts. The Moon is visible in about three-quarter phase in the sky. Both glance up and see a group of 6–7 disc-shaped objects moving horizontally toward the Moon. When they reach a position just below the Moon, they loop around it in an upward, back, and onward motion, then continue on their way. (Michael D. Swords, "We Know Where You Live," IUR 30, no. 2 (January 2006): 9–10)

1966, Early September — Night. Bank official Gerardo Bagnulo is on a pleasure outing with members of his family when he sees two objects moving across the sky on the coast of the Gargano promontory in southern Italy. He manages to take one color photo before the objects disappear near the northwest horizon. The photo shows both a round object and a cylindrical object. (Roberto Pinotti, "The Gargano Peninsula Cigar," IUR 9, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1984): 6; "As is often the case," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 5, no. 6 (Dec. 1984/Jan. 1985): 8; Roberto Pinotti, "Evidence for UFOs in the Italian Past," The Spectrum of UFO Research, CUFOS, 1988, pp. 115–116; 1Pinotti 154–156)

1966, September — Early morning. A UFO is seen hovering at low altitude by all personnel at Heathrow Airport Air Traffic Control in London, England, at a time when no aircraft are in motion. The UFO is tracked on radar and its speed at departure is clocked at 3,000 mph. The Ministry of Defence is notified, and investigators arrive on the scene and tell the witnesses that they have seen nothing, threatening to charge them under the Official Secrets Act if they reveal the sighting publicly. (Good Above, pp. 71–72)

1966, September — 1:30 a.m. Airman 1C Patrick McDonough is working on an astro-azimuth observation at one of the Malmstrom AFB missile launch facilities near Conrad, Montana, when a UFO comes in from the north and stops directly overhead at 300 feet. It is about 30–50 feet in diameter and disc-shaped, with dim lights outlining it and a white light emanating from the center. It remains about 20–30 seconds, then shoots away noiselessly to the east at tremendous speed. Montana Highway Patrol dispatchers in Pondera County receive more than 20 UFO reports that morning. (Nukes 247–248)

1966, September — 1:30 a.m. The starboard lookout on the Navy's minesweeper USS Embattle sees an object moving through the water in the Western Pacific Ocean. He estimates it is only 10 inches long. It holds its position for 5 minutes, then makes a sharp right turn and speeds away, making a noise like a fishing line being reeled in. (National UFO Reporting Center, "NUFORC UFO Sighting 58711," October 8, 2007; Dolan, USO1, 292)

1966, September — 4:00 a.m. Deputy Sheriff Ed Korenek is driving north of El Campo, Texas, on State Highway 71 when he sees something like a car on fire ahead of him. Suddenly he notices that another object is pacing him, He hits his brakes and reaches for the radio, but it is dead. He sees another flaming object above Wharton Regional Airport to the east. He accelerates toward the object ahead of him, which slides off the highway to the right, sucking its flame up behind it as it moves away. The object above the airfield disappears, and when Korenek turns his car around, his radio begins working again. ("The Texas Flap," APRO Bulletin, Jan./Feb. 1967, p. 3)

1966, September — 7:30 p.m. Dennis Billings hears amplified sounds (a conversation, children playing, rattle of dishes) coming from a closed house in Decatur, Alabama, and sees a dark object above the house light up into an orange sphere. It drops white sparks. Its lights appear to be a spectrum of colors that blink in sync with its movements. He watches it with binoculars as it moves away. Then another object appears and hovers above the yard of the house for several minutes, displaying a dome-like structure beneath. It eventually follows an airplane before returning to the vicinity of an airport, where it hovers for 10 minutes then interacts with another similar object. The sighting leaves his eyes feeling strained. ("Object Photographed in Alabama," APRO Bulletin, Nov./Dec. 1970, pp. 5–6)

1966, September 3 — Science columnist John Lear receives a declassified (sanitized) copy of the Robertson Panel report and publishes a version of it in the Saturday Review. He calls for the release of the full document. (John Lear, "The Disputed CIA Document on UFOs," Saturday Review, September 3, 1966, pp. 45–50; Clark III 1017; Clark IV 1131)

1966, September 5 — 2:00 p.m. Franz Trautsamwieser takes a photo of the Church of San Giorgio Maggiore in Venice, Italy, from the other side of the canal. He does not see anything, but the developed photo shows a UFO-shaped whitish object next to the tower. ("UFO over Venice?" Flying Saucer Review 13, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1967, cover, 17)

1966, September 12 — The Air Force turns down a proposal Hynek has made for them to create a computer program to put Blue Book's UFO reports into a machine-readable format, ostensibly because it is too preoccupied with the Vietnam War. (Center for UFO Studies, [Hynek correspondence], p. 2)

1966, September 13 — 7:30 a.m. 11-year-old Randy Rotenberger, near Stirum, North Dakota, sees a silvery domed disc hover about one mile away, approach, then land within 900 feet, making a low-pitched whine. It takes off so fast it just vanishes." An Air Force investigator finds landing indentations 7 inches deep and [possibly] radiation level of 100 microroentgens/hour. Electrical power is off in the area for about 4 hours. (NICAP, "Domed Object Leaves Traces"; Sparks, p. 319; "Landing In North Dakota," APRO Bulletin, July/August 1966, pp. 1, 3; Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, pp. 58–59; Ted Phillips, Physical Traces Associated with UFO Sightings, CUFOS, July 1975, Case 247, p. 43; UFOEv II 263; Clark III 950; Clark IV 1064)

1966, September 17 — 4:45 a.m. Mr. and Mrs. Ronald MacGilvary see a glowing cigar-shaped object oriented vertically, tilted at times, for about an hour near the edge of the water at Crane Beach, Ipswich, Massachusetts. Two smaller glowing objects approach the larger object, moving around erratically, with an up-and-down skipping motion. The two rendezvous with the larger object, then a third smaller object is seen. The smaller objects periodically leave the larger object and flies around the area. One flies low over Ipswich Bay toward the witnesses' home. At closer range it shows an elliptical shape illuminated by a faint glow. ("'Satellite' UFO Landing Case in Massachusetts," UFO Investigator 3, no. 10 (Oct./Nov. 1966): 4)

1966, September 19 — Air Force Regulation 200-2 is replaced by AFR 80-17, which orders members of the military who investigate UFO reports to release information if there is an explanation, but if there is none to withhold the information, even from the Colorado project (explicitly modified November 9). Radarscope photos are automatically classified. However, it does require that every Air Force base have an official with scientific background responsible for investigating UFOs. (US Department of the Air Force, "Research and Development: Unidentified Flying Objects," Air Force Regulation 80-17, September 19, 1966; Clark III 923; Clark IV 1033)

1966, September 20 — 10:00 a.m. Private pilot James J. O'Connor is flying at 9,500 feet near Sebring, Florida, when he sees what appears to be a delta-shaped object overhead. Curious, he climbs toward it but levels off at about 10,000 feet due to lack of oxygen equipment. Suddenly the object descends toward his plane and begins pacing him, its huge size blocking out the sunlight. It makes a "singing" noise like car tires on a wet pavement. After a few minutes, he pulls up his plane, reduces power, and stalls out, diving as fast as he can. He drops to 3,500 feet, looks up, and sees the object still pacing him, seemingly as big as a football field. The UFO changes shape to a wedge, then a thin line, doing a reverse peel-off in a 360° turn. As it climbs away, it looks like a cone with the point upward. He estimates the object had followed him for 17 minutes. (Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore, eds, UFOs: A New Look, NICAP, 1969, p. 7; UFOEv II 128–129)

1966, September 21 — 6:30 a.m. Eight RCAF airmen are refueling an aircraft in Summerside, Prince Edward Island, Canada, when they see an object in the east moving at great speed. It comes to a complete stop, descends, and hovers for 20 minutes. It then shoots up and disappears quickly. At about the same time, fishermen Ivan Collicut and Patrick O'Halloran are out for an early morning catch at Burton, Prince Edward Island, when they see a rapidly moving light. ("Near-Landing Observed by RCAF," UFO Investigator 3, no. 10 (Oct./Nov. 1966): 4)

1966, September 21 — At a meeting of the University of Colorado psychology department, Stuart W. Cook announces that the university is considering taking on the UFO project, with Condon directing. Cook says it will need the help of psychologists. William A. Scott and David R. Saunders are interested. Around this time, Condon agrees to an informal question-and-answer session about the project. George Gamow and Richard Sigismond are in attendance. Gamow is surprised that Condon has never heard of the Trindade Island UFO photos. Sigismond applies for an opening on the committee and is accepted, but he declines the offer after a 20-minute interview with Condon, whose negative bias on the subject is unyielding. (Richard Sigismond, "A Confrontation with Dr. Condon: Prelude and Aftermath," IUR 8, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1983): 3–5, 16; "Condon Confrontation Continues," IUR 9, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1984): 9; Clark III 1192; Clark IV 1367)

1966, September 22 — 3:00 a.m. Police from several vantage points in Deadwood, South Dakota, see a large white hovering object, changing color to green to red then back to white. It hangs motionless for 15 minutes. When a spotlight is shone on it, the object blacks out. Two smaller white objects operating independently approach and hover nearby. The large object bobs around and emits blue light beams toward the ground, and finally speeds away in 3 seconds. (NICAP, "Satellite Objects, Sept. 22, 1966, Deadwood, SD"; Carl Sagan and Thornton Page, eds., UFO's: A Scientific Debate, Cornell University, 1972, pp. xxii–xxiii; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 49–50; UFOEv II 187–188)

1966, September 22 — Psychologist Michael Wertheimer tells Cook he will participate in the Colorado project. (Clark III 1193; Clark IV 1367)

1966, September 22 — Hynek appeals to Secretary of the Air Force Harold Brown to create a program to put UFO reports into a machine-readable database. He also recommends a more scientific approach to data acquisition that will make the Air Force look better to the public and the scientific community. (Center for UFO Studies, [Hynek correspondence], pp. 3–5)

1966, September 24 — 3:30 a.m. A man named Gaines is driving his girlfriend home in Peoria, Illinois, when they see a large, luminous, blue sphere hovering low in the sky. It shoots off, so he drops the girlfriend off. On the way home the blue ball returns; his car begins to pick up speed, the brakes won't work, and the doors won't open. He races on this way for a few blocks, then the UFO takes off. ("Peorian Reports Seeing Flying Object Which Took Over Control of His Auto," Peoria (Ill.) Journal-Star, September 25, 1966; Michael D. Swords, "Messing Around with the Force," IUR 31, no. 4 (March 2008): 17)

1966, Autumn — Night. A young couple parking in a rural area near Rockford, Illinois, see a bright light that appears over some nearby trees. It is so intense that it hurts their eyes, so they start the car up and drive down a gravel road. The light is gone, but near where it had been they can now see two gray figures with large slanted eyes and wearing clothing with a square insignia on the torso. As they leave the area, they smell a pungent, metallic odor. ("Letter," IUR 9, no. 2 (March/April 1984): 6, 9; "Out of the Past," IUR 9, no. 2 (March/April 1984): 8–9)

1966, Autumn — 7:30 p.m. Estelle Conway looks outside her dining room window at Highland Lakes, New Jersey, and sees a large orange ball with a dark vermilion border hovering about 300 feet above a pond about a quarter-mile away. When she looks for it 15 minutes later, it is no longer there. Around the same time, electrical engineer Guy F. Adams sees an opalescent-like, neon-green ball" about 50 feet across moving slowly across a road for 6–8 seconds near Conway's home. (Berthold E. Schwarz, "UFOs in New Jersey," Pursuit 7, no. 2 (April 1974): 31, 33–34)

1966, October — Charles Bowen publishes a special issue of Flying Saucer Review titled The Humanoids, dealing exclusively with UFO occupant cases. Gordon Creighton provides a compilation of all occupant cases from Central and South America dating back to 1947 and finds an assortment of bodily types. There are giants, tall men, medium-sized men, and small men. Some are said to be hairy, others green. He uncovers reports of entities with one eye, three eyes, and even multiple eyes. (Gordon Creighton, "The 'Humanoids' in Latin America," in Charles Bowen, ed., The Humanoids, Special Issue 1 of FSR, October/November 1966, pp. 30–46; Eghigian, After, p. 149)

1966, October — Hynek's lengthy letter about UFOs and Project Blue Book is published in Science magazine. It addresses seven misconceptions about UFOs. "I cannot dismiss the UFO phenomenon with a shrug," he concludes. (O'Connell 201–204)

1966, October — The Canadian Directorate of Operations issues Canadian Forces Administrative Order 71-6, "Reporting of Unidentified Flying Objects," to make it easier to obtain UFO reports from military bases and police forces. (Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Canada, Signet, 1981, p. 173)

1966, October 1 — James E. McDonald writes to Thomas Ratchford of the USAF Office of Scientific Research to tell him that he will soon speak out for radical changes in the handling of UFO reports. He writes to NICAP's Richard H. Hall that he thinks the ETH is the most "acceptable hypothesis" for UFO sightings, and that "certain parts of the total UFO pattern suggest something in the nature of a reconnaissance operation." (Clark III 697; Eghigian, After, p. 201; Clark IV 793)

1966, October 2 — 8:20 p.m. Mrs. Everett Steward is talking on the telephone at her home in Cincinnati, Ohio, when she smells a foul odor in the room. She goes to her bedroom, but she has a feeling of being watched. Looking out the window, she sees an oval-shaped object with portholes and red, green, and white lights revolving around it. It is 75 feet in diameter and hovering at 100 feet. She wakes up her husband, who also sees it, and calls her married daughter, Mrs. Janet Emery, a mile away; the Emerys also see it, and a neighbor with binoculars can see that it has square windows glowing yellow. Janet goes outdoors and sees the UFO eject a red ball, which maneuvers while the first UFO takes off southward. The red ball flies 75–100 feet over Janet's head; its underside is shiny like aluminum foil. Mrs. Steward goes to bed, but the odor is still in the house. After some time, the room is filled for an instant with brilliant white light; then this vanishes and a globe of light about 21 inches in diameter appears at the foot of her bed. Inside are 5 "non-human, hairless heads" with oval, sunken eyes. Instead of noses, there are slits, and they have no mouths. Telepathically, they repeat several times: "We have made contact." Mrs. Steward screams and the globe disappears. She is so disquieted by the experience that she goes under psychiatric care for the next 2 years. (Stringfield, Situation Red, Doubleday, 1977, pp. 33–36)

1966, October 3 — Phil Klass has another article in Aviation Week on plasmas as an explanation for UFOs. (Philip J. Klass, "Many UFOs Are Identified as Plasmas," Aviation Week and Space Technology 85 (October 3, 1966): 54–73)

1966, October 4, 18 — Excerpts of John G. Fuller's book about the Betty and Barney Hill abduction case, Interrupted Journey, appear in a two-part article of Look magazine. (Wikipedia, "Barney and Betty Hill"; John G. Fuller, "Aboard a Flying Saucer, Part I," Look 30, no. 20 (October 4, 1966): 44–48, 53–56; John G. Fuller, "Aboard a Flying Saucer, Part II," Look 30, no. 21 (October 18, 1966): 111–121; Clark III 585; Clark IV 643)

1966, October 4–5 — 5:00 a.m. Jack Jones is delivering newspapers on John Street in Connersville, Indiana. He notices a group of lights in a field to the west past the dead end. He thinks it might be a new light installation and moves on. The next day, Jones is with another paper carrier, Don Doe, and he suggests they go see the new lights. Jack sees the lights, but they are in a different position somewhat to the north. Both boys sit on their bicycles and watch a dark disc-shaped object with flashing red, green, and white lights on it that is apparently on the ground some 840 feet into the field. They estimate it is 27 feet in diameter and 10 feet high. They hear a high-pitched whirring sound and smell a faint odor of sulfur and tannic acid. After watching it a few minutes, they hear a new sound as if someone is walking slowly toward them through some thick weeds. They take off on their bicycles and don't look back. Some days later, investigators find three holes, 8 feet apart in an equilateral triangle, where the object was seen. The holes measure 7 inches at the top and 1 inch at the bottom. ("UAO Landing in Indiana," APRO Bulletin, Nov./Dec. 1966, pp. 1, 3)

1966, October 5 — At a University of Arizona Department of Meteorology colloquium, James E. McDonald gives his views on the reality of UFOs and the Air Force's concealment of information. His colleagues respond negatively, and McDonald acknowledges to Gerard Kuiper that what he is doing is professionally risky. Nevertheless, the university's Space Sciences Committee gives him a $1,300 grant toward his research expenses. ("UFOs Are 'Real,' Physicist Asserts," Arizona Daily Star, October 6, 1966, p. B-1; Clark III 697; Clark IV 793)

1966, October 6 — Thurston Manning signs the University of Colorado contract with the Air Force. The project is to run from November 15, 1966, to January 1968. (Clark III 925, 1193; Clark IV 1035, 1367)

1966, October 7 — The Air Force publicly announces the creation of the University of Colorado UFO project. Low is made project coordinator. The primary team will be David R. Saunders, ESSA astronomer Franklin Roach, Wertheimer, chemist Roy Craig, University of Arizona electrical engineer Norman Levine, administrative assistant Mary Lou Armstrong, University of Arizona astronomer William K. Hartmann, physicist Frederick Ayer, and psychologists Dan Culberson and James Wadsworth. (Office of Assistant Secretary of Defense (Public Affairs), "Air Force Selects University of Colorado to Investigate Unidentified Flying Object Reports," October 7, 1966, release no. 847-66, p. 13, in Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 222–224; "The Colorado Project," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1966, p. 3; "UFO Probe Given to Colorado U.," San Francisco Examiner, October 7, 1966, p. 42; "University Starts UFO Probe: NICAP to Submit Factual Reports," UFO Investigator 3, no. 10 (Oct./Nov. 1966): 1, 3; Clark III 697, 1193; Powell, Keyhoe, 346–350; Eghigian, After, pp. 195–196; Clark IV 793, 1367)

1966, October 7 — McDonald speaks to the media about the secret Robertson Panel report. The CIA has ordered the Air Force to debunk UFOs, he says. ("UFO Hush Blamed on CIA Men," Phoenix Arizona Republic, October 7, 1966, pp. 21–22)

1966, October 8 — Condon is widely quoted in the media as saying it is "highly improbable" that UFOs exist. "The view that UFOs are hallucinatory will be a subject of our investigation, to discover what it is that makes people imagine they see things." (Chesly Manly, "UFOs Prober Keeps Open Mind and Door," Chicago Tribune, October 16, 1966, pp. 1, 4)

1966, October 8 — 7:00 p.m. Loch Ness monster researcher Frederick William "Ted" Holiday is fishing on the lifeboat slipway at Tenby harbor, Pembrokeshire, Wales, when he and other fishermen notice a small, bluish, luminous cloud moving in a circle about three times its own diameter above them. After a short time, he resumes his fishing, but 10 minutes later a dark object emerges from the cloud and beams down a brilliant ruby light on them. The cloud moves west and the object moves southwest. By the time he retrieves binoculars from his car, both objects are gone. (F. W. Holiday, "Was God at Aberfan?" Flying Saucer Review 18, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1972): 3–4)

1966, October 9 — An article in the Denver Post quotes University of Colorado UFO project coordinator Low as saying that the study barely meets the criteria for the university's teaching mission, but is a form of public service. He says, "When you're asked to do something (as opposed to applying for it) you don't say no—not to the Air Force." (UFOs Yes, 47)

1966, October 10 — Hynek discusses UFOs in Newsweek. The article covers the resurgence of interest in UFOs and encourages scientists to remain open to the possibility that some sightings might not have simple explanations, like weather balloons or optical illusions, and should be studied scientifically. He also warns against gullibility and stresses a careful, systematic approach to UFO research, amid rising public interest and media attention to incidents like the Barney and Betty Hill abduction. ("UFO's for Real?" Newsweek, October 10, 1966, p. 70)

1966, October 10 — 5:20 p.m. A woman and five children, 4–9, watch a metallic object fly past their farm home in Newton, Illinois. It moves slowly and uniformly in a westerly direction approximately 50 feet above the ground. The object is about 20 feet long and 8 feet in diameter and seems to have longitudinal seams. There is a small dorsal fin at the rear and a rectangular black aperture near the front. A brownish-gold design is visible on the lower rear portion, and the object is surrounded by a bluish haze, about 5 feet thick, that contains bubbles or sparks. It disappears by turning abruptly nose up and disappearing from sight in 1–2 seconds. About 70 minutes later, another witness about 7 miles away sees an elliptical blue light moving in the same general direction. (Carl Sagan and Thornton Page, eds., UFO's: A Scientific Debate, Cornell University, 1972, pp. xxix–xxx)

1966, October 10 — 9:15 p.m. Police Sgt. Benjamin Thompson of the Wanaque (New Jersey) Reservoir Police watches a bright light performing fantastic maneuvers over the reservoir. He notices a slight mist in the wake of its movements. It descends to 150 feet above the water, then shoots up. Thompson has also seen UFOs at the reservoir in January and March. Some teenagers see a UFO in the area 2 nights later. (NICAP, "The Wanaque Sightings"; Center for UFO Studies, [case files]; "Water Reconnaissance Continues," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1966, pp. 1, 3; Edward J. Babcock and Timothy Green Beckley, "UFO Plagues N.J. Reservoir," Fate 19, no. 10 (October 1966): 34–44; "UFOs Return to Wanaque Reservoir," UFO Investigator 3, no. 10 (Oct./Nov. 1966): 6; "The Wanaque 'Flap,'" Saucer Scoop 1, no. 9 (December 1966): 10–11; "What Happened at Wanaque, N.J." in Lloyd Mallan, ed., The Official Guide to UFOs, Science and Mechanics special issue, 1967; Sanderson, InvRes, pp. 58–62; Wendy Connors, "Cops and Saucers: Law Enforcement and UFO's, 1957–1981 Guide," November 20, 2013, audioclip 16; Vicente-Juan Ballester Olmos, "The Wanaque Reservoir 1966 UFO Pictures," Academia.edu, [2018]; Dolan, USO1 274–276)

1966, October 11 — Condon writes a letter to the editor of the Denver Post in response to Low's comments two days earlier, insisting that the UFO project is "an extraordinarily powerful way of learning about natural phenomena." He says he has heard from many people who "seem to find it difficult to refrain from passing judgment before all the facts are in." Shortly afterward, Stuart W. Cook announces that "no other staff member will speak to representatives of the mass media" other than Condon. (UFOs Yes, 47–49)

1966, October 11 — 9:45 p.m. Two boys in Elizabeth, New Jersey—Martin Munov and James Yanchitis—are walking home on 4th Street near East Jersey Street, adjacent to the elevated New Jersey Turnpike. Yanchitis tells his friend that there is someone following them. They turn and see a man standing behind a high wire fence separating them from the turnpike 30 feet above them. The fence is 8 feet high and the embankment running up to it is steep. John Keel interviews the two boys three days after the incident. They tell him that the man is 7 feet tall, has a dark complexion, and is wearing a green work suit. He has a bald head, large eyes, and a huge grinning mouth full of white teeth. (John Keel, Strange Creatures from Time and Space, Fawcett, 1970, p. 176)

1966, October 15 —4:45 a.m. Forester Jerry H. Simons is driving home from a camping expedition, notices a reddish glow behind him, and stops his car near Split Rock Pond, south of Newfoundland, New Jersey, to investigate. A flat-bottom, red-orange disc with a dome on top is hovering above and behind his car. Near panic, he flees the area with the object following him. When the light from the object illuminates the ground around him, his car engine, dashlights, and headlights all fail. When the object recedes, his lights and engine function normally. This sequence is repeated three times, strongly demonstrating a direct correlation between the light from the UFO and the failure of his car's electrical system. Shortly after the sighting, Simons begins experiencing a recurring illness (the reason for his story appearing in a medical journal); it is characterized by fatigue, anorexia, soreness, muscle weakness, chills, and significant weight loss. After about 6 months he has fully recovered. (Berthold Eric Schwarz, "UFOs: Delusion or Dilemma," Medical Times 96 (October 1968): 967–981; UFOEv II 37; Herbert S. Taylor, "An Update on Vehicle Interference Reports, Part 2," IUR 34, no. 1 (Sept. 2011): 14)

1966, Mid-October — Keyhoe is stressed by Condon's statements, so he calls both Condon and Low. Both assure him they were misquoted and ask for NICAP's support. He expresses his doubts to David R. Saunders, who with Richard Hall convinces him to lend his support to the project, for now. (UFOs Yes, 117)

1966, October 19 — James E. McDonald speaks to the Washington, D.C., Chapter of the American Meteorological Society on the inadequacy of military UFO investigations and the need to take seriously the "possibility that these aerial objects may be some type of extraterrestrial probes." (James E. McDonald, "The Problem of the Unidentified Flying Objects," October 19, 1966; "Prominent Scientist Praises NICAP, Calls AF Study 'Appalling,'" UFO Investigator 3, no. 10 (Oct./Nov. 1966): 1–2; Clark III 697; Clark IV 793–794)

1966, October 20 — Hynek visits Franklin Roach in Boulder, Colorado, to meet Condon and other Colorado project members. He notes that Condon has a "basically negative attitude." (Clark III 1193; Clark IV 1367)

1966, October 20 — 11:50 p.m. A telecommunications technician in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, sees a strangely behaving nocturnal light. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, p. 45)

1966, October 21 — Hynek's letter on misconceptions about UFOs is belatedly published in Science. (J. Allen Hynek, "UFO's Merit Scientific Study," Science 154 (1966): 329)

1966, October 21 — Night. Three junior high school students are standing at one end of their street in Amsterdam, New York, when they notice a star-like light to the right of the Moon. The star proceeds to draw aright-angle step around the Moon and continues northward, where it joins two other objects. The three objects then form 90° angles, equilateral triangles, and other geometrical figures. Two of the students go home for binoculars, and while they are away the sky show stops. They remain in the sky, but stationary. The objects look spherical through binoculars with some sort of lighted, colored areas that rotate. (Michael D. Swords, "We Know Where You Live," IUR 30, no. 2 (January 2006): 10)

1966, October 26 — 11:50 p.m. A man is driving in a rural, wooded area near Takoma Park, Maryland, when he sees a disc that seems about to land in a clearing. It puts on a red-and-green light show as it hovers. A large central beam of light shines onto the field below. The car radio bursts with static, and he hears a whirring sound coming from the object. He tries to accelerate the car, but it won't move. Radio and drive functions resume when the UFO moves away. ("UFO Sighted Here, in Frederick," La Plata (Md.) Enterprise, November 3, 1966; Michael D. Swords, "Messing Around with the Force," IUR 31, no, 4 (March 2008): 17, 29)

1966, October 28 — The Space Defense Center's satellite-tracking Delta I computer system at Cheyenne Mountain, Colorado, becomes operational. (Wikipedia, "Space Defense Center")

1966, October 31 — Night. An observer in Gloucester, Massachusetts, notices a particularly bright star in the southwestern sky that is moving in a wide arc. When it reaches Ursa Major, it paces along the Big Dipper, then turns and takes an approximately parallel course to the front of the constellation. (Michael D. Swords, "We Know Where You Live," IUR 30, no. 2 (January 2006): 10)

1966, November 1 — The University of Colorado UFO project officially launches. Michael D. Swords writes: "It was one of the most peculiar scientific grants of all time. Normally a governmental grant goes to a scientist who has initiated it or is at least vitally interested and experienced in the field, and essentially knows exactly what he is going to do. This grant was to a scientist who was pushed into it, had little interest and apparently no experience, and, despite his brilliance, 'didn't have a clue.' Because the reports of the UFO phenomenon are so complex and multidimensional, this short-term 'backwards grant' was doomed to fail before it was even signed." (Swords 309–312)

1966, November 1 — 8:00 p.m. Mrs. Ray Tibbetts is talking on the phone in her home at Newfields, New Hampshire, when her son, Dale, yells that there is a strange light outside. Her foster daughter, Anita Purrington, joins Dale and they both get excited. Mrs. Tibbetts runs to a window when the house lights begin blinking on and off. She goes to her son's room and sees a huge object with two tiers of four windows from which a strange, yellow-green light is shining. The size of one of the windows is as big as her living room wall. An apparent ceiling line is visible in the bottom tier. Suddenly an intense white light shoots out from the object at Mrs. Tibbetts, who is knocked backward and gets spots before her eyes. When her vision clears, the UFO is gone. She has pains in her eyes the next two days and they are extremely sensitive to light. She drives to a clinic in Exeter, New Hampshire, which finds a spasm in the eyelid and tearing, but it attributes this to the cobalt therapy she has been getting. (Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, pp. 10–11)

1966, Early November — Low and Hynek make the Colorado project's first field trip, to Minot and Donnybrook, North Dakota.

1966, November 2 — 7:25 p.m. Woodrow Derenberger is driving his panel truck home to Parkersburg, West Virginia, on Interstate 77 when a low-flying dark object about 35 feet wide cuts in front of him and forces him to stop. It hovers a foot above the ground, only 20 feet ahead. The object has a profile similar to a kerosene lamp chimney flattened on the bottom side. A door opens and a smiling man of dark complexion descends, wearing a topcoat ("blue and quite shiny, having a glistening effect") over shiny blue trousers. Without opening his mouth, which bears a fixed grin, he addresses Derenberger telepathically, asking him to open his window. For the next 10 minutes he conducts a telepathic conversation, first asking Derenberger's name and saying that his own is "Indrid Cold" from a planet called Lanulos in the "Ganymede galaxy." He tells Derenberger not to think of him as an alien and concludes by saying, "We will see you again." After admitting Mr. Cold, the UFO rises vertically and disappears. A truck driver named Walter Vanscoy is going north on I-77 and sees, in apparent confirmation of the encounter, a truck parked on the berm of the southbound I-77 lanes with a man wearing a knee-length coat standing by the passenger side. Derenberger's space adventures are only beginning. 1966, November 4 — Derenberger has another encounter when he lapses into a trance while driving a truck with a colleague along US Highway 50 near Parkersburg, West Virginia. He starts speaking, sometimes mumbling, other times conveying messages about "ships." Derenberger later says that Cold was sending him a telepathic message that his ship was directly above the truck. A sighting of a UFO "like two glass chimneys from a kerosene lamp welded together at their widest or bulging ends" at 6:45 p.m. by Irma Hudgins and her daughter Pamela Sue near the intersection of I-77 and State Highway 47 seems to confirm some UFO activity. Derenberger has further meetings with Indrid Cold and his companion Carl Ardo, who often pass undetected among earthlings, through the early 1970s and in 1984. (John A. Keel, The Mothman Prophecies, Tor ed., 1991, pp. 54–55; Jerome Clark, "The Adventures of Woody Derenberger," IUR 20, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1995): 8–11, 20–23; Clark III 404–410; Clark IV 449–456)

1966, November 5 — Condon tells the press that he knows "some people [McDonald] who believe the air force is misleading us, but I don't think so. Maybe they are. I don't care much." (Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, p. 113)

1966, November 6 — 6:30 p.m. A driver on State Highway 47 near Parkersburg, West Virginia, sees a UFO and gets out to watch it. At first it looks like two lights near the American Viscose plant across the Little Kanawha River. The object crosses the river and the highway then turns off its lights at about 100–150 feet altitude. The lights come back on and it starts moving toward the witness, stopping right over his car and focusing a bright beam of light on him for 10 seconds. It shuts off and the object moves leisurely away to the south. (Clark III 405)

1966, November 11 — Hynek and Vallée give an extended briefing to Condon and his staff. Hynek urges the project to adopt a rating system, by which if a sighting emerges as both strange and credible, it will be deemed worthy of further investigation. Vallée recommends standardized report forms that ask all the right questions. They both sense that Low, not Condon, is "clearly the decision-maker." Hynek tells Craig that the project must recommend that scientific investigation of UFOs be continued. (Sparks, p. 5; UFOs Yes, 50–61; Jacques Vallée, Forbidden Science, North Atlantic, 1992, pp. 227–231; Clark III 1193; Clark IV 1367)

1966, November 11–13 — 8:26 p.m. Four hours and 40 minutes after takeoff of the Gemini 12 mission on November 11, astronauts Jim Lovell and Buzz Aldrin take a photo of a white, lozenge-shaped object outside the spacecraft. The NASA Photo Evaluation Lab explains it as a solar axis reflection. On November 12, they take a photo that shows another white object that is unidentifiable. NASA thinks this object is just trash from a space craft. A photo of three triangular, reddish-orange lights is taken on November 13, but they are said to be the Agena Ranging Lights prior to docking. (Robert Emenegger, UFO's: Past, Present, and Future, Ballantine, 1975, photo section; NASA photos S66-62871_G12-S, S66-62966_G12-S, and S66-63402_G12-S)

1966, November 13 — Barber and amateur astronomer Ralph Ditter Jr. of Roseville, Ohio, takes several "spectacular" photos of a daylight disc. Later, Raytheon deals with the photographic analysis of the photos. The report states that the object in the photos is 3–4 inches in diameter, not 30 feet as claimed by Ditter; the object is not at a considerable distance, but a mere 3–4 feet from the camera lens; and the photos are not taken in rapid succession, but approximately 70 minutes has elapsed between photos. Also, the numbers on the backs of the photographs are out of sequence with Ditter's story. (NICAP, "The Ditter Photo Hoax"; Center for UFO Studies, [Ditter photos]; Center for UFO Studies, [case documents, part one, part two]; E. L. Merritt, "Photogrammetric Analysis of a Non-Synchronous Pair of U.F.O. Exposures," June 1967)

1966, November 14 — Quintanilla, Lt. William Marley, and Col. Robert Hippler of AFOSR brief the Colorado project staff. Quintanilla contradicts Hynek's account of the swamp gas explanation. (UFOs Yes, 61)

1966, November 15 — 11:30 p.m. Two young couples from Point Pleasant, West Virginia—Roger and Linda Scarberry and Steve and Mary Mallette—are joyriding in an area outside of town known as the "TNT area" [the site of a former World War II munitions plant and now part of the McClintic Wildlife Management Area] when they encounter a large gray creature whose eyes glow red when the car's headlights pick it up. Scarberry describes it as shaped like a man but nearly 7 feet tall. They describe it as a "large flying man with 10-foot wings" that are folded against its back. Terrified, they drive away but pass a similar creature on a hill by the road. As they pass it, it spreads its wings, rises into the air, and pursues their car, keeping pace at even 100 mph. The entity does not pursue them into town, but they drive directly to the Mason County Courthouse, where they tell their story to Deputy Millard Halstead, who accompanies the witnesses back to the site. He hears strange static disturbances coming from his radio, but they find no evidence of the encounter. On November 16, Sheriff George E. Johnson holds a press conference to discuss the sighting, the press begins calling the creature "Mothman" based on a comic book character. The Scarberrys and Mallettes go back to the site in the daylight and find odd-looking tracks like "two horseshoes put together." After this sighting, more people begin reporting encounters, and hundreds of cars swarm out to the TNT area at night in search of a Mothman sighting. In May 1976, representatives of the Ohio UFO Investigators League reinterview several witnesses, all of whom stick to their stories and sometimes add interesting details. 1966, November 17 — 4:00 a.m. Police officers A. G. Huskey and Charles Hutchins see a round, glowing object with a wide, flat rim around the center resting on the ground near Gaffney, South Carolina. They estimate the diameter to be about 20 feet. As they watch from less than 50 feet away, a door opens and a small humanoid being descends. The observation lasts several minutes. Footprints are found at the site. ("Little Green Man May Come Back," Florence (S.C.) Morning News, November 19, 1966, p. 2; Curtis Fuller, "I See by the Papers," Fate 20, no. 4 (April 1967): 25; John A. Keel, "The Little Man of Gaffney," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 2 (March/April 1968): 17–19)

1966, November 19 — 8:10 a.m. A dozen witnesses in Bayonne, New Jersey, see a gray object, about 4 feet in diameter, flying slowly about 125 above Newark Bay. It has 15 "antennae" protruding from its top; it dives into the water and disappears. ("It Wasn't the Moon," Union City (N.J.) Hudson Dispatch, November 21, 1966, p. 8; Carl Feindt, "Report #353," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1 293)

1966, November 22 — McDonald informally visits several Colorado project members. He explains radar complexities and mirage effects and tells them that they will soon be "confronting astonishing evidence of mishandling of the UFO problems by your sponsoring agency." (UFOs Yes, 64)

1966, November 22 — 9:00–10:00 a.m. A biochemist and consultant to a logging company and his wife are traveling on State Highway 58 through the Willamette Pass, Oregon, when he decides to stop and take photos of some scenery. He stops at the Diamond Peak overlook, takes 2 photos, then pauses to take a third. Suddenly, he claims, a disc-shaped object with a domed top ascends into his field of view. After stopping for 3 seconds, it shoots off toward the right and disappears into a cloud bank. When he develops the roll of film, the photos show a blurred disc-shaped object with two black bands beneath and sitting atop a seeming column of vapor. NICAP is given the photo but is not impressed. In 1989, physicist Irwin Wieder performs a detailed analysis of the photo and determines that it is a blurred photo of the "Diamond Peak" sign taken from a passing car. 1966, November 22 — 10:00 a.m. A deer hunter searching for game near Roaring River State Park, Missouri, returns to his group's camp and becomes alarmed when he sees smoke rising from it. He finds their tent and other camping equipment destroyed. The tent is still smoldering, one of the aluminum tent poles is singed, and the aluminum cots are melted. The tent is set up under two trees, but their leaves show no traces of damage at all. About 15 feet away is a dead tree with its top still burning. The witness then hears a low humming sound and sees an object rising from the valley about 300 feet away. He is able to take a photograph of it as it ascends and manages a second photo a few seconds later. It is an aluminum-colored disc, about 25 feet in diameter and 8 feet thick, with a band around its center and some kind of projection at its rear. The humming sound intensifies as the object picks up speed and disappears in 20 seconds. (CUFOS case file; Ted Phillips, Physical Traces Associated with UFO

Sightings, Center for UFO Studies, 1978, p. 44; B. J. Booth, "UFO Encountered, Photographed, Roaring River, Missouri, 1966," UFO Casebook)

1966, November 22 — 4:20 p.m. At least eight employees of the American Newspaper Publishers Association in New York City watch a UFO from their offices on the 17th floor at 750 Third Avenue. The UFO is a rectangular, "cushion-shaped" object whose bright, reflective surface first catches the eye of Assistant General Manager Donald R. McVay. They go outside onto the terrace and watch the object move southward over the East River, then hover above the United Nations building. It flutters and bobs "like a ship on agitated water." It rises slowly and moves south then west. One of the other witnesses is the manager of the Publications Department, William H. Leick. ("Major Sighting Wave," UFO Investigator 3, no. 11 (Jan,/Feb. 1967): 4; James E. McDonald, "Statement on Unidentified Flying Objects," in Symposium on Unidentified Flying Objects, Hearings, US House Committee on Science and Astronautics, 90th Cong., 2nd Sess., July 29, 1968, p. 54)

1966, November 28 — At David R. Saunders's invitation, Hall and Keyhoe brief the Colorado project members. They meet with Low and show him some strong NICAP reports like the 1959 Redmond, Oregon, case. Low dismisses it as too old because the witnesses "wouldn't remember the details." Keyhoe focuses on the cover-up, while Hall argues that the best way to assess UFO evidence is to look at the aggregated evidence. (UFO Yes, 62–63; Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, pp. 108–110; Clark III 1193; Clark IV 1367)

1966, November 28 — 12:10 a.m. Spanish contactee Enrique Villagrasa receives by telephone his first message from inhabitants of the planet Ummo. The caller speaks in a slow monotone and with a foreign accent, answering questions about history and science. Villagrasa has the impression he is talking to an "electronic brain." Other messages follow, and Villagrasa passes them on to Fernando Sesma, an employee of the Spanish telegraph service and head of Amigos de los Visitantes del Espacio. (Clark III 1184; Clark IV 1358)

1966, November 28 — Night. Janis Bodungen, 17, is on her way home on Farm Road 1300 northwest of El Campo, Texas, when she sees teo bright lights coming toward her. As they approach, the two lights turn into one large golden light as tall as the trees. She turns the car around and speeds away. ("The Texas Flap," APRO Bulletin, Jan./Feb. 1967, pp. 3, 5)

1966, November 30 — 4:35 p.m. J. G. Hockenberry is flying a Cessna 150 near New Kingstown, Pennsylvania, when he sees a saucer-shaped object, about 30 feet in diameter, approach and hover beside the aircraft. It has a dull, gray-white finish and one blinking red light. When the pilot flies into a cloud layer, the object rises straight up and out of sight. (NICAP case file)

1966, December — Low visits NICAP headquarters in Washington, D.C. He admits that Condon thinks the early reports are worthless. Keyhoe tells Low that before he wastes any time supplying them with reports, he wants to know what Condon thinks of the 1965 cases they already provided. Otherwise, NICAP might pull out. (Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, p. 112)

1966, December — Colorado project member and psychologist William A. Scott devises a witness questionnaire. One page is devoted to the UFO, the other 20 are about the psychological profile of the witness. When he discovers that the witness is not the project's main focus, he goes home. (UFOs Yes, 67–69)

1966, December 2 — Wertheimer goes to Washington, D.C., to interview witnesses of the National Airport radar-visual sightings of 1952. Virtually every witness disputes Gen. John A. Samford's explanation of temperature inversions. (UFOs Yes, 72–74)

1966, December 7 — A TAP Air Portugal airliner piloted by Capt. Henrique Maia is paced by two luminous objects near Luanda, Angola. ("On the International Scene," APRO Bulletin, Jan./Feb. 1967, p. 7; "Major Sighting Wave," UFO Investigator 3, no. 11 (Jan./Feb. 1967): 1, 3; Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 24)

1966, December 12 — NICAP's Richard H. Hall writes to physicist James E. McDonald, saying that the "overbalance of psychologists" in the Colorado UFO project is creating a problem for his group's endorsement. Their members are wondering whether the Condon Committee will decide that all UFOs are caused by optical illusions and mental illness. (Eghigian, After, p. 199)

1966, December 15 — 5:30 p.m. Four witnesses driving northwest near Elmer, New Jersey, see a triangular object with rounded corners and three blinking lights. It is moving slowly in the opposite direction. After visiting Woodstown and returning to the southeast at 6:15 p.m., the object reappears and passes over the car. (Marler 134)

1966, December 17 — Hynek's article, in which he states that hundreds of puzzling UFO cases exit and urges a serious inquiry, appears in the Saturday Evening Post. (J. Allen Hynek, "Are Flying Saucers Real?" Saturday Evening Post, December 17, 1966, pp. 17–21, transcribed by NICAP; Graff 214–215)

1966, December 21 — Lockheed test pilot William C. Park flies an A-12 for 10,198 statute miles in only 6 hours, at an average speed of 1,660 mph. ("William C. Park Jr.," Roadrunners Internationale)

1966, December 23 — The Colorado UFO project staff members have been discussing suitable methodologies for their investigation. Since the Air Force has decided there is no national security threat, the primary focus should be on whether an extraterrestrial intelligence is behind the UFO phenomenon, Low writes a memo to the team saying they need to identify "what it would take to convince us that a given sighting, any sighting, was an ETI. What evidence would we accept as conclusive?" (Eghigian, After, p. 197)

1966, December 25 — 3:00 a.m. Mr. and Mrs. Clyde C. Brooks are stopped along a rural road 2.5 miles south of Monroe, Oregon, when they hear a loud engine noise. Brooks, who is outside of the car, feels a blast of wind that throws him against the vehicle. An object emitting large, reddish-orange flames takes off into the sky and joins two similar objects. The couple returns home and brings back two of their children to the scene and find some flattened grass. (Sparks, p. 319; "Weird Aerial Phenomena in Oregon," APRO Bulletin, Nov./Dec. 1966, p. 6)

1966, December 28 — The Defense Department makes a recommendation to President Johnson to terminate the A-12 program due to budget concerns and because of the development of the SR-71 Blackbird. It is to be phased out by June 1968. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed A-12")

1966, December 28 — 7:45 p.m. The Waldman family is watching TV at their home in Santa Ana, California, when the picture becomes distorted. The 9-year-old son, Billy, glances out of the window and yells for his mother. She joins him and sees a circular object, 20 feet across, with flashing red, yellow, and orange lights hovering directly outside their window. After a few seconds, the object shoots skyward, trailing smoke and fragments. A neighbor, Patricia Reynolds, also sees it. ("TV Show Ends, Realism Begins," Santa Ana (Calif.) Register, December 30, 1966, p. 3; John A. Keel, "North America 1966: Development of a Great Wave," Flying Saucer Review 13, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1967): 3, 8)

1966, December 30 — 2:38 a.m. A Canadian Pacific Airlines DC-8 is at 35,000 feet on a northwest course off the coast of Peru. Capt. Robert Millbank and five flight crew members observe a pair of objects that pace the plane for 7 minutes. The phenomenon, appearing initially as a pair of high luminosity lights separated by about 3–4°, is first spotted 70° to the left of their flight path at an estimated elevation angle of about 10°. Some of the crew members report vaguely perceiving a connecting structure between the two lights. The lights hover for about one minute, pulsating, then move down toward the plane and assume a position off the left wing for another minute or two. As it paces the airliner, the object emits a V-shaped pair of thin light beams upwards, then later downwards. Finally it accelerates, pulls away, and climbs rapidly out over the Pacific to the west and disappears in the distance. (NICAP, "Pair of Luminous Objects Hover near DC-8"; "Major Sighting Wave," UFO Investigator 3, no. 11 (Jan./Feb. 1967): 1; Condon, pp. 280–282; UFOEv II 129–130)

1966, December 30 — 8:15 p.m. A physics professor named Galloway [possibly Louie A. Galloway III] is driving through a wooded area near Haynesville, Louisiana, and sees a bright, pulsating glow, changing from orange to white, in the woods about one mile away. He estimates its visible light power output at about one megawatt. Coming back the next day, he locates traces of burns and calls the USAF and University of Colorado UFO project. (Sparks, p. 320; Condon, pp. 61, 277–280; Jacques Vallée, "Estimates of Power Optical Output in Six Cases of Unexplained Aerial Objects with Defined Luminosity Characteristics," Journal of Scientific Exploration 12, no. 3 (1998): 350–352)

1967 — The US nuclear stockpile reaches its peak at 31,255 bombs. (Ryan Crierie, "U.S. Nuclear Stockpile, 1945–2009")

1967 — Night. Miss E. R. East, of Gibsons, British Columbia, is awakened by a banging noise and sees a brilliant orange-red light soaring above hills behind the town. As she watches, its color changes to glowing white and the object moves toward the Strait of Georgia. Suddenly, a 10-foot-wide beam of light shoots down to the water. As it strikes the surface, it bends and lies flat on the surface, lighting up the wharf on Keats Island. As she stares at it, her eyes begin to sting. (John Magor, Our UFO Visitors, Hancock House, 1977, pp. 37–38)

1967 — A man named Campbell sees a purplish object moving slowly along a reef off North West Cape, Western Australia, after which it takes off swiftly toward the horizon. Later, when he is at home, he comes into telepathic contact with an invisible presence in his room, the first of a series of appearances by entities. (Bill Chalker, "The Interstate Twilight Zone," Psychic Australian 2 (August 1977): 6–9, 28; Clark IV 910–912)

1967 — A French government UFO project, to be led by former inspector general at the Commissariat à l'Energie Atomique Jean-Luc Bruneau, is approved. Bruneau recommends that the study first become a project of the Centre Nationale d'Études Spatiales, and later a European initiative. But the project is postponed because of the political crisis in France in May 1968. (Gildas Bourdais, "From GEPAN to SEPRA: Official UFO Studies in France," IUR 25, no. 4 (Winter 2000–2001): 11)

1967 — Robert M. Wood, physicist and aerospace manager for McDonnell Douglas Corporation, is assigned the task of exploring breakthroughs in gravity propulsion. The project includes laboratory evaluation of hypotheses, field observations, and examination of UFO literature. At one point there are 4 full-time and 3 part-time employees involved in the effort, code-named BITBR ("Boys in the Back Room"). Employees included mechanical engineer Joseph M. Brown, physicist Darell Boyd Harmon Jr., and Stanton T. Friedman. Wood networks with James E. McDonald, J. Allen Hynek, Carl Sagan, and the Colorado project. The initiative is terminated in 1970 at Wood's recommendation due to its inability to project a technological payoff. However, there is some evidence that McDonnell Douglas had another UFO research project in the late 1970s. (Robert M. Wood, "A Little Physics…A Little Friction: A Close Encounter with the Condon Committee," IUR 18, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1993): 6–10; Robert M. Wood, "McDonnell Douglas Studied UFOs in 1960s," MUFON UFO Journal, no. 486 (October 2008): 3–8; [Robert M. 1967 — Ivan T. Sanderson publishes Uninvited Visitors, in which he argues that some UFOs might be living space animals. (Ivan T. Sanderson, Uninvited Visitors, Cowles, 1967; Clark III 1028, 1100; Clark IV 1143, 1226)

1967, January — Night. French rocket scientist Jean-Pierre Morin is driving three members of a launch team to the tower at Interarmy Special Vehicles Test Center at Hammaguir, Algeria. When they arrive at a row of buildings, they notice a light in the sky silently coming toward them. Their car engine sputters and fails. It stops and hovers at an elevation of 45° about 1,600 feet away. Morin thinks it is attached to a black, cylindrical object 980–1,300 feet in length and 100 feet in diameter with "flames" of different colors along its side. The light begins moving slowly again, and a car with astrophysicists stops and watches it for another 20–30 minutes before it ascends and disappears. (Good Need, pp. 296–297)

1967, Early January — 7:30 p.m. Robert Blaine is driving with five other witnesses on State Highway 55 two miles southeast of Farwell, Minnesota, when his headlights and engine suddenly go out. He sees an orange flash to his left at the level of his hood and tiny beads of light cross in front of the windshield. A passenger sees an orange-and-red flash go by on the driver's side at window level. The car coasts to a stop, then the engine and headlights go back on again by themselves. ("Car Buzzing Incidents on Increase," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1967, p. 5)

1967, January 3 — 2:00 a.m. A dome-shaped object hovers for several miles and 10–15 minutes above a car in New Richmond, Indiana. It illuminates the road, and the car draws to a stop with loss of steering control and the radio failing. Examination of the car by Fred Hooven and David Moyer, engineers at the Ford Motor Company, two months later shows no faults unexplainable by ordinary causes. (Condon, pp. 102–106, 282–285; UFOEv II 208; Randle, Levelland, 2021, pp. 65–66)

1967, January 5 — Hynek writes to Condon, telling him that he, Jacques Vallée, and William T. Powers are devoting more personal time to the UFO problem and are setting up a file area in the Lindheimer Observatory at Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois. He mentions that there is enough underground interest in UFOs among his scientific colleagues that he is thinking of creating an informal "invisible college" to discuss the subject quietly. He mentions that he sat in on a hypnosis session a few weeks previously with Benjamin Simon and was allowed to question Betty and Barney Hill. He also suggests that the Colorado project recommend that police squad cars carry cameras that can document ongoing UFO reports. (Center for UFO Studies, [Hynek correspondence], pp. 6–7)

1967, January 5 — An A-12 flown by pilot Walter Ray is lost during a training flight near Leith Canyon, Nevada. Due to a faulty fuel gauge, the aircraft runs out of fuel 70 miles from Groom Dry Lake. Ray glides to a lower altitude to perform a controlled bailout but cannot separate his parachute from his ejection seat. He is the first pilot to be killed in an A-12 accident. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed A-12")

1967, January 6 — Hynek speaks to an overflow crowd at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Maryland. He says he has had to revise his thinking on UFOs, urges scientists to take an active role in investigations, and confirms reports that NORAD and SAC radar has tracked UFOs, citing a case in which SAC radar tracked a UFO at 4,000 mph on an erratic flight path. (Story, p. 413)

1967, January 9 — Two teenage brothers of Mount Clemens, Michigan, Daniel A. and Grant P. Jaroslaw, take some Polaroid photos from the backyard of their home of a domed object moving slowly above Lake St. Clair. After they release the images to a wire service, the Air Force requests the originals for analysis. They refuse to relinquish them but give an officer at Selfridge AFB [now Selfridge Air National Guard Base] some copies. Maj.

Raymond Nyls attempts to recreate the photos at the original site using a block of wood hanging from a string on a children's swing set. USAF turns the copies and Nyls's recreations over to the National Photographic Interpretation Center, which takes a serious look and suspects a hoax but cannot prove it conclusively. 1967, January 11 — Evening. A farmer in the department of Aveyron in southern France sees two objects, one in the shape of an elongated artillery shell and the other a ball of light, both of which he has encountered in the past few days around his farm. He jumps in his car and chases the ball of light until he gets close to the brilliant-white, shell-shaped object, which has a rounded top that shines with a maroon light. It is about 45 feet tall and stands straight up. He gets out to look at it, but it moves to a 45º angle, rocks a bit, emits some greenish steam from its base, and suddenly takes off. The ball of light, about 4 feet in diameter, has stayed stationary about 450 feet ahead of him, so he gets back into his car. It begins moving again, and he chases it at speeds of up to 62 mph. It maintains the same distance ahead of him, until his engine dies and his headlights go out. Then he notices a saucer-shaped object with a red light on its side descend from the northwest. It is slightly bigger than a Peugeot 404 car and comes down to 9–12 feet above the ground about 60 feet away. The top of the object has two transparent cupolas. In each of them is a helmeted, humanlike figure dressed in green coveralls trimmed with white. The object remains hovering for a few seconds. The UFO then rises to 150 feet with a whistling sound, swoops back to near the ground, and pauses. Turning a brilliant yellow-white, it finally takes off at tremendous speed. The farmer feels a wave of burning heat on his face and a temporary sensation of paralysis. It causes a nearby roadsign to vibrate. His headlights come back on and he is able to start the car normally. The man has trouble sleeping for the next few days, then he goes through several weeks (until roughly March 15) of excessive sleepiness. (François Lagarde, "The Aveyron Inquiry—3," Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1971): 3–9)

1967, January 12 — The USAF advisory committee holds a special briefing in Boulder, Colorado. Condon discusses project plans and asks the Air Force where the project should place its emphasis. Lt. Col. Hippler, along with Col. Raymond Sleeper, Blue Book's boss as Foreign Technology Division Commander, says the project is not required to prove or disprove anything, but that "we don't want any recommendation from you unless you feel strongly about it." He rejects Wertheimer's suggestion that the project should concentrate on witnesses, not sightings. Hippler and Ratchford do not adequately respond to Low's question about what USAF wants from the project. 1967, January 12 — 7:30 p.m. A luminous object crosses the sky off Agadir, Morocco. It leaves a white trail that turns into a rainbow and falls into the sea with a deafening sound. The US Defense attaché in Rabat, Naval Capt. C. G. Strum, says the sighting "could be valuable in pursuit of Project Moon Dust." (US Department of Defense, "UFO Sighting over Agadir, Morocco," January 18, 1967)

1967, January 13 — Condon and Low visit Cheyenne Mountain, NORAD's underground Space Defense Center complex in Colorado, for a "classified briefing" by orbital analysts 1Lt. Henry B. Eckert Jr. and Capt. Dick A. Cable of the 9th Aerospace Defense Division's 1st Aerospace Control Squadron about NORAD's radar network, hours after another classified briefing for Condon and staff at Boulder concludes. The Cheyenne Mountain briefing is the first in a series of tactical moves designed to discourage Condon's project staff, Hynek, and McDonald from using NORAD as a source of UFO data or resource for future investigations or instrumentation. (UFOs Yes, 66; Clark III 804–805; Clark IV 895–898)

1967, January 13 — Early morning. Sgt. Norman Finley of the Joplin, Missouri, police alerts fellow officers about an unexplained object overhead. Pittsburg, Kansas, police dispatcher James Cunningham notifies the Joplin police that a UFO has been seen over Pittsburg. He describes it as an object with bright colors of "vivid blue-green with flashing lights." Cunningham alerts the Joplin station because the object seems to be leaving Kansas and heading for Missouri. After receiving that call, Joplin's Lt. Charles Hickman drives to Stone's Corner near the Joplin airport. He waits for nearly an hour before spotting a UFO in the sky, which he watches for more than an hour. It is about 1,000 feet high and seems about as big as two houses. It makes turns and maneuvers "as if it were being controlled." For the next three days, there are more sightings in the early morning hours at Coffeyville, Kansas; Joplin, Springfield, and Newton County, Missouri; and northeast Oklahoma. (UFOs Yes, 109–110; Condon, pp. 286–290)

1967, January 13 — 10:00 p.m. The crew of a Lear Jet flying at 41,000 feet over southwestern New Mexico sees a flashing red luminous object in their 10 o'clock position. The object splits into four smaller red objects vertically several times, each separated by about 2,000 feet and each emitting a "red ray." It then retracts the lowest objects into the top object. Albuquerque radar tracks a target 39 miles ahead of the Lear Jet moving on the same heading, with no transponder signal. At that moment the object blinks off visually for 30 seconds then blinks back on. The UFO floods the jet with an intense red light so bright that the pilot has difficulty seeing his instrument panel. It maintains its position in front for a few minutes then blinks out, comes on again, and falls back behind the left wing. It then pulls forward again. Albuquerque radar reports that it looks like the target had merged with the jet. Both the UFO and the jet make left turns over Winslow, Arizona, after which Los Angeles Center radar picks up both targets. Past Flagstaff, the object climbs at a 30° angle and disappears to the west in less than 10 seconds. (NICAP, "R/V"; Sparks, p. 321; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 82–83; Martin Shough, RADCAT: Radar Catalogue: A Review of Twenty-One Ground and Airborne Radar UAP Contact Reports Generally Related to Aviation Safety for the Period October 15, 1948, to September 19, 1976, National Aviation Reporting Center on Anomalous Phenomena, NARCAP Report TR-6, December 8, 2002, pp. 118–121)

1967, January 15 — 5:45 p.m. Helen Godard and her two nieces, Candy and Missy, are driving through Granville, Massachusetts, when they see a domed disc with white light emanating from portholes in its base. They hear a humming sound, and the sky and ground are illuminated by white light. Red flame-like jets appear at one end when the object moves. Its speed is variable. At one point, all the lights go out, and when they come back on the portholes are showing red light. The object is seen three times within 20 minutes before it disappears over a hill to the east. 1967, January 16 — Hippler writes to Condon, saying that "No one knows of a visitation. It should therefore follow there has been no [extraterrestrial] visitation to date." Moreover, Condon should "consider the cost of the Air Force program on UFOs, and determine if the taxpayer should support this for the next decade." (Lt. Col. Robert H. Hippler, Letter to Edward U. Condon, January 16, 1967; Kevin D. Randle, "The Hippler Letter," A Different Perspective, March 21, 2007)

1967, January 17 — Night. Francis Bedel Jr. is driving on State Highway 135 five miles north of Freetown, Indiana, when a glowing white light darts into his field of vision. It hovers above the road for a few seconds, then slowly reverses its course. Bedel is so busy staring at the spectacle that he loses control of his car, which goes off the road and is badly damaged. Phil Patton and his wife apparently see the same object, about 30 feet in diameter, that comes within 100 feet of their car on the same road. It has a brilliant red light and flashing yellow and white lights on its perimeter. (NICAP, "The 1967 UFO Chronology"; "Wreck Caused by UFO," *Muncie (Ind.) 1967, January 18 — 4:40 p.m. Two boys, age and Jesper, age 9 and 7 respectively, see a dark gray object overhead in Zealand, Denmark. Tage runs home while Jesper hides in a ditch. The object descends and extends three legs as if to land but then retracts them and moves out over the Kattegat. As it passes over the shore, it throws out some "black goo." Hovering low over the water, the object lowers a box on an arm-thick cable, and eight small humanoid figures emerge from the large object, descending on the cable. They are the same size as the boy, and all but one wear striped suits with scuba-like packs on their backs. The eighth occupant wears a blue uniform and has no pack. They all have striped caps, lights on their shoulders, and carry objects that resemble binoculars or cameras. Before the object disappears, the beings wave to the boy. Later, a lump of strange material is found on the shore. When analyzed, it turns out to be an unknown mixture of substances. 1967, January 18 — 6:00 p.m. A family in Shamokin, Pennsylvania, watches through binoculars a disc with a red light on a projection at the rear approach them at about 400–500 feet altitude. As it nears, the object emits two pinkish-white light beams downward at about a 45° angle from its forward edge. It then turns, rises suddenly, joins a second object, and both speed away. (Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., UFOs: A New Look, NICAP, 1969, Appendix D)

1967, January 19 — 9:05 a.m. Tad Jones is driving a truck in Dunbar, West Virginia, when he sees a dull, aluminum sphere about 20–25 feet in diameter hovering about 4 feet above the road some 500 feet ahead of him. It has two antennae protruding from the top and two legs beneath it, with a propellor between them that rotates slowly when hovering (but faster when flying). There is a window at the top and a flange in the middle. When he gets to about

10 feet of it, the object ascends swiftly. ("'UFO' Takes a Look at Interstate 64," Beckley (W.Va.) Post-Herald, January 20, 1967, p. 1; "West Virginian Says He Got Close to UFO," *Danville (Va.) 1967, January 20 — 6:30 p.m. Three girls (Kimberly Lodge, Ellen Kenney, and Janice Shafer), 16–17 years old, are driving near Methuen, Massachusetts, when they see a string of 9–10 bright red lights on a dark object that is moving over a field. The object hovers and swings around, revealing lights of a different color and configuration. When the girls stop to watch, their car stalls and the radio and lights go off. It has four glowing lights in the shape of a trapezoid, with red lights on top and white lights forming the base. The lights appear to be reflecting off a metal surface. The object starts moving slowly and then shoots away at high speed. A second car about 3 miles away also sees 7–8 bright lights flying low. (NICAP, "Car Stalls after Girls See UFO over Field"; "Major Sighting Wave," UFO Investigator 3, no. 11 (Jan./Feb. 1967): 3–4; Carl Sagan and Thornton Page, eds., UFO's: A Scientific Debate, Cornell University, 1972, pp. xxvi–xxvii; Raymond Fowler, UFOs: Interplanetary Visitors, Prentice-Hall, 1974, pp. 138–143)

1967, Late January — McDonald is lobbying Frederick Seitz, president of the National Academy of Sciences, with some mild criticisms of the Colorado project and the establishment of a UFO research panel. Seitz is not convinced. (Clark III 698; Clark IV 794)

1967, Late January — A well-known engineer sees a disc-shaped object land near him in Riachuelo, Osomo, Chile. Seconds after touching down, a strange being, about 4.5 feet tall and wearing a transparent outfit, emerges. It has a white face and hands, a pronounced jawbone, and no neck. When it sees the man looking, it gets back into the object and takes off. 1967, January 21 — The Centro Ufologico Nazionale is legally established in Milan, Italy, with Mario Maioli as its first president, as a test of cooperation among several regional UFO groups. Such a national organization had been called for by the Centro Studi Clypeologici of Gianni Settimo in Turin on September 26, 1965. It begins publishing Notiziario UFO, edited by Roberto Pinotti, in January 1967. (Wikipedia, "Centro ufologico nazionale"; Centro Ufologico Nazionale, "1° assemblea propositiva per un Centro Unico Nazionale per lo studio dei fenomeni ritenuti di natura extraterrestre (CUN)"; Story, p. 67; 1Pinotti 143–146; Notiziario UFO 1 (1967))

1967, January 24 — 5:25 p.m. A 14-year-old boy in Yorba Linda, California, sees an object shaped like a top hat apparently hovering above houses across the street. It seems large and cylindrical, dull metallic, and has four legs. He grabs a camera and snaps a photo of the object, which has started moving away. Los Angeles photographer Joseph Carson rules out simple hoaxes using a model and considers it a genuine image. An unnamed commercial photographer conducts a densitometer analysis and finds no evidence of a hoax, concluding that the object was 100 feet or less from the camera. (Ann Druffel, "The Yorba Linda Photograph," in Charles Bowen, ed., UFO Encounters, special issue no. 5 of FSR, November 1973, pp. 26–35; UFOEv II 286–287; Patrick Gross, "Yorba Linda, California, January 24, 1967")

1967, January 25 — Condon gives a talk in Corning, New York, and says: "It is my inclination right now to recommend that the government get out of this business. My attitude right now is that there's nothing to it … but I'm not supposed to reach a conclusion for another year." Keyhoe is astonished by Condon's remarks. ("Most UFOs Explainable, Says Scientist," Elmira (N.Y.) Star-Gazette, January 26, 1967, p. 19; UFOs Yes, 117–119; Eghigian, After, p. 203)

1967, January 25 — 6:35 p.m. Betty Andreasson (later Betty Luca) has her first remembered abduction experience in South Ashburnham, Massachusetts. Placed under hypnosis on several occasions in 1977, Andreasson relates that following the appearance of the creatures every member of the family except her enters a state of paralysis "as if time had stopped for them." A Christian evangelical, Andreasson thinks they must be angels. The culminating event is when Andreasson witnesses a giant phoenix-like bird burn up and reappear from the ashes as a giant worm. Further hypnotic probing brings forth apparent memories of lifelong interactions with extraterrestrials. Raymond E. Fowler's 1979 book about the case contains the first reference to an implant in abduction literature, a motif that later becomes much more common. (Raymond E. Fowler, The Andreasson Affair, Prentice-Hall, 1979; Raymond E. Fowler, The Andreasson Affair: Phase Two, Prentice-Hall, 1982; Raymond E. Fowler, The Watchers, Bantam, 1990; Raymond E. 1967, January 26 — 8:30 p.m. The teenage daughter of a lieutenant colonel residing on a US Army base in Heidelberg, Germany, hears a strange pulsating sound. She tells her father, and they look out the window to see a dirigible-shaped object about 50–60 feet long hovering about 150 feet off the ground above a motor vehicle shed. Before long, a crowd of 50–60 people gather around their apartment building to watch the object, which is only 100 feet away. Some observers with binoculars say it is metallic and has lights that alternate in red, blue, and green colors. After about 20 minutes, US Air Force jets approach in response to a call from the base, and the UFO's lights increase in intensity and it speeds away. ("Around the Globe," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1967, p. 4)

1967, January 28 — 1:45 p.m. Alex Butler, 10, and five young friends are playing on Studham Common as they are making their way to Studham Lower School, Bedfordshire, England. Suddenly a flash of lightning strikes nearby, and Alex sees a little blue man about 3 feet tall with a high bowler hat and beard standing motionless on the opposite bank. It is clothed in a one-piece garment with a broad black belt and black box in front. A dim glow envelops him, giving him a blue color. The other boys see it too. They begin to run toward the creature, but it disappears in a puff of smoke. The little man appears in a different spot, and the boys start running there, but again he disappears. As the vanishing act repeats again, the boys hear a deep-toned sound emanating from two spots nearby. At that point the school bell sounds, and the boys rush off to class. Miss Newcomb, the school headmistress, interviews the boys and collects their written reports in a scrapbook (now lost). (R. H. B. 1967, January 30 — 8:04 a.m. Commercial pilot Delton Schwanz is with his wife Della and three children 5 miles southwest of Crosby, North Dakota, when they see a bright-white, sharply outlined, lozenge-shaped object to the west. It momentarily hovers, then moves in level flight to the left, with a smooth climb in the southwest. It drops white "strips" of light that descend vertically and disappears to the south by ascending to about 30°–45° elevation. At around the same time, George Larsen (Larson?) and Larry Pateof (Pace?) are driving by car 20 miles west of Crosby near the intersection of Highways 5 and 85 and see a large white light moving rapidly from west to south dropping something and disappearing suddenly. (Sparks, p. 321; Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 73–74)

1967, January 30 — 6:45 p.m. Reinhardt N. Ausmus and his wife Ruth are driving north on State Highway 99 in Sandusky, Ohio, when they spot a bright light in the sky. Stopping their car, they watch it hover for several minutes before it is suddenly extinguished. ("UFO over NASA Station," UFO Investigator 3, no. 12 (March/April 1967): 6)

1967, January 31 — David R. Saunders stops in at NICAP in Washington, D.C., to pick up some case material. Keyhoe and Hall show him a clipping about Condon's statements in Corning, New York. Saunders suggests that Condon is misquoted. But several NICAP members had been in the audience and one has already resigned to protest NICAP's support of a sham investigation. (Clark III 1194; Clark IV 1368)

1967, February — Although a UFO wave is in progress, practically no one at the Colorado project has the knowledge or resources to perform a serious investigation. Other than Low and the junior staff, nearly everyone lacks basic equipment, questionnaires, cameras, or tape measures. The team decides to focus only on cases drawn from Blue Book, NICAP, and APRO that are most ideal for demonstrating extraterrestrial intelligence. Armed with a questionnaire, investigators (usually by telephone) interview witnesses about their sightings, as well as their background, beliefs, and exposure to UFO media coverage. Three teams of two researchers then carry out field work on site. Quick-response teams are also set up to conduct immediate field research, and specialized equipment (diffraction gratings, Geiger counters, tape recorders) is procured for the purpose. (UFOs Yes, 110; Clark III 1196; Eghigian, After, pp. 197–198; Clark IV 1370)

1967, February — John A. Keel speaks with USAF Col. George P. Freeman, who tells him that "Mysterious men dressed in Air Force uniforms or bearing impressive credentials from government agencies have been silencing UFO witnesses." The Air Force is unable to find out anything about them because this is a federal offense. (John A.

Keel, The Mothman Prophecies, Tor ed., 1991, p. 25; Nick Redfern, "MIB Are Not from 'the Government,'" Mysterious Universe, June 23, 2015; Clark III 733–734; Clark IV 814)

1967, February — Soviet cosmologist Felix Ziegel writes an article revealing that "UFOs have been seen all over the USSR; the craft of every possible shape, small, large, flattened, spherical. They are able to remain stationary in the atmosphere or shoot along at 100,000 kilometers per hour. They move without producing the slightest sound, by creating around themselves a pneumatic vacuum that protects them from burning up in our stratosphere. Their craft have the mysterious capacity to vanish and reappear at will. Besides, they are able to affect our power resources, putting to a halt our electricity-generating plants, our radio stations, and our engines, without, however, leaving any permanent damage. So refined a technology can only be the fruit of an intelligence that is indeed far superior to ours." The article is regarded in the West as the first-ever evidence that the Soviets are aware of UFO phenomena too. (CIA translation of Felix Ziegel, "UFOs: What Are They?" Smena, no. 7 (February 1967): 27–29)

1967, February 1 — In Boulder, Colorado, David R. Saunders confronts Condon, who confirms the Corning quote and wonders why Saunders is making a fuss. After 30 minutes, Saunders persuades him that he is having a negative effect. Finally, Condon writes Keyhoe saying that his words were taken out of context and that he will look at the NICAP case files. (Clark III 1194; Eghigian, After, p. 203; Clark IV 1368)

1967, February 2 — 6:30 p.m. Capt. Oswaldo Sanvitti is flying a Faucett Perú DC-4 airliner from Chiclayo to Lima, Peru, when the crew and passengers notice a bright light coming toward them from the west. Sanvitti estimates it is about 9 miles away, but it soon reaches the aircraft and hovers above it. The cabin lights dim, the plane's compass fluctuates, and the radio gives off static. The UFO speeds away to the east, increasing its luminosity by 50%, but reappears 5 minutes later with another object. Both UFOs trail the aircraft until 5 minutes before it lands at Jorge Chávez International Airport in Callao. The passengers are all held for interrogation by authorities after the plane lands. Several have taken photos of the strange craft alongside the airliner, but all cameras are taken and all film is confiscated. One passenger, however, who insists on remaining anonymous, succeeds in saving his film. 1967, February 5 — Evening. A young man in Hilliard, Ohio, hears a strange noise and a barking dog. He looks up and sees an object approaching at a low altitude over a road shoulder. It lands on three legs in a field. The object is egg-shaped and about 75 feet long and 45 feet high. An "elevator-like" shaft opens and beings emerge carrying small, circular balls that they place on the ground around the UFO. The human-like creatures appear to be waiting for something. Then a man approaches from across the field and talks to them, apparently by telepathy. The witness accidentally steps on a twig, and the beings hear it. One runs toward him and catches him by the back of the neck, leaving a burned wound. Another being comes and both drag him toward the object. As they get close, the beings look at each other, seemingly panic-stricken. They drop the witness, collect the balls, and run inside the UFO, which takes off. ("Startling Cases Investigated," UFO Investigator 4, no. 1 (May/June 1967): 6; Irena Scott and William E. Jones, "Hilliard, Ohio, Revisited," Ohio UFO Notebook, no. 7 (Summer 1994): 1–10)

1967, February 6 — The mission of the Space Defense Center's satellite-tracking radar (useless for UFOs) moves from Ent AFB [now the US Olympic Training Center] in Colorado Springs, Colorado, to "adjacent to the NORAD command center" (air defense UFO trackers) in Cheyenne Mountain, Colorado. However, they are separated from each other by partitions and use separate computers. (Wikipedia, "Space Defense Center"; Clark III 808; Clark IV 900)

1967, February 8 — 6:43 p.m. Mary McCarthy and five of her young nieces and nephews see a glowing object as they are eating dinner at their farm 3 miles south of Deep River, Ontario, less than 20 miles away from the Nuclear Power Demonstration station, Canada's first nuclear reactor. The television immediately stops working properly. About a quarter of a mile away on a hill is a circular "craft" with a large core of dazzling, pulsating yellow lights in its center. From this core, red lights pulsate outward toward the rim, somewhat like neon lights. They have it in view for 40 minutes. After the object leaves, the TV starts working again. A Canadian Forces spokesperson says the lights were airplanes shooting flares in the area. (Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Sightings, Landings, and Abductions, Methuen, 1979, pp. 124–126)

1967, February 9 — Condon recommends NICAP's UFO Evidence to geophysicist Merle Tuve. (Swords 319)

1967, February 9 — 6:30 p.m. George Kawalski, a section foreman for the Great Northern railroad, sees an object hovering above the depot in Chester, Montana, from his home two blocks away. The object disappears straight up after bathing the depot in light. ("Third Report of UFOs Heard from Chester Area," Great Falls (Mont.) Tribune, February 11, 1967, p. 5)

1967, February 10 — 3:42 a.m. Erie County Constable Gary Butler is patrolling in the area of NASA's Plum Brook Station [now the Neil A. Armstrong Test Facility] in Sandusky, Ohio, when he sees a bright, bluish disc moving toward the southwest some 2 miles away. As it was disappearing behind some trees, he tries to radio in a report, but experiences some interference. ("Area Lawman Sees UFO," Sandusky (Ohio) Register, February 10, 1967, via UFO Newsclipping Service, no. 482 (September 2009): 12; "UFO over NASA Station," UFO Investigator 3, no. 12 (March/April 1967): 6; "Sight UFO over NASA Station," NICAP Reporter 5, no. 7 (April 1967): 8; Wendy Connors, "Cops and Saucers: Law Enforcement and UFO's, 1957–1981 Guide," November 20, 2013, audioclip 29)

1967, February 10 — 5:30 p.m. Two separate groups of four and three people in Woodstock, Connecticut, see a triangular object with a white light at each apex. It is moving with its blunt end forward from northeast to southwest at 1,000 feet altitude. The object is silent when hovering but makes a rumbling or roaring sound when it moves. The family TV set reception is disrupted when it passes by. ("N. Woodstock Woman Avows UFO Froze 2 Refrigerators," Worcester (Mass.) Evening Gazette, February 16, 1967; "UFO Reported in Woodstock," Norwich (Conn.) Bulletin, February 18 or 20, 1967; "UFO 'Visits' Cause Wonder, Lead to Speculation in Putnam," Worcester (Mass.) Evening Gazette, February 22, 1967, p. 26; Raymond E. Fowler, UFOs: Interplanetary Visitors, Exposition, 1974, p. 344; Marler 135–136)

1967, February 10 — 7:30 p.m. A couple in Alton, Illinois, sees a round, rotating, 25-foot diameter luminous object that changes color from red to white with occasional flashes of green. The object also has white lights in a triangle on the bottom. It flies, hovers, and passes over the witnesses. While hovering, a humming or droning sound is heard. (St. Louis (Mo.) Globe-Democrat, February 11, 1967)

1967, February 11 — Early morning. Michael McKee, an employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and Sharon Hildebrand are driving toward Milford, Ohio, when they notice a white glowing light shining through the woods. Taking a railroad light from the car, they go to investigate and encounter an oval object with a tube-like appendage extending from its underside, hovering a few feet above a deep creek. They approach within 100 feet of the object, which appears to be about 30 feet in diameter. The object reflects the lamp's light, unnerving them, and they flee the scene. Officer Charles O'Brien returns to the site with the pair at 3:30 a.m. The object is gone, but branches and twigs at the site are splintered. According to Leonard H. Stringfield, similar reports emerge almost simultaneously from the nearby communities of Wyoming and Blue Ash, Ohio. ("Touch Landing In Ohio," APRO Bulletin, Jan./Feb. 1967, p. 6; Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., UFOs: A New Look, NICAP, 1969, p. 21)

1967, February 11? — Day. A Guatemalan Aviateca airliner piloted by Col. Alfredo Castaneda and Col. Carlos Samyoa encounters an object like a silvery top as they are flying over Oaxaca State, Mexico, at 10,000 feet. It has a red ball on its top. They put the aircraft into a sharp turn in order to avoid a collision, just before the object zooms out of sight after 10 seconds. Aircraft personnel think the object is a weather balloon. ("On the International Scene," APRO Bulletin, Jan./Feb. 1967, p. 7; "In Mexico," BUFORA Journal 2, no. 1 (Summer 1967): 19; Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 25)

1967, February 12 —Evening. Kenneth R. Miller, airport manager Carl Nichols, and many others in Wharton, Texas, see a round object with a dome on top. It has revolving red, green, blue, and amber lights on its bottom edge and a bright light in its dome. The object flies above the car in which Miller and Nichols are driving, just clearing te telephone lines. It seems to be large enough to cover the roadway. Later it coasts at treetop height, stops dead, then banks and takes off. (Houston (Tex.) Chronicle, February 15, 1967; UFOEv II 160–161)

1967, February 12 — Night. For two days, strange lights appear in the area around Barrow, Alaska. A group of people, including village councilor Sam Talaak and reporter Bill Neacock, observes a brilliant light in the sky south of the village. The light descends very low, lands on the ice at one point, and emits orange and yellow lights. During this activity, the local electricity generator fails for one hour. ("But How Can There Be Swamp Gas Here?" Fairbanks (Alaska) Daily News-Miner, February 14, 1967, p. 1; Frank Edwards, Flying Saucers—Here and Now!, Lyle Stuart, 1967, pp. 225–226)

1967, February 13 — 5:58 p.m. Sachio Sakuma is taking photographs of the Moon with a Petri V6 camera in Tokyo, Japan. On developing one image, he finds a luminous, oval-shaped object with a slight trail a short distance above the lunar crescent. ("Report from Japan," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1967, p. 1)

1967, February 13 — 10:00 p.m. Mrs. James Thompson is driving through Bigfork, Montana, with her two children when her pickup's engine fails and the lights go out. Getting out, she sees overhead an intense greenish-blue light. She feels heat coming from the object. It changes direction abruptly, veering to the right as it changes to reddishorange. As it moves away, the truck starts up on its own. ("Strange Sky Object Stops Truck," NICAP Reporter 5, no. 7 (April 1967): 9; Brad Steiger and Joan Whritenour, The New UFO Breakthrough, Universal, 1968, p. 40)

1967, February 14 — 7:00 a.m. A farmer in Miller County, Missouri, notices that his cows are all staring in one direction. He goes to investigate and sees a landed object about 360 feet away. He sees several entities moving around it, so he picks up some stones and approaches it. From about 30 feet away, the object looks like a hovering parachute or a grayish-green shell. The creatures, apparently wearing overalls, scurry behind the craft and go inside. The farmer throws one stone, but it stops in midair about 15 feet away and drops to the ground. He throws the other stone to try to strike the top of the object, but it bounces off something. When he gets to 15 feet away, he walks into an invisible wall and can't see the object at all. ("Outstanding 1967 Report," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1969, pp. 6–7; Ted Phillips, "UFO Events in Missouri, 1857–1971," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 8 (December 1971): 10–11; Ted Phillips, "Farmer Sees Object, Humanoid on Ground," Skylook, no. 93 (August 1975): 15; Lorenzen, Encounters, p. 190; Center for UFO Studies, HUMCAT Index 1967, p. 22; Rob Murphy, "Space Penguins of Tuscumbia: Missouri, USA," Cryptopia, October 10, 2011; Joe Pryor, "Space Penguins of Tuscumbia," Miller County Museum and Historical Society Progress Notes, December 12, 2011; Charles Fort Institute Forums, "Space Penguins of Tuscumbia, Missouri (1967)")

1967, February 16 — 11:43 p.m. S/Sgt Max Recod and his wife are driving along Route 66 south of Kingman, Arizona, when they see a formation of four lights, three red and one green, approaching their car at low altitude. The lights are attached to an object that emits a light beam from its bottom center that moves around and illuminates the desert. The lights disappear, but a few minutes later the UFO reappears from behind a hill a mile away, followed by two white lights flying in step formation, one of which lands or nearly lands. The remaining light merges with the large object. ("Sighting Evidence Grows," UFO Investigator 4, no. 3 (Nov./Dec. 1967): 3)

1967, February 17 — 6:55 p.m. An airline sales representative driving near Methuen, Massachusetts, slows his car as he sees an object hovering silently just over the road. The object has a bright green frame extending from a rectangular display of very bright body lights. When he gets closer, he can see a flashing red light. He carefully drives underneath it and sees other people in cars looking at it. ("V-Shaped Craft Hovers over Car," UFO Investigator 3, no. 12 (Mar./Apr. 1967): 6)

1967, February 17 or 18 — Around 10:00 p.m. Contactee Stella V. Lansing takes motion picture footage on a borrowed Keystone 8mm Capri camera of some yellow-orange lights on Ware Road near the junctions of Old Warren Road and Flynt Street in Palmer, Massachusetts. Suddenly a white light shoots upward in a zigzag motion and she is able to film some of its maneuvers. Subsequent frames seem to show low-contrast images of four human-like beings apparently conversing. Lansing is later studied by New Jersey psychiatrist Berthold E. Schwarz, who finds her repeat UFO sightings, further UFO films, and photographs showing superimposed clock-like patterns a subject of some interest. (Story, pp. 202–204; Berthold Eric Schwarz, "Stella Lansing's UFO Motion Pictures," Flying Saucer Review 18, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1972): 3–12, 20; Berthold Eric Schwarz, "Stella Lansing's Movies: Four Entities and a Possible UFO," in Charles Bowen, ed., UFO Encounters, special issue no. 5 of FSR, November 1973, pp. 3–9; Berthold Eric Schwarz, "Stella Lansing's Clocklike UFO Patterns," Flying Saucer Review 20, no. 4 (January 1975): 3–9; Berthold Eric Schwarz, "Stella Lansing's Clocklike UFO Patterns—Part 2," Flying Saucer Review 20, no. 5 (March 1975): 20–27; Berthold Eric Schwarz, "Stella Lansing's Clocklike UFO Patterns—Part 3," Flying Saucer Review 20, no. 6 (April 1975): 18–22; Berthold Eric Schwarz, "Stella Lansing's Clocklike UFO Patterns—Part 4," Flying Saucer Review 21, no. 1 (June 1975): 14–17; Berthold Eric Schwarz, "UFO Contactee Stella Lansing: Possible Medical Implications of Her Motion Picture Experiments," Journal of the American Society of Psychosomatic Dentistry and Medicine 23, no. 2 (1976): 60–68)

1967, February 20 — Condon, David R. Saunders, Low, William Price of AFRSTA(?), and Thomas Ratchford, USAF senior scientist, visit the CIA's National Photographic Interpretation Center in Fort Belvoir, Fairfax County, Virginia, to meet with its founder Arthur C. Lundahl and acquaint themselves with the CIA's analysis capabilities. NPIC personnel will be available to perform work of a "photogrammatic nature, such as attempting to measure objects imaged on photographs," but it will be strictly technical and no written comments or documentation is to be made public. After lunch, the group meets in the Pentagon with Brig. Gen. Edward B. Giller, director of the AF Special Weapons Center at Kirtland AFB, New Mexico. (Wikipedia, "Arthur C. Lundahl"; [memo], "Visit of Dr. Condon to NPIC, 20 February 1967," February 23, 1967; ClearIntent, pp. 141–142)

1967, February 21 — 8:30 p.m. Sherry Kohler is driving east on Western Avenue in Sheboygan Falls, Wisconsin, when she sees a greenish spherical object with a wispy white trail flying at airplane speed on her right side for about 10 seconds. A second witness, Richard R. Dern Sr., sees a similar object about 10 minutes later. (Center for UFO Studies, [case documents])

1967, February 22 — 6:30 a.m. As Mrs. James A. Clevenger stands by her kitchen sink in Milton, Indiana, her collie dog jumps against the window and races around, barking and jumping. She notices an oval object with a row of bright lights. She lets the frightened dog inside and it promptly hides. She goes out to the end of her front walk and sees the UFO moving slowly at 100–200 feet altitude, following the course of a creek. She runs inside and calls her neighbor Mrs. Judd Alford, who can see a ring of white lights at 200 feet. Her fox terrier runs inside at full speed and hides under a chair. The object disappears behind trees a few minutes later. ("5 in County Report Seeing UFO," Richmond (Ind.) Palladium-Item, March 3, 1967, p. 20; Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, p. 34)

1967, February 23 — Lt. Col. Robert Hippler says that Secretary of the Air Force Harold Brown has established the policy that all USAF information on UFOs classified up to and including Secret is to be provided to the University of Colorado project. (NICAP, "Declassification of UFO Reports")

1967, February 24 — Paul Santorinis, civil engineer of the National Technical University of Athens, Greece, gives a lecture to the Greek Astronautical Society, stating that a "world blanket of secrecy" surrounds UFO reports and describes his experience with ghost rockets over Greece in 1946. (Good Above, p. 23; Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, p. 117)

1967, February 25 — 7:50 p.m. Two teenage boys in Fargo, North Dakota, see a round or disc-shaped brightly illuminated object only a few feet in diameter. It moves higher, accelerates, and flies away to the northeast. (Fargo (N.Dak.) Forum, February 25, 1967; "Everything Hush-Hush about an Object Fargo Youths Photographed," Minot (N.Dak.) Daily News, February 28, 1967, p. 1; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, p. 56; Center for UFO Studies, [Hynek correspondence], pp. 27–29)

1967, February 26 — 7:45 p.m. Two Coshocton, Ohio, police officers, Robert Edie and Gene Border, observe two UFOs as they prepare for patrol. The objects, seen over the north end of town, are saucer-shaped, light in color, and emit red flames. The larger object remains stationary while the smaller one hovers around it before both move out of sight. Several other witnesses in the area also report seeing the objects. ("2 UFO's Seen at Coshocton," Dover (Ohio) Daily Reporter, February 28, 1967, p. 17)

1967, February 28 — NICAP's Richard H. Hall writes a memo to Donald Keyhoe, saying he is encouraged by the fact that Colorado UFO project coordinator Low still insists that the ETH needs to be tackled head on in order for the project to be meaningful. However, Condon seems to be giving "too much weight to the frivolous side of the UFO subject," looking into the most sensational cases because he feels that "everyone should have his say." (Eghigian, After, p. 199)

1967, Early March — Low writes a position paper that expects the Colorado project will fail to support the ETH. Before sharing his paper with project members, he shares his views in talks with the Rand Corporation, Jet Propulsion Laboratory, and Boeing. Despite his attempts to "build the record," the project's failure to move quickly has forced it to prepare a proposal to extend its contract. (UFOs Yes, 130–133; Clark III 1195; Clark IV 1369)

1967, March — Low calls Keyhoe and reveals that none of the Blue Book cases have been spot-checked for inaccuracies because "Condon hasn't found any AF explanations he considers untrue." Low later visits NICAP in Washington and Keyhoe asks him how many NICAP cases he has examined. Low says, "Probably four or five." Low says he ultimately hopes to review 85–90 cases. (Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, p. 120)

1967, March — Members of the Colorado project, including Robert Low, visit APRO headquarters; the Lorenzens promise to "help the project in any way possible" and give them some case leads that are never followed up because they are old. ("U. of Colorado Group at Tucson," APRO Bulletin, Mar./Apr. 1967, p. 2; Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 196; Powell, Keyhoe, 355)

1967, March — Michel M. Jaffe, a ham radio operator in Mountain View, California, begins publishing Data-Net Report, a UFO newsletter for radio enthusiasts that continues to 1973. (Data-Net Report, no. 1 (March 1967))

1967, March — Day. Augusto Arranda is taking photographs of the scenery in the Huascarán mountains near Yungay, Peru. He takes three photos of a disc-shaped object and one photo showing two objects. A Kodak employee sends one to ufologist Richard Greenwell, and APRO obtains the other three in 1969 from Eastman Kodak's International Division. The circumstances of the sighting remain unknown. (Patrick Gross, "The Yungay Photographs, Peru, 1967")

1967, March — Cuban air defense radar controllers report a UFO approaching Cuba from the northwest, moving at 660 mph at an altitude of 33,000 feet. Two MiG-21s are scrambled and are guided to within 3 miles of the object. The flight leader radios in that the UFO is a bright metallic sphere with no visible markings. He is unable to establish radio contact with it and Cuban air defense orders him to shoot it down. The flight leader reports that his radar is locked and missiles ready. Seconds later, a wingman screams into the radio that the flight leader's MiG has disintegrated. The UFO then accelerates and climbs above 90,000 feet, heading towards South America. The US 6947th Security Squadron headquartered at Homestead AFB [now Homestead Air Reserve Base] in Miami–Dade County, Florida, is monitoring the incident and sends a report to the NSA at Fort George G. Meade in Maryland.

NSA orders the squadron to ship all tapes and data to them and list the airplane loss as "equipment malfunction." The details sound like it might be the CIA's Oxcart A-12, the Air Force version of which is the SR-71, which are known to overfly Cuba. The incident could be related to the March 31 radar-visual case in South Florida (see below). (NICAP, "The 1967 Cuban Jet Incident"; ClearIntent, pp. 195–201; "1967: Two Cuban Jets Pursue a UFO, the UFO Destroys One Jet," IUR 3, no. 9 (September 1978): 11–13; Good Above, pp. 421–422; Jack Roth, as told by Bill Schroeder, Unknown Down, 2016; Billy Cox, "Being There," Life in Jonestown, April 30, 2023; Covert 72)

1967, March — 11:00 a.m. A group of students at the Ramón Martín Middle School in Guaynabo, Puerto Rico, watch a triangle-shaped object above a nearby mountain. It has a cupola on top and flies around silently before vanishing. (Jorge Martín, "Triangular UFOs over Puerto Rico," Flying Saucer Review 44, no. 3 (Autumn 1999): 22)

1967, March — 11:00 p.m. A luminous hemispherical object is seen over Dry Creek Basin, San Miguel County, Colorado, moving slowly, then accelerating. The witness's car engine, radio, and lights experience interference. (Condon, pp. 295–297)

1967, March 1 — Lt. Gen. Hewitt T. Wheless, USAF assistant vice chief of staff, circulates a memo on "Impersonations of Air Force Officers," which outlines Rex Heflin's accounts of the NORAD impostor and another case in which it reports that "a person in an Air Force uniform approached local police and other citizens who had sighted a UFO, assembled them in a school room and told them that they did not see what they thought they saw and that they should not talk to anyone about the sighting." All USAF personnel hearing about such incidents should report them to AFOSI. (ClearIntent, p. 237)

1967, March 1 — Many residents of Valparaiso, Chile, watch four bright domed objects, flashing blue and red lights, move south to north above the city. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 59)

1967, March 2 — 10:25 a.m.–1:30 p.m. Robert English, sitting in a gas station at Apache Summit in Otero County, New Mexico, calls Holloman AFB to report seeing several groups of 30–40 "silvery specks" passing overhead to the southwest. (He continues watching them until 1:30 p.m.) The base sends up two aircraft, but neither can see any objects. At 10:55 a.m., two range surveillance radars, one at Holloman AFB, the other at Elephant Mountain near Orogrande, plot four objects 11.5 miles east-northeast of Tularosa (and 5 miles south of the visual sighting) that appear to be flickering on and off. Both radars later plot three intermittent targets over Mescalero. At 11:08, both radars plot an object east-southeast of Ruidoso that drifts eastward 3–4 miles in 10 minutes at 25,000 feet; it then moves south at a speed of Mach 1.2. White Sands Mission Control radar continues to follow this object on a circular path until it abruptly climbs to 80,000 feet; it appears to go out of range around 11:31 a.m. at 100,000 feet. At 11:20 a.m., electronics technician Duane Bakke observes a saucer-shaped object moving away from him that disappears behind Alamo Peak near Cloudcroft; his line of sight is approximately on the circular track traced by Mission Control radar. At 11:21 a.m., both radars briefly show two stationary objects that are flickering. Although there are some discrepancies in the radar reports, the activity cannot be attributed to a release of radar chaff or equipment malfunction. 1967, March 5 — 1:25 a.m. Lenny and Tommy Söderström are returning home to their farm in Lövåsen, Vilhelmina, Sweden, when they notice a "spaceship" behind a barn. They rush inside and wake their parents and a sibling. Looking through the kitchen window, they see a dark, cigar-shaped object, 82–130 feet wide, silhouetted against the sky. Wobbling slightly on its axis, it hovers 24 feet in the air. After someone turns on the kitchen light, the UFO shoots off toward the north, emitting a whistling sound, as a smaller object appears from behind it. This UFO is a silvery globe about 20–40 feet in diameter; it turns and approaches the farmhouse. When it passes above a power line, it stops and hovers for 4 minutes. It takes off toward the northeast. ("Two from Sweden," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1967, p. 9; Åke Jonsson, "Reports from Sweden," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1968): 12–13; Clas Svahn, "Skräcknatten i Vilhelmina," Riksorganisationen UFO-Sverige; Clark III 246–247; Clark IV 286)

1967, March 5 — 5:30 p.m. John and Miriam Coyle take a series of six photos of a silvery UFO at Hallam, Victoria, Australia. The object circles them slowly and silently, then moves off to the west toward the setting sun. ("U.F.O. Photographed over Hallam," Australian Flying Saucer Review, no. 7 (September 1967): 15; Keith Basterfield, Vladimir Godic, and Pony Godic, "Australian Ufology: A Review," JUFOS 2 (1990): 25–26)

1967, March 5 — Air Defense Command radar at Minot AFB, North Dakota, tracks an unidentified target descending over the Minuteman ICBM missile silos of the 91st Strategic Missile Wing. Base security teams see a metallic, disc-shaped object ringed with bright flashing lights moving slowly, maneuvering, then stopping and hovering about 500 feet above the ground. The object circles directly over the launch control facility. F-106 fighters are scrambled, but at that moment the object climbs straight up and disappears at high speed. (NICAP, "Disc Hovers

1967, March 5 — Night. The Russell Carter Jr. family is traveling about 10 miles east of Hayes, South Dakota, on US Highway 14 when a bright light follows their car. The V-shaped object approaches from far away and is lower than the telephone wires, bathing the road and an area around the car in a brilliant light. They hear a humming sound and experience a feeling of numbness at its closest approach. ("Pierre Family Sees UFO in Hayes Area," Rapid City (S.Dak.) Journal, March 7, 1967, p. 1; "Sightings Still on Upswing," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1967, p. 11; "Car Followed by Flying Object," APRG Reporter, no. 56 (May 1967): 5)

1967, March 5 — Night. A Red Cross bloodmobile driven by Beau Shertzer and a young nurse is traveling along State Highway 2 near Huntington, West Virginia, when they see a flash of light in the woods nearby and a white glow appears. It rises slowly into the air and moves toward their vehicle. Shertzer accelerates, but the object moves above the van and paces it. He sees an extension being lowered to the roof. Another arm reaches down on the passenger side, as if in a pincer movement. However, the object moves away when headlights from approaching vehicles suddenly appear. (John A. Keel, "More from My Ohio Valley Notebook," Flying Saucer Review 13, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1967): 21; John A. Keel, The Mothman Prophecies, Saturday Review, 1975)

1967, March 6 — 12:01 a.m. In Benton Harbor, Michigan, Jerome Wolanin, assistant news director of a radio station, and his wife see an oval-shaped object with red, green, and yellow lights around the bottom rim, which pulsates red. It flies level from east to west and is joined by a second object from the west that hovers for 30 seconds then disappears. The objects make a hissing sound. (Sparks, p. 322)

1967, March 6 — 4:25 a.m. Knox County, Illinois, Deputy Sheriff Frank Courson sees an object shaped like a rubber cup placed under a furniture leg, with a dome set in the cup, bottom spinning rapidly, rim pulsating red, which approaches and passes overhead at low altitude, making a hissing sound. Moline Policeman Bill Fisher takes a film of the object near Sacred Heart Catholic School in Moline. (Sparks, p. 323; Dorothy Buresh, "Is Something Up There? 1967, March 7 — 12:30 a.m. Lucille Drzonek and her daughters, ages 24 and 17, are driving northwest on US Highway 20 just past Keeneyville, Illinois. Their beagle is with them. They see a solid object, estimated at 15 feet in diameter, outlined in bright white lights and with two big beams in front. As it nears the ground it takes on a disc shape and begins flashing red and green lights. The beagle is so frightened that its hair stands up straight on its back. As they turn off the highway toward Bartlett, Illinois, the object descends into a woods, lighting the trees with a red glare. It projects two white light beams into the rear window of their car. As they pull into their home, the UFO is hovering about 10 feet above a tree in their yard. A strange, localized gray mist appears and when it dissipates the UFO is gone. The beagle is visibly upset for the next two days. A veterinarian suggests he might have heard a noise inaudible to humans. (Jerry Thomas, "'Who Believes You?' 1967, March 8 — 1:05 a.m. Mr. and Mrs. William L. Wallace are returning home to Leominster, Massachusetts, when they pass through a dense fog near St. Leo's Cemetery and notice a bright light on the left. Wallace turns the car around and heads back for a closer look. The glow is from a light that is hovering 400–500 feet above the cemetery. Intrigued, Wallace places the car in neutral, pulls the emergency brake, and steps outside. As he points toward the light, something pulls his arm back and drops it on the roof of the car, which then stalls and the electrical system goes out. He remains immobile for more than 30 seconds even as his wife is trying to pull him back. As the lights and radio come back on, the UFO rocks back and forth, rises with a humming sound, and disappears. Wallace goes back into the car, which now starts normally. Wallace still feels "slow and sluggish" on the drive back, and he collides with the garage door as he pulls into his driveway. They return to the cemetery 10 minutes later, but the fog is gone. 1967, March 8 — Many people in Comas, Peru, watch 15 discs circle noiselessly low above town for 15 minutes. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 59)

1967, March 9 — 9:05 p.m. Jack Lindley sees a bright white saucer-shaped light, as big as an airliner, fly straight and fast to the east over Onawa, Iowa. (Sparks, p. 323)

1967, March 11–13 — Night. Red, green, and white lights are observed in the air by several witnesses at Tillamook, Oregon, including police and sheriff's deputies. Radar contact is made in the same area as the visual sightings by the radar station at Mount Hebo Air Force Station [now closed]. On March 11, objects are observed for one hour. On March 12, they are again observed for one hour. On March 13, the objects are seen for four hours and 35 minutes. The radar returns show hovering and rapid movement of the targets. The visual sightings also show rapid movement of the objects at times. One radar sighting shows a rapid distance change from 39–48 miles within one minute. (NICAP, "Colored Lights and Radar Returns"; Condon, pp. 122–123; Wendy Connors, "Cops and Saucers: Law Enforcement and UFO's, 1957–1981 Guide," November 20, 2013, audioclip 30)

1967, March 12 — 7:15 p.m. Larry Burke sees an object with red, green, and white flashing lights southwest of McIntosh, South Dakota. He picks up three friends—Dick Makens, Junior Edinger, and Charles Warren—to go investigate. On a country road one mile west of town they see four blinding, fluorescent-green lights low above the road ahead. As they are driving up a hill, the car engine stops. Frightened, they let the car coast back down the hill, and the engine starts again. The witnesses disagree on the size, shape, and altitude of the lights. ("Car Buzzing Incidents on Increase," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1967, p. 5)

1967, Mid-March — Night. Future UFO researcher Robert Hastings has a part-time job as a janitor in Malmstrom AFB near Great Falls, Montana. One night as he is cleaning out the Radar Approach Control center, one of the FAA controllers calls him over to look at 5 unidentified targets that two jet fighters have gone up to intercept. Soon he is asked to leave and clean the room later. Later on, he hears that the targets ascended vertically, leaving the jets far behind, and that the incident takes place in the Judith Basin area many miles to the south. (Nukes 6–7, 279, 282–286)

1967, March 16 — 8:30 a.m. At the Malmstrom AFB Echo-Flight missile launch facility between Winfred and Hilger, Montana, 1Lt Walter Figel, deputy crew commander of the Missile Combat Crew, sees one of his Minuteman missiles go into "no-go" status. He calls the missile site to see if there is scheduled maintenance and is told no. The guard tells him of a large, round object over the site. Within seconds, the nine other missiles shut down. Strike teams are dispatched to the two Launch Control Centers, where maintenance and security personnel tell them about the UFOs. The missiles are offline for the greater part of the day. 1967, March 16 — 3:30 p.m. Ron Forest, 15, spots a metallic disc in the sky in the backyard of a friend's home in Salem, Oregon. He quickly alerts his friends Kenneth and Ronald Baker. Ronald grabs a camera, capturing two Polaroid photos—one while the object hovers and another just four seconds later as it speeds away toward the west. The boys describe the disc as metallic, flying very high, without lights or sound. 1967, March 16 — 7:00 p.m. Beryl Dux sees two white cloud-like objects over Belvidere, New Jersey. She calls her sister Olive to watch, and suddenly a dull orange object comes out of the cloud on the right. It is spinning rapidly and descending quickly, but it goes into the white cloud on the right. The two clouds merge and vanish gradually. (Herbert S. Taylor, "Mystery Clouds and the UFO Connection," IUR 29, no. 4 (July 2005): 19)

1967, March 16 — Around 9:15 p.m. Mrs. Robert W. Smith and her daughters, Cindy and Lee, are driving home near Lebanon, Ohio, when they see a bright, round, white object hovering above the treetops, stationary but spinning like a top. The object, nearly as large as a house, emits an intense white light that sometimes turns red and has a halo around it. As it moves closer, the lights of their car go out. Fascinated, Smith steps out into the driveway, waving her arms as the object appears to dip. The family watches the UFO for about 45 minutes. She hears a high-pitched sound that hurts their ears and causes their dog to hide under a bed. 1967, March 20 — 11:00 p.m. A man and his daughter living in Butler, Pennsylvania, take the car out to go looking for lights his wife had seen in the sky earlier. After stopping with the car lights off for a while, he sees two yellowish-white globes of light at 200 feet altitude, which start moving toward the car in a parallel course. The objects descend a quarter mile away, then shoot toward the witnesses at 70–80 mph. The daughter hears a "chorus of voices" in her head saying "don't move" repeatedly. The man switches on the headlights, the lights disappear, and the voices stop. Moments later, 10 feet from the car, they see five figures standing in an irregular semicircle. The man gets into the car but the daughter continues staring at the figures, which have slits for eyes and mouths. All have long blond hair and are wearing something like baseball caps. They wear loose-fitting clothing. The witnesses drive away quickly and go to their minister's home. (Robert A. Schmidt, "Humanoids Seen at Butler," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1968): 5–6; Clark III 277–278; Clark IV 317–318)

1967, March 21 — A Brazilian military aircraft with 14 passengers encounters a glowing-red, oblong object over the state of Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, while on its way to Salgado Filho Airport near Gravataí. The control tower operator there alerts pilots of a Cruzeiro do Sul aircraft coming in from the southwest. Minutes later these pilots see apparently the same object, which follows them for 25 minutes before zipping up into the sky. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 58–59)

1967, March 21 — Night. Mary Beth Neufeld and three other teenagers are driving on US Highway 56 one mile west of Hillsboro, Kansas, when they see a bright object "like an upside-down cup on a saucer." They start driving toward it, but it approaches them and hovers above the car for a few seconds. The car starts rocking and the engine quits. When the UFO leaves, they are able to start it up again. ("Car Buzzing Incidents on Increase," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1967, p. 5)

1967, March 22 — 11:00 p.m. Ann-Lis Danielsson is driving home to Tjuvkil, Västra Götaland, Sweden, when she notices a greenish illumination outside her car. Slowing down, she sees a disc about 15 feet in diameter hovering 500 feet away at an altitude of 1,500 feet. It begins to circle the area slowly, rising and sinking and giving off a whining noise. After pacing her for 15 minutes, it climbs vertically with an oscillating motion. ("UFO förföljde bilist," Sökaren 4, no. 8 (1967): 8–9; "Girl Reconnoitred by Disc," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1967, p. 9)

1967, March 24 — 5:30 a.m. USAF S/Sgt Johnny Ferguson is traveling with his wife and three children near Loco, Texas, where they are terrified by a mysterious bright blue-neon light that chases them at high speed along the road. It finally splits into two, changes to a reddish color, and disappears behind a hill. Ferguson reports the incident to Deputy Sheriff George Hooten, then drives into nearby Wellington. (Curt Collins, "Contact in Texas: The Lost UFO Photos," Blue Blurry Lines, November 18, 2021)

1967, March 24 — 8:45 a.m. An airline pilot watches a small silvery-white disc hovering for 10 minutes above Los Alamos, New Mexico. Then it moves across the sky and disappears into clouds. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, p. 64)

1967, March 24 — 10:45 a.m. An astronomer at the Catalina Station observatory on Mount Bigelow 18 miles northeast of Tucson, Arizona, sees a white oval disc the apparent size of the moon moving silently in a straight line from northwest to northeast. It slowly changes from an elongated shape to a more circular one. He estimates its speed as 600 mph, size as 230 feet, and distance as 6–12 miles. It disappears after 50 seconds. ("Astronomers and UFO's: A Survey, Part 2, Sightings," IUR 2, no. 4 (April 1977): 4)

1967, March 24 — Late evening. An airman with the Malmstrom AFB Oscar-Flight Launch Control Center for the SAC USAF 341st Strategic Missile Wing south of Roy, Montana, sees a star-like object zigzagging high above him. Soon, a larger and closer light appears and behaves similarly. He calls his NCO and the two men watch as the lights streak through the sky, maneuvering in impossible ways. The NCO phones his commander, 1Lt. Robert Salas, who is below ground in the LCC. Salas is dubious and tells them to let him know if they get any closer. A few minutes later the NCO calls him again and shouts that a red, glowing UFO is hovering outside the front gate. Salas tells him to make sure the site is secure while he phones the command post. Meanwhile, one of the guards is injured when he approaches the UFO and has to be evacuated by helicopter. As Salas briefs Lt. Fred Meiwald, an alarm rings through the small LCC and both men see a "no-go" light turn on for one of the missiles. Within seconds, 4–7 more Minutemen nuclear ICBMs go offline in succession. The USAF investigation includes full-scale tests on-site, as well as lab tests at Boeing's Seattle plant. No cause for the shutdown can be found. 1967, March 24 — 9:00 p.m. Truck driver Ken Williams driving northwest on US Highway 87/89 about 5 miles southeast of Belt, Montana, sees a dome-shaped object emitting a bright light moving at 50–60 mph about 1 miles to his left. After it hovers briefly about 600 feet in the air, it drops slowly to "within a very few feet from the ground" and shines a bright light three times in his direction that momentarily blinds him. He drives to the top of a hill, stops a car, and asks them to stop at a gas station and call the highway patrol. Williams returns to his previous viewing spot and watches the light for several more minutes before it rises and disappears "like a bolt of lightning." Numerous other reports come in from this area. At dawn, police and a helicopter from Malmstrom AFB conduct a search without success. (NICAP, "Dome-Shaped Object Lands in Ravine"; Sparks, p. 323; Robert L. Hastings, "Remarkable Reports from the Missile Field," IUR 32, no. 1 (August 2008): 9–10; Kevin D. 1967, March 26 — 4:00 p.m. Five witnesses in New Winchester, Ohio, see an oval object, like copper or brass with the sun shining on it, fly from southeast to northwest with a tumbling motion. (Sparks, p. 323; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, p. 74)

1967, March 27 — Day. The crew of a Brazilian Air Force C-47 and the crew of a Serviços Aéreos Cruzeiro do Sul photo-mapping aircraft see a UFO in the vicinity of Porto Alegre, Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil. The BAF crew describes it as a "reddish-colored full moon" that is flying in circles. They report the sighting to the tower at Salgado Filho International Airport, which asks the mapping aircraft to identify the object. The Cruzeiro plane follows the UFO for 15 minutes before it disappears. (Good Above, p. 311)

1967, March 28 — 2:25 a.m. Electrical worker David Morris, 20, is driving home to Munroe Falls, Ohio, from nearby Kent when he sees a glowing red-orange object shaped like an inverted cone hovering just above the ground. The object is about 12 feet wide at the base and 25 feet high, with a ball-shaped object at its top. Looking at the road ahead, Morris sees four or five large-headed humanoids moving rapidly back and forth about 50 feet ahead. He slams on his brakes, but it is too late. He feels a thump against the right front corner of his car and sees an arm with a thumbless mitten fly up, then down. The car stops 10 feet later; Morris thinks about providing assistance, but the otherworldliness of the situation causes him to get away quickly. In his rearview mirror he sees a group of the entities position themselves around something lying on the ground. In the morning, Morris finds three dents in the front bumper and right headlight ring of his car. 1967, March 28 — A second briefing for Robert Low by NORAD analysts effectively diverts researcher attention away from NORAD's 500 defense radars and onto its useless handful of space defense satellite-tracking radars and cameras (referred to as "spacetrack" and are the least likely to detect UFOs). Low tries to find out if NORAD can help with identifying satellites that might be misreported as UFOs and whether NORAD can't track a UFO entering the atmosphere from outer space (or just aren't), but the analysts are evasive. NORAD says its satellite-tracking radars (with non-ballistic maneuvering and erratic flight paths) actually can "see" UFOs, but no one will ever know because the data that does not fit satellite or ballistic trajectories are thrown out automatically by system computers. No mention is made of NORAD's high priority for not ignoring unpredictable, UFO-like maneuverable cruise missiles or hypersonic space planes. This discussion is distributed as a briefing paper to all Colorado project members on June 6, including Condon. (Clark III 804, 808, 810; Clark IV 895, 901–903)

1967, March 31 — 10:30 p.m. Farmer Carroll Wayne Watts reportedly sees a cylindrical object about 100 feet long that is hovering just off the ground near Loco, Texas, and emitting a motor-like sound. A voice addresses him from within the object requesting that he undergo a physical examination so that he can go on a flight. When Watts refuses to do so, the craft takes off. Watts has another encounter, an apparent abduction, on April 11. In a series of other experiences and sightings, on June 7, 11, and 13, he manages to take Polaroid photographs. In all, he has 10 photographs of the cylindrical UFO in flight, and another shot of a little man from the ship. Most of Watts's pictures are black and white, but at least three of them are shot in color. He later admits the observation is a hoax. ("Another UFO Visit Reported from Loco," *Wellington (Tex.) 1967, March 31 — 10:30 p.m. Dennis Force of the USAF 644th Radar Squadron in Homestead, Florida, is on the phone with his cousin Bill Schroeder, on duty with an Army Hawk surface-to-air unit in Key West when Schroder gets a call from NORAD on the approach of a formation of eight radar targets it had ben tracking from Canada, now closing in on Miami airspace at 1,500 mph. Force watches the blips at Homestead and Schroeder finds the targets on pulse-acquisition radar. Both sets of bogeys travel from west to east, turn sharply north to south, and go back again. Force's targets, however, are running patterns over the Atlantic Ocean from Fort Lauderdale to Biscayne Bay, while Schroeder's are farther west from Florida Bay into the Gulf of Mexico. The Air Force dispatches three F-4 Phantoms from Boca Chica north out of the Keys, and both Force and Schroeder watch the blips blink off their screens. The jets head back after 15 minutes, but the targets reappear and resume their repetitive grid-pattern activities until one of them over the Gulf breaks formation and heads toward Key West. Schroeder activates an illuminator radar system to track the target, but the system immediately shuts down due to a power outage. The launcher sergeant watches a bright object pass overhead, flying horizontally. At Homestead, Force watches the targets accelerate east and vanish over the Atlantic. The following day, Force's radar team is debriefed and told that the incident involved a NORAD exercise. All radar data is confiscated. The incident could be the same as the undated (although in March 1967) Cuban MiG incident (see above), which may have involved the CIA's Oxcart A-12 and was definitely monitored at Homestead. (Jack Roth, as told by Bill Schroeder, Unknown Down, 2016; Billy Cox, "Being There," Life in Jonestown, April 30, 2023)

1967, Spring — Psychologist David R. Saunders, a principal investigator for the Colorado project, launches UFOCAT, a computerized database of UFO cases, after researcher Jacques Vallée gives the project 3,000 cases from his own collection. Saunders codes the cases with such parameters as source, date, time, location, state and county, country, witness names, age, gender, special features, duration, and other elements. (Center for UFO Studies, "UFOCAT"; Clark III 1157; Clark IV 1318)

1967, Spring — The United Aerial Phenomena Agency begins publishing Flying Saucer Digest, edited by Allan J. Manak in Cleveland, Ohio. Rick Hilberg takes over as chief editor in 2003. It continues until at least fall 2017. (Flying Saucer Digest 1, no. 1 (Spring 1967))

1967, Spring — Night. Centenary College Instructor John O. Williams has taken his astronomy class to an open field on the Shreveport, Louisiana, campus to observe the sky. The see a bright orange light precisely due west of them at an elevation of about 30° approaching at a modest angular rate of 1° per second. It remains silent even as it passes above them. A second light, much fainter and blue in color, is following it. The second light turns away and moves south into the distance. The orange light continues eastward, then performs a tight 180° turn and returns to their zenith. It accelerates west and disappears from view. After about 20 minutes it disappears, followed by a thread of rippling blue light. The thread breaks into 7–8 individual blue lights, which exit in several directions. (John O. Williams, "Louisiana Lights in 1967," IUR 22, no. 4 (Winter 1997–1998): 10–11)

1967, April — Brinsley Le Poer Trench founds Contact (UK) in London, England, to promote contact between ufologists internationally. Geared toward young people, the group is intended to foster interest in astronomy and encourage people to make contact with aliens. It launches a newsletter first called International Sky Scouts Newsletter, then retitled Awareness, which continues through 2012. (International Sky Scouts Newsletter, no. 1 (April 1967); Story, p. 89; David Clarke and Andy Roberts, Flying Saucerers: A Social History of UFOlogy, Alternative Albion, 2007, pp. 167–170; Eghigian, After, pp. 175–176)

1967, April 4 — The Federal Aviation Agency issues N 7230.29, requiring air traffic controllers to forward UFO reports to the Colorado project. (US Federal Aviation Agency, "Reporting of Unidentified Flying Objects," FAA Notice N 7230.29, April 4, 1967)

1967, April 4 — Carlo Cammarata watches a metallic object about 100 feet in diameter hovering some 20 feet above the terrace of his house in San Cataldo, Caltanissetta, Sicily, Italy. He also sees three humanoids wearing silvery suits and green belts with lights on them. They seem interested in the birds Cammarata is keeping caged on the terrace, touching them occasionally. They ascend into the object on a luminous beam and speed away. (1Pinotti 157)

1967, April 5 — 7:45 p.m. Justice of the Peace John H. Demler is driving north on State Highway 72 just south of Lickdale, Pennsylvania, when his car's engine sputters and stops and the lights go out. He sees an object approaching about 20 feet above the road. It is about 30 feet across and looks like "it had lights in back of a painted black glass." It flies over the car as Demler lowers his window and he notices a smell of sulfur and oil. It emit a sound like an electric motor, which grows louder as it leaves the area. The UFO shoots off sparks similar to that of "grinding on an emory wheel." The UFO comes to a stop alongside the car, tilts, starts off slowly, then puts on such a terrific burst of speed that Demler and his automobile seem to be pulled to it. The car settles down so fast that he is moved all the way across the front seat. When he looks up again, the object has "turned to a bluish tinge" and is far in the distance. The next day, the skin on his hands and feet begin to peel and Demler is a nervous wreck. His coworkers confirm he is in a state of physical or psychological shock for many hours. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, p. 1; UFOEv II 208)

1967, April 6 — The Arizona Daily Wildcat publishes an interview with James E. McDonald, who says he has found "almost no correlation between so-called 'evaluations or explanations' that are made by Blue Book and the facts of the case." He adds that the good cases have been "swept under the rug in a most disturbing way by Project Blue Book investigators and their consultants" and that "nobody there with any strong scientific competence is looking into the problem." ("The UFO Phenomenon: A New Frontier Awaiting Serious Scientific Exploration," Arizona Daily Wildcat 58, no. 110 (April 6, 1967): 4–8, reprinted in Valerie Vaughan, ed., UFOs and Science: The Collected Writings of Dr. James E. McDonald, Fund for UFO Research, 1995, pp. 38–43)

1967, April 6 — 12:45 p.m. Robert Apfal, a teacher at Crestview Elementary School in Opa-locka, Florida, is in the schoolyard with six students, facing northeast. They spot a metallic, slightly reflective, disc-shaped object hovering about 60 feet above the ground over a telephone pole about one mile away. The object disappears as they watch. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 112)

1967, April 6 — 9:45 p.m. A Pacific Western Airlines pilot and crew see a dull orange-red object that flies erratically as it paces the aircraft, then speeds away. Confirmed by radar at Edmonton, Alberta, International Airport. (Condon, pp. 130–131)

1967, April 7 — 10:00 a.m. Some 200 children at morning recess at Crestview Elementary School in Opa-locka, Florida, see an oval-shaped object hovering above some trees to the north of the school. It seems to move toward the school and then drop below a pine tree. Some of the kids notice an antenna-like structure, while others think there are two objects. The UFO is also seen by teachers Virginia Martin, Marian Waters, and Robert Apfal, who has his students sketch what they had seen. The drawings depict a turreted structure in the treetops. The Air Force claims a helicopter is in the area practicing takeoffs and landings. (NICAP, "Teachers, 200 Children See UFO in Broad Daylight"; "10 Chaotic Minutes, and the Kids Screamed," Miami Herald, April 8, 1967, p. 1-B; "AF Says 'It' Was Copter; People Who Saw It Say No," Miami Herald, April 11, 1967, p. 1-B; Bill Barry, "Funny Things Happening: In The Air," Miami News, April 11, 1967, p. 3-A; "The North Dade Affair," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1967, p. 10; "More on the North Dade Incident," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1967, pp. 8–9; Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 112)

1967, April 8 — Four college students on a double date in Banner Elk, North Carolina, notice a greenish fluorescent glow on the ground 180 feet away. Their car engine fails and the radio is flooded with static. An object passes near the car and disappears into the distance. The witnesses panic then push the car to a main road where they are able to restart it. They find three round imprints, about 6 inches in diameter and 2 inches deep, in the shape of an equilateral triangle. (Fred Merritt, "A Preliminary Classification of Some Reports of UFOs," IUR 28, no. 3 (Fall 2003): 10)

1967, April 10–11 — A bright white object circles one Minuteman launch site near Malmstrom AFB, Great Falls, Montana, for prolonged periods. It eventually ascends to an altitude higher than the capabilities of Air Force interceptors. The local radio station is told to keep quiet about it. (Raymond Fowler, Casebook of a UFO Investigator, Prentice-Hall, 1981, p. 187)

1967, April 11 — 9:30 p.m. While driving near Woodville, Idaho, a woman sees an amber-colored object shaped like a disc with a tall dome. It is at a height of two telephone poles and as large as a car. The object looks like plastic and has vertical risers evenly spaced around a "conning tower." A bright curved surface is hanging from a brim that extends from rim to rim of what looks like a top hat. The object hovers, moved slowly against the wind, passes directly overhead, and hovers over some lava beds where it emits two sparkly fireballs, then two more a few minutes later. Finally it goes dark and disappears. ("Objects Aim Light Beams, Drop 'Fireballs,'" UFO Investigator 4, no. 1 (May/June 1967): 1)

1967, April 11 — 10:20 p.m. Elis W. Grahn is walking along the shore of Pohjalahti near Kokkola, Finland, when above the trees to the right, he sees a perfectly round object. It is roughly 2–3 times the size of the moon, hanging motionless in the air. The object has sharply defined edges and a rim that is warm green in color. Inside the rim, the color is a red with a light color of violet. He points the object out to two 17-year old boys who are passing by. The object rotates around its axis and changes color to a faint greenish-white with no red, and loses its sharply defined contours. Grahn watches the object for another 35–40 minutes through field glasses and notices he can see stars through the edges of the object. He also sees straight lines over an opaque area in the center. At 11:05

p.m., the object starts to disappear very slowly. (Elis W. Grahn, "Strange Object over Finland," Flying Saucer Review 13, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1967): 7–8)

1967, April 12 — 8:59 p.m. In Phoenix, Arizona, a bell-shaped object approaches a car from the left side, glowing red-orange with yellow-orange pulsations. It hovers over a streetlight, then makes a pass at the car. At that point, the car engine stops. The UFO banks eastward, then westward, and flies away. The three witnesses continue their trip and see the same object eight more times, plus another whitish object. The car engine continues to operate normally throughout the remaining sightings. (Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1981, p. 34; Randle, Levelland, 2021, p. 142)

1967, April 12 — 10:35 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. Granbacka are driving between Lappajärvi and Evijärvi, Finland, when a round, red object with a green rim appears in the northeast. It appears about the size of the Moon. They stop the car and get out to watch, and the object turns into a whitish, glowing cloud. It stays in this position for a long time, even after they reach home. (Keskipohjanmaa, April 12, 1967; Elis W. Grahn, "Strange Object over Finland," Flying Saucer Review 13, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1967): 8)

1967, Mid-April — Dusk. Gary Statenberg is working with a tractor on Jamie Ediger's farm near Dayton, Oregon, when he sees an object moving toward him down the river basin at about 500 feet altitude. It stops, descends to 100 feet, and hovers about 600–700 feet away. He shuts off the tractor but can hear no sound coming from the object, which has red flashing lights around its base. There is a small dome with portholes on the top. Suddenly it takes off to the north, the lights changing to green as it does so. Statenberg returns home badly shaken. (Letter from William K. Hartmann to Robert Low, June 14, 1967, in the Robert Low papers, American Philosophical Society)

1967, April 16 — Businessman Guillermo Roldan and his daughter Chichita see a glowing, egg-shaped object fly across the sky above Boraure, Venezuela, at great speed. It stops abruptly then descends and lands. Roldan rushes toward the spot, but the object takes off at high speed. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 60)

1967, April 17 — 2:20 a.m. SP4 Robert M. Harkinson of the US Army's 524th Military Intelligence Detachment is stationed in Saigon [now Ho Chi Minh City], Vietnam, when he sees five bright-white, oval-shaped objects traveling in close formation at high speed across the sky. They flash by in about 5 seconds and disappear behind a cloud. He estimates their speed to be about five times that of any jet aircraft. About 5 minutes later, he sees several jets flying on the same course as the objects. (John J. Stahl Jr., "Unidentified Flying Objects," case report, April 17, 1967)

1967, April 17 — 9:00 p.m. School principal John L. Metz and three teachers in separate cars are driving home in Jefferson City, Missouri, and see a 350–400 foot, bluish-white, WWI-helmet–shaped object come over the Missouri River bluff and move directly above their cars, bathing them in intense light. Metz observes it through 8x binoculars. The object hovers above power lines for about 10 minutes then heads toward the airport. Two smaller objects emerge from its base; they are disc- or helmet-shaped and the size of a DC-3. Metz drives to the airport on Highway 94 and finds two more witnesses. Jefferson City Memorial Airport employees watch a flat, circular, star-like orange light flashing an intermittent red-blue through a 30x 40mm telescope around 9:40–10:08 p.m. The Ozark Airliner Flight 319 crew sees two large round objects moving in various directions below their airplane during its final landing approach. (Sparks, p. 324; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 110–111)

1967, April 21 — 1:30 a.m. Two couples see an unexplained light near Ephrata, Washington, and chase it in their car. They came upon a UFO sitting on the road and have to slam on the brakes to avoid hitting it. The object takes off, moves behind the car, and follows it for 5 minutes, then disappears as traffic becomes heavier. The witnesses are badly shaken by the experience. (NICAP, "The 1967 UFO Chronology")

1967, April 21 — Robert J. Low issues a position paper that outlines, after months of discussions and briefings, a framework for the Colorado project's goals and procedures. It includes acquiring data on new cases, contracted reviews on such special topics as radar and mirages, a special section on photo cases, and a statistical treatment of bulk data. He divides the research question into three tiers: "Are there really sightings that are unexplained?" "Are any of these external stimuli solid objects?" and "Are any of these objects extraterrestrial spaceships?" He asks the group to discuss criteria for answering those questions. (Swords 317–318)

1967, April 21 — Coup d'état in Greece. Although there are persistent rumors about an active support of the coup by the US government, there is no evidence to support such claims. The timing of the coup apparently catches the CIA by surprise. (Wikipedia, "Greek military junta of 1967")

1967, April 21 — 8:55 p.m. Clifton N. Crowder, manager of the Mobil Chemical Company warehouse in South Hill, Virginia, leaves the warehouse and starts home. About 50–75 yards down a narrow asphalt highway his headlights fall on an object 400 feet away on the road ahead. It is pewter-colored, shaped like a storage tank, about 12 feet in diameter, and 15–16 feet high. It is standing on legs about 3–3.5 feet long. He switches to his bright lights and the object belches a white burst of flame from the bottom and ascends rapidly. Meanwhile, the road is on fire. After it dies out, Crowder drives to South Hill and contacts police. They return and find a kidney-shaped black spot on the road, about 3 feet wide at the widest point. William T. Powers, assistant to J. Allen Hynek of Northwestern University, arrives on the scene to examine the spot. Using kerosene, gasoline, and a blowtorch, he attempts to simulate the black spot, but has no luck. Where each leg of the machine rested he finds two spike holes, similar to those made by football cleats. They are about 6 inches apart, 7/8 inch in diameter, and about one inch deep. The four feet are about 11.5–12 feet apart and the diagonals are 16 feet 1 inch and 16 feet 6 inches, respectively. Powers concludes that the center of gravity is above the firepoint and notes that the intersections of the diagonals deviate 2 degrees from 90°. (Sparks, p. 324; Project Blue Book, [case file]; "UFO Blocks Road, Sets It on Fire," Fort Worth (Tex.) Star-Telegram, April 22, 1967, p. 1; "O Marks Spot: But by What?," *Roanoke (Va.) 1967, April 22 — At the annual meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Washington, D.C., James E. McDonald says of Donald Menzel, "when he comes to analyzing UFO reports, he seems to calmly cast aside well-known scientific principles almost with abandon, in an all-out effort to be sure that no UFO report survives his attack." He also says, "I have learned from a number of unquotable sources that the Air Force has long wished to get rid of the burden of the troublesome UFO problem and has twice tried to 'peddle' it to NASA—without success." (James E. McDonald, "UFOs: Greatest Scientific Problem of Our Times?" April 22, 1967; "Our Speaker(s) Tonight: James E. McDonald, Donald H. Menzel, Hector Quintanilla," Saturday Night Uforia; Wendy Connors, "Project Blue Book Guide," audioclips 74 and 75, November 21, 2013; Clark III 699, 744–745; Clark IV 795–796. 825–826)

1967, April 24 — After reading a March 7 column by Drew Pearson that alleges the US attempted to assassinate Fidel Castro, President Johnson directs CIA Director Richard Helms to conduct an investigation. The result is a 133-page report by CIA Inspector General John S. Earman, transmitted on April 24 to Helms, that clearly shows the CIA was in contact with and cooperated with Maj. Rolando Cubela Secades of the Cuban military in plans to assassinate Castro. The operation is known as Project AMLASH. After receiving the report, Helms orally briefs the President about its contents. According to his testimony before the Select Committee, when asked if he has told the President "that efforts to assassinate Fidel Castro had continued into Johnson's presidency, Helms replied, 'I just can't answer that, I just don't know. I can't recall having done so.'" (US Department of State, Office of the Historian, "Document 315," in Foreign Relations of the United States, 1964-1968, Volume XXXII, Dominican Republic; Cuba; Haiti; Guyana)

1967, April 28 — Condon recommends J. Allen Hynek and Richard H. Hall to Encyclopedia Britannica as excellent persons to write UFO entries. (Swords 319)

1967, April 28 — 11:30 a.m. Brian F. Jenkins and seven other coast guards at Brixham, Devon, England, watch a huge, cone-shaped object through 25x binoculars mounted on a tripod. The object is hovering at 15,000 feet and seems to be revolving. Jenkins says the cone is pointing down, and the object seems made of glass or highly polished metal: "Near the bottom there was a triangular-shaped opening or door with a white rim on the top that reflected a lot of sunlight. The bottom was crinkled, very white, and seemed to consist of strips of metal hanging down." It drifts to the northwest, rising to 22,000 feet and 8 miles away. At 12:40 p.m., a jet aircraft approaches it, flies above it, passes it, turns, and approaches it from below before it disappears from sight. Possible balloon. ("British Radar/Visual Case," UFO Investigator 4, no. 1 (May/June 1967): 8; Good Above, pp. 60–62)

1967, April 29 — 7:40 p.m. Ian McGregor and two other oil drillers drive out to an airstrip near Mount Newman, Western Australia, to look for a UFO that has been appearing in the area for several nights. Toward the southeast a bright haze appears that turns into an inverted cone of light that is followed by an orange disc that rises vertically, turns on its edge, and approaches them. They flash their headlights and the object stops moving. It then returns in the direction it came from and lands in the same spot. Their compasses are not working accurately. They wait until 11:30 p.m., but do not see it again. (L. J. Locke, "UFOs in Western Australia: From Mayanup to Mt. Newman," Australian Flying Saucer Review, no. 8 (1968): 16)

1967, May — The CIA launches the Phoenix Program in Vietnam to gather information on the Viet Cong, whose members would then be neutralized (captured, converted, or killed). Emphasis for the enforcement of the operation is placed on local government militia and police forces, rather than the military. Heavy-handed operations—such as random cordons and searches, large-scale and lengthy detentions of innocent civilians, excessive use of firepower, torture, and targeted killings—have a negative effect on the civilian population. Between 1968 and 1972, Phoenix "neutralizes" 81,740 people (26,369 are killed) suspected of belonging to the National Liberation Front. The reported torture is carried out by South Vietnamese forces with the CIA and special forces playing a supervisory role. (Wikipedia, "Richard Helms")

1967, May — A man identifying himself as Maj. Richard French visits a woman in Owatonna, Minnesota, who has had a UFO encounter the previous November. He is 5 feet 9 inches with an olive complexion and hair too long for an Air Force officer. He is wearing a fashionable gray suit, white shirt, and black tie. At one point, French complains of stomach problems, and the woman recommends Jell-O. He says he will return if the symptoms persist, so he shows up the following morning. The woman sits him down with a bowl of Jell-O, which he tries to drink. "I had to show him how to eat it with a spoon," the woman tells John A. Keel. (John A. Keel, UFOs: Operation Trojan Horse, Manor Books ed., 1976, pp. 171–173; Clark III 734; Clark IV 814)

1967, May — 12:30–3:15 p.m. During a reconnaissance exercise in Madagascar, a detachment of 23 officers and men serving with the French Foreign Legion watch a bright object landing in a "falling leaf" motion. When it touches down on tripod legs, the glow dissipates. The egg-shaped craft is 23–26 feet high and has no visible markings except for openings at the base through which flames are visible. The witnesses seem paralyzed or at least extremely distracted while the UFO is on the ground. When they recover their senses, they find that 2.75 hours have elapsed. For 2 days afterward, they all have violent headaches, a buzzing in their ears, and a throbbing in their temples. (H. Julien, "A 1967 Landing in Madagascar," Flying Saucer Review 23, no. 1 (June 1977): pp. 29–30; Good Need, pp. 297–298)

1967, May — Evening. A woman in Swift Current, Saskatchewan, sees a light shining through her basement window. Across the street she notices a large object beaming with three colored lights and rotating. She goes outside with another woman and watch the slight slowly spin for 20 minutes above a neighbor's house. When she tries to call the neighbors, all she gets is a busy signal, and when she looks outside again, the object is gone. The next day, the neighbor tells her that there was nothing wrong with the phone and that all evening she had been playing cards with friends and talking about UFOs. (Michael D. Swords, "Timmermania: A Step Too Far into the Timmerman Files?" IUR 27, no. 4 (Winter 2002–2003): 8)

1967, May — Evening. A farmer near Holbæk, Denmark, is working outside when he sees a strange lilac-colored light. Approaching, he sees a domed object with windows. Something is moving behind it. He goes home but returns to the spot the next day and finds an odd substance. It looks like "cotton wool," but is finer than cotton. He leaves it in the same spot, but it dissipates over the next three days. There is also a depressed area where the object had been, and some wire is pulled away from some pylons. ("Denmark: Flying Saucer Landed in a Field outside 'Holbak'?????" Saucer Scoop 2, no. 4 (July 1967): 4; Michael D. Swords, "Angel Hair: Spindrift between Worlds," IUR 32, no. 1 (August 2008): 7)

1967, May or June — A couple captures on an 8mm film camera 10 frames (2.5 seconds) of footage of an unusual object at Alberton, South Australia. The UFO is enveloped in a striking blue light that gives the appearance of a searchlight moving around its circumference. The developed film appears to show a craft with portholes and a sweeping searchlight. (David Reneke, "The Australian UFO Photo File," UFO Research Australia Newsletter 2, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1981): 10–15; Keith Basterfield, Vladimir Godic, and Pony Godic, "Australian Ufology: A Review," JUFOS 2 (1990): 26; Patrick Gross, "The Alberton UFO Footage, Australia, 1967")

1967, May 1 — The Colorado project issues a press release calling for photos of UFOs taken by private citizens and provides recommendations to the photographers and the information it should include. The release is basically a rewrite of a document prepared by NPIC staff and approved by Lundahl on March 24. (Peter A. Sturrock, The UFO Enigma, Warner, 1999, p. 48)

1967, May 1 — Night. A man's car engine fails while he is driving near Peeltree, West Virginia. He sees a 40-foot-long elliptical object emerge from behind a shed and hover 15 feet from his car. It tilts toward the car at a 30° angle. He hears static on the radio, and the dashboard temperature gauge goes off the dial. He feels an intense wave of heat when he puts his head out the window, and his hands burn when he touches the horn rim and dashboard. He also reports headaches and a partial loss of vision. (Herbert S. Taylor, "An Update on Vehicle Interference Reports, Part Two," IUR 34, no. 1 (Sept. 2011): 19)

1967, May 5 — Condon, Low, Hartmann, Ratchford, and Charles Reed of the National Research Council are briefed by an unnamed specialist [probably Everitt L. Merritt of the Autometrics Division of the Raytheon Company of Alexandria, Virginia] at the NPIC on a photogrammetric analysis he had carried out on the November 1966 UFO

photo case from Roseville, Ohio. The analysis debunks the photo. The committee is again impressed with the technical work performed, and Condon remarks that for the first time a scientific analysis of a UFO will stand up to investigation. (Wikipedia, "Arthur Lundahl"; E. L. Merritt, "Photogrammatric Analysis of a Non-Synchronous Pair of U.F.O. Exposures," June 1967; Peter A. Sturrock, The UFO Enigma, Warner, 1999, pp. 48–49; Powell, Keyhoe, 356–357)

1967, May 5 — Indonesian Air Marshal Roesmin Noerjadin admits that sometimes UFOs pose a problem for the country's air defense, and sometimes the military is forced to fire on them. (Good Need, p. 254)

1967, May 6 — 1:43 a.m. Michael Campeadore is driving in Arizona about 17 miles southwest of St. George, Utah, when he hears a loud humming sound. After stopping the car and getting out, he notices a huge object, 45–50 feet in diameter, hovering 25–30 feet above him. He reaches into the car and gets a .25 caliber pistol, loads it, and fires point blank at the object. He hears the bullets hit and ricochet as they strike. Before he has finished the clip, the object begins moving off and disappears in seconds. 1967, May 6 — 11:00 a.m. A mechanical engineer and his daughter are driving on the Durango–Mazatlán Highway in Mexico. They spot a disc-shaped object landed on the ground off the highway. They stop the car and he takes three photos as the object takes off. The first photo shows the object at treetop level, partially hidden by a tree, with a portion of its landing gear visible. The second object shows the object in flight against a clear sky. The third photo shows nothing. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 65)

1967, May 7 — 2:00 a.m. Ricky Banyard, 17, and four others watch and follow a spherical object with a spinning top and bottom and with red and green lights for 4 hours in Edmonton, Alberta, in the Mount Pleasant Cemetery. As it hovers at about 200 feet, a light beam comes from the bottom of the object, illuminating the ground. They hear a muffled whistling noise as the object hovers, then a screaming noise like a jet engine starting up. All its lights go out, and the object takes off in a flurry of explosive sounds. Black streaks are later found on the charred road surface. 1967, May 7? — A couple are driving through the state of Tabasco, Mexico, when they see a bright point of light in the sky. It descends to a spot about 500 feet away and gives off an intense white-orange light from its cone-shaped body. The couple stops and shuts off their headlights. When the object approaches closer, the man turns the headlights on again. The UFO stops in midair and blinks its light off and on twice. The couple become frightened and drive to the nearest town. Several people return with them to the spot and the object is still there. When they turn their headlights off and on, it approaches them. Some of the men run to the object with weapons raised, and it takes off into the sky within seconds. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 60)

1967, May 10 — Richard Helms goes to the White House to give President Lyndon Johnson the answers to the questions he'd been asked seven weeks earlier. The only account of that meeting is Helms's own. He says he described the [inspector general's] conclusions and that Johnson said: "Then you were not responsible for Trujillo, 'No.' Correct answer. 'Diem?' 'No.' Correct answer. 'Castro, he's still alive, okay.'" At the same meeting Helms also tells Johnson about the mail interception program "and some other things that were going on." Johnson's response to that was equally laconic; he just nodded and said something along the line of, 'But be careful, don't get caught.'" (Thomas Powers, The Man Who Kept the Secrets: Richard Helms and the CIA, Random House, 1979, pp. 156–157)

1967, May 13 — 4:40 p.m. An object is picked up on radar at the Colorado Springs, Colorado, airport. A Braniff flight is coming in for a landing on runway 35. The track of the object behaves like a ghost echo, perhaps a ground return being reflected from the Braniff aircraft. The blip appears at about twice the range of the Braniff blip. When the Braniff airliner touches down, however, the situation changes radically. The UFO blip pulls to the right (east) and passes over the airport at an estimated height of about 200 feet. The object track passes within 1.5 miles of the control tower. The object is not visible even through binoculars by personnel in the control tower. The Colorado project finds this to be one of the most puzzling radar cases on record. (NICAP, "Invisible UFO Tracked on Radar"; Condon, pp. 170–171, 310–316; Carl Sagan and Thornton Page, eds., UFO's: A Scientific Debate, Cornell University, 1972, p. xxii)

1967, Mid-May — 11:00 p.m. Patricio Hanessian and Alfredo Padilla are driving in the state of Guanajuato, Mexico, and see a flat-bottomed, domed object in the sky. The central part is bright white and the edge is bright pink or red. It holds its position for 2–3 minutes then moves away, reappearing about 500 feet in front of their car, where it hovers for 2 minutes before speeding off. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 60–61)

1967, May 16 — CIA Director Richard Helms makes one last pitch for the A-12 Oxcart program to President Johnson, saying the aircraft are essential for finding the SAM missile launch sites responsible for shooting down pilots in North Vietnam. They can't want for the Air Force's SR-71 to become operational. Johnson authorizes A-12's to deploy to Kadena Air Base in Okinawa, Japan, before the monsoons start. (Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 265–266)

1967, May 16 — 10:10 p.m. Ship Master Donald W. Dee and 3rd Mate Homer Hawthorne, seamen Earle Bradley and Eric Koster, all crew of the Pacific Coast Transport ship SS Point Sur, see six red point-source lights that seem to be pacing the ship over the Gulf of Mexico. One object is confirmed by sporadic radar returns as at 12,000 feet, 11 miles away. Through 7 x 50 binoculars, the objects appear brilliant yellow with red lights across upper two-thirds, but to the naked eye, the colors blend to reddish-orange point sources. They pulsate with a 4.5-second period and an approximate 1:3 brightness ratio. The lower objects rise and fall near the horizon. (NICAP, "SS Point Sur Case"; Sparks, p. 325; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, p. 267)

1967, May 17 — The first official Soviet UFO Study Group is launched in a preliminary meeting at the Moscow Aviation and Cosmonautics Center with Maj. Gen. Porfiri Stolyarov at the helm and cosmologist Felix Ziegel as his deputy. Also in attendance are Heinrich Ludwig, Nikolai Zhirov, Igor Bestuzhev-Lada, Valentin Akkuratov, Leonid Reino, Georgi Uger, Georgi Zevalkin, Grigory Sivkov, Yekaterina Ryabova, and Natalia Kravtsova. 1967, May 20 — 12:15 p.m. Stefan Michalak is quartz prospecting near Falcon Lake, Manitoba, when he sees two red, glowing, cigar-shaped objects in the sky. One object begins to hover then move away, while the other lands on a large, flat rock 160 feet away. The landed object is more than 35 feet wide and 10 feet thick with a 3-foot high cupola. It goes through several color changes then appears like hot stainless steel with blinding purple-colored lights coming through slits in the cupola. It is making a whirring sound and warm air seems to be coming from it. Michalak sits and sketches the object for 30 minutes, then a small door opens on the side, revealing a lighted interior. Michalak walks to 60 feet away and hears voices inside. Thinking it is a US aircraft, he steps forward and shouts. "Okay, Yankee boys, having trouble? Come on out and we'll see what we can do about it." He says the same thing in five other languages. There is no response, so he puts green lenses over his glasses and looks inside, where he sees a series of flashing lights. He pulls his head back, noting that the wall is 18 inches thick. Almost immediately the opening closes. When his glove accidentally touches the surface, it burns and melts. The UFO angles upwards and he sees a 9-by-6 inch gridlike vent with a uniform pattern of small holes. A blast of hot gas erupts from the grid, searing his chest, sending him reeling backwards, and burning his shirt and undershirt. He rips the flaming clothing off just as the UFO ascends in a rush of air. It heads off to the west, the same direction the other UFO has gone. Michalak now has a headache and severe nausea, so he starts driving back to his motel. He eventually gets to Misericordia Hospital in Winnipeg and receives a sedative. His chest burn heals, but the gridlike burn lesions on his abdomen persist. The symptoms continue well into 1968, when Michalak visits the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota, staying there 2 weeks and undergoing outpatient treatment. He relocates the landing site on June 30, 1967, and the RCAF visits it in July, noting a 15-foot circle of cleared vegetation on the flat rock. Michalak obtains metal samples of unknown provenance from the site in 1968. 1967, May 20 — A bizarre announcement is published in the Spanish newspaper Informaciones declaring that soon a spacecraft will land in Madrid, Spain, and fly earthbound terrestrials back to their home planet Ummo. (Clark III 1184; Clark IV 1358)

1967, May 26 — 10:15 p.m. Three teenagers (Bobby Grant, Joseph Romero, and Johnny Sanchez) are driving along Atrisco Drive NW, north of Central Avenue in Albuquerque, New Mexico. A white light seems to follow them, weaving back and forth over the road. Finally it catches up with the car and hovers silently above it. The engine quits and the headlights fail. The teens leap from the car and the object suddenly flies off to the southwest. They can start the car again. ("Car Buzzing Incidents on Increase," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1967, p. 6)

1967, May 30 — A-12 spy planes begin Operation Black Shield in North Vietnam out of Kadena Air Base on Okinawa, Japan, locating and photographing surface-to-air missile sites that are shooting down US pilots. The A-12s fly at 80,000 feet and at about Mach 3.1, carrying out 22 sorties in 1967. However, the Russians monitor the flights and the Vietnamese move their SAM sites immediately after flyovers. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed A-12")

1967, May 31 — Fernando Sesma, president of the Amigos de los Visitantes del Espacio, speaks to an audience of 40 persons gathered at a café in Madrid, Spain. He says that the Ummites (who have been supplying him with messages since 1965 describing in excruciating detail life on the planet Ummo, which revolves around a star 14.6 light years away) have given him a startling printed message predicting that a spacecraft will appear on the evening of June 1. The space people have supplied the exact geographical coordinates: the area of San José de Valderas, Madrid. All the Ummite messages, passed on to Sesma by his associates Enrique Villagrasa and Alicia Araujo, are usually postmarked in Madrid, but as time goes by, other postmarks indicate mailings from London, Germany, Austria, New Zealand, Yugoslavia, and Canada. (Fernando Sesma, UMMO, otro planeta habitado, Gráficas Espejo, 1967; Clark III 1184–1185; Eduardo Bravo, Ummo: Los increíble es la verdad, Autsaider Cómics, 2019; Clark IV 1358–1359)

1967, May 31 — Jacques Vallée begins a two-week visit in New Hampshire with abductees Betty and Barney Hill at the request of J. Allen Hynek to act "as an observer in a contact experiment Betty Hill wants to conduct." Betty has come to believe that she can "make a flying saucer appear in the sky and land." Writer John G. Fuller, psychiatrist Benjamin Simon, and IBM engineer Robert E. Hohmann are also present for the attempt. Convinced that Betty is able to communicate with humanoid extraterrestrial beings, Hohmann sets up a folding table and chalk circle to observe or meet the UFOs and their occupants. Nothing out of the ordinary happens, but Betty "jumped up excitedly" at every artificial satellite, meteor, and lightning bug. Vallée seems convinced that something indeed has happened to the pair, but also that "Hohmann has clearly planted many strange ideas into the couple's mind." (Tanner F. Boyle, "Forbidden Science Dispatches #1," Getting Spooked Substack, October 4, 2023)

1967, May 31 — 11:30 p.m. A woman at a farmhouse near Beausejour, Manitoba, sees an intensely bright red light with a smaller blue light on the bottom that approaches from the south and hovers about 375 feet away. A white light on the bottom becomes brighter as the object hovers, its glow illuminating the ground. The object lands and leaves a burning area 90 feet by 150 feet in size with radioactive soil. The area is still smoldering on June 15, despite several rains. ("Second Landing in Canada," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1967, p. 2)

1967, June — Low says he wants the Colorado project to compile a case book of its best UFO reports. Richard Hall is invited for 2 days of consulting and narrows the case list to 100. A small team agrees to go over the list and decide which ones deserve more intensive analysis. By August, David R. Saunders becomes the lone staffer selecting cases and he only has 12. (UFOs Yes, 81–83)

1967, June — The newly formed Surrey Investigation Group on Aerial Phenomena publishes the SIGAP Newsletter in Camberley, Surrey, England, until June 1969. It revitalizes the newsletter as the New SIGAP Bulletin from 1977 to 1979. (SIGAP Newsletter, no. 1 (June 1, 1967); SIGAP Bulletin, no. 15 (August 1, 1968); The New SIGAP Bulletin, no. 1 (July 1977))

1967, June — Night. Giuseppe Aldini, 17, is with his family in Montalcino, Siena, Italy, when he sees a round, luminous object from his window. Later he notices a glowing red light on a nearby hill. The next day he goes to the spot and finds a circular burned area 100 feet in diameter with four imprints in its center. Inside are many black minerals that are analyzed by the University of Florence's Mineralogical Institute and found to be quartz crystals. (1Pinotti 157)

1967, Early June — 9:30 p.m. Four children and an adult are in a car driving north on Michigan Highway 52 about 15 miles east of Lansing, Michigan. The driver notices an odd light moving west to east, so she pulls to the side of the road and they all get out to watch it as it passes overhead. It is a circular red light that appears to pulsate. They can hear no sound, even though there is no road traffic at the time. As the light approaches the eastern horizon it stops and a smaller light like a bright star moves toward it from the south and seems to enter the larger red light, which then disappears. (CUFOS Nocturnal Light cases)

1967, June 1 — The UFO seen by José Luis Jordán Peña in Aluche, Madrid, Spain, allegedly reappears in the neighborhood of San José de Valderas. This time, Jordán Peña plays UFO investigator, taking statements from witnesses who describe a low-flying disc-shaped object with the same strange symbol on the underside. An anonymous man takes several photographs that he drops off at a photo lab on June 2. He then calls newspaper photographer Antonio San Antonio, telling him where to pick them up. All but one show an edge-on view of what appears to be a large, squat disc with a rim through its midsection. One photo shows the bottom of the UFO with the Aluche symbol, this time with a horizontal bar crossing the verticals and linking the two arms. In August, another photographer calling himself Antonio Pardo produces two more photos of the edge-on disc taken the same day, as well as some hard green-colored plastic strips bearing the distinctive Aluche symbol supposedly found in a capsule that leaflets by a "Henri Dagousset" predicted in June would be found. Jordán Peña later confesses to hoaxing the plastic strips, which are made of Tedlar (polyvinyl fluoride) produced by DuPont for the US space program. Independent analyses by French space scientist Claude Poher and the US group Ground Saucer Watch determine that the San José de Valderas photo with the Ummo symbol is a small model—an 8-inch plate suspended by a string or fishing line— held close to the camera. The symbol apparently is drawn in ink. 1967, June 3 — The town of St. Paul, Alberta, officially dedicates a UFO landing pad as a public park and as a safe place for aliens to land. Minister of National Defence Paul Hellyer flies in by helicopter to launch the pad. It consists of a raised platform with a map of Canada embossed on the back stop, consisting of stones provided by each province of Canada. 1967, June 7 — James E. McDonald speaks before the United Nations Office for Outer Space Affairs meeting in New York City on the "International scientific aspects of the problem of the unidentified flying objects." UN Secretary-General U Thant has arranged for the lecture, based on conversations he has had with John G. Fuller and J. Allen Hynek in early 1966. McDonald urges the UN to undertake a systematic global study of the UFO problem, but it does not act on the recommendation. (James E. McDonald, Letter to UN Secretary-General U Thant, June 5, 1967, p. 1; James E. McDonald, "Statement on International Scientific Aspects of the Problem of the Unidentified Flying Objects," presented to the UN Outer Space Affairs group, June 7, 1967, pp. 2–3; Clark III 698, 1189; Patrick Gross, "Scientists Taking Position"; Clark IV 794, 1363–1364)

1967, June 8 — Low writes a memo to the Colorado UFO project team, stating that their consultants in psychology are telling him that there will always be some uncertainty about the accuracy of eyewitness testimony. "The question we have to deal with," he writes, "is how do we make judgments on the UFO problem if we don't know whether the facts that are reported to us are correctly reported or not?" (Eghigian, After, p. 199)

1967, June 9 — Day. Two Spanish Air Force pilots flying Lockheed T-33s at 4,000 feet encounter a UFO over the Extremadura region, Spain. Attempts at radio contact fail, and when they fly above or below the object, their radios cease to function and emit interference noises. The UFO soon moves off, easily outstripping the jets, stopping and waiting for them to approach, then moving on again, The two pilots notify the Talavera la Real Air Base in Badajoz and Torrejón Air Base in Madrid, from which two faster fighters are scrambled. The new fighters experience the same radio interference and maneuvers until the object shoots straight up at high speed. (Antonio Ribera, "Spanish Jets Chase UFO," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 3 (May/June 1968): 26–27)

1967, June 12–13 — The Colorado project plays host to 34 Air Force officers having UFO responsibility at various bases. Low and David R. Saunders try to get them excited about reporting UFOs to the project, but aren't very successful. (NICAP, "UFO Investigators Meeting 12 and 13 June 1967"; UFOs Yes, 125–126)

1967, June 13 — 2:30 a.m. Carmen Cuneo, a mine worker in Caledonia, Ontario, steps out of the mine headquarters building and sees two strange objects near a pond in the vicinity of the mine dump. One is cigar-shaped and about 36 feet long with four windows along the side; a boom-like aerial protrudes from one side. The other is disc-shaped and about 15 feet across. Both are hovering 12 feet above the ground. Three small men wearing what look like miners' hats with four amber lights are underneath the boom. After watching for 10 minutes, Cuneo goes back to find another witness, but when he returns the men are gone. The two objects, however, remain until 3:05 a.m. when they take off to the southwest, flashing multicolored lights. 1967, June 18 — Several people in Mulluri, [perhaps near Viña del Mar], Chile, see three discs flying in a V formation above the town. They flash orange and blue lights alternately and make no sound. They maneuver for 10 minutes before disappearing at high speed. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 61)

1967, June 18 — Late evening. A family is returning home by boat near Clearwater Bay on Shoal Lake, Ontario, when they notice a bright oval object hovering 50 feet above the treetops about a half-mile away. As they approach, the object turns an orange tinge and suddenly sweeps toward their boat at great speed. They beat a hasty retreat to the other shore, while the UFO returns to its original position. The same thing happens when they approach the object again. After about 15 minutes, the object takes off at an incredible speed to the northwest. One resident, who is not aware of the UFO, reports later that the static on his radio was so bad that he had to turn it off. Wilted leaves on the top of birch, hazel, and chokecherry trees are discovered in the sighting area. Leaf samples are analyzed by the Canadian Department of Forestry, which cannot find an explanation for their condition other than heat. The University of Manitoba finds evidence of fungus on one sample but not on others. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 150–152; Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Sightings, Landings, and Abductions, Methuen, 1979, pp. 31–34; Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 55–56)

1967, June 22–25 — Condon attends, at the invitation of James W. Moseley and against the better judgment of the rest of the Colorado project staff, the Congress of Scientific Ufologists at the Hotel Commodore in New York City for the 20th anniversary of the Kenneth Arnold sighting. Speakers include Gray Barker, John A. Keel, Moseley, Art Ford, Gordon Evans, actor Roy Thinnes, and Ivan T Sanderson. Kenneth Arnold and Raymond A. Palmer are originally scheduled but cancel. 1967, June 23 — Broadcaster Frank Edwards dies of a heart attack. ("Death of Frank Edwards," UFO Investigator 4, no 2 (October 1967): 8)

1967, June 24 — 10:00 p.m. At Paso de los Libres, Corrientes, Argentina, policemen see 8–10 bright lights that fly in formation over a military post at an estimated 15,000 feet altitude. Other groups of UFOs are seen the same night at Yapeyú and Santo Tomé in Corrientes; Oberá in Misiones; and Resistencia and Barranqueras in Chaco, Argentina. All are observed for at least 1–2 minutes. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 61–62)

1967, June 24 — In Asunción, Paraguay, many residents see six objects in formation maneuvering over the city. Communications interference is reported by the airport control tower director. (NICAP, "The 1967 UFO Chronology")

1967, June 24–25 — The Centro Ufologico Nazionale holds the first UFO conference in Italy at Riccione, Rimini. (1Pinotti 143–146)

1967, June 27 — McDonald is in Australia, financed by a small grant from the Office of Naval Research, to do cloud-physics research. Earlier in June, in a memo to Low, he said he planned to do some UFO investigating and lecturing. Low forwards the letter to Philip Klass in December. (Clark III 700; Clark IV 796)

1967, June 28 — A NASA management instruction issued by Kurt H. Debus, director of Kennedy Space Center on Merritt Island, Florida, on "Processing Reports of Sightings of Space Vehicle Fragments" notes that "Under no circumstances will the origin of the object be discussed with the observer or person making the call," including "reports of sightings of objects not related to space vehicles." (John F. Kennedy Space Center, "Processing Reports of Sightings of Space Vehicle Fragments," NASA Management Instruction KMI 8610.4, June 28, 1967)

1967, June 28 — 8:25 p.m. Tsai Chang-hung is looking at stars at the Taipei City Observatory in Taipei, Taiwan, when he sees a bright dot make an abrupt 90° turn near the Big Dipper. He grabs his 16mm camera and calls his brother, observatory director Tsai Chang-hsien, to come look but the object has disappeared. He waits for nearly an hour, and the object reappears and hovers above Guanyin Mountain in New Taipei City for about 30 seconds, during which time he snaps three photos. Other witnesses see the object and contact the observatory to report it. The Central Weather Bureau claims it is one of their weather balloons, but Tsai Chang-hsien suspects the object is not likely a balloon. The photos are of poor quality, but they are enhanced in 1996 and clearly show an object of some kind. (Han Cheung, "Taiwan in Time: UFOs over the Skies of Taiwan," Taipei Times, June 23, 2024, p. 13)

1967, June 30 — Condon, David R. Saunders, Norm Levine, Franklin Roach, Mary Lou Armstrong, and visiting journalism grad student Herbert Strentz hold a meeting about a "case book" of significant cases. Condon tries to dissuade Saunders and Levine from pursuing this, but they prevail. (Swords 320)

1967, July — Even though the Colorado project is requesting UFO reports from NICAP, Keyhoe is withholding them. Roy Craig discovers the Low memorandum while searching for unrelated information in the files. He shares it with Norm Levine and David R. Saunders, who realize that it clearly implies that the project is a "whitewash noninvestigation." The memo makes the rounds of project personnel, then gets refiled. (Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, p. 121; UFOs Yes, 135; Clark III 1196–1197; Clark IV 1371)

1967, July — 10:00 p.m. A witness sees an intense orange light through the window of her home in the Mount Lofty Ranges, South Australia. She calls her mother and they go outside to watch a cigar-shaped light hovering, moving up and down slightly, and turning over on its side. It has portholes around its lower edge. After 20 minutes, it moves off to the western horizon at a high rate of speed. ("Foreign Forum," IUR 3, no. 6 (June 1978): 2)

1967, July 1 — The Denver Post reveals that the Colorado project has requested an additional $280,000 to extend it into September. Condon is upset. USAF ultimately approves an additional $183,155, plus $29,750 for expenses, bringing the total to $525,905. (UFOs Yes, 182)

1967, July 3 — An informant of Leonard H. Stringfield, a Marine PFC K-9 trainer stationed at Camp Pendleton in San Diego, California, is ordered to depart by airplane to a site "somewhere in the desert." He and his dogs are flown for 2.5 hours to the site, where a makeshift landing strip, tents, a Quonset hut, and a pre-fab hangar have been erected. He is assigned a post for guard duty. On his fourth day of duty, he manages to look inside the hangar and sees a metallic domed disc about 30 feet in diameter. Men are working around the craft, and he sees a large walk-in refrigerator on skids and several empty body bags. He is caught by a guard and taken to the officer in command, who confines him to quarters and sends him back to Camp Pendleton. (Leonard H. Stringfield, UFO Crash Retrievals: Status Report III, Amassing the Evidence, The Author, June 1982, pp. 86–88)

1967, July 3 — 5:30 p.m. Warren Smith and two friends hiking in the mountains near Highwood Ranger Station, 50 miles southwest of Calgary, Alberta, take two color photos of a daylight disc that appears to be about 25 feet in diameter. The disc appears from less than 2 miles away and at an altitude of approximately 2,000 feet. It travels toward the hikers, gradually losing altitude, then at a distance of about one-half mile it hovers for a moment and an object appears to fall from it. It disappears from sight at treetop level at great speed. The photos are examined by both Canadian and American authorities; Hynek describes them as some of the best photos on record at the time. An analysis by Canadian National Defence finds the object is an oblate ellipsoid with a diameter of 40–50 feet and a thickness of 11–14 feet. The witnesses sign statutory declarations to the effect that the photos are not a hoax; if proven false, they would be subject to prosecution under the Canada Evidence Act. Nevertheless, the Colorado Committee thinks the object could be a hoaxed hand-thrown model. Ground Saucer Watch declares it genuine. (Canada, National Research Council, [case documents], 1967, pp. 13–33; Condon, pp. 469–475; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 67–68; Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Sightings, Landings, and Abductions, Methuen, 1979, pp. 9–13; Wendelle C. Stevens, "Hikers near Calgary Photograph a UFO in 1967," OpenMinds, November 24, 2010; Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 119–125, 158–159)

1967, July 3 — 7:15 p.m. Joe Ferriere sees a large, cigar-shaped object about 75–100 feet long hanging low in the sky above Woonsocket, Rhode Island. A peculiar piston-like apparatus appears to be pumping in and out of its left end. It is moving right to left in the manner of a pendulum. Before it moves off to the east, it releases a glowing disc-shaped object, about 12–15 feet in diameter. He takes a total of 6 photos of the objects. ("Long Rectangular UFOs: Five Different Cases of Similarly Shaped Objects," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 2, no. 9 (September 1981): 1; "Cigar-Shaped UFOs Caught on Camera by Joseph Ferriere and Harold Trudel, 1967/68," Eyes On Cinema YouTube channel, January 17, 2023)

1967, July 3 — 9:15 p.m. Thomas H. Nicholl, his family, and another couple, Mr. and Mrs. John Dowd, are sitting on the Nicholls's porch in Leawood, Kansas, when they see an unusual orange-red light approach from the north-northeast. It is bright metallic in color, about 50 feet in diameter, and traveling 100 mph at an altitude of 2,000–3,000 feet. The red-orange color emanates from three lights on the rear side. After 5 minutes, the object blows up, leaving in its wake a "nearly pure white" cloud that dissipates. The witnesses see fragments falling to earth. ("Exploding Disc," UFO Investigator 4, no. 11 (May 1969): 7–8; Clark III 340–341; Clark IV 377)

1967, July 4 — 5:15 a.m. At least five witnesses from two independent locations about 5 miles west of Corning, California, see an oblong, metallic-appearing object with a brilliant light on top and a smaller light on the bottom near the front. Jay Munger, proprietor of an all-night bowling alley, and two police officers, Frank Rakes and James Overton, describe it as a dark-gray flattened sphere with a brilliant light beam on top directed upward, and a smaller and dimmer light on the bottom directed downward. A dark band circles the midsection. Two men north of Corning independently see the object. The witnesses estimate a diameter of 50–100 feet. At first the object appears to be hovering, then it moves slowly a few hundred feet above the ground, finally picking up speed and disappearing from view to the south after being visible for about 10 minutes. (James E. McDonald, "Statement on Unidentified Flying Objects," in Symposium on Unidentified Flying Objects, Hearings, US House Committee on Science and Astronautics, 90th Cong., 2nd Sess., July 29, 1968, p. 74)

1967, July 5 — 4:20 a.m. A motorist on State Highway 31, near the Depot Road area of Coventry, Connecticut, sees an orange ball of light that appears to be hanging from a tree. He drives into Coventry and reports the matter to the police but the object is gone when they arrive on the scene. Investigators from the University of Colorado and APRO find an area of grass some yards from the location that appears to have been swirled flat as if subject to a rotating force. A photograph taken of the scene turns out black. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 63; Condon, pp. 329–331)

1967, July 5 — Night. A witness is driving five miles north-northeast of Murray Bridge, South Australia, on the Karoonda Highway when he notices interference on the car radio, which becomes a high-pitched whine. He turns the radio off. Within 300–450 feet, his car engine stops by itself. The ignition is on but the warning lights on the dash come on. Looking up, he sees a distinct break in the fog with stars visible and a "large dark shadow" at a height of 20 feet. The shadow seems 120 feet thick. Above it is a grayish-blue glow. The top of the shadow appears convex. He stops the vehicle and gets out to look, but the shadow and light are gone. There is no sound, and the object has vanished. The witness returns to the vehicle, tries the ignition, and the motor works. There is no longer radio interference. (Herbert S. Taylor, "An Update on Vehicle Interference Reports, Part Two," IUR 34, no. 1 (September 2011): 19)

1967, July 6 — The Colorado project staff meet again to nominate the first set of UFO reports for its "case book." Condon refuses to nominate a case, but Low proposes the Red Bluff police report of August 1960, which is far outside Condon's concept of limiting cases to no more than a year old. (Swords 120)

1967, July 6 — 6:00 p.m. An Air Canada DC-9 Vanguard has just taken off from its stop in Winnipeg, Manitoba, and is heading east. Air traffic controllers notice an unexpected radar return, also heading east, near the aircraft. In the space of 70 seconds, they watch the target accelerate from 800 to more than 4,000 mph before it zips off the scope near the town of Vivian. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, p. 126)

1967, July 6 — 9:24 p.m. A radar operator in the airport at Kenora, Ontario, notes an unidentified target heading northeast. It approaches to about 40 miles, then turns and retreats to 50 miles away. At 9:35 p.m. another target appears, following an Air Canada flight; it turns northeast and disappears from the scope. At 9:53 p.m., an additional blip follows another Air Canada airliner before veering away to the northeast. None of the pilots see anything unusual. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 127–128)

1967, July 7 — 7:00 p.m. Air traffic controllers at Winnipeg International Airport in Manitoba, while monitoring an eastbound Air Canada flight on radar, notice a target moving at high speed toward Kenora, Ontario. At 9:24 p.m., the same or a similar object is detected on the Kenora Airport radar headed northeast. For three hours the object executes various maneuvers, including 180° turns and twice follows Air Canada flights before resuming its northeast course and disappearing off the scope. (Gregory M. Kanon, "UFOs and the Canadian Government," Canadian UFO Report 3, no. 6 (1975): 21; Good Above, p. 200; Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, p. 57)

1967, July 7 — 11:30 p.m. Antonio Brambilla and another man watch a UFO land on some grass in a deserted part of the Rondò-Torretta quarter in Milan, Italy. A glow comes from the object, which is about 21 feet in diameter and 8 feet high. It has a dome on top and four telescopic legs with spheres on their tips. They feel a strange vibration that makes them weak, but the feeling dissipates as the legs of the UFO retract and it takes off. (1Pinotti 157)

1967, July 10 — 8:45 a.m. Two students at Whippingham Primary School, Isle of Wight, England, see a milky-white stationary object in the northern sky. At 10:30 a.m. they see it again at playground recess, moving in a westerly direction with a fluttering motion, before being lost beyond a line of trees. On the way home, one of the students notices some marks in a barley field adjoining the playground. Further investigation reveals a circle of damaged stalks up to 18 feet wide. Other marks are found to the north and west through aerial photography. Much of the damage coincides with the spot over which the students had seen the UFO. (Leonard G. Cramp, "The Whippingham Ground Effects," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 3 (May/June 1968): 3–8)

1967, July 10 — Evening. Philip Lansing is driving south of Meridian, Mississippi, when his car coasts to a stop and the radio fades. As he gets out to check the engine, a large object like a cymbal on a drum set passes 200–300 feet above him. It is silent except for the sound of rushing air. Before reaching some trees, it tilts upward, moves to the right, then accelerates at an angle and disappears in the distance. (Kevin D. Randle, The UFO Casebook, Ballantine, 1989, pp. 134–135)

1967, July 13 — 11:26 p.m. Robert Richardson and Jerry Quay are driving near Whitehouse, Ohio. When rounding a bend, they encounter a brilliant blue-white light blocking the road. It appears to be a triangle 8 feet tall and 21 feet wide. Richardson brakes and close their eyes. They feel a bump but can see nothing. The local police do not take the incident seriously. However, the accident is investigated by the state police and highway patrol, who find only skid marks at the scene. The next day Richardson returns to the site and finds a piece of metal in the road. Marks on his car hood and bumper suggest a collision with an object taking off. On July 18 and 23, Richardson is visited by mysterious men, those on the second occasion being foreign-looking, who make a threat against his wife. Roy Craig of the Colorado project conducts a test on the metal and finds it consists of iron and chromium, with traces of nickel and manganese. Fibrous material from the front bumper is 92% magnesium, 5% aluminum, 2% zinc, and 1% manganese. ("UAO Struck by Automobile in Ohio," APRO Bulletin, July/Aug. 1967, pp. 1, 3; Condon, p. 93; Jacques Vallée, "Physical Analyses in Ten Cases of Unexplained Aerial Objects with Material Samples," Journal of Scientific Exploration 12, no. 3 (1998): 367–372; Irena Scott, UFOs and the Millennium, Greyden, 1999, pp. 84–85; Mark Rodeghier, "UFO/Vehicle Very Close Encounters," IUR 27, no. 1 (Spring 2002): 25–26)

1967, July 17 — 11:25 p.m. Emma Funk is driving on State Highway 22 north of Millerton, New York, when a black, shiny object the size of a baseball flies into her headlight beams. It heads toward the windshield, brushes against it, then veers off to the left. As it brushes, her car lights up "like a great electric light bulb," her engine quits, and the headlights go out. Funk is stunned, and when she regains her senses, the car is facing the opposite direction, toward the south. The engine starts up normally, but there is a cracked area in the windshield the size of a fist. She can't account for about 15 minutes. ("Object Hit Car in Millerton; Engine Stalled, Lights Went Out," Poughkeepsie (N.Y.) Journal, July 19, 1967, p. 6; Mark Rodeghier, "UFO/Vehicle Very Close Encounters," IUR 27, no. 1 (Spring 2002): 24–25)

1967, July 20–21 — 11:30 p.m. Barbara Fawcett is driving alone on North Key Largo, Florida, near Jewfish Creek. She sees a large light in her rear-view mirror apparently following the car. The burning yellow light seems to be floating 6–8 feet off the ground, and it stays over the road. She accelerates to 100 mph as the light overtakes her car and seems to be about to land on top of it. As a car approaches in the opposite direction, the object emits a bright yellow glow that lights up the road and then disappears. She decides to return home to Pompano Beach with her sister the same morning, and at 2:30 a.m. they are on US Highway 1 near the same spot when she sees the light again, rising from a swamp and moving toward them 15 feet above the ground. Her sister's toy poodle is terrified. The light veers away from the road and appears to land on a sand dune. ("Landing in Florida," APRO Bulletin, July/Aug. 1967, p. 7)

Aliens," Fortean Times 17 (August 1976): 14–20; Aaron Sakulich, "The Strange Tale of Ronnie Hill," The Iron Skeptic, January 13, 2007; Clark III 603; Clark IV 662–663)

1967, July 24 — In reply to a question by MP Edward M. Taylor, Secretary of State for Defence Merlyn Rees reiterates that UFO reports are investigated, but nothing of "defence interest" has been found. (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1967, July 25 — 10:30 p.m. LaVern Affeldt is outside doing chores on his farm near Garrison, North Dakota, when he notices his cattle are nervous, and his dog is whining and looking off toward the east. Glancing in that direction, he sees a circular, glowing blue-white object hovering near a Minuteman missile site about one mile away. He calls his family and they see it too. Shortly afterward the object moves straight north, darting with rapid bursts of speed, then slowing to a stop again. Each time it accelerates, its color changes to bright red, then gradually back to blue-white as it slows down and stops. It is moving up and down as well as horizontally, almost touching the ground at times, and revolving. Finally it moves away to the north and blinks out. (UFOEv II 212–213; Covert 69)

1967, July 26 — 8:38 p.m. Capt. Shindler is piloting Pacific Western Airlines Flight 748 westbound near the Westfall River in the Rocky Mountains of British Columbia. He notices a small pink light moving erratically at about 16,000 feet. It zips away after 18 minutes. Radar operators in Kamloops also observe the object. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, p. 128)

1967, July 30 — 6:15 p.m. The Naviero, a ship of the Argentine Shipping Lines Company, is 120 miles off the coast of Garopaba, Santa Catarina, Brazil, when Office Jorge Montoya notices a strange object in the ocean about 50 feet away on the starboard side. Capt. Julián Lucas Ardanza comes to the deck and sees a cigar-shaped UFO about 110 feet long, glowing blue and white. It paces the ship for 15 minutes, then suddenly dives and passes underneath the ship, vanishing in the depths. Chief Officer Carlos Lasca describes the object as a "submergible UFO with its own illumination." ("Stop Press Item," APRO Bulletin, July/Aug. 1967, p. 1; Oscar A. Galíndez, "Crew of Argentine Ship See Submarine UFO," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 2 (March/April 1968): 22; Carl Feindt, "Report #362," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 298–299)

1967, July 30 — 10:17 p.m. George and Brownie Petyak see a bright yellow star-like light at about 65° elevation to the east of Kernville, California. It is later joined by a second similar object appearing to try to "steer" the first onto a "definite course." Through binoculars the first object appears bright blue. A second independent observation from Naval Air Weapons Station China Lake in the Mojave Desert locates an object visually and/or on radar to the west over Walker Pass (about 20 miles) and is reported to Edwards AFB. Thus the visual sighting lines intersect from opposite directions. A controller at Edwards uses RAPCON (Radar Approach Control) radar (or Boron AFS FPS-35 search radar) and confirms the visual report at China Lake but tries to dismiss the 115 mph target as merely civil aircraft that "frequently" fly over the area. The Kernville witnesses report by phone during their sighting to the Boron AFS ADC radar site. Blue Book claims the date of the sighting is in question because the questionnaire sent to the Petyaks uses the military time (Greenwich Meridian Time or Zulu time) instead of local time. (NICAP, "Radar/Visual and Sighting Lines Intersect"; Sparks, p. 326; Condon, p. 122; Clark III 392; Clark IV 438)

1967, July 31 — 10:15 p.m. Sidney Zipkin is driving a truck on Main Street in Churchville, New York, when he sees a cigar-shaped object about 50 feet long in a parking lot. It has greenish blinking lights underneath it, on or near the ground. He shines the truck headlights on the object and sees two small men in shiny black uniforms board the object, which takes off straight up. ("UFOs in Churchville?" Rochester (N.Y.) Democrat and Chronicle, August 3, 1967, pp. 1B–2B; Diana Walsh Pasulka, Encounters: Experiences with Nonhuman Intelligences, St. Martins, 2023, pp. 206–211)

1967, August — At the request of President Johnson, the CIA sets up Operation CHAOS to gather intelligence about foreign influence on American dissent. Its mission is to gather and evaluate all information about foreign links to racial, antiwar, and other protest activity. The operation is launched under DCI Richard Helms and counter-intelligence chief James Jesus Angleton, and headed by Richard Ober. The program runs through 1973, amassing 10,000 files on more than 300,000 individuals and 100 domestic groups. The operation also infiltrates foreign intelligence targets and domestic radical organizations. The NSA assists in the surveillance with its own Project MINARET. Operating between 1967 and 1973, over 5,925 foreigners and 1,690 organizations and US citizens are included on the Project MINARET watch lists. NSA Director Lew Allen testifies before the Senate Intelligence Committee in 1975 that the NSA has issued over 3,900 reports on the watch-listed Americans. At some point, the NSA is tasked with monitoring the overseas telephone calls and cable traffic of two prominent members of Congress, Sen. Frank Church (D-Idaho) and Sen. Howard Baker (R-Tenn.). The FBI begins COINTELPRO–BLACK HATE, which focuses on Martin Luther King Jr. and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference as well as the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, the Revolutionary Action Movement, the Deacons for Defense and Justice, Congress of Racial Equality, and the Nation of Islam. BLACK HATE establishes the Ghetto Informant Program and instructs 23 FBI offices to "disrupt, misdirect, discredit, or otherwise neutralize the activities of black nationalist hate type organizations." Ald and William Burr, "Secret Cold War Documents Reveal NSA Spied on Senators," Foreign Policy, September 25, 2013)

1967, August — 2:00 a.m. A man is returning to his mother's home in Wapakoneta, Ohio, when he sees a strangely bright star to the left of Polaris. As he watches, it grows a bit brighter and begins to move directly beneath Polaris and then continues to the right. It repeats this in reverse and then goes under Polaris and stops. The star then migrates north and south, tracing out the elements of a large cross. It does this several times rapidly. Then it comes back below Polaris and just sits there. After nearly 3 hours, the witness decides to stop watching. At that, the star goes up to Polaris and shoots away to the left. (Michael D. Swords, "We Know Where You Live," IUR 30, no. 2 (January 2006): 11)

1967, August 1 — 2:08 a.m. Len Filppu is camping out with some other teenagers in the backyard of his friend Timothy Hurley in Brockport, New York. While gazing at the sky, he sees a huge orange sphere with red, orange, and yellow flames glide horizontally and silently across the horizon, followed by a white, star-sized light behind it. It seems to be only 90 feet away at an altitude of 200 feet, moving from west-northwest to east-southeast. He wakes the other boys up and they see it as well. After 30 seconds, it moves out of sight. Others in the area witness a similar light. ("Geneseo Men Report UFO," Rochester (N.Y.) Democrat and Chronicle, August 4, 1967, p. 4B; Diana Walsh Pasulka, Encounters: Experiences with Nonhuman Intelligences, St. Martins, 2023, pp. 200–214)

1967, August 3 — 8:00 p.m. Amauri Barbosa da Silva and Jonil Faydit Vieira are driving on the road to Japeri from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, when they see several yellowish lights that eventually extinguish themselves, one at a time. Later, they see similar lights positioned directly in front of them. Da Silva blinks his headlights, and the lights respond similarly. The lights maintain their position in front of them, moving from one side of the road to the other. When they are approaching Miguel Pereira on a mud road between Arcádia and La Chaumiere, they see two bright beams of light, one yellow and one blue, about 1,000 feet away from them on the right, apparently attached to the dome of a disc. The object follows them for at least 40 minutes and is seen by Nelson Gonçalves Ferreira at their destination in Miguel Pereira. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 16–21)

1967, August 3 — 11:30 p.m. A married couple and their teenage son are sleeping in their car outside their home in Caracas, Venezuela. They wake up and see a white, disc-shaped object hovering 100 feet above a nearby palm tree. Within a few minutes, an opening appears in the UFO, and a smaller lightbulb-shaped object emerges and drifts downward, stopping just inches from the ground near their front porch. A door slides open and a small, glowing figure steps out, who bends over, picks up some stones, examines them, and looks up at the larger object, apparently communicating with someone. He looks toward their car frequently. After a few minutes, the figure reenters the small object, which returns to the large disc and enters it. The disc speeds away and disappears in seconds. ("Occupants Seen at Caracas," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1967, p. 12)

1967, August 4 — Early morning. An engineer, Hugo Sierra Yepez [or Yepes], is fishing from his boat in the sea about 15 miles north of Arrecife [or La Guaira], Vargas, Venezuela, when he feels a vibration and the water begins to boil "in big bubbles, in a circle about six meters in diameter." A gray-blue, flat globe emerges. As it hovers close to the surface, dripping water, he notices a revolving rim with triangular windows of blue and red. It ascends in a curve then shoots upward. ("The Question of Submerging UFO's," UFO Investigator 4, no. 5 (March 1968): 5; Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 54; UFOEv II 46–47; Carl Feindt, "Report #364," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 299–300)

1967, August 4 — Night. A bright object appears in the sky in the area of Morro do Policia in Porto Alegre, Brazil, for 30 minutes and is photographed by Brazilian Air Force technician Otacilio Freitas Dias. It flies in an erratic zigzag path, sometimes slowly, at other times at high speed, and sometimes hovering. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 67–68)

1967, August 5 — Morning. After a night of heavy rain, Edgar Schielke finds a circular mark more than 30 feet in diameter in his cow pasture near Duhamel, Alberta. A UFO group from Edmonton visits the field and finds three additional rings. An RCAF team from CFB Namao [now CFB Edmonton], along with Gareth H. S. Jones of the Defense Research Establishment Suffield [now DRDC Suffield], visits the farm on August 11 after much of the evidence has been trampled. Jones finds two more rings. The marks vary from 5 to 7 inches wide and from 31 feet 9 inches to 36 feet 3 inches, and each is incomplete on its western side. He is puzzled as to what made the marks, can find no evidence of a hoax, and seriously considers whether an aerial object (which he estimates must weigh as much as 270,000 pounds) could have made them. 1967, August 6 — Office worker Antonio Neri Perez and several others watch three glowing red discs take off in V formation from a field near their house in Tetepango, Hidalgo, Mexico. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 65)

1967, August 6 — 7:55–8:20 p.m. Formations of lights in groups of 3–5 are seen in many states of Mexico, including Tamaulipas, Tlaxcala, Hidalgo, Veracruz, and Lake Pátzcuaro in Michoacán. Most are generally moving west to east. Many people at the Mexico City International Airport watch a group between 8:10 and 8:20 p.m. Technicians in the control tower can make out 9–10 objects through binoculars. Capt. Angel Fojo Ceballos and Capt. José Luis Espejo are flying an Aeronaves de México [now Aeroméxico] DC-9 at 23,000 feet over Salamanca, Guanajuato, Mexico. They see three bright points flying in formation from northwest to southeast an estimated 30–40 miles away. They cross the horizon at 55,000–60,000 feet in 40–45 seconds. One of the objects appears to break formation and approach the aircraft, showing a round shape and metallic composition, but then it veers away and out of sight. The events are thought to be the reentry of the Pioneer 7 rocket body that had launched from Cape Canaveral on August 15, 1966. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 65–67)

1967, August 6 — 8:00 p.m. A Peruvian airliner piloted by Capt. Samuel Sanguaza, copilot César Jordan, and subofficers Oscar Guevara and Jorge Sarguaza encounters a globe of light while flying between Lima, and Pisco, Peru. The light changes color from red to orange and blue as it paces the aircraft for 15 minutes, bobbing up and down, moving closer and receding, before it zooms away as the airplane nears Pisco. 1967, August 8 — Evangelical pastor Estanislao Lugo Contreras is on the shore at Las Salinas (6 miles north of Los Arrecifes), Falcón, Venezuela, when he sees the water stirring up in a vast round area. The water begins to turn light blue, then whitish, yellowish, then brilliant orange. An orange disc rises out of the sea about 1,650 feet from shore, hovers, then rises obliquely and disappears. It makes an intense buzzing sound. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 54–55; Carl Feindt, "Report #366," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 299–300)

1967, August 8 — 8:40 p.m. An object shaped like a sharply outlined asymmetrical crescent flies over the Kislovodsk Mountain Astronomical Station near Kislovodsk, North Caucasus, Russia. The object is slightly smaller than the moon with a color described as reddish by some observers, yellow by others. It flies from west to east about 20° above the horizon, moving from the Big Dipper to Cassiopeia in about 30 seconds at a uniform speed. The witnesses are Anatoli Sazanov, a specialist in the ionosphere; V. A. Tsion of the Leningrad Polytechnical Institute; and seven members of a biological expedition. 1967, August 10 — 9:30 p.m. Harry E. King and Michael Swartz see a bright round ball, about 50–60 feet in diameter, in the air about 1,300 feet away near Winter Haven, Florida. It hovers for 3–4 minutes, then moves slowly for a quarter mile, rises, shoots away, and disappears in one second. At 10:00 p.m., they watch a bright light descend for 5 minutes, move back and forth for one minute, then suddenly disappear. (NICAP case file)

1967, August 12 — 2:30 a.m. Robert P. Miedtke and his wife are sleeping in a camper on property belonging to some relatives on County Highway I some 11 miles west of Ogema, Wisconsin. They are awakened by their dog barking outside. They look out the window and see a large, fluorescent, half-moon-shaped object in a neighboring pasture about 450 feet away. It is shining a beam of light at a milk house only 25 feet from their camper. The dog has stopped barking and they can hear none of the usual night sounds. After about one hour, they hear the sound of someone walking in the gravel and sand outside. Three times the footsteps are heard going from north to south. The Miedtkes remain in bed, hoping no one would know they are in the camper. After another hour, just before dawn, they hear the dog whimpering and barking, followed by the muffled noise like a huge generator that fades away after 6–8 seconds. 1967, August 13 — 8:00 p.m. Between Pilar de Goiás and Crixás, Goiás, Brazil, a plantation worker at the Estancia de Santa Maria, Ignácio da Souza, is returning home from work when he and his wife see an object in the form of an upside-down basin 115 feet in diameter sitting on the landing strip of the ranch. They initially think it is some flying machine tested by the ranch owner, Ibiracy de Moraes, a wealthy man and former president of the Bank of Brazil. Between the object and the couple, there are three humanoid, child-size beings that they initially think are naked children before realizing that they are hairless creatures wearing a tight suit of yellow. The beings seem to be playing around silently, but then move quickly towards them. Da Souza tells his wife to lock herself up in their house. He is armed with a rifle and frightened, so da Souza shoots the closest of the beings. At the same time, the UFO emits a ray of green light that hits him, throwing him to the ground unconscious. Seeing her husband fall from the kitchen window, his wife runs onto the scene shouting, interposes herself between the beings and the body of her husband, and picks up his rifle. But during this time the beings have retrieved the one that had fallen to ground and quickly flee to enter the craft. After a short time, it slowly rises vertically while emitting a buzz similar to that of a swarm of bees. Taken to the hospital of Goiânia, the state capital, de Souza suffers from nausea and a general numbness. Burns are noted, initially attributed to a toxic plant, but when de Souza and de Moraes hear the erroneous diagnosis and are told what had happened, doctors perform a blood analysis that returns with a diagnosis of advanced leukemia with life expectancy of two months. Da Souza quickly deteriorates, suffers, develops yellowish spots, and dies on October 11. In accordance with his instructions, his wife burns the bed, the mattress, and the clothing that he has used. 1967, Mid-August — About 12:00 noon. Electrical engineer Albert Fulton and superintendent Sherman Anderson are making rounds at the Nova Scotia Light and Power substation in Caledonia, Nova Scotia. They notice steam rising from one of three large transformers, then Fulton spots two silvery disc-shaped objects maneuvering around the sky some distance away. The pair watches them a they zip back and forth in different directions from horizon to horizon in 3–4 seconds. Each time they leave a silvery line about 10 times their length behind them, which disappears when the objects stop. They watch this spectacle for about one minute, then both discs come to a common point in front of a suddenly visible gray, cigar-shaped object. After stopping briefly the two smaller objects merge into the cigar, taking 12–15 seconds. The large object disappears. (Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects: A Further Look," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 4–5)

1967, August 18 — A CIA report summarizes interviews with unnamed Russian astronomers that may possibly have been conducted by members of the Condon commission. (Central Intelligence Agency, "Report on Conversations with Soviet Scientists on Subject of Unidentified Flying Objects in the USSR," August 18, 1967; Good Above, pp. 230–231)

1967, August 22–31 — Low, Roach, and Hynek attend the XIIIth General Assembly of the International Astronomical Union in Prague, Czechoslovakia [now Czech Republic]. Low wastes an opportunity to meet with Charles Bowen in London, England, and instead goes to Loch Ness, Scotland, "because neither the Loch Ness monster nor UFOs exist." (Michael D. Swords, "The USAF-Sponsored Colorado Project for the Scientific Study of UFOs," 1995 MUFON Symposium Proceedings, MUFON, 1995, pp. 149–163; Good Above, p. 230; Swords 321; Clark III 1195; Clark IV 1369)

1967, August 23 — 4:00 a.m. Stanley Moxon is driving on Ontario Highway 15 between Joyceville, Ontario, and Pine Grove Road when he sees a green light in a field to the south. He turns off his lights and drives down a side road to get closer. Minutes later, he turns on his lights again and they shine on a huge metallic disc hovering just above the ground. Two entities, 4 feet tall and dressed in white suits and helmets, appear to be startled and hurry back into the craft, which takes off at tremendous speed. 1967, August 23 — 8:00 p.m. Two 15-year-olds are strolling around the Kolmården ridge area in Östergötland, Sweden, when they see a reddish glow moving back and forth in the nearby woods. Continuing home, they run across a locked, deserted shack that seems to have some yellowish lights moving around in one room and noises like muted thuds. The red glow reappears moving close to the ground from the west. Suddenly it turns brilliant white and appears to land on the other side of a brook. They run home and see a huge light like a flashlight hovering 13 feet above the ground near the house. They hear a whistling sound coming from the brook and what seem to be footsteps coming toward them. They run to a ravine where they see, about 35 feet away, a small being with a disproportionately large head and wearing dark clothing. It lifts its arms and seems to be holding a box-like apparatus with a tube. Two thin, wire-like bands appear around the creature's ankles and give off an intense white light. They run home again. The next day they return to where the being was and find some odd three-toed footprints about 6 inches long. 1967, August 24 — 5:00 p.m. Ron Hydes is riding his motorcycle near Wodonga, Victoria, Australia, when he is surrounded by a blinding blue-white light that illuminates the road. As he stops, a bright lens-shaped domed disc, estimated to be 25–30 feet in diameter, descends within a few feet of the ground about 100 feet away. Two humanoids about 5–5.5 feet tall with round helmets and silver coveralls emerge. One steps nearer to the witness, who flees. The object, surrounded by a pinkish glow, follows the motorcycle at about 100 feet off the ground. Hydes can hear a humming sound above the motorcycle's engine. He stops again and the object hovers, the hum subsiding. After 30 seconds, the color around the object changes from pink to brilliant red, and it tilts up at a 45° angle, then shoots away. 1967, August 25 or 27 — 5:00 p.m. Ruben Norato sees a "precipitous movement of the water" from the beach at Catia La Mar, Vargas, Venezuela, from which arise "three huge plate-shaped discs" that streak out of sight. ("The Question of Submerging UFO's," UFO Investigator 4, no. 5 (March 1968): 4, 5; Carl Feindt, "Report #367," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 300–301)

1967, August 27 — David R. Saunders proposes to the Colorado project team that they issue technical reports on whatever phase or case they have concentrated on. These will be circulated among the staff for review but not for veto. They would stand as the author's own work without censure. Appropriate disclaimers would be attached before they are issued to the public. A final report might be cobbled together from these technical reports. Condon and Low apparently disapprove of this immediately. (Swords 323)

1967, August 27 — 11:20 p.m. Kenneth Flack is passing a car near Texas Creek, Colorado, when his engine and car lights fail. He pulls to the side of the road, along with the car he is passing and a camper-trailer. He sees a large object in a field some 900–1,200 feet away. It is football-shaped and silvery. He approaches it on foot and is hit by a bright light coming from the object that knocks him out. Bystanders from other cars carry him back to the roadside and tell him that he had been frozen in a standing position for 5 minutes. Flack is intensely cold and sleepy, so another unidentified driver gives him a ride back to Pueblo in a camper ("1967 Landing in Colorado," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1969, pp. 3–4; Lorenzen, The Shadow of the Unknown, New American Library, 1970, pp. 138–139; Herbert S. 1967, August 28–29 — 11:30 p.m.–1:10 a.m. Leslie and Jacqueline Dowdell see a 3–4 dancing lights zigzagging to the northeast over Rivers, Manitoba. The lights resolve into one object the color of a mandarin orange that hovers for 2–3 minutes, changing colors, before zooming away to the north. At 12:30 a.m., Cpl. A. Fedun of CFB Rivers [now closed] sees a round ball of orange light moving northwest. At 12:45 a.m., Commissionaire G. Stefanson hears a loud noise, and LAC J. Hebert and Judy Ross, driving one mile east of Rivers, watch a white flashing light that remains stationary for 30–50 seconds. They later find some odd dust on their car and some bubbling of the paint on the top. At 1:00 a.m., Cpl. K. McArthur hears another loud blast that rattles windows on the base. At 1:10 a.m., LAC K. Taylor, 8 miles east of Rivers, sees a red ball of flame trailed by a blue light at 3,000–4,000 feet. An investigating team from RCAF Training Command Headquarters in Winnipeg immediately comes out to investigate. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 251–260)

1967, August 29 — 10:30 a.m. François Delpeuch, 13, and his sister Anne-Marie, 9, are herding cows at Cussac, Cantal, France. They see four small black beings about 47 inches tall with large heads and pointed chins around a landed sphere 15 feet in diameter. As the UFO begins to take off, the beings are sucked into it head-first, and it leaves very quickly in a blinding light. The police note "sulfur odor and the dried grass" at the landing spot. The case is reopened and studied in depth by Claude Poher. (Wikipedia, "Rencontre de Cussac"; Jöel Mesnard and Claude Pavy, "Encounter with Devils," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1968): 7–9; Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story. Signet, 1969, pp. 280–282; [Claude Poher], "Enquête sur l'Observation du 29.08.67 de Cussac (Cantal)," Groupe d'Étude des Phénomènes Aérospatiaux Non-identifiés, Centre Nationale d'Étude Spatiales, 1978; Gildas Bourdais, "The Death and Rebirth of Official French UFO Studies," IUR 31, no. 2 (June 2007): 16)

1967, September? — David R. Saunders and Levine visit Wright-Patterson AFB in Ohio to look at the Project Blue Book files. They find cases stored adjacent to the official files, and some in a classified safe. Saunders also finds problems when he examines the statistics in Blue Book Special Report no. 14. Plus all of Battelle's original IBM cards have been thrown away. (UFOs Yes, 115–116)

1967, September — 1:30 a.m. Capt. Grigory Demyanovich Oleynikov of the Russian fishing boat Kama is in Vyborg Bay in western Russia when he notices a luminescent, milky-white disc descending through the cloud layer. It stops and hovers at an altitude of 1,300 feet and seems to have a diameter of about 50 feet. The bottom portion contains nozzles that emit flames. Athen in complete silence it takes off straight up. (Stonehill and Mantle, Russia's USO Secrets, Flying Disk, 2020, p. 153)

1967, September — The Midwest UFO Network publishes its first issue of Skylook. (Skylook 1, no. 1 (September 1967)

1967, September — The CIA staff's frank opinions on Vietnam are sometimes modified before reaching President Johnson. At one point the CIA analysts estimate enemy strength at 500,000, while the military insists it is only 270,000. No amount of discussion resolves the difference. In September 1967, the CIA under DCI Richard Helms goes along with the military's lower number for the combat strength of the Vietnamese Communist forces. This leads a CIA analyst directly involved in this work to file a formal complaint against Helms, which is accorded due process within the agency. (Wikipedia, "Richard Helms")

1967, September — Afternoon. Paul Stehlin, military aviator and vice-president of Bugatti, is flying his own plane near Vélizy-Villacoublay, Yvelines, France, when he sees a silver, cigar-shaped object beside him. The object accompanies the aircraft for a few minutes, then it accelerates and leaves the plane behind at terrific speed. (NICAP case file)

1967, Early September — Evan Evanson, 18, is returning home in a pickup truck on Highway 36 south of Taber, Alberta, when his engine heats up and he pulls to the side of the road to let it cool off. Through the driver's window he sees a soundless, green, glowing object like two plates put together. It seems near enough to touch. The music on the truck radio is replaced with a beeping sound. Suddenly the object disappears, and Evanson notices that the truck engine has stopped. ("First Sighting of UFO Reported at Taber," Calgary (Alberta) Herald, September 5, 1967, p. 49)

1967, September 1? — The Colorado project obtains a third-hand report of a UFO sighting at Edwards AFB, California, on or around this date. A civilian employee at the base has seen the report, mentions it to a relative, who then discusses it with a scientist cooperating with the project. According to the story, 6 UFOs follow an X-15 as it lands. When project members call Edwards, they get a runaround. After 2 weeks of phone calls, they find that no X-15 flew on September 1. (There are flights on August 21, 25, and October 3 and 4, however.) But no one denies that a UFO sighting took place. (UFOs Yes, 124–125; Condon, pp. 341–342)

1967, September 4 — 5:10 a.m. Police officer P. A. Andrade is on duty at city hall in Valencia, Venezuela, when he hears a humming noise and footsteps in a nearby garage. He meets a dwarf, 3 feet tall, with a big head and bulging, reddish, glowing eyes, wearing a silver-colored, metallic-looking coverall. Andrade points his automatic weapon at the creature, but a voice from a hovering disc says in Spanish that he should not harm the creature. The dwarf then tries to convince Andrade to "come to their world," adding it is "very distant and much larger than the Earth, and with many advantages for Earthlings." When Andrade declines, the creature flies back into the object, which takes off. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 82; Vallée, Magonia, pp. 351–352; Mark Cashman, "Behavioral Classification System for UFO Occupants," IUR 24, no. 1 (Spring 1999): 18)

1967, September 4 — Dawn. A paperboy in Clevedon, England, discovers a 5-foot-wide, saucer-shaped, metallic object in a field. He calls the police, who send it to the guided weapons division of British Aerospace, whose chief design engineer declares it an expensive hoax. Soon five identical objects are found in fields and golf courses in the southern part of England. The sites lie on a straight path 220 miles long that spans 1° of latitude, running west to east from Clevedon to the Isle of Sheppey in the Thames Estuary. A USAF intelligence officer takes photos of one in Welford, Berkshire, and chemists with Britain's Home Office analyze samples of a foul liquid that is seeping from one of the objects. But the objects are a prank involving 15 engineering apprentices, primarily Christopher Southall and Roger Palmer, at the Royal Aircraft Establishment in Farnborough. The objects are made of fiberglass, and the smelly liquid is a fermented mixture of flour and water. 1967, September 4 — The Industrial Psychologists' section of the American Psychological Association sponsors a program on "Problems and Methods of Gathering Data on UFOs." Participants include Harold Greenwald, Richard H. Hall, Gustave J. Rath, R. Leo Sprinkle, and David R. Saunders. (Story, p. 413)

1967, September 5 — David R. Saunders suggests to Low that his academic commitments might require a reorganization of project duties, namely that Low, Roach, and himself report directly to Condon, with others reporting to them. Low blows up. Low ultimately agrees but replaces Roach with Norm Levine. (UFOs Yes, 139–140)

1967, September 6 — 9:50 p.m. Several witnesses at Meir, Stoke-on-Trent, England, see a vertically oriented "sausage-shaped cloud" in the eastern sky, behind which a light flashes for about 20 seconds at irregular intervals. A bright, glowing orange oval then emerges from the cloud and heads southeast at "fantastic speed." A light again flashes in the cloud for about 10 seconds, then stops. The mode of disappearance of the cloud is not reported. (Roger Stanway and Anthony R. Pace, Flying Saucer Report, UFOs: Unidentified, Undeniable, Newchapel Observatory, 1968, pp. 14–15; Herbert S. Taylor, "Cloud Cigars: A Further Look," IUR 30, no. 3 (May 2006): 12)

1967, September 9 — A 3-year-old saddle horse named Lady [not Snippy] belonging to Nellie Lewis of the Harry King Ranch in the San Luis Valley, Colorado, just south of Great Sand Dunes National Monument, is found dead a couple days after it has gone missing. The animal appears to have been skinned from the neck to the shoulders, which are nothing but bleached bones. The cut in the neck looks smooth and surgical. The soil beneath the horse is damp, and there is a medicine-like smell. A nearby bush is flattened oddly. Alamosa County Sheriff Ben Phillips blames Lady's death on lightning. A few days later, rangers at Great Sand Dunes arrest John Henry Altshuler, a pathologist at Ross Medical Center in Denver, for trespassing after dark; he has actually gone to the area to look for UFOs. When they find out he is a specialist in blood coagulation, they say they will drop the arrest record if he takes a look at the dead horse. He finds that Lady's lungs, heart, and thyroid are completely missing and finds the complete absence of blood distressing. Altshuler begins to think the dead horse has something to do with the UFOs he had seen when he was in the Great Sand Dunes. Nellie Lewis also admits she has been watching something in the sky every night. Duane Martin, a US Forest Service ranger, records a pulse of unusually high radioactivity near Lady's carcass, although others think it is only background radiation. The Pueblo Chieftain reports on the case in its October 5 edition and it gets picked up by the AP. Pathologist Robert O. Adams, chief of surgery at Colorado State University's College of Veterinary Medicine, investigates Lady for the Colorado project and concludes that bacteria, birds, and coyotes are responsible for the lack of blood and organs. He finds an infection in the horse's right flank that could have killed it; the cut at the neck might have been someone's mercy killing. "Exhaust marks" found are probably fungal infestations, and indentations are probably weathered hoofprints. Alamosa veterinarian Wallace Leary later finds evidence of two bullet holes in Lady's rump. 1967, September 10 — Several residents of Bruzual, Apure, Venezuela, watch a white, luminous disc following the course of the Apure River from west to east at low altitude. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 69)

1967, September 10 — 5:35 p.m. Capt. Fred Underhill and his crew are flying an Air Ferry Limited DC-6 bound for England at 16,000 feet about 63 miles north of Reus, Tarragona, Spain. They see an unusual object about 30° to their left and above, headed west. The object crosses to their right, turns toward them, decelerates, and descends. As it nears, they see that it is a metallic-appearing cone, point upward, with haze or mist around its lower portion. The object comes head on at an estimated 690–800 mph, passes under the starboard wing, turning and maneuvering, and disappears to the south. Barcelona flight controllers can see no known aircraft in the area. (NICAP, "Aircraft Encounter near Barcelona"; Bob Gribble, "Looking Back," MUFON UFO Journal, no. 233 (September 1987): 19; UFOEv II 130)

1967, September 11 — Richard H. Hall resigns as assistant director of NICAP for personal reasons and is replaced by Gordon I. R. Lore. ("Assistant Director Hall Resigns, Is Replaced by Gordon Lore," UFO Investigator 4, no. 2 (October 1967): 2; Powell, Keyhoe, 359–360)

1967, September 11 — 3:30 p.m. About a dozen employees of the Douglas Point Nuclear Generating Station near Kincardine, Ontario, watch a UFO pass over the plant in an easterly direction. At one point it hovers above Lake Huron about a mile and a half offshore and drops something into the water. Other plant workers see similar objects over the lake or above the plant on five succeeding nights. The plant isn't operational for another year. 1967, September 11 — 9:30 p.m. During a raging storm near Rosario, Santa Fe, Argentina, a family watches a huge, glowing orange object hovering in a field about 1,000 feet away from the farmhouse. The object emits brilliant beams of light. After 4 hours it ascends and is lost to sight in seconds. The next day, the witnesses find a sootlike material on the ground and tracks about 2 inches wide in the flattened grass. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 69)

1967, September 11 — 10:42 p.m. According to radar operators at Kincheloe AFB [now Chippewa County International Airport] south of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, more than 20 radar targets appear and disappear over the middle of Lake Superior over an 80-minute period, tracked at speeds of up to 2,000 mph, sometimes turning at sharp right angles and involving separation and merging of distinct targets. Radar at Duluth, Minnesota, has also picked up the targets. The Colorado project sends John Ahrens and Norm Levine to investigate. They check out rumors of visual sightings at Sault Ste. Marie, but these do not conform to the radar trackings. At Duluth, they draw a complete blank with denials all around. The returns are explained as anomalous propagation radar echoes in the final report. (NICAP, "17 Unknowns in 80 Minute Period"; Sparks, p. 326; UFOs Yes, 123–124; Condon, pp. 164–165)

1967, September 13 — Condon gives a dinner speech at a spectroscopy symposium at the National Bureau of Standards in Gaithersburg, Maryland, and talks primarily about contactees and crackpots. (UFOs Yes, 247–248)

1967, September 14 or 17 — 10:50 a.m. "Fábio Jose Diniz," 16, is walking along an asphalt path near the deserted grounds of an isolation unit at Hospital da Baleia on the outskirts of Belo Horizonte, Brazil. He notices an object in an adjacent football field. It is shaped like a mushroom with a domed top and surrounded by a row of portholes and a thick central "stalk" in contact with the soil. A hazy screen like a force field drops around the object, and a door appears out of nowhere and slides upward along the column. Two humanlike figures, 6 feet tall, emerge, dressed in one-piece diving suits of greenish material and helmets. One of them carries a tube-like implement, and the other has a probe sticking up from his helmet and talks to Diniz in Portuguese, telling him not to run away. He starts running anyway, but the figure tells him to come back the next day or they will take his family. The figure reenters the UFO, which takes off vertically. He sees psychologist and UFO researcher Hulvio Aleixo, who says he is in severe shock. At the landing site, police find some foul-smelling black material that crumbles easily. This is examined by geophysicist Roberto Murto, who finds it is made of iron, magnesium, and silica. An impression like a large footprint is also found. Aleixo subjects the boy to psychological testing and he finds no disorder. The UFO fails to return the next day. ("Flying Saucer Is Reported," *Baltimore (Md.) 1967, September 15 — Astronomer William Markowitz publishes an article in Science magazine that declares extraterrestrial UFOs to be a priori impossible because they do not follow the laws of physics. (William Markowitz, "The Physics and Metaphysics of Unidentified Flying Objects," Science 157 (1967): 1274–1279)

1967, September 15 — 8:50 p.m. Separate witnesses in Winsted, Connecticut, see a large glowing, pulsating object hovering nearby and several small beings with large heads moving around it. The object's light dims when cars approach. ("Experts Check Area Sightings," Hartford (Conn.) Courant, September 20, 1967, p. 47; "Flap Continues in the States," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1967, p. 9; Condon, pp. 347–351)

1967, September 17 — Roach resigns from the Colorado project in order to pursue academic interests. (UFOs Yes, 140)

1967, September 18 — David R. Saunders, Low, and Condon meet for 3 hours to discuss Saunders's suggestions for improving the public image. Saunders argues that the public can tell the project is headed toward a negative conclusion. Condon says that if they find extraterrestrial evidence, he would not disclose it to the public. (UFOs Yes, 140–141; Swords 324; Clark III 1195; Clark IV 1369)

1967, September 18 — 1:00 a.m. Russell Hill is stationed as a forestry lookout at the Raspberry Ridge station near Mount Burke, Alberta. He hears a strange pulsating sound as a green light sweeps the walls of the lookout cabin. He sees an object hovering to the southwest and giving off a greenish glow. He attempts to radio the nearby Highwood Ranger Station, but the radio and lights do not work. The object turns white and shoots up straight into the sky. ("Object Photographed in Canada," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1967, p. 11; "Saucer Sketch," Saucers, Space, and Science, no. 49 (Fall 1967): 2; "Saucers Seen near Forestry Lookout," Saucers, Space, and Science, no. 50 (Winter 1967/1968): 1; "Invasion over Prairies," Canadian UFO Report 1, no. 7 (Summer 1970): 25, 27)

1967, September 20 — NICAP provisionally withdraws its support from the Colorado project. David R. Saunders tells Low about it. Low travels to NICAP to meet with Keyhoe and Lore, insisting he still wants NICAP reports because his job is to submit the "best evidence and try to change Dr. Condon's present disbelief." NICAP stops sending any reports to the project. (UFOs Yes, 141–142; Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, pp. 122–123; Clark III 1195; Powell, Keyhoe, 360–361; Clark IV 1369)

1967, September 20 — 8:30–9:30 p.m. Seven people in Stoke-on-Trent, England, see a large, bright, silver-colored, oval-shaped object almost overhead and moving slowly to the northeast. It stops and hovers, then 2–3 smaller silvery objects emerge from the larger one and move rapidly away in different directions. The large UFO moves off to the northeast and slowly disappears. (Roger H. Stanway and Anthony R. Pace, Flying Saucer Report, UFOs: Unidentified, Undeniable, Newchapel Observatory, 1968, p. 16; Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects: A Further Look," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 26)

1967, September 20 — 10:30 p.m. Mrs. Charles Pasko notices a peach-pink glow in the woods outside her home near Winsted, Connecticut. Thinking it is a fire, she wakes up her son Jack and they watch it for a while. Three days later her husband and a forest ranger try to find the burned spot. They locate a burned and depressed teardrop-shaped area about 35 feet in diameter. They also find three triangular imprints forming an equilateral triangle with sides 10 feet long, and a fourth depression in the center. Other witnesses had seen a UFO coming in at a slant, breaking and burning tree leaves. Several tall trees in the area are broken off at the top. ("September Landing in Conn.," APRO Bulletin, Nov./Dec. 1967, p. 4)

1967, September 22 — 8:00 p.m. Simon Williams and his son Eugene, 14, are starting a pickup truck with jumper cables in Allen [or Fittstown], Oklahoma, when they see a disc with a brilliant silvery light and smaller flashing lights around the rim heading west. It seems to come closer and hover above a highway. Eugene thinks he can see the headlights of passing cars reflected on its bottom surface. It then proceeds slowly west. ("UFO Confirmed? Young Allen Boy Says He Saw It," Ada (Okla.) Weekly News, October 5, 1967, pp. 1–2; "Flap Continues in the States," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1967, p. 9; "Oklahoman's Report Many Flying Objects," APRG Reporter 6, no. 3 (December 1967): 7–8; Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 168)

1967, September 23 — 1:37 p.m. Geology professor Bryce M. Hand is driving north on State Highway 47 between Amherst and Sunderland, Massachusetts, when he notices a silvery, elongated object in the sky ahead. It appears to be larger than an airplane and is silent. Suddenly he sees a second object below and to the left of the first, both moving north-northwest on straight, parallel courses. The objects pass out of view in about 10 seconds. (UFOEv II 161)

1967, September 25 — David R. Saunders, Low, and Condon have another meeting at Condon's home. Saunders tells Condon that the problems with NICAP would not have arisen if Condon had been more circumspect with his negative remarks. Condon says he understands but offers no change. (UFOs Yes, 142; Clark III 1195; Clark IV 1369)

1967, September 25 — 7:00 a.m. Mr. A. Lambert wakes up early in his home to the east of Buret, Belgium, near the Luxembourg border, and steps outside to enjoy the mild weather. He notices a crown of gray-purple fog at a height of 50–65 feet surrounding the building. Suddenly, he sees a large silver object hovering above some fir trees, nearly 65 feet in diameter with chrome-like surfaces and a 5-foot-thick lip around the base. He calls his wife to see what he thinks is a satellite. The object tilts, reveals its flat underside, and silently approaches, appearing to prepare for a landing. In a hurry to get a better look, Lambert goes inside for his glasses, but when he returns, the object has vanished. His wife can still see it moving less than 1,000 feet away toward the village of Buret and notices a small red ball emerging from it. She also spots a second craft circling them in the fog, which releases another red ball before joining the first. The sighting lasts about three minutes, and shortly after the objects disappear, the fog dissipates. (Jean-Luc Vertongen, "Buret: Au rendez-vous de l'étrange," Inforespace, no. 3 (1972): 19–23; Richard F. Haines, Project Delta, 1994, p. 84)

1967, September 27 — BUFORA researchers Anthony R. Pace and Roger H. Stanway visit the S4 UFO desk at the Ministry of Defence in Whitehall, London, England. They talk to a Mr. Cassells, who assures them that all UFO reports are treated seriously but the Ministry's interest is solely in national defense. He adds that no person from the Ministry ever makes on-the-spot inquiries or field investigations. (Roger H. Stanway and Antony R. Pace, Flying Saucer Report: UFOs Unidentified, Unidentifiable, 1972; Good Above, pp. 67–68)

1967, September 27–29 — The Rocky Mountain News publishes a commentary by Condon wherein he debunks UFOs and disparages NICAP's contributions. It quotes Low in a similar vein. Condon talks to the project staff and retracts nothing, only saying that he was misquoted about being disenchanted about the project. Project members hold a meeting without Low and Condon to decide what to do. Levine pushes for mass resignation. Craig is the sole dissenter. David R. Saunders sides with Levine but wants to explore other strategies. Ultimately, they decide to prepare their own report, one "so compelling that Condon would be forced to accept it on its merits." (UFOs Yes, 142–146; Swords 325; Clark III 1195, 1196; Clark IV 1369, 1371)

1967, September 28 — 1:30 a.m. Omar Amaya T., chief dispatcher at the Maiquetia International Airport [now the Simón Bolívar International Airport], Venezuela, watches three luminous disc pass across the sky from north to south. Suddenly one lags behind and dives toward the sea but veers up just before contact. Resuming its position in the formation, it joins the other objects as they disappear to the east. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 70)

1967, September 28 — 4:00 p.m. Many people in Caracas, Venezuela, watch a luminous metallic disc cross the sky with an oscillating motion and appear to land on Cerro El Ávila. A Similar object is seen taking off from the same spot about 2 hours later. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, p. 70)

1967, September 29 — 8:30 p.m. Four workers in a restaurant at Wernersville, Pennsylvania, are alerted by a neighbor to go outside and watch nine red, pulsating, cigar-shaped objects flying northeastward. A large triangle-shaped object, also pulsating red, flies into view. The triangle stops and changes colors to white, green, then back to red. It takes off in a zigzag motion to the northeast. (R. G. Shunk, "Letter," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 6, no. 1 (Feb./March 1985): 4)

1967, September or October — 4:45 p.m. Some 40 soldiers and officers at an antiaircraft artillery unit stationed at Floreşti, Romania, watch an aluminum-colored object hovering about 2,400 feet in the sky. The unit commander reports it to the General Command in Bucharest, who order him to shoot it down if it makes any hostile maneuvers. The object stays in position for more than two hours, but disappears after a white cloud passes in front of it. (Romania 16–17)

1967, September or October — 9:30 p.m. The Chilean destroyer Almirante Williams is in the Gulf of Penas, Chile, when the onboard sonar system detects two submarine-like objects that are moving too fast to be normal submarines. Suddenly, the gyrocompass starts spinning and the radar screen goes blank. No one sees anything unusual in the water. A cargo plane also reports instrument failure on the same night. (J. Antonio Huneeus, "USOs in Chile and Peru," Fate 56, no. 1 (January 2003): 6–7; Carl Feindt, "Report #1387," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 301–302)

1967, Fall — Dusk. A family camped in Capistrano Beach Park, San Juan Capistrano, California, watch a silver, teardrop-shaped object with a window hovering about 600 feet away. It is about 45–65 feet long and is emitting a low hum. After 45 seconds it begins moving erratically at a speed faster than an aircraft, disappearing at least once and reappearing in another spot. The display lasts for 5–6 minutes, with other people standing on tables and the roofs of their recreational vehicles to get a better look. Suddenly it speeds upward to a high altitude, then plunges into the ocean. (Carl Feindt, "Report #936," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 307–309)

1967, October — The DOSAAF Cosmonautics Committee invites the Soviet UFO Study Group to function under its auspices. (Wikipedia, "Felix Ziegel"; Mikhail Gershtein, "A Short History of UFO Research in the Former Soviet Union," UAP Check, July 6, 2024)

1967, October — 8:30 p.m. David R. Smith watches a diffuse object with a series of 5–6 lighted square and oval windows about 450–600 feet away at treetop level near Homer, Louisiana. It rises and heads south. After 50 seconds, the lights blink out. (NICAP case file)

1967, October — Night. Eugene Browne is walking in the outskirts of Belfast, Northen Ireland, when he sees an object coming toward him that shines a beam of light at him. He blacks out and wakes up lying on a table in a windowless room wit metal bands around his head. Four men and a girl are standing around him. Browne is persuaded to have sex with the girl. Before sending him back, he is told, "It will not be the last you see of us." (Norman Oliver, "Themes of Contact: Sex and Saucers," Gemini 1, no. 2 (Apr./June 1972): 20–22; Clark III 1061–1062; Clark IV 1177)

1967, October 2 — 7:30 p.m. Philip E. Burkhardt, a Grumman Aircraft Company engineer, sees a white disc with windows and lights blinking in sequence in Melville, New York. A beam of light is projecting from it and illuminating the ground. The object hovers for about 20 seconds, then moves away. Burkhardt gets into his car to follow it and blinks his lights at the object. The lights on the UFO blink out in sequence, then come back on. (UFOEv II 161)

1967, October 3 — Pilot William "Pete" Knight reaches a speed of 4,519 mph (Mach 6.72) in a North American X-15 rocket plane, a record that stands today. (Wikipedia, "William J. Knight")

1967, October 4 — From early evening until 11:30 p.m., numerous independent witnesses observe unexplained aerial activity in Nova Scotia. Near Sambro at 9:00 pm, Capt. Leo Howard Mersey and 20 crewmembers of the MV Nickerson see four brilliant red lights in a rectangular formation that appear to be on or just above the water. Occasionally one flares up so brightly that it causes an afterimage in their eves. The objects are also tracked on ship's radar. They file a report with the Lunenburg CMP office. Between 11:00 and 11:30 pm, northwest of Brier Island, the captain and crew of a fishing vessel see a brilliant white light the size of the moon. As they watch, three brilliant yellow lights emerge and form a triangle around the larger light. The satellite objects then move across the sky and back at high speed. Observations are also made by other vessels. Five miles southwest of Weymouth, a policeman and three game wardens see an orange-colored light just above the tree line moving silently and slowly with spark-like objects emanating. At about 11:20 p.m., just west of Shag Harbour, Laurie Wickens and four other teenagers driving in a car along Highway 3 see an object flying low, flashing four lights one after the other, in a straight line. It appears to be slowly descending at a 45° angle. Multiple witnesses hear a whistling sound "like a bomb," then a "whoosh," and finally a loud bang. When next seen by the teens, the object has hit the water's surface 820–980 feet offshore. It drifts on the surface, showing a pale-yellow light. Wickens contacts the RCMP detachment in Barrington Passage and reports he has seen a large airplane or small airliner crash into the waters off Shag Harbour. Within about 15 minutes, 10 RCMP officers arrive at the scene. Concerned for survivors, the RCMP detachment contacts the Rescue Coordination Centre in Halifax to advise them of the situation and ask if any aircraft were missing. Before any attempt at rescue can be made, the object starts to sink and disappears from view. A rescue mission is quickly assembled. Within half an hour of the crash, local fishing boats go out to the crash site in the waters of the Gulf of Maine off Shag Harbour to look for survivors. No survivors, bodies, or debris are found, either by the fishermen or by a Canadian Coast Guard search and rescue cutter, which arrives about an hour later from nearby Clark's Harbour. By the next morning, RCC Halifax has determined that no aircraft are missing. The same morning, RCC Halifax also sends a priority telex to the Air Desk at Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters in Ottawa, which handles all civilian and military UFO sightings, informing them of the crash and that all conventional explanations such as aircraft or flares have been dismissed. The head of the Air Desk, Squadron Leader William Bain sends another priority telex to the Royal Canadian Navy headquarters concerning the "UFO report" and recommends an underwater search be mounted. The RCN in turn sends another priority telex tasking Fleet Diving Unit Atlantic with carrying out the search. A detachment of RCN divers from Fleet Diving Unit Atlantic is assembled on the HMCS Granby on October 6 and for the next three days they comb the seafloor looking for an object. The final report says no trace of an object is found. In the 1990s, researcher Chris Styles finds evidence that there is a second crash the same night. Witnesses see American naval exercises in Shelburne Harbour 30 miles to the northeast. Speculation is that the original object may have traveled underwater from Shag Harbour to Shelburne. (Wikipedia, "Shag Harbour UFO incident"; "UAO Dives into Sea at Nova Scotia," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1967, p. 7; William F. 1967, October 5 — 9:30 p.m. Colorado Superior Court Judge Charles E. Bennett and his wife Christina spot three circular, red-orange objects traveling from the east to the southeast in a triangular formation over Denver, Colorado. They can hear a distinct humming or whirring sound. They move out of sight in 6 seconds. ("Flap Continues in the States," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1967, p. 10)

1967, October 6 — 7:00 p.m. Radar at Vandenberg AFB, near Lompoc, California, detects a very large stationary object some miles over the Pacific Ocean off the Northern California coast. Later, radar detects numerous small but strong targets traveling eastward in irregular flight. (NICAP, "Condon Case 35"; Condon, pp. 171–172, 353–365)

1967, October 7 — 8:00 p.m. Russell Hill is sitting down to dinner at the Raspberry Ridge Lookout Station in Alberta when the cabin lights begin to flicker. He goes out to check the generator and sees an odd green light moving slowly up the valley from south to north. It approaches to within 500 feet of the cabin. The object is about 75 feet in diameter and looks like two bowls clamped together. Around the rim is a pulsating green light that seems to come from a neon tube. Another green light is rotating slowly inside the top portion, and there are porthole-shaped indentations in the side. Suddenly the light on the rim is extinguished, the upper green light turns white, and the object ascends at a terrific speed, trailing jets of flame. ("Object Photographed in Canada," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1967, p. 11; "Saucers Seen near Forestry Lookout," Saucers, Space, and Science, no. 50 (Winter 1967/1968): 1; "Invasion over Prairies," Canadian UFO Report 1, no. 7 (Summer 1970): 25, 27)

1967, October 7–9 — Capture and death of Che Guevara in Bolivia. Félix Rodríguez, a Cuban exile turned CIA Special Activities Division operative, advises Bolivian troops during the hunt for Guevara in Bolivia. In addition, the 2007 documentary My Enemy's Enemy alleges that Nazi war criminal Klaus Barbie advised and possibly helped the CIA orchestrate Guevara's capture. (Wikipedia, "Che Guevara")

1967, October 9 — 5:40 p.m. The 13-year-old son of a prominent businessman is riding a bicycle along a wash in the back of his home in the area of the Tucson Speedway in Arizona. He comes across a cylindrical metallic object standing on end and sitting on two legs about 44 feet away from him. The legs end in circular pads and are joined by a curved bar. The object, which is making a low-pitched hum, is about 8 feet tall and more than 2 feet wide.

The boy approaches it for a better view, but it takes off vertically and disappears in 12 seconds. He finds two impressions in the hard surface of the wash, 13.4 inches across and about 42 inches apart (measuring from the outer edges). ("Landing at Tucson," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1967, pp. 1, 4)

1967, October 10 — The Lorenzens visit the Colorado project and find its investigatory procedures "sadly lacking," with no standard report form or methodology. They also meet with Boulder Daily Camera journalist R. Roger Harkins, who has been covering the Colorado project. They give him a 7-point rationale on why the CIA might be interested in UFOs, just to see if it gets published. Harkins dictates the story to the Associated Press, but it is never published. The Lorenzens suspect the project has a CIA mole. (Low did work for the CIA in 1949 when it was aiding Albanian resistance fighters.) (UFOs Yes, 129, 175–176; Lorenzen, Encounters, p. 5; Robin W. Winks, Cloak and Gown: Scholars in the Secret War, 1939–1961, Morrow, pp. 396–397; Powell, Keyhoe, 362)

1967, October 10 — The United Nations Outer Space Treaty comes into force. Signatories to the treaty agree not to use nuclear weapons in outer space, limit use of the Moon and other celestial bodies to peaceful purposes, establish that space shall be freely explored and used by all nations, and prevent any country from claiming sovereignty over outer space or any celestial body. Although it forbids establishing military bases, testing weapons, and conducting military maneuvers on celestial bodies, the treaty does not expressly ban all military activities in space, nor the establishment of military space forces or the placement of conventional weapons in space. The treaty forms the basis of international space law. (Wikipedia, "Outer Space Treaty")

1967, October 11 — Rex Heflin is visited by a strange group of men in air force uniforms. He obtains their names. They ask him about his 1965 photos and topics like the Bermuda Triangle. He notices a figure in the back seat of their car and a violet glow. Heflin thinks he is being photographed or recorded. The FM radio acts strangely.

1967, October 11 — Colorado UFO Project consultant William Hartmann tells his colleague James E. McDonald during a phone call that everyone on the team understands that Condon has a negative attitude toward the extraterrestrial hypothesis and that "everybody on the project is more or less forced to go along with that." (Eghigian, After, p. 204)

1967, October 11 — 8:00 p.m. Nora Tibbs is driving on Highway 2 near Aldersyde, Alberta, when the headlights, radio, and car engine stop. She notices an oval-shaped object with a turret on top that begins to circle her car. It has two white lights and a lighted-up underside. It circles the car four or five times at a height of 1,000 feet, then flies away. The witness feels cold during the sighting. The car engine starts by itself as the object leaves. ("Calgary UFOs 'Authentic,'" Victoria (B.C.) Daily Colonist, October 14, 1967, p. 33; "Object Photographed in Canada," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1967, p. 11; "UFO Questions Asked in House of Commons," Lethbridge (Alberta) Herald, October 20, 1967, p. 21; Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, Center for UFO Studies, 1981, p. 37)

1967, October 12 — Night. Comedian Dick Gregory is at a party with friends at Big Sur, California, when three lights appear in the sky. One is fiery red, while the other two are bright green. The objects dart about sideways, backwards, in circles, in jagged lines, and in formation. When Gregory's writer, Jim Saunders, signals with a flashlight, the objects seem to respond by moving in the same direction as the beam. The partygoers watch the lights for about 40 minutes. Gregory takes two Polaroid photographs that show a red object at the top and two green ones at the bottom. (Margaret Sachs, The UFO Encyclopedia, Putnam, 1980, p. 131)

1967, October 13 — 2:00 a.m. Ben Beswick, engineer on a northbound freight from Red Deer to Mirror, Alberta, along with another trainman, sees a glowing, disk-shaped object hovering above a clump of trees. The underside is glowing white and is ringed with flashing red, blue, and green lights. As the train approaches, the object ascends and flies parallel to the train for about one hour. A relief crew and station personnel at Mirror also see the object. ("UFO Pursued Us, Train Crew Says," Edmonton (Alta.) Journal, October 17, 1967, p. 2; "Object Trails Train," APRO Bulletin, Jan./Feb. 1968, p. 3)

1967, October 13 — Evening. A spinning UFO with red and green lights is seen streaking 500 feet above Laitkor village, south of Shillong, Meghalaya, India, and seems to dip into a stream near Dympep village, about 17 miles to the southwest, sucking and churning the water with three explosions. The object then flies to Mawkdok village, 3 miles away, and into the dense vegetation of the Lum Swer forest. Military and government officials later explain the incident as a "whirlwind of high intensity." ("Shillong Saucer," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1968): 33; Dolan, USO1, 305–307)

1967, October 13 — McDonnell Douglas aerospace engineer Robert M. Wood briefs the Colorado project on UFOs. On January 9, 1968, Wood writes Condon a critical but polite letter listing his concerns about the project's shortcomings. He later learns that Condon has contacted CEO James Smith McDonnell on August 1, 1968, and tried to get him fired. (Robert M. Wood, "A Little Physics…A Little Friction: A Close Encounter with the Condon Committee," IUR 18, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1993): 6–10; Clark III 1198; Clark IV 1373)

1967, October 14 — 2:30 a.m. Physicist Lewis E. Hollander Jr. and his wife and son are driving near Mendota, California, when they see a reddish-orange light source hovering close to the road. They then notice a triangular shape beneath the light. Thirty seconds later it moves upward to the west, increasing its speed. The triangular shape fades, and Hollander notices a white glow ("definitely an ionization color") behind it. It disappears at an extreme altitude after 3 minutes. (NICAP case file)

1967, October 14 — 7:45 p.m. A father and son are returning from a fishing trip when they notice an odd orange object like a "haystack on fire" landed in the desert near Ouray, Utah. They stop, get out of the car, and watch. The object lifts off immediately, looking like a half-moon in shape and size. It then goes over to the Moon and flies a loop around it, keeping its flat side down. Then it flies across the Moon's face and leaves to the northwest. (Frank B. Salisbury, The Utah UFO Display, Devin-Adair, 1974, pp. 53–55; Michael D. Swords, "We Know Where You Live," IUR 30, no. 2 (January 2006): 10)

1967, October 17 — Rep. Louis C. Wyman (R-N.H.) submits House Resolution 946 for a full UFO investigation by the House Committee on Science and Astronautics. ("Investigation of Unidentified Flying Objects," Congressional Record, House, 90th Cong., 1st Sess., October 17, 1967, vol. 113, part 21, p. 28949)

1967, October 18 — 400 individuals attend the first meeting of the UFO Study Group of the All-Union Committee on Cosmonautics of the Russian DOSAAF. Retired Soviet Air Force Maj. Gen. Porfiri Stolyarov is elected chairman and Felix Ziegel agrees to be deputy chairman. Members include author Alexander Kazantsev, engineer Arkady Tikhonov, a cosmonaut, 18 scientists, and 200 qualified observers stationed throughout the country. 1967, October 21 — 6:16 a.m. Two control tower operators and an observer at the south end of the runway at Blytheville Air Force Base [now Arkansas International Airport] in Blytheville, Arkansas, see two dark oblong objects flying east to west at about 1,200–1,500 feet. They are tracked by RAPCON radar for 2 miles. They make a turn to the southwest and disappear. (NICAP, "RAPCON Tracks Object, Two Objects Observed from the Ground"; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 60, 75)

1967, October 21 — 10:00 p.m. Ivan Ritter, Jerry Bennet, and two other teens are driving east out of Duncan, Oklahoma, on the new State Highway 7. They see something in the road ahead, far out of the range of their headlights. When the driver turns on his high-beam lights, they see three men who seem to fly off the road and disappear. They are about 4 feet tall and wearing tight-fitting blue-green clothing. Their faces appear human, but with large ears. The next morning, Ritter and Bennet look around for evidence at the landing site, but all they find is a small, four-toes footprint in the muddy bottom of a creek bed about 300 feet from the road. (Lorenzen, UFOs over the Americas, Signet, 1968, pp. 84–85)

1967, October 22 — Night. Edward Fortney and another real-estate agent are locking up for the night in Charleswood, a suburb of Winnipeg, Manitoba, when they notice a formation of brilliant red, pulsating lights above an adjacent field. They are joined by six other people who have stopped their car to look at the lights. Two similar lights appear and take up a position near the formation. The objects then rise and move away noiselessly in formation. Floating above Canada Highway 100, they appear to change positions, forming a perfect triangle. Fortney looks at them through binoculars and sees dark rectangular objects that the lights are attached to. The formation dips and bobs toward a line of high-voltage towers half a mile away. The three lights in triangular formation break up and form a single file, the wires and towers lighting up with a red glow as they speed over them. They are last seen traveling northwest. On his way home, Fortney experiences a "skullbuster" headache that lasts until midnight. The next day, he visits the site in the field and finds child-like footprints in the moist soil, 7 inches long and under 3 inches wide, leading to and from a peculiar circular pile of fist-sized stones. The heel marks seem deeply impressed in the soil. Fortney also experiences leg and back pain, sunburn on his face and hands, and a yellow-green coating on his tongue. (Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Sightings, Landings, and Abductions, Methuen, 1979, pp. 47–50)

1967, October 24 — 4:00 a.m. Two police constables, Roger Willey and Clifford Waycott, chase a bright cross-shaped light in their patrol car at 90 mph between Holsworthy and Hatherleigh on the A307 road, Devon, England. The object appears to land behind some trees, but takes off before they can reach the site, though they approach to within 120 feet of the object. The UFO is later observed to rendezvous in the sky with a similar object. Other policemen report a UFO on this day and the following day. 1967, October 24 — 9:30 p.m. Donald Chiszar, 13, and Pat Crosier, 10, are sitting on the Crosier front porch in Newfield, New York, when they see a bright disc-like object approach them with its leading edge tilted toward them. On top is a knob-like protuberance with an antenna and hanging beneath the object is a "square box" full of red, green, and white lights. Two humanoid figures and control panels are visible through windows. The object then tilts back and shoots out of sight. Their hand-held radios produce loud static during the sighting. Journal,* November 10, 1967, p. 11; Condon, pp. 375–379; Richard H. Hall, "Dyad 'Scout Craft,'" IUR 25, no. 4 (Winter 2000–2001): 23–24; UFOEv II 458)

1967, October 25 — Secretary of State for Defence Merlyn Rees tells the House of Commons that 153 UFO reports have been received by the ministry in the past 6 months and that "commonplace explanations have been found" for most. (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1967, October 25 — 3:15 p.m. R. G. Putnam, a brakeman on a train running from Truro, Nova Scotia, to Moncton, New Brunswick, when he sees a disc with green vapor billowing from it pacing the train at treetop level near Wentworth Station, Nova Scotia. Putnam feels an intense blast of radiation, forcing him to cover his face with his hands to look at it. The object soon drifts away from the train, tips to a 45° angle, then turns to a vertical position. A jet arrives, seemingly in pursuit, and the object levels out, taking on the appearance of a cigar-shaped cloud. Both fly out of sight to the west after 35 minutes of observation. One week later, the hair on the back of Putnam's hands disappears, his hands shrivel up, and his eyes are sore and swollen. Two weeks later, his chest and throat get sore. He reports the sighting to the RCMP and the Canadian Forces, but apparently gets no response. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 104–105)

1967, October 26 — 4:30 a.m. An engineer is driving a Ford Transit Bus north on the A32 road near Hook, Hampshire, England, when its electrical system fails abruptly. He pulls over and looks at the engine, but the battery is undamaged. While climbing back into the cab, he notices dark object motionless over the road ahead. The ignition still won't respond. A few minutes later, he tries again and both the engine and the radio start up, so he drives on, but a short way down the road the engine fails again. As he gets out, he notices a change of pressure on his eardrums and an electrical smell in the road. The battery is still intact. Once again, he sees the object, a disk with a pointed underside, about 300 feet away and 50–100 feet above the trees. It appears to be 60 feet wide by 30 feet high. He watches it for several minutes until it tilts and moves away at a moderate speed. The engine starts immediately, but he has some difficulty concentrating and has some numbness in his fingers. (R. H. B. Winder, "Vehicle Stoppage at Hook," Flying Saucer Review 13, no. 6 (Nov./Dec, 1967): 6–7; Bernard E. Finch, "Physiological Effects on Witness at Hook," Flying Saucer Review 13, no. 6 (Nov./Dec, 1967): 7, 27)

1967, October 26 — 11:25 a.m. J. B. W. "Angus" Brooks, a former BOAC pilot and photo interpreter, is walking his Dalmatian and German shepherd at Moigne Downs near Ringstead Bay, Dorset, England. An odd-looking craft descends and hovers at an altitude of 200–300 feet at a distance of about a quarter mile from them for 22 minutes. The German shepherd has been foraging for game; when she returns she seems "distraught" as she stands beside Brooks. Her ears are pricked, indicating she is worried about the sounds she is hearing, although Brooks can detect no sound from the object. The odd-shaped craft has a central round chamber estimated to be 25 feet in diameter and 12 feet thick. Four long slender fuselages (estimated 75 feet long and 8 feet wide) extend from the central chamber. In flight, one of the 4 fuselages leads, while the other three are together in the rear. As the object slows to hover, the fuselages move to form a cross. The object rotates 90°, then remains motionless for 22 minutes despite strong winds. Upon departure, the leading fuselage is not the one that led on approach. The remaining 3 fuselages come together in the rear as on the approach, and the object climbs away with increasing speed. The craft appears translucent, taking on the color of the sky above it. There are dark shadows along the bases of the fuselages and the center chamber. On future visits to this area, the German shepherd appears nervous. 1967, October 27 — 3:00 a.m. Charlie Little, the pilot of a Piper-Twin Comanche, with two other pilots and a passenger on board, is flying over the Atlantic northeast of Jacksonville, Florida. They see a bright light, which becomes visible as six huge, round, bright-white lights in a horizontal row on a darker object. It approaches on a collision course and is seen to be a gray equilateral triangle with a triangular opening at its center. The object makes an unbanked 180° turn, then takes off and disappears in a flash. (Willy Smith, "A Huge 'Open' Triangular UFO," IUR 9, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1984): 4–6; Philip J. Klass, "Letter," IUR 10, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1985): 13; "Charles Little Responds," IUR 10, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1095): 13)

1967, October 27 — 3:00 a.m. A waitress driving home in Parshall, North Dakota, sees a large, round, revolving object with alternating triangular areas of coloration. The object is low and moving horizontally an estimated two blocks away. As it paces her car, she sees 2–3 white light beams coming down vertically from the object. Her car drives like it has flat tires or rocks that are hitting the bottom of the chassis. A second witness, police Lt. Glen G. Brunsell, sees a low-altitude, bright round light like a welding-torch that illuminates the ground. The object moves slowly with vertical oscillations and changes color from blue to green-white. It departs vertically, disappearing in 5 seconds. ("AF Log Reveals Wave," UFO Investigator 4, no. 7 (July/Aug. 1968): 6–7; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 101–102; UFOEv II 188)

1967, October 27 — 3:30 a.m. Truck driver Chris R. Helgesen observes a spinning, reddish, round object, about 100 feet in diameter, pace his truck for about half a mile on US Highway 83 north of Max, North Dakota. The object then hovers above a field, paces the truck again, hovers, paces the truck again (stopping when it stops), turns blue, picks up speed, turns green, then shoots away to the southeast, turns yellow, and vanishes. Helgesen has it in view for about one hour. ("New Close-Ups, Pacings," UFO Investigator 4, no. 5 (March 1968): 3)

1967, October 27 — 2:20 p.m. Timothy Robinson, 13, and his family are startled by the roar of a jet aircraft overhead at Winchester, Hampshire, England. He dashes out into the garden and sees two English Electric Lightning fighters fly low overhead. Ahead of the aircraft is a black, mushroom-shaped object streaking away to the west. It changes direction abruptly to the northwest and disappears into a cloud, climbing steeply and outmaneuvering the Lightnings. (Good Above, p. 62)

1967, October 30 — 9:30 p.m. Alexander Spargo is traveling alone in his car on the Mayanup–Kojonup Road about 10 miles east of Mayanup in Western Australia at a speed of about 60–65 miles per hour. He is approached by a lighted, football-shaped object that is about 90 feet off the ground. Almost immediately, the car stops dead. However, there is no feeling of deceleration. The vehicle's motor, lights, and radio go off. Spargo hears no noise. He stares at the object, which is about 30 feet in diameter and glowing a light iridescent blue similar to lightning. A hollow tube of light comes from on the object and immerses the car, stopping at his windshield. The tube seems 2–3 feet in diameter. It is not uncomfortable to the eyes, and he is able to look up the length of the tube. After about 5 minutes, the tube closes off and the object disappears at terrific speed. The moment the object leaves, he finds his vehicle is suddenly going at 60–65 miles per hour again, with no feeling of acceleration. Spargo notices the car's chronometer is running five minutes slow when he stops in Boyup Brook. 1967, November — Ufologist Ted Bloecher privately publishes a massive Report on the UFO Wave of 1947, detailing 853 reports gleaned from his years of research into newspaper archives in June–July 1947. The preface is written by James E. McDonald. (Ted Bloecher, Report on the UFO Wave of 1947, The Author, 1967)

1967, November 2 — 9:30 p.m. Navajo ranch hands Willie Begay and Guy Tossie, both 23, are driving south of Ririe, Idaho, on US Highway 26 when they are blinded by a flash of light. Their car comes to a stop, and immediately in front of them they see an object 6–8 feet in diameter and 3 feet thick, hovering 5 feet off the ground and shaped like two saucers joined together. Around the rim is a row of alternately flashing orange and green lights. On top is a transparent dome, where two small entities are visible. The dome flips open, and one occupant floats out and approaches the car. It is 3 feet tall, bald, with ears set high on its head, round eyes, and a mouth like a slit. It is wearing tight-fitting coveralls and carries a pack on its back. It opens the car door and sits behind the wheel as Begay and Tossie move in horror to the right. The car begins to move as if fastened to the craft into a field of wheat stubble where Tossie gets out and runs toward the farmhouse of Willard Hammon for help, followed by another entity apparently holding a light. Begay stays in the front seat of the car with the first entity, who tries to communicate with him, twice saying something in a high, chirruping voice. The second entity returns, and the two float back to the craft, which rises and departs, a yellow flame-like light coming from the bottom. Hammon lets Tossie inside his farmhouse, where he eventually calms down and tells his story. They go back to the site, where they find Begay in a state of shock in the car. At 11:30 p.m., an anonymous witness driving between Ririe and Rigby, Idaho, sees a landed UFO with a small occupant who stops the car and taps on the side window. 1967, November 5 — 3:40 a.m. A dairy farm employee at Centeno, Santa Fe, Argentina, sees a bluish light come from the west and land silently on the ground about 1,900 feet away. It remains there 2–3 minutes before departing. A companion further away also sees the object. After the sun comes up, they find an oval mark, 20 feet by 13 feet, on the spot where the pasture is dry and flattened. Another mark is found in an adjacent field a couple weeks later. (Roberto A. Ferrari, "Possible Landings at Centeno, Argentina," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 16 (August 1971): 13–14)

1967, November 6 — 1:30 a.m. On a section of the A338 road [now B3347] south of Sopley, Hampshire, England, truck driver Karl Farlow (or Barlow) finds that the lights on his diesel truck have failed. As he pulls over, he sees a glowing, 15-foot-wide, egg-shaped UFO that moves slowly across the road from the right, passes slowly to the left, then speeds up and disappears. The object makes a sound like a refrigerator and gives off a smell like a drill boring through wood. Before it goes away, a Jaguar sports car comes from the opposite direction, and its engine stalls and lights fail. The UFO glows a vivid green color. The diesel engine is not affected. The driver of the Jaguar is a veterinary surgeon, and he and Farlow call the police from a nearby call box. The witnesses note that there are marks on the ground and the road surface seems to have melted. The veterinarian's girl passenger is taken to a hospital suffering from shock. A week later, Farlow notices that a 200-foot stretch of the road at the encounter site has been completely resurfaced and the call box has been repainted. 1967, November 7 — Secretary of State for Defence Merlyn Rees tells the House of Commons that the Ministry of Defence examines UFO reports "in the light of their possible air defence implications." It has examined 625 reports from January 1, 1959 to September 30, 1967, and 555 were found to have mundane explanations. (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1967, November 8 — 3:30–4:00 a.m. A business executive is driving a 1964 Chrysler convertible near Lake Elsinore, California, when his lights go out, the car stops, and the radio goes out. He feels a strong pressure on his head and shoulders. He then notices a red-orange object 30 feet in diameter hovering in the road ahead at about 160 feet in altitude. It has rotating lights around its rim. The object hovers about 90 seconds before it takes off into the fog. The lights return, the radio works again, and he is able to start the car. NICAP investigators find that the clock had stopped at 3:46 a.m., some spots where the paint is easy to rub off, and small pits in the paint and glass. The back window has a distortion in it that the driver has not noticed before. When Roy Craig interviews him for the Condon Committee at the scene of the sighting, the witness adjusts his story, saying the UFO was more like 55 feet in diameter and flew above the car at 50–75 feet. Craig tests the car's hood and trunk for magnetic anomalies and compares his results with another car of the same make and model. He finds that the "Chrysler had experienced no reorientation of its magnetic signature, as one might expect if the car had been subjected to a strong magnetic field." (Condon, pp. 380–385; Randle, Levelland, 2021, pp. 66–67)

1967, November 8 — MP Peter Mills asks about UFO sightings in Devon, England, in the UK House of Commons and receives assurances from Under-Secretary of State for Defence Merlyn Rees, who says that the October 24 police chase involved either aircraft or the planet Venus. Mills asks if the ministry consulted scientists about the sightings, and Rees replies that both scientists and psychologists have been consulted. (Good Above, pp. 65–66; Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1967, November 8 — Through unrelenting pressure by British ufologist Julian J. A. Hennessey, the Ministry of Defence and RAF UFO files are no longer discarded every five years as of transitory interest. The MoD confirms that it will retain its remaining UFO documents. Further pressure to retain files comes in 1970 from MP John Langford-Holt. (David Clarke, "Briefing Document: Unidentified Flying Objects (UFOs)," August 2011; UFOFiles2, pp. 114–115)

1967, November 9 — Under-Secretary of State for Defence Merlyn Rees tells the House of Commons that the Ministry of Defence received 274 UFO reports from January 1, 1966, to September 30, 1967, and 37 of these reports remain unexplained due to insufficient information. (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1967, November 10 — Stolyarov and Ziegel, speaking on Russian Central TV, encourage viewers to send their first-hand accounts in to the newly formed Soviet UFO Study Group. The response is overwhelming and embarrassing to the DOSAAF All-Union Committee of Cosmonautics. Army Gen. A. L. Getman dissolves the UFO Study Group by the end of November. (Wikipedia, "Felix Ziegel"; Joe Brill, "UFO's behind the Iron Curtain," Skylook, no. 86 (January 1975): 14; Good Above, p. 233; Mikhail Gershtein, "A Short History of UFO Research in the Former Soviet Union," UAP Check, July 6, 2024)

1967, November 13 — Condon, Low, and editor Harriet Hunter meet to discuss the final University of Colorado report. Condon deliberately excludes the other senior staff because he is now insisting on no old cases and no "case book." He insists on including everything in which the Colorado project participated in, even phone calls. He wants to write a section on the harm done by irresponsible UFO authors. The meeting ends with a roughed-out list of subject sections and authors. Condon reserves writing the summary and methodology sections himself. He assigns to Hunter the job of selecting which cases are included and how they are written up (perhaps he no longer trusts Low to do this). (Swords 326–328)

1967, November 14 — Keyhoe writes separate letters to Condon and Low, asking if they will agree to examine NICAP's cases, but he makes it clear that he has little confidence in the project's impartiality. (Clark III 1196; Eghigian, After, p. 204; Clark IV 1370)

1967, November 15 — Canadian Forces Wing Commander Douglas F. Robertson prepares a 28-page briefing document, CDS Briefing on Unidentified Flying Objects, on the status of UFO sightings in Canada to Gen. Jean Victor Allard, Chief of the Defence Staff. It reviews facts and procedures and describes cases that have been handled within the ministry, including the Falcon Lake and Shag Harbour cases, as well as the Warren Smith photo. Robertson advises that UFO sightings are taking up too much of the military's time, but that the scientific community, specifically the University of Toronto Institute of Aerospace Studies, might find them interesting. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 24–59)

1967, November 15 — The crew of Quebecair Flight 650 sees a bright object at the end of the runway at Sept-Îles Airport, Quebec. It is as large as a star and stationary. (Good Above, p. 200)

1967, November 17 — 6:00 p.m. David Seewaldt, 13, is crossing a vacant lot in Calgary, Alberta. He hears a high-pitched sound and sees a slivery gray UFO the size of a house about to land. A beam of light shoots from it, putting him in a "trance" and pulling him into the craft, where he meets two hideous-looking entities with brown crocodile skin, slits for mouths, and holes for noses and ears. They wear no clothes and have hands with only four fingers. They take Seewaldt's clothes off and lead him into another room where one studies his hair, eyes, and nose. An orange ceiling light is directed on him and he is given a shot with a small needle. The entities dress him again and beam him back to the field. He runs home in a state of terror and hides under the bed. All conscious memory of the event vanishes until 5 months later, when it returns in a dream. In 1968 he is hypnotically regressed by a Dr. Masson of the University of Alberta. ("Similar Incident at Calgary," Canadian UFO Report 2, no. 8 (1973/1974): 6–7; W. K. Allan, "Crocodile-Skinned Entities at Calgary," Flying Saucer Review 20, no. 6 (April 1975): 25–26; John Magor, Our UFO Visitors, Hancock House, 1977, pp. 165–169; John Brent Musgrave, "The Behavior and Origins of Canadian UFO Occupants and Critters," Canadian UFO Report 4, no. 7 (Summer 1978): 20, 22; Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Sightings, Landings, and Abductions, Methuen, 1979, pp. 83–88; "David Seewaldt," etcetrasetcetras, June 13, 2008; Clark III 280; Randle, 1973, pp. 48–49; Clark IV 320)

1967, Late November — Night. A large, illuminated hemispherical object appears low over the shore of the Baltic Sea near Liepāja, Latvia. Its light is difficult to look at with the naked eye. Later it begins to move and quickly vanishes over the horizon. (Stonehill and Mantle, Russia's USO Secrets, Flying Disk, 2020, p. 171)

1967, November 21 — 4:30 p.m. David V. Marin sees an object that looks like an upside-down candle from his backyard at the edge of Poienarii Burchii, Romania. He watches it for 10 minutes as it hovers at about 90 feet. It starts moving slowly northwest and its tail elongates. (Romania 15–16)

1967, November 22 — David R. Saunders pays Keyhoe a surprise visit in Washington, D.C., and allows him to photocopy the Low memorandum, saying it should be shared with the NICAP board. Roger Harkins hears about the memo about the same time. (UFOs Yes, 179, 193–194; Powell, Keyhoe, 365)

1967, November 22 — MP Patrick Wall asks the UK Secretary of State for Defence Merlyn Rees what exchange of UFO information between the UK, US, and Russian governments is taking place. Rees replies that the ministry is in touch with the Americans but not the Russians. (Good Above, p. 66; Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1967, November 22 — 12:30 p.m. Ladislau Schmidt is sitting in his kitchen in Petrila, Romania, with the outside door open. Suddenly his chickens run inside the house, terrified. Looking up, he sees a silvery disc-shaped object with a dome and antennas hovering at 15,000 feet. It rotates and moves away at high speed to the northwest until it is out of sight. (Hobana and Weverbergh 166–167)

1967, November 22 — 4:25 p.m. US Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. John Rich Butler and copilot Lt. John H. Gould are flying 10 miles off the New Hampshire coastline when they see an object like a white rocket flying with a lateral motion. It first moves upward for 2 seconds at the rear of the aircraft. It reappears and disappears twice, then another object that looks like a light aircraft with an unusual white, flashing light passes above them at a distance of 100–200 feet. Gould has the impression it has swept wings. (NICAP case file; Jan L. Aldrich, "Updated Draft Catalogue of UFOs/USOs Reported by Seagoing Services, NavCat 2,0, 1964–2007," 2015)

1967, November 24 — Canadian Wing Commander D. F. Robertson, after advocating that the RCAF transfer its UFO files to the National Research Council, writes a memo urging the NRC to work with the University of Toronto and the Department of National Defence in investigating Canadian UFO reports. (Good Above, p. 192)

1967, November 27 — David R. Saunders talks with James E. McDonald by telephone, telling him that Condon and Low are biased against the extraterrestrial hypothesis. McDonald suggests the group write an alternative final report in favor of the ETH and suggest the creation of a new organization for the scientific study of UFOs. (Eghigian, After, p. 204)

1967, November 30 — Allen R. Utke, Wisconsin State University–Oshkosh assistant professor of chemistry, writes Gerald Ford in support of House Resolution 946 sponsored by Rep. Louis C. Wyman, remarking that the UFO "phenomenon could be of great importance and concern to this country." (Bill Murphy, "The Swamp Gas Aftermath: Some Notes from the Gerald Ford Files," IUR 33, no. 2 (July 2010): 14)

1967, Late 1967 — The Institute for Aerospace Studies at the University of Toronto, Ontario, begins a UFO study. By October 1968, it is on the verge of collapse for "lack of something to investigate." The study terminates in 1970, but no report on its findings is ever released. (Arthur Bray, "Government Cover-Up Exposed," Canadian UFO Report 3, no. 2 (1975): 20)

1967, December — The Soviet Academy of Sciences' Physics Department, led by Lev Artsimovich, passes a resolution denouncing studying of UFOs as such. The Soviet UFO Study Group is effectively neutered. (Wikipedia, "Felix Ziegel"; Hobana and Weverbergh 36–37)

1967, December — Hynek's article, "The UFO Gap," appears in Playboy magazine, in which he ponders what the Soviet Union might be doing about its own UFO sightings. Along the way, he suggests that the Colorado UFO project analyze UFO cases based on two factors: the strangeness of the event and the credibility of the witnesses. He also encourages the creation of a 24-hour hotline for UFO cases, where police would be dispatched immediately to the scene of a sighting. (J. Allen Hynek, "The UFO Gap," Playboy, December 1967, pp. 144–146, 267–271; O'Connell 223–225; Graff 216–217; Eghigian, After, p. 200)

1967, December 1 — Condon and Low write Keyhoe back separately and do not commit to looking at the NICAP UFO reports, although they praise NICAP's assistance. ("The Colorado Project Report," UFO Investigator 4, no. 4 (Jan./Feb. 1968): 5; Powell, Keyhoe, 363–364)

1967, December 2 — 9:30 p.m. A lieutenant-major in the Romanian army is on duty in the radar station at Băneasa Airfield [now Aurel Vlaicu International Airport] near Bucharest, Romania, when he goes outside to observe an airplane. But the supposed aircraft is a strong, stationary light 30–40° in the north that descends rapidly, ascends again, moves left to right, then descends again. Through binoculars it looks conical or bullet shaped. Dozens of other personnel watch it until it disappears around 11:30 p.m. (Hobana and Weverbergh 176–177)

1967, December 3 — Early a.m. Police Sgt. Herbert Schirmer checks on restless cattle twice at a barn near Ashland, Nebraska. At 2:30 a.m. he is driving on US Highway 6 when he notices some red lights along State Route 63 that might be a stalled truck. He drives a short distance up that road and stops with his headlights shining on the object. The red lights are blinking through the windows of a disc hovering at a tilt 150 feet away and 6–8 feet above the road. It looks made of shiny, polished aluminum. It ascends slowly with a sort of siren sound and emits a flamelike substance from the bottom. His head sticking out the window, Schirmer watches it pass overhead then shoot up out of sight. He drives back to the police station and writes in the log book, "Saw a flying saucer at the junction of highways 6 and 63. Believe it or not!" He is puzzled to see it is 3:00 a.m. He gets a headache and a buzzing noise in his head. He also has a red welt below one of his ears. In the morning, Chief Bill Wlaskin goes to the site and finds a piece of metal that he shows to Colorado project investigators. It turns out to be composed of iron and silicon. On February 13, 1968, Schirmer is hypnotized in Boulder, Colorado, by R. Leo Sprinkle. During the session he remembers that his car engine and radio failed, and a blurry white object came out of the UFO and communicated with him telepathically. He is taken on board by aliens (who first ask him, "Are you the watchman over this place?"). They are humanoids, 4–5 feet tall with long heads, gray-white skin, and cat-like eyes. They wear silver-gray helmets with small antennas on the left side of the ear area. Their uniforms and gloves are the same color. An unusual feature of this case is the emblem of a winged serpent on the left breast of each entity's uniform. The Colorado project comes to a predictable conclusion: "Evaluation of psychological assessment tests, the lack of any evidence, and interviews with the patrolmen left project staff with no confidence that the trooper's reported UFO experience was physically real." Schirmer undergoes hypnosis again on June 8, 1968, and more details emerge. ("Hypnotized Policeman Reports Encounter," UFO Investigator 4, no. 5 (March 1968): 1; Condon, pp. 389–391; Story, pp. 318–319; UFOEv II 530–532; Michael D. 1967, December 5 — 10:30 p.m. Six teenagers returning from a basketball game in Concordia, Kansas, detour to drive by a cemetery. They see a light blinking in the sky ahead, moving in an up-and-down motion to the north. It appears to be flashing different colors or rotating. They follow it for about two miles, hoping for a better look. (Condon, pp. 391–394)

1967, December 8 — 7:40 p.m. Marilyn Wilding, 15, goes out on her front step in Idaho Falls, Idaho, to look for a friend. A light reflecting on the snow on the ground causes her to look up, and she sees a brightly lit circular object "about as big as a car" hovering above the house. The object then tips and rotates so she can see it has a transparent dome on top. Inside the dome are two indistinct figures. The object rotates clockwise, maintaining its inclination. It begins moving away; as it recedes into the distance, its light dims and turns orange. (UFOEv II 459, 482; Northern Ontario UFO Research and Study, "Circular Object with Dome and Two 'Figures' Inside"; Patrick Gross, "Falls, Idaho, December 8, 1967")

1967, December 10 — 1:00 a.m. Thomas F. Monteleone is driving alone on an interstate highway in Maryland when a UFO lands and blocks his way. Two human-like aliens approach him, smiling, and one introduces him as Vadig from the planet Lanulos, the same one described by Woodrow Derenberger. Vadig contacts him two months later in a restaurant, dressed as an ordinary human, then gives him a ride to Lanulos in a UFO. Monteleone later confirms it was a prank, and he comes to regret the publicity and harassment that the hoax generates. (John A. Keel, The Mothman Prophecies, Tor ed., 1991, pp. 193–197; Woodrow W. Derenberger and Harold W. Hubbard, Visitors from Lanulos, Vantage, 1971; Thomas F. Monteleone, "Last Word: The Gullibility Factor," Omni, May 1979), p. 146; Karl T. Pflock, "Anatomy of a UFO Hoax," Fate 33, no. 11 (November 1980): 40–48; Mark Opsasnick, "The Monteleone Contactee Cas and the Route 40 Abduction Corridor," Strange Magazine 15 (Spring 1995): 18–21; Clark III 408; Clark IV 454)

1967, December 10 — 7:30 a.m. Psychologist Adina Păun is walking past the Republic Factories in Bucharest, Romania, when she sees a bluish-green object above the plant at about 45°. It has projecting, tapered spines that are as long as half its diameter. It is higher than rain clouds that sometimes obscure it, but lower than high-altitude, fast-moving white clouds. She continues watching it for 15 minutes as she walks along, but it drifts out of sight when she gets home on Magnet Strada. (Hobana and Weverbergh 180)

1967, December 12 — Levine, David R. Saunders, and Mary Lou Armstrong bring Hynek together with James McDonald to Denver to discuss forming a new group after the project ends, no matter what its conclusion is. The meeting goes fairly well. After Hynek leaves, McDonald brings up the Low memorandum. He has apparently heard about it from Keyhoe. Saunders gives him an official copy. Levine approaches Craig about a separate report, but Craig considers it mutiny. (UFOs Yes, 179–180; Powell, Keyhoe, 365; Eghigian, After, p. 205)

1967, December 12 — The British Embassy in Moscow, Russia, is directed by London to look into British-Russian cooperation in the investigation of UFO reports with Stolyarov's Soviet UFO Study Group. The embassy does not hear back and does not pursue the subject. (Good Above, pp. 234–235)

1967, December 12 — 7:00 p.m. Rita Malley is driving home from work on Route 34 in Newfield, New York, with her young son. She notices a red light behind her. As it draws closer, she sees it is a disc-shaped object as large as a boxcar moving at about 90 feet above the road. Then it passes overhead and causes the car to go off the road into a ditch, and Malley became terrified. Her son in the back seat looks immobilized with his eyes "bugged out." A white beam emanates from the humming object above her and she hears voices in her head saying that her son would not remember this and that a friend of hers has been killed in a car accident. (This turns out to be true.) The car then moves out of the ditch and back onto the road facing the wrong way. She finds that she can control the car again and speeds home. (Lloyd Mallan, "Ithaca's Terrifying Flying Saucer Epidemic," Science and Mechanics 39 (July 1968): 30–33, 96–97; T. M. Wright, "UFO's over Ithaca," Fate 22, no. 2 (February 1969): 44–52)

1967, December 13 — 2:00 a.m. As a man is driving near Edmonton, Alberta, his car lights dim and engine sputters. He pulls to the side of the road and opens the hood, when he notices a dome-shaped object hovering 450 feet away. It is metallic, has lights around the edge, and is about 50 feet high. The object rocks back and forth within a range of 10–15 feet but remains above the road. Over the next hour, the car body heats up and the witness's hair gets hot. His flashlight fails to work. Finally, the object shoots straight up and vanishes in 2–3 seconds. His headlights come back on, but he starts the motor only with difficulty. (Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1981, p. 39)

1967, December 15 — The Silver Bridge over the Ohio River between Point Pleasant, West Virginia, and Gallipolis, Ohio, collapses under the weight of rush-hour traffic, resulting in the deaths of 46 people. (Wikipedia, "Silver Bridge")

1967, December 16 — Philip Klass, who has heard of McDonald's UFO activity in Australia from Low, starts a letter-writing campaign directed at the Office of Naval Research, wanting to know who approved his funding and whether they are funding his forthcoming trip to Europe and Russia. His campaign continues for the next 18 months, bluntly attacking McDonald's integrity and calling him a habitual liar. (Clark III 700; Clark IV 796)

1967, December 19 — In response to a question from MP John Langford-Holt, UK Prime Minister Harold Wilson tells the House of Commons that he has authorized no inquiries into UFOs outside the military implications. (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1967, December 19 — 10:30 p.m. A witness is driving westbound on the east edge of Belleville, Illinois, when he sees a triangular object with a row of square lights on one side. He tries following it and manages to stay roughly beneath it until he loses track of it near Southwestern Illinois College. Because it appears to be heading toward nearby Scott AFB and the witness is familiar with the base, he goes to the control tower there to see if they have tracked anything unusual but they have not. (Marler 204–208, 270)

1967, December 24 — Evening. A couple driving near Tucson, Arizona, see a star-like object fall to earth. Two minutes later, they spot a blob of red light. Their engine and headlights fail. The object approaches the car, passes overhead, then moves away to the south. The engine and lights come back on as it departs. (Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1981, p. 39)

1967, December 24 — 8:30 p.m. A faculty member of the Harvard Medical School and several members of his family in Belmont, Massachusetts, see a silently moving, bright orange light. It is joined by a second light one minute later, and a third about 30 seconds after that. He retrieves some binoculars and watches all three. The first two stop about 15°–25° above the horizon and remain still; the third is still moving. Three or four more lights arrive, some hovering, others moving. Two or three of the hovering lights appear to drop smaller lights that flash as they fall. All are orange in color. After about 20 minutes, they have all disappeared. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 45–48; Richard F. Haines, Project Delta: A Study of Multiple UFO, 1994, p. 44)

1967, December 25 — Gary Lambert, a college student from Omaha, is driving home when he notices a dimly outlined object with a row of lights hovering above an underpass on the highway between Ashland and Lincoln, Nebraska. That night, he has vivid dreams in which he believes he is contacted by beings aboard the UFO. He suspects he may have experienced an actual abduction, though he has no memory or evidence to confirm it. (Center for UFO Studies, HUMCAT Index 1967, p. 156; Condon, pp. 394–395)

1967, December 27 — 9:00 p.m. Two people are traveling along a back road in Wells Township, Bradford County, Pennsylvania, when they see three lights on the horizon. They stop the car as the lights approach. They are attached to a domed disc that is following the road at a height of 300–400 feet. As it approaches to within about 3,000 feet, it makes a banking movement that reveals square, fluorescent panels on the bottom. The dome light in their car turns on spontaneously as the whole bottom of the UFO flashes. The two witnesses get back in their truck and drive on, but the object follows them for a while, then moves off toward Elmira, New York. About 20 minutes later, the parents of one witness experience a power failure in their home on Elmira's south side. (Michael D. Swords, "Unusual Experiences from the Timmerman Files," IUR 27, no. 2 (Summer 2002): 23)

1967, December 29 — 10:35 p.m. C. J. McCready, his wife, and daughter see a round, glowing, sparkling, red object above their home on Briarcliff Road, Atlanta, Georgia. It hovers and drops several trails of a white substance that appear to fall like a liquid as the object moves slowly northwest. It is visible for 5 minutes. (NICAP case file)

1968 — NORAD has control of continental-scale Over the Horizon radars that cover virtually the entire Eurasian continent looking for Russian and Chinese missile launches. (Clark III 807, 811; Clark IV 897–898, 904)

1968 — Presbyterian religious scholar Barry Downing publishes The Bible and Flying Saucers, in which he equates Jesus and angels with space visitors and burning bushes, clouds, and Ezekiel's chariot with spacecraft. Downing also believes that Jesus left earth in a flying saucer to another planet, or perhaps another spatial dimension, and that a flying vehicle operated by intelligent alien beings was responsible for the parting of the Red Sea. (Barry Downing, The Bible and Flying Saucers, Lippincott, 1968; Jerome Clark, "Vimanas Have Landed: Ancient Astronautics in Ufology," IUR 22, no. 3 (Fall 1997): 29; Clark III 109; Clark IV 136)

1968 — Frank F. Rand Jr. completes a nine-month investigation into UFOs for the Lyndon B. Johnson administration. The other members of his team include Arthur Lundahl, Gen. James T. Stewart, Brockway McMillan, "Lee

Brockings" (pseudonym), a Dr. Bleakley and a Dr. Losh, and Clarence "Kelly" Johnson. By 2001, Rand had prepared a book-length manuscript, both about his career and the UFO study. Titled "UFOs...Fact or Fiction," it concludes that "There is no doubt that 'UFOs' exist and are under control. Nor, do I doubt that there may well have been some harmless probes sent to our Earth from other civilizations beyond our solar system." (Michael D. Swords, "Imaging UFOs: Is It Even Possible?" The Big Study, June 16, 2015; Keith Basterfield, "Which Aerospace Company Is Hiding a UAP Black Project?" Unidentified Anomalous Phenomena—Scientific Research, August 28, 2021)

1968 — Science-fiction author Otto Binder publishes Flying Saucers Are Watching Us, which borrows liberally from the theories of engineer Max W. Flindt (cofounder of the Ancient Astronaut Society), who contends that extraterrestrials had conducted genetic engineering on our apelike ancestors to create modern mankind. Binder writes that space people return every few centuries to interbreed with humans to improve the stock. He follows this up with Mankind—Child of the Stars in 1974, coauthored with Flindt. (Otto O. Binder, Flying Saucers Are Watching Us, 1968; Jerome Clark, "Vimanas Have Landed: Ancient Astronautics in Ufology," IUR 22, no. 3 (Fall 1997): 29; Clark III 109; Clark IV 136)

1968 — Italian author Renato Vesco writes Intercettatelli Senza Sparare, making a case that the Germans had developed anti-gravity devices at the end of World War II, testing disc-shaped and tubular craft that were responsible for foo fighters. After the war, these concepts were acquired by the US and Russia, leading directly to functional flying saucers. (Renato Vesco, Intercept—But Don't Shoot, Zebra/Grove, 1971; Marcello Pupilli and Giuseppe Stilo, "Solitudine di un uomo: Le teorie ufologiche e la vita di Renato Vesco (1924–1999)," UFO Forum, no. 18 (August 2001): 33–39; Clark III 109)

1968 — UFO skeptic and electrical engineer Philip J. Klass publishes his first UFO book, UFOs—Identified, in which he theorizes that sightings are caused by ball lightning and anomalous free-floating plasmas. Klass's plasma hypothesis is not well received by anyone on either side of the UFO debate, who note that Klass is using one unverified phenomenon (his hypothetical plasmas) to explain another unverified phenomenon (UFOs). Klass and physicist James E. McDonald engage in a bitter, 18-month-long debate, leveling a variety of charges and accusations at one another. In September 1968, Klass writes to McDonald's superiors at the US Navy (McDonald is formally retired from the Navy, but often works with the Office of Naval Research), questioning how McDonald could spend so much time on UFO research and still fulfill the requirements for his atmospheric research grant. This does not result in McDonald losing ONR funding, but it does draw some criticism of Klass from members of the UFO community. (Wikipedia, "Philip J. Klass"; Philip J. Klass, UFOs—Identified, Random House, 1968; Clark III 659; Clark IV 734–735)

1968 — Vladimir Godic and Crystal Walsh found UFO Research South Australia, a group committed to use scientific methodology in investigation and research. (Keith Basterfield, Vladimir Godic, and Pony Godic, "Australian Ufology: A Review," JUFOS 2 (1990): 25)

1968 — An Australian nuclear physicist attached to the Directorate of Scientific and Technical Intelligence (part of the Joint Intelligence Bureau) cooperates with other defense intelligence scientists to form a "rapid intervention team" to investigate UFO incidents involving physical evidence. The effort lasts until a wave of UFO reports takes place in Western Australia and he is denied further access to RAAF files. (Bill Chalker, "The UFO Connection: Addendum," Flying Saucer Review 31, no. 5 (July 1986): 20; Good Above, p. 166)

1968 — The Canadian National Research Council, from its base at the Herzberg Institute of Astrophysics in Ottawa, Ontario, takes over the collection of UFO reports from the Department of National Defence. It partners with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to do the actual investigations. The NRC's primary interest is in tracking meteors and meteorite falls. Non-meteoric sightings are kept in a separate file but transferred to the Public Archives of Canada [now Library and Archives of Canada] at the end of every year. (Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Canada, Signet, 1981, p. 175; Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 9–10)

1968 — Fabio Zerpa founds the Organizacion Nacional Investigadora de Fénomenos Espaciales in Buenos Aires, Argentina. It publishes a monthly magazine, Cuarta Dimension. (Margaret Sachs, The UFO Encyclopedia, Putnam, 1980, p. 233)

1968 — Early morning. The captain and another seaman of the Swiss-flag cargo ship Grichuna, traveling south through the Atlantic Ocean off Palm Beach, Florida, notice an underwater object with 10–15 lights at a depth of 33–50 feet some 100–130 feet from the ship on its landward side. It is moving twice as fast as the ship and crosses its bow at a 30° angle. ("Sea Captain Recalls 1968 USO Sighting," UFO Casebook, January 26, 2007; Dolan, USO1, 324–325)

1968 (or 1969) — 9:00 p.m. A Polish Air Force pilot takes off from Warsaw Modlin Airport, Poland, in a MiG-21 for a short, routine mission. Soon he sees two identical white discs, about 6–10 feet in diameter, moving at the same altitude and speed as his MiG. His wingman also sees them. He approaches to within 50 feet of them. During the

5-minute encounter, radio contact with the controller is lost and contact between the two pilots deteriorates. Four UFOs follow the two MiGs for another 3–6 miles, then they accelerate and overtake them, disappearing ahead. (Poland 65)

Early 1968 — Four artillerymen stationed at the naval garrison at Lüda [now Dalian], Liaoning, China, see a luminous, gold, oval-shaped object that leaves a thin trail in the air. It climbs steeply at high speed and disappears. When it begins to climb, all communications and radar systems fail, nearly causing an accident in the fleet. The naval patrol goes on alert, and the fleet commander orders his men to prepare for combat. After 30 minutes, comms and radar return to normal. A two-man coast guard patrol allegedly sees the UFO land on the south coast and fires at it with automatic weapons. (Wendelle Stevens and Paul Dong, UFOs over Modern China, UFO Photo Archive, 1983, pp. 48–49)

Early 1968 — Early evening. Valentina Flores discovers a strange net of plastic covering the corral where she keeps her sheep in the small village of Otoco, near Uyuni, Bolivia. Inside is a 4-foot-tall humanoid figure, dressed in a bulky spacesuit, killing her sheep with a hooked instrument and dumping their entrails into a bag. She tries to stop it by throwing stones. The figure then walks over to a box-like instrument, turns a wheel, and the netting is sucked into the box. Flores approaches the entity, which throws the instrument at her, cutting her arms, although it returns to its hands. The humanoid gathers up the box and the bag and disappears from sight. Police count 34 dead sheep, each missing a portion of its digestive organs. (Oscar A. Galíndez, "Violent Humanoid Encountered in Bolivia," Flying Saucer Review 16, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1970): 15–17; Clark III 138–139; Clark IV 166)

1968, January — John Harney and Alan W. Sharp launch a new publication, Merseyside UFO Bulletin (MUFOB), in Liverpool, England, as an independent publication from the openly skeptical newsletter begun by the Merseyside UFO Research Group. John Rimmer assumes the post of associate editor with the third issue. (Merseyside UFO Bulletin 1, No. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1968); Clark III 706; "History of Magonia," Magonia Archive; Clark IV 772)

1968, January 2 — 4:30 p.m. Errol Smythe [Earl Smith?], 17, and Tommy Banks, 15, of Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, Canada, are touring the lower slopes of Grey Mountain on the outskirts of town in their Skidoo snowmobiles. It starts to get dark and they both have their lights on. At the top of the hill they see a bright moving light. Smythe looks back, thinking the light must be coming from the snowmobile of his friend, Tommy. But there above the trees is a bright egg-shaped object with luminous bands of red and orange-yellow. In the center these bands seem to merge and pulsate. The boys feel heat from the object and Tommy has the impression his snowmobile has slowed down. Flying silently and evidently interested in what the boys are doing, the object remains in sight for several seconds before disappearing behind the trees. Unknown to the pair, a similar object was seen over Atlin Lake some 100 miles away the previous evening. (Library and Archives Canada, "Record Group: Royal Canadian Mounted Police," reports for Whitehorse, January 2, 1968; John Magor, "Strange Sights in Yukon Sky," Canadian UFO Report 1, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1969): 1–3)

1968, January 8 — Around 11:55 p.m. Mrs. Robert LeChance and Gertrude Gifford are watching TV in Jackson Township, New Jersey, when their TV sets fade out and the lights dim. They see an orange, bowl-shaped object moving up and down behind the tree line. ("French General, Scientists, Report UFOs," UFO Investigator 4, no. 6 (May/June 1968): 3)

1968, January 15 — The USAF Air Defense Command is renamed the Aerospace Defense Command. (Wikipedia, "Aerospace Defense Command")

1968, January 15 — 7:25 a.m. Two farmers driving a truck near Three Hills, Alberta, see an object that looks "like a stunted dill pickle," greenish-blue in color and silent. Another truck stops and they point out the object to the others, who say it looks like a flying saucer. They contact the Calgary Airport, but officials there have had no reports. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 60–62, 63–64)

1968, January 15 — 9:00 p.m. Janice, Denise, and Lori Achzehner are playing records in Villa Park, Illinois, when their father's "Saucer Seeker" UFO detector goes off. They run outside and see a large orange light hovering near the house. For 45 minutes they watch as a series of 6 objects fly in and out of the area. Through binoculars they can see that the objects are triangular or cone-shaped, no more than a mile away, and 500–1,500 feet high. As they watch, one of the objects approaches a commercial airliner, makes a 180° turn without slowing, then follows the aircraft until they are out of sight. ("Use of Detectors in Spotting UFO," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1968, p. 7)

1968, January 19 — McDonald calls Low on the phone and expresses his concerns about the project. The two reach an impasse in a heated conversation. Low tells McDonald to wait until the report comes out before lodging any criticisms. (UFOs Yes, 185; Swords 328; Clark III 1197; Eghigian, After, p. 206; Clark IV 1371)

1968, January 20 — 6:00 p.m. Police deputies Bias Fortes and Pinheiro Chagas are driving 9 miles outside of Brasília, Brazil, when they see a triangular UFO. They stop and get out to observe it better and watch it hover for 5 minutes. It accelerates suddenly and speeds to the southwest. ("First Sightings of 1968 in Brazil," APRO Bulletin, Jan./Feb. 1968, p. 3)

1968, January 20 — 11:00 p.m. Robert Ballard and his wife Lynn are visiting his parents near Vermillion, South Dakota. Robert goes outside to warm up his car for the trip home. He sees a large object and calls to his father to come outside. They watch a big ball of red and orange fire to the east. At first they think it is the moon and go inside, but as Robert and Lynn are leaving, the object gives off a flash, and one of the dogs begins barking vigorously. They drive toward the object, which seems to be flickering in a field. It seems to be spinning and is 20 feet above the ground, sometimes less. When Ballard turns onto State Highway 50, the UFO, about 30 feet in diameter, starts following them. He accelerates to 60 mph and the object jumps to just behind their car. At one point it is hovering only 3 feet above an intersection. It keeps following them at telephone height, even though Ballard speeds up to 110 mph. After another car goes by them, the object speeds up and heads straight toward them from behind. Soon it rises and disappears to the east. ("New Close-Ups, Pacings," UFO Investigator 4, no. 5 (March 1968): 3; Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, pp. 37–38)

1968, January 21 — A fire breaks out in the navigator's compartment of a USAF B-52 near Thule Air Base, Greenland. The bomber crashes 7 miles from the air base, causing the non-nuclear explosives aboard to detonate and rupturing and dispersing its nuclear payload of four hydrogen bombs carried on an ongoing (since 1960) Operation Chrome Dome alert mission to deter a Soviet nuclear first strike. The recovery and decontamination effort is complicated by Greenland's harsh weather. Contaminated ice and debris are buried at the Savannah River plant in South Carolina. Bomb fragments are recycled by Pantex, in Amarillo, Texas. The incident causes outrage and protests in Denmark. USAF Strategic Air Command Chrome Dome operations are discontinued immediately after the accident, which highlights the safety and political risks of the missions. Safety procedures are reviewed and more stable explosives are developed for use in nuclear weapons. A BBC News report in 2008 seems to confirm through declassified documents and interviews with those involved that one nuclear bomb was lost. However, the Danish Institute for International Studies concludes in August 2009 that there is no missing bomb and that the US underwater operation was a search for the uranium-235 of the fissile core of a secondary, a small object one half meter long. For the first time, the report is able to present an estimate of the amount of plutonium contained in the pits of the primaries. (Wikipedia, "1968 Thule Air Base B-52 crash"; Wikipedia, "Operation Chrome Dome")

1968, January 21 — David R. Saunders and Levine convince others on the UFO project that Condon and Low should not be confronted with the Low memorandum through the media, but that "it should be made public from inside the project." (Eghigian, After, p. 206)

1968, January 22 — In response to a question by MP Teddy Taylor, UK Secretary of State for Defence Merlyn Rees writes that the total number of reports for 1967 "reflects a wave of public interest in UFOs, reaching a peak toward the end of the year," and that unexplained sightings (only 46 out of 362) are due to lack of sufficient information. (Good Above, p. 66; Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1968, January 26 — A-12 pilot Jack Weeks is dispatched from Kadena Air Base in Okinawa, Japan, on a sortie to locate the USS Pueblo, which has been captured by North Korean forces on January 23. His photographs pinpoint the Pueblo's exact location in the harbor of Changjahwan Bay near Wonsan, North Korea. Instead of war plans, the US proceeds with negotiations for the return of the crew. (Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 271–274)

1968, January 31 — McDonald sends Low a 7-page, single-spaced letter, citing Condon's negative statements, his preoccupation with crackpot elements, Condon's failure to conduct any investigations himself, the lack of communication between Low and Condon and the active investigators, and the failure of the project to take seriously any assertions of cover-up. He mentions Low's memorandum, saying "I am rather puzzled by the viewpoints expressed there." He concludes: "I am not opposed to negative findings—on UFOs or other scientific questions; what bothers me is that it appears that these negative findings were being adumbrated as early as January 1966, and perhaps even earlier." He sends a copy to the project's open files. (UFOs Yes, 185–187; Clark III 1197; Eghigian, After, p. 206; Clark IV 1371)

1968, January 31 — Morning. At Lajes Air Base on Terceira in the Azores, a Portuguese military watchman, Serafim Vieira Sebastião, notices a strange interference on his transistor radio. Looking around, he sees an oval metallic object surmounted by a transparent tower on top of which is a small balustrade on which two beings are leaning. The silhouettes of two more beings are visible in the tower. The object is hovering above a munitions dump. Serafim phones one of the other sentries then shines his flashlight on the machine. As he does so, the men on the tower see him. The object emits a cloud of gaseous dust that overpowers him. When his colleague finds him a few minutes later, the object has vanished. ("OVNI com quatro seres ataca guarda açoriano," Insólito, no. 13 (June 1976); Nuno Alves, "O Caso Ilha Terceira (31 de Janeiro de 1968) Serafim Vieira Sebastião," UFO Portugal, October 28, 2017)

1968, February — Canada's National Research Council agrees to become the official government archive for existing and future UFO reports. The files are kept in an office of the Council's Upper Atmosphere Section (Astrophysics Branch) in Ottawa, Ontario. But the NRC does not investigate reports. (Gregory M. Kanon, "UFOs and the Canadian Government," Canadian UFO Report 3, no. 7 (Spring 1976): 18; Good Above, p. 192)

1968, February — Felix Ziegel, Soviet cosmologist and assistant professor at the Moscow Aviation Institute, Russia, writes an article on UFOs for Soviet Life with reports supplied by Novosti. He mentions four UFO reports and concludes that they could be extraterrestrial in origin. He thinks the 1908 Tunguska event is a remarkable UFO case and reveals that the USSR established a "UFO Section of the All-Union Cosmonautics Committee" in October 1967. Ziegel soon afterwards receives a letter from Edward Condon, the director of the University of Colorado UFO Project, suggesting that the Soviet and the American groups should cooperate, starting with an information exchange. Ziegel and 12 other members of his group sign a letter requesting the Soviet government to create a state-sponsored organization that would coordinate all the UFO research in the country. Next month he receives an official negative response. (Wikipedia, "Felix Ziegel"; Felix Ziegel, "Unidentified Flying Objects," Soviet Life, no. 137 (February 1968): 27–29; Central Intelligence Agency, "Nothing But the Facts on UFOs, or Which Novosti Writer Do You Read?" April 9, 1968)

1968, February — Swiss author Erich von Däniken writes Erinnerungen an die Zukunft, translated into English as Chariots of the Gods?, the first of several books setting out the "ancient astronaut" hypothesis in which ancient gods are space visitors, Homo sapiens was created by cross-breeding or genetic engineering, nuclear wars were fought in the ancient world, and monuments were built by levitation. He will continue writing and expanding on his views through 2021. (Erich von Däniken, Chariots of the Gods? Bantam, 1973; Wikipedia, "Chariots of the Gods?"; Barry Thiering and Edgar W. 1968, February 4 — 7:20 p.m. About 200 residents of Redlands, California, see or hear a huge, low-flying, disc-shaped object as it passes overhead. The UFO is about 50 feet in diameter, with seven lights on its base emitting bright orange flame. Some 8–10 other lights on its rim alternate red and green, giving the impression that the object is rotating. A minister recording his sermon captures a high-pitched, modulated, whining sound from the UFO on tape. The UFO apparently descends just west of Columbia Street and north of Colton Avenue, then proceeds to the northwest for about a mile at an altitude of 300 feet. Coming to a stop, it hovers briefly, jerks forward, hovers again, then shoots straight up in a burst of speed. The object is not detected on radar at Norton AFB [now closed] near San Bernardino or March AFB [now March Air Reserve Base] in Riverside County. An investigation is conducted for APRO by four University of Redlands faculty: Philip Seff (geology), Judson Sanderson (math), Reinhold Krantz (math), and John Brownfield (art). They conclude that the object is not attributable to any known phenomenon or aircraft, but that the recorded sound comes from an emergency vehicle. 1968, February 5 — McDonald's letter arrives in Boulder, Colorado. Low is out of town and the staff read it first. Low does not see it until 4:00 p.m. the following day when Mary Lou Armstrong shows it to him. He explodes, saying whoever gave the memo to McDonald should be fired. Condon is also furious. (UFOs Yes, 188; Clark III 1197; Powell, Keyhoe, 365–366; Eghigian, After, p. 206; Clark IV 1371)

1968, February 7 — Low summons David R. Saunders to Condon's office, asking him if he knew McDonald had a copy of the memo. Saunders said yes, and he didn't think he needed to alert anyone, since McDonald is a friend of the project. Condon says, "For an act like that, you deserve to be ruined professionally!" Saunders avoids admitting he was responsible (indirectly) for McDonald's having the memo. When Norm Levine arrives, Saunders is ordered to leave. Levine tells him the memo's release is a group effort. Condon tells Levine not to discuss this meeting or communicate further with McDonald. Levine says he can't do that, Condon tells him he is no longer useful, and Levine walks out. Condon and Low meet with other staff members the rest of the day. (UFOs Yes, 188–192; Clark III 1197; Powell, Keyhoe, 366–369; Eghigian, After, p. 206; Clark IV 1371)

1968, February 8 — Condon and Low meet with Thurston Manning and Stuart W. Cook from the University of Colorado's Psychology Department. Condon tells Mary Lou Armstrong that David R. Saunders and Norm Levine will be fired. Low types the letters himself and Condon signs them. Condon also writes a letter to Hynek asking him to provide 10–15 of the best cases from his files. (UFOs Yes, 192–193; Center for UFO Studies, [Hynek correspondence], p. 10)

1968, February 9 — Condon and Low meet with Craig, who admits knowing about the memo and says he was concerned about it. He leaves the meeting "deeply concerned" about the project's viability. Roger Harkins writes up the events at the project for the Boulder Daily Camera; when he interviews Condon, he realizes that Condon "honestly didn't know anything about that memo until a couple of days ago." Condon admits, in contrast to his statements earlier, that David R. Saunders and Levine were fired for insubordination, not incompetence. (UFOs Yes, 194–195)

1968, February 11 — 7:00 p.m. An oval, domed object passes low over a car near the edge of Hawkins Pond in Johnston, Rhode Island. It has pulsating white and pinkish-red lights around the rim, resembling a flashing theater marquee. (Raymond E. Fowler, UFOs: Interplanetary Visitors, Exposition, 1974, p. 351)

1968, February 12 —Witnesses see an object fall near a village said to be six hours from Orocué, Colombia, and find a large, lightweight piece of metal. The debris is put on board an airplane and flown to the US Embassy in Bogotá, where it is identified as being part of the Apollo 5 mission. ("Remains of Crashed UFO in Colombia," APRO Bulletin, Mar./Apr. 1968, p. 1; "Crashed UFO Investigation Closed," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1969, p. 8)

1968, February 13 — 4:00 a.m. Robert Union, a former FAA air traffic controller, and his wife watch a glowing white elliptical object that follows their car at an altitude of 2,000–5,000 feet near Missoula, Montana. The object moves back and forth across the road, makes sharp turns and unusual maneuvers, and finally disappears abruptly. (UFOEv II 161)

1968, February 13 — R. Leo Sprinkle and Herbert Schirmer meet in Boulder with Colorado project investigators. Sprinkle puts Schirmer under hypnosis to elicit further details about his missing time episode of December 3, 1967. (Clark III 1034–1035; Clark IV 1149–1150)

1968, February 14 — Hynek replies to Condon, saying that he will send him some of his best cases over the next few weeks, but requests that in return they be given a "thorough investigation." He even offers to go to Wright-Patterson AFB and send him copies of good Blue Book cases, since Quintanilla has scrupulously been sending him copies of only those he asks for. (Center for UFO Studies, [Hynek correspondence], pp. 11–12)

1968, February 14 — MITRE Corporation's F. Robert Naka, newly appointed director of a classified US Air Force study to improve the surveillance of objects in space, tells Robert Low that, contrary to what NORAD had briefed him on in 1967, NORAD radars can track UFOS "coming in from outer space" and does not deny that the agency has occasionally tracked them. (Clark III 804; Clark IV 895)

1968, February 16 — Novosti Science Commentator Villen Lyustiberg writes "Flying Saucers? They're a Myth" in the newspaper Moskovskij Komsomolets. Novosti releases an English translation on March 12. It explains US reports as either misobservations or misreporting by the media. (Central Intelligence Agency, "Nothing But the Facts on UFOs, or Which Novosti Writer Do You Read?" April 9, 1968)

1968, February 18 — 12:00 midnight. Teenagers Richard Frombach, Boone Powers, and Chris Beachner are parked next to a pond in a gravel pit near Vashon, Washington, when they notice a glowing oval object resting on a hill to the east. They drive into town to pick up an additional witness, Joseph Frabush, and return to the area, park on the main road, and walk into the pond area. The object has moved to the east. Frabush thinks it is metallic and about 30 feet long. They drive back into town for more witnesses, but when they return the light is gone and the 100-foot pond is completely frozen over. Temperatures in the area have been above freezing for several days. Small puddles and mud patches surrounding the pond are not frozen at all. The pond ice is dry, even though it has been raining all night. Investigators find that the ice is 3 inches thick in some spots, composed of 2–5 layers, and riddled with bubbles filled with air and dirt. ("Freezing UFO 'Seen' on Pond," Vancouver (Wash.) Columbian, February 19, 1968, p. 1; "Who Put the Chill on a Vashon Island Gravel Pit?" 1968, February 19 — 11:55 a.m. Martha Heggs is in her farmhouse kitchen about 10 miles west of Bengough, Saskatchewan. She hears a high-pitched whine that has such a penetrating intensity it is similar to a mild electric shock, causing a tingling sensation throughout her body. Looking out, she sees an object 300 feet away circling around a pole with an electric transformer on it. The object is shaped like two saucers edge-to-edge, surmounted by a dome with 6–7 ports, rounded at the top and extending straight down to the base of the dome. These ports are indented and white in color, resembling frosted glass. The saucers are about 8 feet wide and the dome about 4 feet wide. The body of the object looks like dull aluminum. There is a smaller, vented structure on top of the dome and an antenna on top of that. When the object first appears, a dog is seen cowering and lying in the snow, trying to cover its ears with its paws. Sixteen head of cattle, loose in the farmyard, bolt when the object moves into the area. They enter the cattle sheds and do not emerge until at least 30 minutes after the object disappears. The object moves about the farmyard, sometimes hovering, its altitude ranging from 3 feet to 20 feet. After 20 minutes, still 9–12 feet above the ground, the object leaves the farm through a windbreak and moves north until lost to view. ("French General, Scientists, Report UFOs," UFO Investigator 4, no. 6 (May/June 1968): 3; Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., UFOs: A New Look, NICAP, 1969, Section IV, pp. 11–12; UFOEv II 37–38)

1968, February 20 — The US Embassy in Moscow sends an unclassified airgram to the US Department of State drawing attention to Felix Ziegel's article in the February 1968 issue of Soviet Life, which refers to the Soviet UFO Study Group and concludes that international cooperation in studying UFOs is vital. (Felix Ziegel, "Unidentified Flying Objects," Soviet Life, no. 137 (February 1968): 27–29; Good Above, pp. 235, 473–474)

1968, February 22 — Mary Lou Armstrong tells Condon that the staff has no confidence in Low as project coordinator, that Low has no interest in UFO sightings or reports, and that the staff has come to a radically different conclusion. (UFOs Yes, 199; Eghigian, After, p. 206)

1968, February 23 — Hynek writes another letter to Condon, saying that he has reconsidered his decision to send him his best cases, as he thinks the Colorado project will be unable to investigate them adequately before its contractual period is up. He does send him a catalog of recent Blue Book cases and offers to help him obtain from Wright-Patterson any of the unidentified or insufficient evidence cases that he wants to see. (Center for UFO Studies, [Hynek correspondence], pp. 14–17)

1968, February 24 — Armstrong resigns from the Colorado project, citing an "almost unanimous lack of confidence" among senior staffers in Low's competence. She also complains that Low has been less than honest about the radical difference between staff views of UFOs and the views Low and Condon are expressing. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 239–241, 274–282; Clark III 698, 1197; Clark IV 795, 1371)

1968, February 27 — 4:30 a.m. A brilliant flood of light from her window abruptly awakens Grace L. Bernor in Templeton, Massachusetts. She becomes paralyzed, her face is immobile, and her hands and feet ache. The light goes on and off about 7–8 times, ending around 5:00 a.m. She slowly recovers over the next few days. (Michael D. Swords, "A Trick of the Light," IUR 31, no. 2 (June 2007): 11)

1968, February 27 — 6:55 p.m. Truck driver Andrew Perry is driving from Bideford to Cullompton, Devon, England, when he sees a bright light appear at the crest of a hill. As he gets closer, he sees the light is coming from a mushroom-shaped object. As he reaches about 900 feet away from the object, he stops the truck and climbs to the top of the cab to get a better view. He sees about 4–5 figures about 4 feet tall spread out around the object. Suddenly they scramble toward the UFO and disappear inside. The object emits a high-pitched whirring sound that causes his truck to vibrate. Perry gets upset and climbs back into the truck, driving it fast down the road. Meanwhile, the UFO has risen about 200 feet into the air and is passing above his truck, making a noise so loud he can't hear the engine running. Suddenly the truck engine cuts out. A few seconds later, the noise stops and Perry sees the UFO moving away in the distance. He drives to the nearest police station to report the incident. (UFOFiles2, pp. 126–127)

1968, February 28 — Condon has a slight heart attack. (Center for UFO Studies, [Hynek correspondence], p. 19)

1968, February 29 — Chairman of the Soviet Astronomical Services Evald Rudolfovich Mustel, president of the All-Union Astronomical and Geodetic Society D. Martynov, and Secretary of the National Committee of Soviet Physicists V. A. Leshkovtsev write an article in Pravda claiming that there have been no unexplainable sightings of UFOs on Russian soil. UFOs are "anti-Soviet products of decadent capitalistic warmongering." From this point on, pro-UFO articles are forbidden by state censorship, although some members of the disbanded UFO Study Group write letters to Pravda insisting that UFO identification is essential for defense. Academician A. Shchukin responds, saying that the Academy of Sciences is already doing that. (Evald Rudolfovich Mustel, D. Martynov, and V. A. Leshkovtsev, ["Flying Saucers Again?"], Pravda, February 29, 1968; Good Above, pp. 235–236; Mikhail Gershtein, "A Short History of UFO Research in the Former Soviet Union," UAP Check, July 6, 2024)

1968, March — EG&G technician Thornton D. Barnes arrives in Area 51 in Nevada to reverse-engineer the Soviet MiG-21 acquired through defecting Iraqi fighter pilot Munir Redfa. Soviet-built radar systems acquired in the Middle East are installed around Groom Lake (to aid stealth testing of the SR-71), and Barnes is also assigned to evaluate them as well as the ECM capabilities of the MiG. (Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 290–293)

1968, March 1 — Boulder, Colorado, police arrest Colorado project officer Jim Wadsworth for possession of marijuana. He pleads no contest and resigns. (UFOs Yes, 200)

1968, March 1 — An Over the Horizon Forward Scatter Radar System 440L/Program 673A is turned over to NORAD's Cheyenne Mountain facility in Colorado by Air Force Intelligence. It has been previously used to collect intelligence on Soviet missile launches since it was built in 1960–1962. It soon picks up unidentified radar returns. (Clark III 811; Clark IV 904)

1968, March 2 — A magnetic monitoring device with a film camera set up by the Queensland Flying Saucer Research Bureau at Horseshoe Lagoon, Tully, Queensland, is triggered around the time that an airliner flying at 6,000 feet from Cairns to Iron Range is paced by a UFO. About 50 feet of film is exposed. On March 4, another 16 feet is exposed during a local UFO sighting. The film is apparently intercepted by the RAAF after Victor Mele, the owner of the film, sends it to a Kodak processing facility in Melbourne, Victoria. (Good Above, pp. 170–172)

1968, March 3 — 8:30 p.m. Several witnesses are traveling east on Knud Drive in Columbia, Tennessee, when they notice a large rectangular object approaching them silently from behind. When they stop the car, the object is directly overhead and moving east. It has hundreds of small, dimly lit points of light in 5–6 rows on its base. Witness Norman E. Bryant thinks it is 1,000 feet long, 250 feet wide, and flying at an altitude of 2,000 feet. It passes them in a matter of seconds. ("Out of the Past," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 4, no. 5 (Oct./Nov. 1983): 4–6)

1968, March 4 — 6:15 p.m. A cigar-shaped object approaches a car driven by Nicholas Sgouris in West Seneca, New York, and passes in front of it. The object is 50–60 feet long with blinking yellow lights. The witness tries to speed up, but the accelerator does not respond. The object disappears instantly. ("French General, Scientists, Report UFOs," UFO Investigator 4, no. 6 (May/June 1968): 3; Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1981, p. 40)

1968, March 4 — 9:00 p.m. A man is driving his new Triumph Spitfire up a country lane near Glossop, Derbyshire, England, when two golden objects shoot over the top of his car, killing his headlights, radio, and engine. Moments after the objects pass to the north, the headlights come back on, but the radio still fails. He is able to restart his car engine after the lights come on. A BUFORA investigator takes the radio to his workplace at British Aerospace and finds that two key transistors have burned out, seemingly due to a power surge. Once the transistors are replaced, the radio works again. (Jenny Randles, "Flappy Valley, Part 4," Fortean Times 328 (July 2015): 30)

1968, March 8 — The first SR-71s arrive at Kadena Air Base, Okinawa, Japan, to replace the Oxcart A-12s. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed SR-71 Blackbird")

1968, March 10 — 6:00 p.m. Valentina Flores is bringing in her llamas on her farm between Opoco and Uyuni, Bolivia, when she discovers that her sheep pen is covered with a net made of some plastic-like material, and that inside the pen is a helmeted being, 3.5 ft tall, who is engaged in killing her sheep using a tubular instrument with a hook on the end. Flores throws stones at the being, whereupon he walks over to an instrument resembling a radio and, moving a wheel on it, quickly absorbs all the netting. The woman approaches the pen with a cudgel, upon which the being throws its instrument at her several times; it returns to him like a boomerang, after it inflicts superficial cuts on her arms. The entity picks up the machine, which has absorbed the net as well as a bag containing sheep entrails, and puts them into a rucksack on his back. Two legs emerge from the rucksack and extend down to the ground, at which time the entity rises straight up into the air with an extraordinary sound and vanishes. 34 sheep are found dead; from every one, "certain small portions of the digestive organs were missing." (Oscar A. Galíndez, "Violent Humanoid Encountered in Bolivia," Flying Saucer Review 16, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1970): 15–16; Patrick Gross, URECAT, November 9, 2007; Clark III 138–139)

1968, March 10 — 9:00 p.m. A dark, oval-shaped object with a searchlight in the front wobbles and moves like a "boat riding over the waves" above Pawtucket, Rhode Island. It passes over the local electric power substation and flies off, following the power lines. (Raymond E. Fowler, UFOs: Interplanetary Visitors, Exposition, 1974, p. 351)

1968, March 11 — 9:30 p.m. Steven Trimper and his wife are driving near the old Municipal Home in Marshalltown, Nova Scotia, on their way to Digby when they spot an oval-shaped object, roughly the size of a helicopter, displaying red, blue, and white lights. Along with Mrs. Claude O'Neill, they watch it hover above the water near the Bay End Motel for a few minutes before it descends and vanishes. ("UFOs Invade Maritimes," Saucers, Space, and Science, no. 52 (Summer 1968): 13)

1968, March 12 — James E. McDonald presents a paper, "UFOs: An International Scientific Problem," at an astronautics symposium of the Canadian Aeronautics and Space Institute, analyzing in depth Philip Klass's plasma theory of UFOs and rejecting it as "superficial." (James E. McDonald, "UFOs: An International Scientific Problem," March 12, 1968; Story, p. 414)

1968, March 16? — Early morning. The crew of a US Navy ship in the East China Sea several hours out of Okinawa, Japan, encounter a huge underwater light approaching and passing in front of the ship toward the southwest. It appears to be revolving. After it disappears on the horizon, a light appears high above the surface of the water at the point where the submerged object vanished and approaches the ship, moving from horizon to horizon in about 10 seconds. ("NICAP Studies Underwater UFO Case," UFO Investigator, January 1971, p. 3; "NICAP Studies Underwater UFO Case," UFO Investigator, February 1971, p. 3; "Underwater UFO Case Still Unverified," UFO Investigator, May 1971, p. 1; Dolan, USO1, 315–316)

1968, March 17 — 12:30 a.m. The director of the University of Utah's ecological and epidemiological contact with Dugway Proving Ground in Utah, a Dr. Bode, phones Keith Smart, the chief of the ecology and epidemiology branch at Dugway to report that 3,000 sheep are dead in the Skull Valley area. The initial report of the incident comes to Bode from the manager of a Skull Valley livestock company. The sheep had been grazing in an area about 27 miles from the proving ground. Total sheep deaths of 6,000–6,400 are reported over the next several days. The popular explanation blames Army testing of chemical weapons for the incident, though alternative explanations are also offered. A report, commissioned by Air Force Press Officer Jesse Stay and first made public in 1998, is the first documented admission from the Army that a nerve agent had killed the sheep at Skull Valley. At least three operations involving nerve agents took place on March 13: the test firing of a chemical artillery shell, the burning of 160 gallons of nerve agent in an open-air pit, and a jet aircraft that sprayed nerve agent in a target area 27 miles west of Skull Valley. (Wikipedia, "Dugway sheep incident"; Lorraine Boissoneault, "How the Death of 6,000 Sheep Spurred the American Debate on Chemical Weapons," Smithsonian, April 9, 2018)

1968, March 19 — 8:30 p.m. 12-year-old Gregory L. Wells is walking toward the trailer home of his parents in Beallsville, Ohio, when he sees an oval-shaped, bright red object hovering above some nearby trees and illuminating the road. It has a band of dimmer red lights around its midsection. Suddenly a big tube emerges from the object and moves around until it is pointed at him. A light beam shoots out and hits the upper part of his arm, knocking him down. His jacket catches fire and he rolls around, screaming with fright. His mother and grandmother come out to help, and they both see the red UFO, which just fades away after 10 minutes. The boy is taken to a hospital and treated for second-degree burns. His scars are still visible three months later. ("Boy Burned by UAO in Ohio," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1968, pp. 1, 3; James E. McDonald, "Statement on Unidentified Flying Objects," in Symposium on Unidentified Flying Objects, Hearings, US House Committee on Science and Astronautics, 90th Cong., 2nd Sess., July 29, 1968, p. 79; Stringfield, Situation Red, Fawcett Crest, 1977, pp. 197–198)

1968, March 20 — 10:30 p.m. A young couple strolling on the beach at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, see a dark red object above the ocean. It has a blue band with evenly spaced, pulsating green lights. They estimate it is almost one mile offshore and about 200 feet in diameter. It slowly descends at a 45° angle into the water, which lights up in a brilliant red glow. (Dolan, USO1, 316–317)

1968, March 25 — 8:15 p.m. Villagers in Batulechaur, Lamachaur, Nepal, hear a deafening sound like thunder as a bright object hurtles downward and lands in a field belonging to Kul Timilsina, who finds a sheet of black metal about 6 feet by 4 feet and brings it home. The US Embassy in Kathmandu hears about the supposed spacecraft part and arranges for it to be recovered, packed in a crate, and flown to the United States under the auspices of Project Moon Dust in March 1972. There are similar sightings of objects falling from the sky in Ladakh, Sikkim, and Bhutan between February 19 and March 25, 1968. (Central Intelligence Agency, "Sightings of Unidentified Flying Objects in Ladakh, Nepal, Sikkim, and Bhutan"; Kevin D. Randle, Project Moon Dust, Harper, 1998, pp. 154–155; "UFO over Pokhara," Nepali Times, December 7, 2024)

1968, March 26 — McDonald addresses the question, "Are UFOs Extraterrestrial Surveillance Craft?" in a talk at the Los Angeles Chapter of the American Institute for Aeronautics and Astronautics. (James E. McDonald, "Are UFOs Extraterrestrial Surveillance Craft?" March 26, 1968; Story, p. 414)

1968, March 29 — 4:00 p.m. Meteorologist Ştefan Bălaşa and a group of skiers watch a shiny object 75°–80° in the sky near the weather station on Semenic Mountain, Romania. Through binoculars it appears cone-shaped. Bălaşa continues to watch it until 6:40 p.m. when it begins to dim and move slowly to the east-northeast. The same or similar object appears in the same area on the evening of March 30. (Romania 17–18)

1968, March 29 — 6:50 p.m. Spectators at a football match in Tismana, Romania, see a stationary, bright-blue-green conical object that changes its color to red and disappears by 7:30 p.m. (Hobana and Weverbergh 237–238; Romania 18)

1968, March 29 — 7:30 p.m. Two students and two teachers in Târgu-Jiu, Romania, see a whitish-blue isosceles triangle in the southeast sky. It changes color to orange then red and departs to the southwest. (Hobana and Weverbergh 134–135; Romania 18)

1968, March 30 — 2:30 a.m. Teofil Iorga and 120 other construction workers at the Banat Mine in Oraviţa, Romania, see a luminous globe in the sky. At 6:10 a.m., a stationary yellowish-white object appears in the northeast. Iorga takes a photo of it at 8:00 a.m. and looks at it through a theodolite at 8:15 a.m. It is shaped like a truncated cone with one side exposed to the sun. At 9:00 a.m., the object ascends and moves to the south. (Hobana and Weverbergh 129–130; Romania 18)

1968, March 30 — 8:00 a.m. Meteorologist Vasile Coţoi and Ingeborg Vityi observe a white conical object maneuvering slowly against the wind at the weather station on Ţarcu Peak, Romania. They watch it for 2.5 hours before it disappears. At 1:00 p.m. it is logged by the weather station near Berzasca about 1 mile inland from the Danube River. At 4:00 p.m. it reappears at the Semenic Mountain weather station and is also seen at Caransebeş, Romania, and other places. (Hobana and Weverbergh 131–138; Romania 19–20)

1968, Spring — Two prospectors, Ed Sampson and Bill Johnson, are sleeping in the Anza Borrego Desert, California, when they wake up at the sound of an explosion. The sky above is filled with a fading red light, and they see flashes on the western horizon. The two climb to the crest of a hill and look down. Sampson sees a "red, circular flying saucer" hovering over the valley, while entities with glowing red eyes march in single file close to the ridge of an adjacent canyon. Something like a church bell rings out at intervals, and mechanical clanking is also audible. After noticing two glowing-eyed creatures standing behind them, they take off running. (Clark III 557; Clark IV 615)

1968, Spring — Psychologist Aldora Lee conducts four university-based polls on UFOs for the Colorado project. She finds that younger people are much more receptive to the notion of alien visitation than older people and that fear of ridicule prevents many who observe a UFO from reporting it to authorities. (Condon, pp. 209–243; Eghigian, After, p. 239)

1968, Mid-April — Evening. Engineer Gu Ying is sent to a military construction regiment in the north Gobi Desert, China, when the entire battalion notices a huge, luminous, red-orange disc with a flashing light landing in the sand. It is about 9 feet in diameter. The commander dispatches a team of motorcycle troops to approach it. As they get closer, the object shoots up into the sky and disappears. The UFO leaves ground traces like a "seared cross." The soldiers assume it is a Russian device. (Wendelle Stevens and Paul Dong, UFOs over Modern China, UFO Photo Archive, 1983, pp. 49–50)

1968, April 4 — 8:15 p.m. Two young men in Cochrane, Wisconsin, see a UFO hover above a car ahead of them; its headlights suddenly go out. The object appears metallic and glows orange when standing still, but gets redder and brighter when moving. The object then comes toward their car and the engine conks out. It hovers overhead for a moment, during which time the witnesses feel increased heat and weightlessness. The object departs over a nearby field, emitting a cloudy haze all around its periphery. (Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1981, p. 40)

1968, April 10 — 11:00 or 11:30 a.m. College student Rickey Bahr is riding his motorcycle north on US Highway 285 near Estrella, Colorado. He sees bright red lights—one flashing, one stationary—coming from an object hovering 50–60 feet off the ground, east of the highway. He stops and watches for a few seconds, feeling scared. He follows the object toward Alamosa, but it vanishes over a farm. ("More From Colorado," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1968, p. 7; Mel Foor, "Epidemic of U.F.O.'s Excites Residents of a Colorado Valley," Kansas City (Mo.) Star, November 17, 1968, pp. 1–2D)

1968, April 10 — 9:00 p.m. Three groups of people witness lights fly over Ipswich, Massachusetts. The first two groups sight three bright white lights in a triangular formation, swinging like a pendulum. The lead object suddenly shoots away, and the others change colors from red to blue to green to white. Nearby, one witness reports a glowing ring shining a light on houses. (Raymond E. Fowler, UFOs: Interplanetary Visitors, Exposition Press, p. 351)

1968, April 27 — The May 14 issue of Look magazine contains an article by John G. Fuller on the Low memorandum and the near-mutiny at the Colorado project. (John G. Fuller, "Flying Saucer Fiasco," Look 32, no. 10 (May 14, 1968): 58–63; Bill Farr, "'Trickery' Charge Aimed at UFO Prober," Santa Ana (Calif.) Register, May 1, 1968, p. B8; L. J. Lorenzen, "A 'Fiasco' Has Two Sides," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1968, pp. 2–3; Clark III 925, 1197; Powell, Keyhoe, 369–370, 371–373; Eghigian, After, p. 207; Clark IV 1035, 1372)

1968, April 27 — 9:20 p.m. Rev. Anthony G. Millican is walking with his wife in Arnos Court Park in Brislington, Bristol, England, when they see a glowing object, revolving and hovering some 6 feet off the ground about 300 feet away. It has a dome and seems to be 12–15 feet high with a central pillar about 4–5 feet high. After 20 seconds, the object just fades away. (Alastair Prevost, "Sighting in a Bristol Park," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1968): 3–4)

1968, April 29 — Low tells the press Fuller has quoted him out of context. Condon and Low spend the morning talking to legal counsel. Condon phones Look and demands that Fuller be fired. Condon later announces that all field investigations for the project have been completed and that all that remains is writing the final report (Powell, Keyhoe, 370; Eghigian, After, p. 206)

1968, April 30 — Rep. J. Edward Roush (D-Ind.) denounces the Colorado project in Congress based on the Look article and raises doubts about its scientific integrity. He writes to Air Force Secretary Robert Seamans to ask for his comments on "this deplorable situation" and he writes to the Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats to investigate the use of public funds for the project. (UFOs Yes, 201–202; "Congressional UFOing," Wall Street Journal, May 3, 1968)

1968, April 30 — At a press conference in Washington, D.C., NICAP announces its break with the Colorado project, citing evidence of negative bias and the apparent disregard of most of the cases it has submitted. Keyhoe and the NICAP Board of Directors write to President Lyndon Johnson, enclosing the Low memo and other evidence and urging that he create an entirely new commission. Col. Bernhard M. Ettenson, from the Office of the Secretary of the Air Force, writes back to say that "we expect that Dr. Condon will fulfill the terms of the agreement." ("NICAP Breaks with Colorado Project," UFO Investigator 4, no. 6 (May/June 1968): 1; "The Inside Story of the Colorado Project," UFO Investigator 4, no. 6 (May/June 1968): 4–5; Clark III 1197; Clark IV 1372)

1968, Early May — Five UFOs are seen diving into the ocean off Arrecife, Vargas, Venezuela. ("Current South American Flap," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1968, p. 8)

1968, Early May — Night. Gerardo Vidal and his wife are driving home from Chascomús to Maipú, Buenos Aires, Argentina. They are just outside Chascomús when their car is enveloped in a thick green fog. The next thing they know they are driving on a road near Mexico City in broad daylight, 4,400 miles to the northwest. Their watches have stopped, and they discover that two days have passed. They visit the Argentine embassy in Mexico City, where Vidal calls a relative in Maipú to report that they are well. However, a June 4, 1968, Reuters dispatch from Mexico City contains a denial of the incident by the Argentine embassy, and subsequent inquiries can find no one in Maipú that could be the Vidals. Finally, in October 1998 Argentine film director Aníbal Uset admits to researcher Roberto Enrique Banchs that he had invented the Chascomús teleportation as a publicity stunt to spread a fantastic story based on the plot of his upcoming film Ché OVNI. The movie's poster even shows a UFO carrying off an automobile. (La Razon (Buenos Aires), June 3, 1968; Oscar A. Galíndez, "Teleportation from Chascomús to Mexico," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1968): 3–4; "Further News on South America," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1968, pp. 7–8; Internet Movie Database, "Ché OVNI"; Jacques Vallée, Confrontations: A Scientist's Search for Alien Intelligence, Ballantine, 1990, p. 96; Roberto E. Banchs, "The Chascomús Teleportation Hoax," Fortean Times 351 (April 2017): 56–57)

1968, May — 11:00 p.m. The naval destroyer USS Zellars is on a NATO task force operation in the Mediterranean Sea with the Sixth Fleet. The crew sees five lights rise up out of the water off the ship's port beam and disappear into the sky. They reappear minutes later, performing synchronized upward and lateral movements for 2–3 minutes before shooting away again. The incident is dismissed as an unsubstantiated ship distress signal. (National UFO Reporting Center, "NUFORC UFO Sighting 68506," March 19, 2009; Dolan, USO1, 320–322)

1968, May 2 — Evening. A teenage girl named Shane Kurz allegedly sees a cigar-shaped object in Westmoreland, New York; she had seen it or a similar object two weeks earlier. Half an hour later she falls into a deep sleep. Her mother checks on her at 4:00 a.m., but she is not in her bed. Later, she is found lying on her bed wearing muddy slippers. She has two reddish, ring-shaped marks on her abdomen, a mark below her navel, and burning eyes. In 1975, she undergoes hypnosis and recalls walking to a muddy field where she is beamed aboard a UFO. She undergoes some intrusive medical procedures, then has sex with a small humanoid "doctor," whom she accuses of rape. She is floated back to the ground. (Hans Holzer, The Ufonauts, Fawcett, 1976; Clark III 1061; Clark IV 1176–1177)

1968, May 4 — 8:00 p.m. Captain Woodrow Atwood, skipper of the fishing boat Which Way In, is in the North Atlantic Ocean south of Seal Island, Nova Scotia, when he notices a small light to the north. Suddenly it bursts into a blood-red color and appears to be only 150–225 away and approaching. Heat from the object becomes so intense that he has to move away from the window. The object floats overhead for 5 minutes, then descends and moves away. ("Object Heats Up Boat in N.S.," APRO Bulletin, July/Aug. 1968, p. 4; Dolan, USO1, 317–319)

1968, May 10 — 5:00 p.m. K. S. McKern watches a rocket-like object rise from the water in Coogee Bay off Coogee Beach, New South Wales, Australia. It rotates 360°, tilts, and shoots off to the north. He manages to snap a grainy photo. ("Australia," Spacelink 6, no. 1 (July 1969): 31; Dolan, USO1, 319–320)

1968, May 10 — 10:00 p.m. Grant Callison of Galesburg, Illinois, looks out his kitchen window and sees a giant bird illuminated by a streetlight. He and his wife Wilma rush outside for a better look and see three of them flying in a V-formation at an altitude of 500 feet. They look like they have metallic feathers or scales. They are flying with a graceful, fluttering motion. They then see two objects to the south with pulsating red lights moving in the same direction at the same speed (about 25–35 mph). On May 20, around 9:00 p.m., the Callisons have another odd sighting of a single bird-like creature. (Grant Callison, "Zoodities: Winged Creatures over Illinois," Crux, no. 2 (1986): 12–13; Grant Callison, "Winged Creatures over Illinois," UFOexperiences, February 6, 2006; Clark III 655; Clark IV 859–860)

1968, May 11 — A farmer in Brinkley, South Australia, notices strands of material about 65 feet long falling on his property. He says it is like asbestos rope and as wide as a pencil. On the same day, web-like "fine woven cotton" is seen on a lawn and draped over wires and a fence in Cheltenham, Adelaide, South Australia. (Keith Basterfield, "Angel Hair: An Australian Perspective," IUR 27, no. 1 (Spring 2002): 7)

1968, May 13 — George H. Estabrooks, a Canadian-American psychologist and former consultant for the FBI and CIA, tells the Providence Evening Bulletin that the key to developing an effective spy or assassin is by creating a multiple personality with the aid of hypnosis, a procedure he describes as "child's play." Estabrooks suggests that Lee Harvey Oswald and Jack Ruby could have been controlled in this manner. "This has and is being done. I have done it. It is child's play now to develop a multiple personality through hypnotism." (Providence (R.I.) Evening Bulletin, May 13, 1968; Colin A. Ross, The C.I.A. Doctors: Human Rights Violations by American Psychiatrists, Manitou, 2006, pp. 150–164; Phil Kirby, "Event / TV Times: The Prisoner: Free for All," The Culture Vulture, May 10, 2018)

1968, May 13 — Astronomer Frank Drake writes to Frederick Seitz urging him to discredit the Colorado project. (Clark III 1197; Clark IV 1372)

1968, May 15 — Low is relieved of 90% of his duties with the Colorado project, effective May 24 and will go back to his job as assistant to Thurston Manning. (UFOs Yes, 204)

1968, May 17 — 5:00 a.m. Caetano Sergio dos Santos is returning home from his job as a night watchman at Caconde, São Paulo, Brazil. In the courtyard of his house he sees a cylinder-shaped object, about the size of a powdered-milk can, stuck in the ground. At each end are dials, one with a black band, the other with a red one. They are encased under a glass or plastic lens with embossed figures arranged in a semicircle. Above each figure is something like an Arabic numeral. Dos Santos takes the object into the house and studies it for 90 minutes, then puts it on a windowsill in the bathroom before going to bed. He goes back to work, then at about 1:00 a.m., he returns home and notices that the object is lighting up the house, with his wife and son, very agitated, standing outside with neighbors. She tells him that a loud buzzing and intense heat had wakened her, both emanating from the object. Dos Santos goes inside and finds a hole in the roof, tile scattered over the floor, and the object gone. ("Brazilian Object Real Puzzler," APRO Bulletin, July/Aug. 1968, pp. 1, 3; Walter Buehler, "The Mysterious Caconde Case," Flying Saucer Review 15, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1969): 18–19; Clark III 339; Clark IV 375)

1968, May 21 — Philip J. Klass attempts to refute James E. McDonald's criticisms of his plasma theory of UFOs in a privately circulated paper. (Phillip J. Klass, "Dr. James E. McDonald's 'Mathematical Proof,'" The Author, May 21, 1968, pp. 4–5)

1968, May 23 — 9:00 p.m. The crew of the attack transport USS Monrovia of the US Navy's Sixth Fleet observes a large submerged object, on the starboard side just aft of the stern, in the Atlantic Ocean near the Azores. It is an elongated, translucent ovoid, glowing with a pulsing orange color. As it continues to pace the ship, the compass, radio, and radar systems fail. After 90 minutes, the object's light fades and it vanishes and the ship's equipment begins working again. (National UFO Reporting Center, "NUFORC UFO Sighting 54893," February 1, 2007; Dolan, USO1, 323–324)

1968, Late May — Condon hires science writer Daniel S. Gillmor to edit the final project report. Gillmor receives editorial help from Joseph H. Rush, a physicist from the National Center for Atmospheric Research. Also assisting is associate editor Harriet Hunter and several specialists from the local lab of the Environmental Science Services Administration (including Gordon David Thayer). Franklin Roach returns to work on astronaut sightings. By June 1, the date on which the investigative phase ends, there is a substantially new crew. (Clark III 926; Clark IV 1036)

1968, May 27 — 9:45 p.m. A man is driving near Punta Gorda, Florida, when his headlights and engine fail. As he gets out to check, he sees a light slowly descending at treetop level. The object is shaped like a Pilgrim's hat with a green glow and bluish color surrounding it. A few minutes after landing, it takes off at high speed, disappearing in the northwest. The car starts once it is gone. The witness notices that his watch has stopped. (Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1981, p. 41)

1968, May 31 — McDonald speaks to the Chicago Chapter of the American Meteorological Society on UFOs. (James E. McDonald, "UFOs: Atmospheric or Extraterrestrial?" May 31, 1968; Story, p. 414)

1968, Summer — Three teenagers notice an irregular triangular object flying to the west over housing in Stazic street in Rzeszów, Poland. It is dark with some brighter bulges on the bottom and emits a buzzing sound. (Poland 32)

1968, June 3 — McDonald addresses the Burro Club (Democratic Congressional Administrative Assistants and Aides) in the Rayburn Building in Washington, D.C., on the question "Does Congress Have a Responsibility to Investigate the UFO Problem?" (Story, p. 414)

1968, June 4 — A-12 pilot Jack W. Weeks is lost over the South China Sea near the Philippines during a functional checkout flight after the replacement of one of its engines. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed A-12")

1968, June 6 — Capt. U. Tiviroli, commander of an Argentine Airlines Avro, sees a UFO, along with his copilot and 18 passengers, for 5 minutes during a night landing at Punta Arenas airport, Chile. An unusually bright object, long and spindle-shaped, appears above the plane. It moves in a course parallel to the plane and stops suddenly in midair. Then it swerves in a right angle back to the plane. It is also seen by airport observers. ("Argentinian Pilot Reports UAO," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1968, p. 3)

1968, June 8 — Hypnotist Loring G. Williams holds a hypnotic regression session with Herbert Schirmer in Des Moines, Iowa, accompanied by Warren Smith. A more detailed narrative of Schirmer's December 1967 abduction unfolds. (Eric Norman [Warren Smith], Gods, Demons and UFOs, Lancer, 1970; Clark III 1035–1036; Clark IV 1150–1151)

1968, June 11 — Philip J. Klass attempts to refute James E. McDonald's criticisms of his plasma theory of UFOs in another unpublished paper. (Philip J. Klass, "Does Dr. James E. McDonald Really Speak with Authority?" The Author, June 11, 1968, pp. 8–9)

1968, June 11 — MP John Langford-Holt asks UK Prime Minister Harold Wilson whether he is aware that some UFO reports are made to the Ministry of Defence, while police reports are made to the Board of Trade. Wilson replies that reports going to the Board of Trade are passed on to the Ministry of Defence. (Good Above, p. 67; Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1968, June 14 — Shortly after 12:00 midnight. Isidro Puentes Ventura is on guard duty in Cabañas, Artemisa, Cuba, when he sees on the ground a brilliant domed UFO with several antennas on top. He approaches to within 165 feet and fires about 40 machine gun rounds into it, convinced it is American. The object turns orange and emits a whistling sound as Puentes loses consciousness. At dawn, an Army patrol finds him still unconscious and takes him to a hospital in Pinar del Rio, where he remains in shock for 6 days, unable to speak. He is then taken to a Naval hospital in Havana, where he remains in shock another week. At the site, Cuban and Soviet intelligence specialists find 48 spent cartridges and 14 bullets flattened by impact with something solid, as well as equally spaced indentations on the ground. Tests reveal that the soil has been exposed to a high temperature. 1968, June 14 — 1:05 a.m. María Elodia Pretzel, daughter of the owner of the Motel La Cuesta on National Highway 20 east of Villa Carlos Paz, Córdoba, Argentina, is locking up for the night when she encounters a strange-looking man in the dining area. He is 6 feet tall and dressed in a blue helmet and a suit that glows with an eerie light and seems made up of scales. In his left hand he is holding a glassy sphere that is radiating a coherent light that lights up the room. She feels somewhat paralyzed and is getting a mental message not to be afraid. The entity raises its other arm, which is emitting beams of light, and she feels helpless, falling backward. The entity walks slowly toward the outside door, putting one foot directly in front of the other, arm extended and holding the now extinguished sphere, and passes outside. Still shaken, María goes to the laundry room and drops on the floor, head and arms on a divan. A few minutes later, her father, Pedro Jacobo Pretzel, arrives and discovers her. Minutes earlier, he had seen two odd, stationary red lights about 5–6 feet from the ground off Highway 20. Maria is conscious but very disturbed, a condition that lasts for several days. 1968, June 15–17 — Night. Allied forward spotters along the eastern part of the Demilitarized Zone in Vietnam see about 30 strange slow-moving lights. At the time they are interpreted as North Vietnamese Russian-built M-14 Hound helicopters ferrying men and materiel over the border. The lights appear the following evening, and several US 7th Air Force Phantom fighter-bombers soon arrive on the scene and fire on the intruders, supported by anti-aircraft ground fire. During the Allied attack the presumed helicopters move down the east coast and out to sea. The destroyers HMAS Hobart, USS Edson, and USS Theodore E. Chandler are ordered to undertake surveillance missions around Cồn Cỏ (Tiger Island) along the north central coast. Around 3:14 a.m. on June 17, the ships are involved in a friendly fire incident in which the Hobart is hit by 3 missiles from one of the Phantoms, causing major damage and killing two of the crew. The Hobart is apparently right behind the alleged helicopters. 1968, June 16 and 19 — Night. Chief of Provincial Police German Rocha and Police Maj. Niceforo Léon observe a round object with a vivid blue light near El Choro, Poopó, Bolivia. It lands, leaves a strange, powerful odor, and burns grass and shrubs. (Gordon Creighton, "A New South American 'Wave,'" Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1968): 23–24; Oscar A. Galíndez, "South America Revisited," Australian UFO Review, no. 10 (December 1969): 41)

1968, June 18 — Jorge Raul Scassa Sutter and Ruben Andrawos are flying a Cessna 182 from Villa Dolores, Córdoba, Argentina, to La Guardia, Catamarca, Argentina. They see an object looking like an overturned soup plate with a cupola on top. The object is grayish-blue with no windows, and its diameter is about 90 feet. The object is at the same altitude as the aircraft, 7,500 feet, and at a distance of 330 feet. It disappears by flying to the north at a fantastic speed. There is a possible VHF interference ("frequency fading") when the object approaches the aircraft in front. (La Gaceta de Tucumán, June 19, 1968; NICAP, "Cessna 182 Encounters UFO / VHF I/FF"; Carlos Daniel Ferguson, Aviation Safety Reports Related by Argentine Pilots Concerning Unidentified Aerial Phenomena, NARCAP International Air Safety Report IR-6, August 29, 2013, p. 4)

1968, June 19 — 4:00 a.m. Two farm boys are stacking hay near Rocky, Oklahoma, when a bright white, circular, wingless craft appears and descends at a 45° angle to the height of nearby telephone wires. The apparent size of the full moon, it moves horizontally across the farmyard. It has numerous lights around the outside and appears to be rotating in a counterclockwise direction. Their dogs start barking at it. They believe it is going to crash, so they run back into the barn after 3 minutes. It is last seen over a small silo. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 104–106)

1968, Late June — 11:45 p.m. The US naval destroyer USS Waldron is participating in an exercise called Operation Racer Run off the island of Vieques, Puerto Rico, when the ship's radar detects two objects that fail to respond to IFF signals. The crew can see the objects in the distance. Moving at 400 mph and making right-angle turns. One of the objects goes underwater as the other one hovers. When it emerges, both objects depart in about 10 seconds at a 45° angle. (Jan L. Aldrich, "Updated Draft Catalogue of UFOs/USOs Reported by Seagoing Services, NavCat 2.0," 2015; Dolan, USO1, 326)

1968, June 20 — The US Seventh Air Force holds a "joint service conference on the UFO problem" in Hawaii after a series of tragic incidents on June 15–17, including a missile attack on "unidentified helicopters" that hit the Australian Navy destroyer HMAS Hobart, killing two sailors. An investigation reveals that the Air Force is in the midst of a wave of sightings of things that are not enemy helicopters in central Vietnam, just south of and within the DMZ. (Sparks, pp. 327–328; Clark III 1051; Clark IV 1166)

1968, June 20 — Following the publication of their book Flying Saucer Report: UFOs Unidentified, Unidentifiable, British researchers Anthony R. Pace and Roger H. Stanway visit the UK S4 (Air) UFO desk in Whitehall, London, again and meet with Leslie Akhurst, John Dickison, and Alec Cassie. Their request to record the interview is denied, but they are impressed with Cassie's ability to recall UFO cases mentioned in their book. (Good Above, p. 68)

1968, June 20 — A husband and wife encounter an array of lights that hover above their car near Roswell, New Mexico. Both have a feeling of great peace. When the UFO vanishes, the wife finds that the arthritis in her neck has been healed. ("Reaction Reports," UFO Investigator 4, no. 7 (July/August 1968): 7; Michael D. Swords, "Can UFOs Cause Physiological Effects? Part 1," IUR 33, no. 4 (May 2011): 23)

1968, June 26 — An Argentine Trotskyist using the pseudonym J. Posadas, who formed a movement in 1962 based on the inevitability of nuclear war, has proclaimed an interest in UFOs as entities with the ability to master sophisticated technologies that are compatible with socialism. If UFOs exist, they might be helpful in addressing some of the major problems in the earth. In his pamphlet, Les Soucoupes Volantes: Le processus de la matière et de l'energie, la science et le socialisme, Posadas pleads that "We must call upon beings from other planets when they come to intervene, to collaborate with the inhabitants of the Earth to overcome misery. We must launch a call on them to use their resources to help us." (J. Posadas, Flying Saucers: The Process of Matter and Energy, Science, the Revolutionary and Working-Class Struggle, and Socialism, June 26, 1968; A. M. Gittlitz, I Want to Believe: Posadism, UFOs, and Apocalyptic Communism, Pluto, 2020; Ian Parker, "Believe It or Not!" Socialist Resistance, May 1, 2020)

1968, June 29 — Night. Eduardo Sánchez Aguilar, Pablo Pastor Ortega, and Damián Vega are driving along National Highway 5 in San Luis del Palmar, Corrientes, Argentina, when they see a circular flattened object that emits an intensely bright orange light. At one point it seems to approach dangerously close, so they turn out their lights. As the object passes near them, their car is shaken by a powerful vibration and the gears go into reverse. (La Crónica (Buenos Aires), July 4, 1968; Gordon Creighton, "A New South American 'Wave,'" Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1968): 26)

1968, July — British physicist Reginald Victor Jones publishes a skeptical view of UFOs in Physics Bulletin, but supports genuine scientific inquiry. (R. V. Jones, "The Natural Philosophy of Flying Saucers," Physics Bulletin, July 1968, pp. 225–230)

1968, July — A CIA team flies into Saigon [now Ho Chi Minh City], Vietnam, to experiment on three Viet Cong prisoners at Biên Hòa Hospital. Working in an enclosed compound, the team's neurosurgeon and neurologist insert tiny electrodes into their brains. Behaviorists then experiment on the men, arming them with knives and trying to induce violent behavior in them using direct electrical stimulation. After a week of experimentation that fails to incite the men to attack each other, they are shot dead and their bodies burned. (Sid Taylor, "A History of Secret CIA Mind Control Research," Nexus, April/May 1992)

1968, July — A man is driving on Blacketts Lake Road southwest of Sydney, Nova Scotia, when he sees a saucer-shaped object descending below the tree line near the lake. He parks his car and runs along a trail to get closer. He is about 75 feet from the object, which is only 6 feet above the ground in a clearing. The UFO suddenly rises and flies away. The RCMP blocks access to the site during its investigation. ("Former RCMP Officer Photographs UFO near Sydney, N.S.," Journal UFO 2, no. 4 (March 1981): 15)

1968, July — 1:00 a.m. Walter Rizzi is taking a nap in his car by the road just south of the Gardena Pass, South Tyrol, Italy, when he wakes to the smell of something burning. He sees a light about 1,600 feet further downhill shining through the mist. The mist parts, and he sees an enormous object that suddenly reminds him of an encounter he had with a strange hermit on the island of Rhodes in Greece when he was in the Italian army in World War II. The hermit had predicted he would someday meet with advanced beings from the cosmos who would provide him with the assurance of life throughout the universe. Rizzi makes his way downhill toward the object, which is silvery, some 260 feet in diameter, standing on three legs, bathed in fleecy white light, and emitting a burning odor. He gets within 10 feet and cannot go further. He sees two beings inside a transparent cupola on the top who are looking down at him. To the right of the object is a robot about 8 feet tall with three legs and four arms. A beam of light comes from the center of the object, and Rizzi sees another being dressed in a tight-fitting suit and glass helmet descending. They communicate telepathically about other planets and the universe. Eventually the entities reenter the object and take off. Rizzi claims there are landing marks, effects on the grass, and his watch starts losing time. (Gordon Creighton, "Introductory Comments on the Rizzi Case," Flying Saucer Review 26, no. 3 (September 1980): 21–22; Walter Rizzi, "Close Encounter in the Dolomites," Flying Saucer Review 26, no. 3 (September 1980): 22–27; 1Pinotti 158–169)

1968, July 1 — NASA publishes a Chronological Catalog of Reported Lunar Events, by Barbara M. Middlehurst, Jaylee M. Burley, Patrick Moore, and Barbara L. Welther. Moore invents the term "transient lunar phenomena" to describe short-lived changes in brightness, color, or appearance on the surface of the moon. (Wikipedia, "Transient lunar phenomenon"; Barbara M. Middlehurst, Jaylee M. Burley, Patrick Moore, and Barbara L. Welther, Chronological Catalog of Reported Lunar Events, NASA Technical Report R-277, July 1, 1968)

1968, July 1 — 12:30 a.m. Three boys are sitting on the main gate of the UNESP Hospital das Clinicas of the Faculdade de Medicina de Botucatu, São Paulo, Brazil. Suddenly they see a large object "as big as a house" sitting about 1,150 feet to the west of them. It has a large tripod undercarriage and a ladder reaching down to the ground. The boys can hear a weird "tinging sound on a high note." They start to yell as the UFO retracts its tripod and ladder and rise into the air and speed off to the east, reaching a great altitude. Alerted by their shouts, other witnesses see the object moving away. A student named Antônio Alegre examines the landing site shortly afterward and finds marks forming an isosceles triangle, two sides measuring 20 feet and one side 23 feet. (Nigel Rimes, "Landing at Botucatu," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1968): 21–24)

1968, July 2 — 11:25 a.m. Oscar Heriberto Iriart, 15, sees two men of normal height motioning to him at Sierra Chica, Buenos Aires, Argentina. They have short, white hair and red clothes. They also have semi-transparent legs because he can see through them to the grass behind. Near the men is an elliptical, silvery machine, 6.5 feet long, 2 feet high, with three legs 19 inches high. The men give him an envelope they telepathically say contains an important message, telling him to dip it in water before reading, then they fly off. Iriart dips the envelope in a puddle and finds that both the envelope and his hands are dry. The message is written in Spanish in a crude handwriting: "You are going to know the world. F. Saucer." The witness's horse and dog are paralyzed for several minutes. The boy arrives home terrified. The family goes to the landing site and finds three holes, each about 5 inches deep and forming an isosceles triangle, the base side measuring 6.5 feet and the other 2 sides 5.2 feet wide. At 11:15 p.m., five skeptical men (including Police Sgt. Raúl Coronel) from the Sierra Chica Social Club visit the landing site and declare the holes to be fake. However, they see a zigzagging light a few feet from the ground and heading their way. They drop to the ground, it passes over them, and then shoots away straight up. (Gordon Creighton, "A New South American 'Wave,'" Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1968): 26–27)

1968, July 2 — 10:00–10:30 p.m. Fred Coulthard Jr. and his brother Wayne are at a family get-together in the backyard of their father's home in Wooler, Ontario, when they see an object with rotating red lights that agitates the family's horses and cats. Around 11:30 p.m., poltergeist-like disturbances (a shattered window, objects thrown around, a strong odor of roses) begin in the house and continue for several days. "Fairy rings" are discovered on the ground in a wooded valley north of town. (Mrs. W. Greystone, "Canada's UFO Poltergeist," in Charles Bowen, ed., Beyond Condon, special issue no. 2 of FSR, June 1969, pp. 66–68, 70)

1968, July 5 — Around 12:00 midnight. Two sailors from Naval Station San Miguel [now Naval Station Leovigildo Gantioqui], near Barangay San Miguel, Zambales, Philippines, are camping out on an uninhabited island [perhaps Capones Island] near the station. Suddenly they see a bright light on a cone-shaped object appear silently above the South China Sea and disappear into the water. (National UFO Reporting Center, "NUFORC UFO Sighting 154723," May 1, 2020; Dolan, USO1, 327)

1968, July 9 — 9:35 p.m. Witnesses at Long Beach, California, see a huge, glowing, cloud-like mass over the Santa Catalina Channel for 90 minutes. Five smaller objects are seen maneuvering around it. (Ann Druffel, "Santa Catalina Island Recurring 'Cloud Cigars,'" in Proceedings of the 1976 CUFOS Conference, Chicago, 1976, pp. 62–74; Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects and Cloud Cigars," IUR 29, no. 1 (Spring 2004): 9–10; Ann Druffel, "Santa Catalina Channel Cloud Cigars," IUR 31, no. 1 (January 2007): 13–14; Wim van Utrecht, "'Mother Ship' over Southern California," Caelestia, August 5, 2009)

1968, July 13 — 10:00 p.m. Irena Scott and her sister Sue Postle are traveling west of Boston, Massachusetts, on State Highway 9 when they see an unusual object to the south. They watch it intermittently after turning south on State Highway 128 and I-95. It is moving in an erratic pattern and blinking. Then they see a basketball-sized object 20–50 feet away, near the ground, and constantly changing colors. Scott pulls over to the side of the road, loads her camera, and takes five photos, only one of which shows the light. (Irena Scott, "Fear and Ambiguity in Massachusetts," IUR 13, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1988): 14–17; Irena Scott, "UFO Studies in the Scientific Literature," IUR 15, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1990): 18; Irena Scott, "A Photograph and Its Aftermath," IUR 15, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1990): 12–14, 23; Irena Scott, UFOs and the Millennium, Greyden, 1999. pp. 46–53)

1968, July 17 — Late evening. A civil servant is allegedly snatched off the São Paulo Highway in Brazil and taken into a UFO by four green entities wearing devices that look like headphones. While he is in a state of paralysis, they question him via telepathy about human customs, physiology, and reproduction. The creatures depart abruptly as if in response to instructions. (Gordon Creighton, "Physical Examination by 'Miniature Martians,'" Flying Saucer Review 15, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1969): 32, 34; Clark III 279; Clark IV 319)

1968, July 18 — 1:05 a.m. RCMP Constable W. J. Whyte and his wife spot a yellow circular object at high altitude moving west to east near Truro, Nova Scotia. It looks like a satellite, but turns reddish before disappearing in the distance. At 1:10 p.m., a couple near Onslow Mountain a few miles to the north see a rosy red light in the southwest hovering just above the trees. They watch it for 15 minutes before it moves and accelerates out of sight. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 70–71)

1968, July 20 — After 12:00 midnight. Three 14-year-old girls at a summer camp at Kaarnajärv, near Otepää, Valga County, Estonia, see a swiftly moving star and a cigar-shaped object in the distance that quickly disappears. Somewhat disturbed, they decide to retire to bed. Through a window they see a bright object about 165 feet away. It is surrounded by reddish-orange and yellow beams of light. Soon it goes out, leaving only a dark greenish nebula with a blue-green ring around it that illuminates the surrounding woods. They watch it for about 5 minutes until it blinks out. One of the girls goes outside and sees a female figure, less than 5 feet tall and wearing a silver ribbon, standing where the object had been. It vanishes. The next morning, they find a circular burnt area about 6 feet in diameter and four wedge-shaped prints in the soil. (Juri Lina, "UFO Landings in Estonia," Flying Saucer Review 24, no. 1 (June 1978): 3–4)

1968, July 22 — Around 12:00 midnight. Off-duty police constable Martyn Johnson is walking with his girlfriend in Sheffield, South Yorkshire, England, when they see two lights approaching them from above a nearby park. They are giving off many colored lights. As they hover above a nearby house, the couple's poodle becomes agitated and runs off. The two lights then become four and arrange themselves in an oblong formation. All at once they vanish at terrific speed, following a railway to the northeast. A few hours later, Johnson is awakened and told to report to police headquarters, where there are two "government men" waiting to quiz him about the sighting. They desperately try to convince him that he has seen an aircraft or helicopter. They tell him he is sworn to secrecy for the next 25 years. When he asks what he has seen, they tell him, "What you have seen is an unidentified flying object or UFO. Some people call them spaceships, and if the people of the world knew how many genuine sightings there were like yours, there would be total panic." (UFOFiles2, pp. 82–83)

1968, July 22 — 1:20 a.m. Adela Casalvieri de Panassiti, 45, night nurse at the Dr. Carlos Pereyra Neuropsychiatric Hospital at Ituzaingó 2837, Mendoza, Argentina, hears a loud, penetrating, humming noise outside in the hospital courtyard. Going out to see what it is, she observes a mushroom-shaped landed object only 65 feet away. It is luminous and sitting in the middle of the courtyard. A bright red beam comes from the object and strikes her, and she finds that her legs are paralyzed. Putting her hands up to her face for protection, she discovers she is completely unable to move. She remains immobilized for a number of minutes until the red beam is extinguished. At this time, the object ascends vertically then flies off rapidly to the south, barely clearing the wall that surrounds the courtyard. Before it disappears, she is able to observe several human-looking figures through square portholes that encircle the craft. These beings move back and forth, passing each other, and are visible from the waist up only. A lead-gray stain, 31 x 12 inches, that smells of sulfur is found at the landing site. It persists for two days. Several small potted trees are burned. Casalvieri de Panassiti has first-degree burns on her face and hands (an allergic reaction?), and parts of her nurse's cap and clothing are singed. In addition, her watch, which has stopped at 1:30 a.m., is found to be radioactive, as is her ring. The daughters of a garrison commander witness a luminous, egg-shaped object at the same time from the garrison casino. 1968, July 23 — 1:00 a.m. Daíldo de Oliveira, a night watchman for the CESP electrical substation near Bauru, São Paulo, Brazil, confronts three intruders who overpower him outside a control center building. A large UFO 50 feet tall is resting nearby on the ground; it takes off in a zigzag pattern towards the city of Lins. (Clark III 183–185; Brazil 93–98; Clark IV 218–221)

1968, July 25 — 2:00 a.m. Juan Sivori, his wife, and a daughter see a silver object shaped like a spinning top a they are driving along Highway 226 near La Pastora, Buenos Aires, Argentina. It is only 115 feet from them and the size of a truck. The engine of their car stops running as the UFO hovers for about 5 minutes at a height of 33 feet. When it rises into the air and vanishes, the car engine starts up again. (Oscar A. Uriondo, "Preliminary Catalogue of Type I Cases in Argentina, Part 4," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 16 (August 1973): 11)

1968, July 28 — 12:00 midnight. A farmer, his wife, and two children near Upton, Quebec, are awakened by the barking of their dog. When he gets up to investigate, he sees a sparkling, rotating "cloud" in the yard. It flies just over him and goes into a nearby field. About 12 feet in diameter, it is dark on the bottom but luminous on top. The cows in the field are being chased by 4 or 5 small entities, perhaps 3 feet tall with heads shaped like bottles. As the UFO flies above them, they disappear. The cattle seem ill for weeks afterwards. (John Brent Musgrave, UFO Occupants and Critters, Global Communications, 1979; Clark III 280; Clark IV 320–321)

1968, July 29 — The hearings that Rep. J. Edward Roush (D-Ind.) and NICAP have been calling for are held as a "Symposium on Unidentified Flying Objects" before the House Committee on Science and Astronautics. Rep. George P. Miller (D-Calif.) is chairman of the committee, but Roush directs most of the proceedings. Hynek, McDonald, Sagan, Robert L. Hall (University of Illinois at Chicago), James A. Harder (UC-Berkeley), and Robert M. L. Baker Jr. (UCLA) give testimony. Hynek is introduced by Rep. Donald Rumsfeld (R-Ill.). Menzel, R. Leo Sprinkle, Garry C. Henderson, Stanton T. Friedman, Roger N. Shepard, and Frank B. Salisbury offer prepared papers. NICAP representatives are not permitted to testify. Many witnesses parrot the NORAD party line that its radars only look in certain directions (when indeed it looks for many types of potential attacks in all directions). Harder states: "On the basis of the data and ordinary rules of evidence, as would be applied in civil or criminal courts, the physical reality of UFOs has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt." McDonald makes the biggest impression, presenting 30 pages of UFO reports. He states: "my own present opinion, based on two years of careful study, is that UFOs are probably extraterrestrial devices engaged in something that might very tentatively be termed 'surveillance.'" Menzel concludes that UFOs merit no more scientific study than "the concept of ghosts, spirits, witches, fairies, elves, hobgoblins, or the devil." The symposium has no lasting impact, as

Congress does nothing about the problem. (Symposium on Unidentified Flying Objects, Hearings, US House Committee on Science and Astronautics, 90th Cong., 2nd Sess., July 29, 1968; "Congressional Hearings on UFO Problems: Scientists Urge Unbiased National Investigations," UFO Investigator 4, no. 7 (July/Aug. 1968): 1–5; Clark III 811; Powell, Keyhoe, 373–375; Graff 220–224; Lochlainn Seabrook, Mysterious Invaders: Twelve Famous 20th-Century Scientists Confront the UFO Phenomenon, Sea Raven Press, 2024; Eghigian, After, pp. 207–208; Clark IV 904)

1968, July 30 — 2:00 a.m. A land surveyor and his wife in Claremont, New Hampshire, are preparing to retire when they see a dome-shaped object in a field about 230 feet behind their house. It is about 20 feet wide and moving slowly 10 feet above the ground, creating shadows on the freshly cut hay. The UFO shines a 20-foot wide gray-colored beam of light onto the ground. Their children moan and cry out in while they are sleeping and their dogs are whining loudly. They hear a high-pitched humming sound like a utility pole transformer. A few minutes later the object moves 25 feet to the east, the humming growing louder. At one point, a projection from the object descends to the ground. Around 4:30 a.m., the object goes brighter and slowly moves off toward the west. (Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, pp. 38–40; UFOEv II 45)

1968, July 31 — 9:00 a.m. Farmer Luce Fontaine is collecting grass for his rabbits at La Plaine des Cafres on the island of Réunion (in the Indian Ocean east of Madagascar), when he sees an oval-shaped object about 75 feet away. It is sitting about 15 feet from the ground on a flange of metal; a similar structure protrudes from its top. The cylinder has two blue ends and a transparent center through which he can see two humanoids less than 3 feet tall in metallic helmets and dressed in puffy suits like the Michelin Man (the tire company mascot). Seemingly sensing Fontaine looking at them, they turn their backs and the object disappears in a sudden flash of light and a burst of hot air. The incident is investigated by Capt. Maljean of the local Gendarmerie and Capt. Léopold Legros of the Civil Protection Service, who detect an abnormal amount of radioactivity at the site and on Fontaine's clothing 10 days afterward, as well as six apparent landing marks in the ground. A country club called "La Soucoupe Volante" (Flying Saucer) is later built on the site. 1968, August — The US Air Force Weapons Laboratory begins to set up a field instrumentation lab at Con Thien combat base near the Demilitarized Zone, Quang Tri Province, Vietnam, specifically for the purpose of investigating and tracking unidentified aircraft. The first project name is HAVE FEAR. At least 500 UFO sensor trackings via radar-visual, laser range-finder, video camera, infrared, nightscope, and telescope are investigated through April 1969. The UFOs, often seen as red lights, usually travel at speeds of 30–80 mph at altitudes of 1,200–1,600 feet. After several days of tracking, the red blinking lights extinguish when under radar surveillance. They are only seen at night and only in certain places. In mid-August, Project LETHAL CHASER is added, using portable manpack radars. The findings involve 99% UFOs and only 1% IFOs, primarily because the system does not include human anecdotal accounts. Pacific Air Forces' unit history clearly states the investigation is about UFOs, not enemy helicopters. (Sparks, p. 328; Clark III 1050–1054; Clark IV 1165–1170)

1968, August 4 — 4:15 a.m. William Prochner, his son Kenneth, and his father Julius Prochner in Qu'Appelle, Saskatchewan, watch a luminous object, about 25 feet in diameter, as it hovers for several minutes. Later it circles above the house 300 feet away. A 4-foot circle of barren grass is found, although an 18-inch circle in the center is undamaged. (Ted Phillips, Physical Traces Associated with UFO Sightings, Center for UFO Studies, 1978, p. 57)

1968, August 7 — McDonald addresses the Boeing Management Association in Renton, Washington, on "UFO Investigations: Past, Present, and Future." (Story, p. 414)

1968, August 7 — 8:10 p.m. As a young man and woman watch from the end of a dock at Buff Ledge Camp [now closed] along the shore of Lake Champlain north of Burlington, Vermont, a bright light appears in the southwest sky and swoops down in a long arc until it stops and assumes a horizontal position. It now resembles a white, glowing, cigar-shaped object, possibly as far away as the Adirondack Mountains more than 10 miles from the witnesses. According to the young man, three tiny white lights emerge one at a time from the right-end bottom of the UFO. As soon as the third is expelled, the object retreats along its original path and vanishes seconds later. The three smaller objects perform a series of spectacular maneuvers, all the while moving closer. After 5 minutes the objects assume a horizontal triangle formation, and two head off in opposite directions, one to the north, the other to the south, making a sound like "thousands of different tuning forks." The remaining object (40–50 feet across) moves toward the witnesses. It ascends and vanishes in three seconds, only to reappear moments later as it descends along the same trajectory and plunges broadside into the water. A sudden wind blows waves across the heretofore placid surface. Animals up and down the shore howl and shriek. A few minutes later the UFO surfaces and moves toward the witnesses. It stops 60 feet from them, hovering about 15 feet above the water. The young man can see two figures with large heads, oversized oval eyes, and small mouths. Visible to the waist, they are short and clothed in skintight gray or silver uniforms. Thus begins an abduction experience that was only uncovered through separate hypnotic sessions with each of the witnesses by Walter N. Webb years later. Webb's background checks, buttressed by psychological analyses, convinces him that there is no question of a hoax. (Walter N. Webb, Encounter at Buff Ledge: A UFO Case History, CUFOS, 1994; Richard F. Haines, [Review], JUFOS 6 (1995/96): 248–251; UFOEv II 532, 571–575; Clark III 220–222; B. J. Booth, "The Buff Ledge Abduction," UFO Casebook; Clark IV 260–262)

1968, August 15 — 12:00 midnight. Dick Skewes is driving west with his wife Anne and babysitter Gail Yemm about 20 minutes east of Springhill, Nova Scotia, on the Trans-Canada Highway. After driving up a hill, he sees a group of 5–6 lights hovering 50 feet above some trees on his left. Another light is approaching at high speed to join the others. One of the objects breaks away and descends silently over the highway in front of them, its yellow lights flashing brilliantly, on an apparent collision course. When it is 40–50 feet away it veers upward and disappears to the east. Skewes continues down the highway and loses sight of the objects when he rounds a bend. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 79–81)

1968, August 16 — 6:00 a.m. A farmer doing barnyard chores at La Serra d'Almos, Catalonia, Spain, glimpses a light more than half a mile away. He thinks someone's car has stalled, so he walks over with his dog intending to help. But he finds a globe-shaped, glowing object hovering 3 feet above the ground. On the other side of it, he sees two creatures of an octopus-like appearance. Light-colored, 3 feet tall, they are running on "four or five legs" toward the UFO, which abruptly takes off. Reporters and UFO investigators find a considerable area of burned grass at the site. Those who visit the site shortly afterwards find their watches stop mysteriously. (Vicente-Juan Ballester Olmos and Jacques Vallée, "Survey of Iberian Landings," in Charles Bowen, ed., UFOs in Two Worlds, Special Issue 4 of FSR, August 1971, pp. 46, 50; Vicente-Juan Ballester Olmos, A Catalogue of 200 Type I UFO Events in Spain and Portugal, CUFOS, 1976, pp. 14–15; Clark III 280–281; Clark IV 321)

1968, August 16? — Around 9:00 p.m. A US Air Force pilot is flying a C-124 Globemaster II cargo plane at 9,000 feet between the Marshall Islands and Hickam AFB in Hawaii when he notices a soft green glow beneath the surface of the ocean some 3–4 miles ahead. As they draw closer, a green object ascends from the surface at about 115 mph until it reaches an altitude of 30,000–40,000 feet. Then it executes a right-angle turn and accelerates to the east at a high rate of speed. (National UFO Reporting Center, "NUFORC UFO Sighting 163458," July 31, 2021; Dolan, USO1, 327–329)

1968, August 17 — 8:21 p.m. Capt. Benjamin Gabrian is flying an Ilyushin Il-18 airliner at 22,800 feet in the vicinity of Oradea, Romania, when he sees an oval object on his right about a half-mile away and 900 feet higher. It is moving at high speed and emitting a bright green light. They watch it for 10–15 seconds before it accelerates and disappears to the west. (Hobana and Weverbergh 180–182; Romania 21)

1968, August 18 —Projects HAVE FEAR and LETHAL CHASER at Con Thien military base in Vietnam confirm 67 valid "tracks" on its joint UFO multi-sensor network from now through September 18. For a track to be considered valid, it must be within 11 miles of Con Thien, persist for more than two minutes, and travel at less than 180 mph. The network employs laser range finders, night observation devices, infrared sensors, video cameras, visual reconnaissance, search radar, manpack portable radar, and possibly Side-Looking Airborne Radar. None of tracks have conclusive identifications. The tracks are assumed to be "enemy helicopters," although the operation, at least at first, refers to them as "UFOs." (Clark III 1051, 1054; Clark IV 1166–1167, 1169)

1968, August 18 — 1:20 p.m. Technician Emil Barnea, his girlfriend Zamfira Matea, and two other friends are picnicking in the Hoia Baciu forest near Baciu, not far from Cluj-Napoca, Romania, when they see a round, metallic, luminous object moving slowly through the sky. Its brilliance increases and decreases as it maneuvers around for 2 minutes. Barnea succeeds in taking four photos of the object before it suddenly accelerates and shoots upwards. (Hobana and Weverbergh 99–107; UFOEv II 287; Adrian Pătruţ, "Phenomena in the Hoia Baciu Wood near Cluj-Napoca," Flying Saucer Review 53, no. 1 (Spring 2008): 10; Romania 21–27; Chris Hill, "Hoia Baciu: Romania's Haunted Forest," Fortean Times 382, August 2019, pp. 32–36; Patrick Gross, "Emil Barnea's Photographs, Cluj, Romania, 1968")

1968, August 21 — 6:58 a.m. The Canadian destroyer HMCS Mackenzie is on a mission in the Pacific Ocean about 930 miles off the coast of California. Four of the ship's crew, including Maj. W. J. Draper, see a group of starlike lights approaching from the northeast, initially only 10° above the horizon. They are flying in a row, and one in the middle of the line seems larger and has a white glow around it. Within 5 minutes, the procession of 20 objects passes nearly overhead, heading west. They maintain a steady course until they are lost to view 13 minutes later. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 73–74)

1968, August 22 — 5:40 p.m. Capt. Walter Gardin and Capt. Gordon W. Smith are flying over Zanthus, Western Australia, at 8,000 feet in a Piper Navajo single-engine airplane when they see a large cigar-shaped object surrounded by five smaller ones. The formation maintains a constant angle from their own flight path for more than 10 minutes, while they are flying at 224 mph. The large object then opens up its center and the smaller objects fly to and from the larger object. Ground air control reports no known air traffic in the area. At this point the radio fails at all frequencies until the objects fly away. ("Pilots See Formation over Australia," APRO Bulletin, Jan./Feb. 1969, pp. 1, 4; Paul B. Norman, "'Motherships' over Australia," Flying Saucer Review 24, no. 5 (March 1979): 9–10; Paul B. 1968, August 25 — 5:00 a.m. Hospital assistant Maria José Cintra of the Serafim Ferreira sanitarium in Lins, São Paulo, Brazil, hears a noise like the braking of a car. Cintra readies herself to meet people needing medical assistance. She opens a glass door and asks the visitor if she is a patient. The visitor, just over 6 feet tall, answers in an unknown language. The visitor is wearing a blue satiny cape, matching shoes, and a dress with a high collar and long sleeves. She shows Cintra a vessel with engraved ornaments, and Cintra fills it with water from a fountain and offers her a doughnut. The visitor walks to the door of the sanitorium and through some flowerbeds. At this point Cintra notices a semicircular "pebble-like" light on the ground and a UFO floating 1–2 feet above the grass. She feels the force of an invisible rotating movement and notices that the visitor is no longer there. The UFO rises into the air, making soft sounds like those she heard when the visitor arrived. Later, she and the sanitorium manager and his wife find high-heeled footprints on the freshly waxed floor near the door. On the lawn they discover a spot of scorched grass that persists for 4 months. Subsequent investigation reveals a depression in the ground 5–7 inches deep, apparently made by a vehicle with a diameter of about 6.5 feet. From his bed, another patient has seen the UFO land some 260 feet from the fence of the sanitarium and remain there for 15 minutes. 1968, August 26 — 7:50 p.m. Pearl Christiansen is unchaining the driveway to her ranch near Gleeson, Colorado, when she notices a round, silver disc. She watches it for 5 minutes, then a second object appears, "very shiny and gold." Both are hovering above 7,200-foot high Brown's Peak. They remain for several hours, then just after midnight they back away behind the mountain. Mr. and Mrs. Willard Mayfield also see the objects. Daily Citizen reporter Cecil James and photographer Dan Tortorell visit the apparent site and find erratic burned patches of Dasylirion plants (charred at the base but not at the top) and grass. Rocks show evidence of high heat and are still hot to the touch two days later. (Cecil James, "Gleeson UFO Leaves Traces," Tucson (Ariz.) Daily Citizen, October 19, 1968, Olé magazine, pp. 10, 22)

1968, September 1 — 3:42 a.m. Juan Carlos Peccinetti and Fernando José Villegas are driving home after getting off work at a casino in Mendoza, Argentina. On the Calle Neuquén, their car stops and the lights go out. They find themselves unable to move and several humanoid beings standing near an enormous landed UFO. They receive telepathic messages from the aliens who make marks on the windshield and one side of their car and see a screen full of dystopian images. The beings prick their fingers and take blood samples before going back to the UFO. However, the two later admit to making up the story. (Charles Bowen, "One Day in Mendoza," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1968): 2–5; UFOEv II 533; Clark III 601; Eghigian, After, p. 266; Clark IV 660)

1968, September 1 — Day. The Soviet research vessel Akademik Kurchatov is drifting in the South Pacific Ocean off the coast of Chile while the crew lowers some scientific instruments into the water by cable. When one of the instruments reaches a depth of about 1,640 feet, the thick steel cable suddenly shifts and slackens and the instrument vanishes. Shortly afterward, the cables carrying a soil sampling tube and a bottom dredge also break off. When the crew retrieves the cables, they seem to have been filed through. (Stonehill and Mantle, Russia's USO Secrets, Flying Disk, 2020, pp. 72–73; Dolan, USO1, 329–330)

1968, September 4 — Hynek receives a letter from Col. Raymond S. Sleeper, commander of the Air Force Foreign Technology Division. Sleeper notes that Hynek has publicly accused Project Blue Book of shoddy science, and further asks Hynek to offer advice on how Blue Book could improve its scientific methods. Hynek later declares that Sleeper's letter is "the first time in my 20 year association with the air force as scientific consultant that I had been officially asked for criticism and advice [regarding] ... the UFO problem." (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., pp. 189–190; Clark III 925; Clark IV 1035)

1968, September 4 — Two US Air Force pilots flying in the vicinity of Goose Bay AFB [now CFB Goose Bay], Labrador, spot a spherical metallic object flying in a southerly direction at 33,000–41,000 feet. It crosses behind them, stops, performs two 360° turns and disappears after 5 minutes at 30° above the horizon. (Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Sightings, Landings, and Abductions, Methuen, 1979, p. 115)

1968, September 4 — 10:30 p.m. A scoutmaster and 12 River Scouts are having a camp-out by bonfire in the mountains near Caracas, Venezuela, when they see two intensely glowing red discs, each about the size of the full moon, as they rise one at a time from some low hills, hover momentarily, and descend again. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 299)

1968, September 5 — Night. Thousands of people in Madrid, Spain, see a bright object in the sky, causing a monumental traffic jam. The Spanish Air Force scrambles an F-104 jet to intercept it. The pilot climbs to 50,000 feet but the object is still above him, and he has to return for fuel. Air Force radar tracks the UFO moving slowly at 90,000 feet. A photo taken through a telescope at the Royal Observatory of Madrid shows a triangular object, apparently solid on one side and translucent in some sections. The object disappears at great speed. The Madrid Weather Bureau says it has no meteorological balloons aloft. ("Triangle-Shaped Object over Madrid," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct. 1968, p. 4; Good Above, pp. 149–151)

1968, September 6 — 9:30 p.m. John Dow and Paul Franklin are driving on Springfield Road in Taradale, New Zealand, when they notice 20–30 red and green lights flying aimlessly above the city dump. They pull off the road to watch, and a "thunderous explosion" rips through the air, shaking the car. Immediately, the lights begin to group, take off vertically, and disappear. (Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, p. 48)

1968, September 9 — Day. Several witnesses on the beach at Itaipu, Niterói, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, see an object descending slowly and emitting beams of light. It makes several low-level passes over the beach before landing briefly. Some witnesses claim to see occupants. ("Landing on a Beach near Rio de Janeiro," Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1971): 30)

1968, September 10 — Evening. John Dow and Paul Franklin are on the Omarunui Road southwest of Taradale, New Zealand. They see a circular object with a red and green light that is only a few feet in diameter and glowing white. Heading toward the source, they watch as the UFO disappears behind a cloud. After crossing a bridge, they see the object again, hovering on the opposite side of the river. The object glows intensely and speeds toward the automobile from the rear. Panicking, they try to jump out of the car, which is traveling at 35 mph, but get tangled up and the car veers out of control. Both of them fall out the left door as the bright UFO hovers 2 feet above the car roof. The car crashes into the store of a fruit dealer on Gloucester Street. A crowd gathers around the two young men, still dazed and shocked. Nearly 24 hours later the witnesses are treated for "bruises and abrasions" at the Napier Hospital outpatient clinic because "their clothes were sticking to them." Dow is charged with reckless driving, but the circumstances convince the court to drop the charge and the insurance company pays for the damages. ("Youth Claims Car Crash Caused by 'Flying Saucer,'" Napier (N.Z.) Daily Telegraph, November 12, 1968; "New Rash of 'Buzzing' Incidents," APRO Bulletin, Nov./Dec. 1968, p. 5; Henk Hinfelaaar and Claude Elmes, "The Taradale Car Crash," Flying Saucer Review 15, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1969): 3–5; Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, pp. 48–50)

1968, September 13 — Condon calls together Craig, Gillmor, Roach, and Rush to discuss what the project's recommendations should be. He writes the recommendation section shortly afterwards. (Roy Craig, UFOs: An Insiders' View of the Official Quest for Evidence, University of North Texas, 1995, p. 213)

1968, September 15 — 10:00 p.m. Farmers in the area around Carora, Lara, Venezuela, have a difficult time controlling their cattle and horses when a saucer-shaped object with flickering yellow lights flies over the area at high speed and low altitude. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 299)

1968, September 15 — 10:00 p.m. Mathematician Miron Oprea is driving with his wife and two nephews northwest of Ploieşti, Romania, when they see a cylindrical object emitting a bluish light and descending slowly to the west near the Vega oil refinery. (Hobana and Weverbergh 183–184)

1968, September 16 — A car-racing contest at Barquisimeto, Lara, Venezuela, is disrupted when a low-flying disc flies above the grandstands. A photographer gets a snapshot that shows a sausage-shaped object about 12–15 feet above the heads of the crowd on the uppermost tier of bleachers. (Lorenzen, UFOs: The Whole Story, Signet, 1969, p. 299)

1968, September 17 — 1:00 a.m. Two air control tower operators at Nellis Air Force Base, Nevada, watch a bright light moving in a way they cannot explain. (Sparks, p. 329; J. Allen Hynek. The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, p. 44)

1968, September 18 — Farmer Marius Magnan sees three dull metallic, gray, football-shaped UFOs at an altitude of 2,500 feet and 2 miles away at Ste. Anne, Manitoba. They are traveling northwest to southeast in a vertical orientation at tremendous speed. The UFOs are discharging white substance from the upper surface just like popcorn. The white substance streams upward from two of the objects and downward from the third. After they disappear, a white, fibrous substance falls and settles on foliage, buildings, and power lines. The University of Manitoba analyzes a sample and finds it to be "cellulose-like and unstable," with a uniform fiber diameter of 5 microns, and probably rayon coated with a gummy substance. Angel Hair," Spacelink 6, no. 2 (January 1970): 2; Brian Boldman, "Angel Hair Physical Analyses: A Review," JUFOS 9 (2006): 104–105)

1968, September 18 — 4:15 a.m. Patrolman Arthur H. Byrd sees an object flashing red, blue, and yellow lights on Hunter Road in San Marcos, Texas, approaching at great speed. He follows it along Interstate 35 toward Luling and San Antonio, and at Redwood Road it comes to a stop. It slowly fades away by 7:15 a.m. ("UFO Said Followed for Hours," Austin (Tex.) American, September 19, 1968, p. 68)

1968, September 19 — 3:15 p.m.–7:15 p.m. A lighted white object is seen by many witnesses over Cluj-Napoca and other towns in northwestern Romania. Some of the sightings are attributable to a balloon, but others seem to be moving against the wind and internally lit. (Hobana and Weverbergh 139–149; Romania 27–29)

1968, Late September (or late September 1969) — Night. A teenager is putting hay in a rabbit pen at his home in the East Linden neighborhood of Columbus, Ohio. He hears a clapping noise and sees an entity dressed in a black uniform with a silver belt walking in the woods nearby. Its head has an eerie yellow glow. Scared, he runs into the house to get his parents, but the entity is gone when they go out to look for it. The next morning a neighbor stops by to ask if they had seen any lights in a field the night before. The families go to the field and find a large oval place where the grass, weeds, and bushes have been pressed down. (Irena Scott, "Observation of an Alien Figure," IUR 12, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1987): 20, 25)

1968, September 26–27 — 6:00 a.m. Industrial chemist Henrique Schneider Jr. gets up and checks the fire in the kiln next to his house in Vila Baumer in the northern part of Joinville, Santa Catarina, Brazil. He comes across a strange object in the pottery yard about 16 feet away. It is a cone-shaped device about 13 feet high sitting on a tripod under which a bluish light illuminates the ground, and it has a rectangular opening through which comes a treadmill. On the treadmill are two squared cylinders standing on end, both motionless. Schneider feels paralyzed and begins to converse telepathically with the nearest cylinder, which answers his questions clearly and briefly about where they come from, which is another star system, and they are investigating global warming on earth. Soon the treadmill goes back up into the object, the entrance closes, and it takes off with a hissing sound. The next day, Schneider finds a burned circle of grass just over 2 feet in diameter at the landing site. Inside this is a smaller circle of compressed grass and three holes where the tripod stood. (Carlos Varassin, "O Estranho Caso da Vila Baumer," SBEDV Boletim, no. 94/98 (September 1973/June 1974): 41–44; Brazil 141–145; "Contato Imediato em Joinville," Portal Fenomenum, March 9, 2022)

1968, September 29 — Night. Amateur astronomer Hermanus Voorsluys and ex-police officer Reginald Neal take several photographs of a UFO that they have seen for several nights above Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt at the southern tip of Vancouver Island, British Columbia. One photo shows a large object surrounded by four smaller luminous objects that have emerged from it, as well as a fifth object that has just appeared. After a zig-zagging descent, the smaller objects return to the level of the parent object and disappear. ("Mystery over Naval Base," Canadian UFO Report 1, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1969): 4–7)

1968, September 30 — Philip J. Klass writes a letter to Robert A. Frosch, wanting to know who has financed James E. McDonald's visits to Australia to investigate UFOs and who would fund his upcoming trip to Europe and the USSR. In late 1967, McDonald had secured a modest grant from the Office of Naval Research in order to study cloud formations in Australia. While there, McDonald conducts some UFO research on his own time. Klass mounts an extended, concerted campaign against McDonald, arguing that he has squandered government funds. The ONR responds by announcing that they had known of McDonald's UFO interests and have no objections to his personal hobbies. The University of Arizona comes to McDonald's defense, announcing that his UFO research was done on his own time, and has no adverse impact on his regular teaching and research duties at the university. (Clark III 700; Eghigian, After, p. 255; Clark IV 796)

1968, October? — A 7-page National Security Agency thought piece on UFOs is written by an unnamed NSA analyst (possibly Howell McConnell) around this time. It is declassified in 1984 with a disclaimer saying that it does not represent NSA policy. It discusses various hypotheses for UFOs (hoaxes, hallucinations, natural phenomena, secret earth projects, and extraterrestrial intelligence) and speculates what each answer would mean for the human species, placing credence in the ETH. ([US National Security Agency], "U.F.O. Hypothesis and Survival Questions," [October 1968]; Good Above, pp. 423–424)

1968, October — The editors of Flying Saucer Review, Charles Bowen and Gordon Creighton, begin to drift away from the extraterrestrial hypothesis in the wake of high-strangeness UFO cases. Bowen wonders if good and evil entities "from universes parallel with ours but with a different time stream" are using the earth as a battlefield, all the while shrouding themselves in a veil of illusion to confuse us as to their true nature and intention. (Charles Bowen, "Strangers about the House," Flying Saucer Review 14, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1968): 10–12; Clark III 878; Clark IV 973)

1968, October — Brazil's Sistema de Investigação de Objetos Aéreos Não Identificados (System of Investigation of Unidentified Aircraft), created by the Fourth Air Zone Command of the Brazilian Air Force and sponsored by Brig. Gen. José Vaz da Silva and coordinated by Maj. Gilberto Zani de Mello, goes into operation to investigate UFO sightings, especially physical trace cases. The operation lasts until the end of 1972. (Wikipedia, "SIOANI"; Clark III 1072–1073; Mauricio Meireles and Géssica Brandino, "Inside the 70-Year Military Investigation of Aliens in Brazil," Folha de São Paulo, October 31, 2024; Eghigian, After, p. 225; Clark IV 1187–1188)

1968, October — George Hiner sees a white, dome-shaped object that rises about 10 feet above the water as he is looking for swordfish off Santa Catalina Island, California. It sinks back into the water, then resurfaces. He sees a billowing, parachute-like extension under the dome. (Coral E. Lorenzen, The Shadow of the Unknown, Signet, 1970, p. 87; Dolan, USO1, 330–331)

1968, October 2 — 6:20 a.m. While oiling his tractor's engine at the end of Avenida da Saudade in Lins, São Paulo, Brazil, Turíbio Pereira sees only a few feet away a golden cigar-shaped object hovering one foot above the ground. It is about 16 feet long and 10 feet wide. There is a platform around it and on the top a transparent dome is open. Inside there are four stools and an instrument panel. Pereira sees four beings around it wearing blue tunics and red skirts. One is on the platform with a weapon in its hand, another is picking up earth samples, the third is looking at his tractor's engine, and the fourth is inside the object at the instrument panel. The being with the weapon fires it and a luminous ball hits Pereira in the stomach, paralyzing him. The entities go inside, and a transparent dome encloses them. The object ascends and shoots off at high speed. With difficulty, Pereira climbs off the tractor and stumbles to the road where a friend takes him home. Later he is given a medical examination by Antônio Geris and summoned to a Brazilian Air Force facility where he is questioned and held for three days. (Gordon Creighton, "Confrontation at Lins," Flying Saucer Review 15, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1969): 22–23; Patrick Gross, URECAT, December 22, 2006; Brazil 105–107)

1968, October 5 — 7:52 p.m. John D. Hickey and his family are driving near West Morehead Street in Charlotte, North Carolina. While stopped at a traffic light, he sees a black object like a short cigar moving on his left, but it stops and hovers above a low building about 500 feet away. Suddenly three large gray-white lights shaped like television picture tubes turn on, each about 22 inches in diameter. A small black arm-like device moves slowly out of one end, extends a few feet, then stops. A blue light is at one end. The three large lights begin to blink slowly, then rapidly for 25 seconds. The blue light goes out, the arm retracts, the large lights blink more slowly until they stop. The lights go out and the object moves to the east. 1968, October 7 — Hynek responds to Col. Sleeper's request with an extended commentary prefaced by a succinct, eight-point critique of everything Project Blue Book has done wrong: the project suffers from (1) inadequate execution, (2) inadequate staff, (3) lack of open consultation with scientists outside the Air Force, (4) laughable statistical methods, (5) too much time spent on routine cases and not exceptional cases, (6) inadequate data provided by local Air Force base investigators, (7) biased evaluations, and (8) inadequate use of the project's own scientific consultant. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 202–206, 283–305; Clark III 925–926; Clark IV 1035–1036)

1968, October 18 — 5:00 p.m. Hundreds of witnesses view a conical object that appears above Sarajevo, Bosnia and Herzegovina, traveling from northwest to southeast. The UFO at first appears bright blue then changes first to a whitish-blue then to red. When it reaches a point just south of Sarajevo and northeast of the city of Mostar, the object turns to the east. It remains in view from 90 minutes to two hours. Members of the Akademski Astronomsko-Astronautiki Klub take photos of the object and, six months later, issue a report on their investigation of the incident. It estimates that the UFO was flying at an altitude of 16 miles and a speed of 20 mph, probably guided by air currents and not self-propelled, and most likely was a military reconnaissance balloon. (Hobana and Weverbergh 84–90)

1968, October 24 — 2:15–5:18 a.m. Sixteen military personnel stationed throughout the Minuteman ICBM missile complex at Minot AFB, North Dakota, report a very large, brightly illuminated aerial object, alternating colors from brilliant white to orange-red and green, with the ability to hover, accelerate rapidly, and abruptly change direction. At 2:15 a.m., a two-person security team reports a glowing object descending behind some trees near a missile silo. Other reports from security teams begin to reach headquarters. Ground radar tracks an unidentified target correlated with a visual orange glow and radios it (saying, "Someone is seeing flying saucers again") to the attention of the USAF crew of a B-52H Stratofortress bomber at 2,000 feet as a UFO target 24 miles to the northwest. It shifts to 15 miles at 3:35 a.m. RAPCON alerts the pilots (instructor pilot Maj. Bradford Runyon and copilot Maj. James Partin) to the location of the UFO near Bowbells, North Dakota, which the B-52 navigator Capt. Patrick D. McCaslin observes on the radarscope maintaining a three-mile distance throughout a standard 180° turnaround. Radar navigator Maj. Charles Richey captures the tracking on film. As the B-52 starts its descent back to Minot AFB, the UFO appears to close distance to one mile at a high rate of speed, pacing the aircraft for nearly 20 miles before disappearing off the radarscope. Both B-52 UHF radios cannot transmit during the close radar encounter with the UFO and when the radarscope film is recorded. Shortly afterwards, RAPCON provides vectors for the B-52 to overfly a stationary UFO on or near the ground. After turning onto the downwind leg of the traffic pattern, the pilots observe a large, illuminated UFO ahead of the aircraft for several minutes, before turning onto the base leg over the UFO while observing it at close range. After the B-52 lands, both outer and inner-zone intrusion alarms are activated at the remote missile Launch Facility Oscar-7. The duration of the reported observations is over three hours. The velocity of the object varies from stationary to 12,716 mph. On four occasions the object exhibits rapid changes in movement from radar track to radar track, resulting in acceleration values of 18, 48, 60, and 449 g-forces. The radar image suggests the object's size is 656 feet by 164 feet. Other witnesses include Capt. Thomas Goduto, S/Sgt James F. Bond, S/Sgt William E. Smith, A1C Robert O'Connor, A1C Joseph P. Jablonski, and A1C Gregory Adams. The chief of the 862nd Combat Support Group, Lt. Col. Arthur J. Werlich, is designated as Blue Book liaison and he calls the report in at 4:30 p.m. after SAC investigations, an analysis of the radarscope film, and the B-52 crew debriefing. Werlich provides Blue Book with selected data through October 31. On November 13, Blue Book chief Lt. Col. Hector Quintanilla completes his evaluation and forwards the final report to SAC headquarters. It is a single-page letter providing several possible explanations for the various reports, along with 11 pages of attachments cobbled together in support. He attributes the B-52 radar contact and loss of UHF transmission to "a plasma similar to ball lightning." 1968, October 24 — 6:47 p.m. The Romanian oil tanker Argeş is steaming through the Mozambique Channel when Third Officer Ştefan Anton and Commander Nicolae Ştefanescu see a bright orange-yellow disc half the diameter of the Moon moving swiftly and emitting blue-green rays from its center. At one point it stops abruptly for a moment and changes course to the east. By sextant they estimate it is 15.5 miles away and 56 feet in diameter. (Hobana and Weverbergh 250–251)

1968, October 31 — The Colorado project delivers its report, Scientific Study of Unidentified Flying Objects, to the Air Force, which, however, takes pains to avoid looking at it until it is released to the public. The first two sections, conclusions and recommendations, are written by Condon himself. He concludes that "further extensive study of UFOs probably cannot be justified in the expectation that science will be advanced thereby." It is a clear signal to shut down Project Blue Book. Yet 30% of its cases are unexplained. Condon says a UFO cover-up is unthinkable because no one could keep such a secret for so long. He refutes the claim that the CIA has installed an agent within the project. He disapproves of UFO "amateurists," especially NICAP. The project ignored old cases because they only offered witness testimony, are probably misidentifications, and it makes little sense to reinterview witnesses. But this means ignoring the most compelling cases of the past 20+ years. Condon rejects the ETH because it is so unlikely that aliens can get here from there. This attitude suggests that Condon's approach is fundamentally antiempirical. The report also includes summaries of field studies, photographic evidence, direct and indirect physical evidence, optical and radar cases, and astronaut sightings. In the field studies section, Roy Craig concedes that some of the older cases suggest something extraordinary (Great Falls, RB-47). William K. Hartmann divides photo cases into fabrications, misidentifications, poor image quality, and clear images that lack sufficient data. Great Falls and McMinnville are the only two that he considers unusual.

Gordon Thayer discusses the predominance of anomalous propagation in radar cases. In finding natural explanations, Thayer often disregards witness testimony. The rest of the report is mostly padding. 1968, November — Two children are playing in the garden of their father's hotel in Southampton, England, when they notice a "speck" come out of the clouds. It grows in size and comes closer, moving above the hotel roof. The shape is a large flattened disc with black square windows on the side. It moves to a point about 10 feet directly above them and hovers for 30 seconds, then it speeds up and disappears behind some trees. ("Foreign Forum," IUR 3, no. 6 (June 1978): 2)

1968, November 2 — 3:55 a.m. A partially paralyzed Algerian veteran, Dr. X, has suffered an injury to his leg while chopping at a stump on his property in a village in the south of France on October 29. He is lying in bed when he is awakened by his crying 14-month-old son. He sees two luminous objects outside his house. They are coming close together and merging about 590 feet away. A vertical beam of light is aimed at him for a second as the object tilts, and then the display vanishes with a sort of explosion, leaving behind a slowly dissolving cloud. Shortly afterwards, the man's leg heals and his war wound is better. He also experiences nightmares, stomach pains, and a red pigmentation appears around his navel, forming a triangle. He goes to a dermatologist but does not mention the UFO; the doctor is stumped. The man's son also develops a red triangle. In November 1984, a French radio reporter records the gradual reappearance of the triangle on X's abdomen. Jacques Vallée later casts doubt on the case in his Forbidden Science series of books, saying that the story turned into a "vaguely occult tale" in which he "lied about some key aspects." (Aimé Michel, "The Strange Case of Dr. X," in Charles Bowen, ed., UFO Percipients, special issue no. 3 of FSR, September 1969, pp. 3–16; Aimé Michel, "The Strange Case of Dr. 'X,' Part 2," Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1971): 3–9; Jacques Vallée, Confrontations, Ballantine, 1990, pp. 113–122; Clark III 410–413; Bill Chalker, "The Labyrinths of Forbidden Science: The Journals of Jacques Vallée," TheOzFiles, February 26, 2023; Clark IV 456–459)

1968, November 3 — 4:15 p.m. Two teenage boys, Robert Hubbard and David Kelley, see a domed, disc-shaped UFO about 200 feet in diameter discharging angel hair over the Spring Branch West area of Houston, Texas. They watch it for two minutes until it takes off when a commercial jet approaches. C. E. "Gene" Senter investigates and recovers a twig with angel hair that he puts in a plastic bag and freezes. A chemist analyzes the substance in a petroleum-industry lab but finds out little other than it is sticky and fibrous. ("Substance Linked to UFO Is Classified As a Mystery," *Lubbock (Tex.) 1968, November 15 — The Air Force sends the Colorado report to the National Academy of Sciences for review by an 11-member panel, chaired by Yale University astronomer Gerald Maurice Clemence and charged with an independent assessment of its scope, methodology, and findings. (Clark III 1197–1198; Clark IV 1372)

1968, November 20 — 5:45 p.m. Milan and Doris Milakovic and their son are driving southwest out of Hanbury, Staffordshire, England, when several rabbits run across the road from their left. Suddenly they see a brilliant object. They stop the car and watch as it rises from a field on their left, silently pass over the car, and move toward a solitary house about 300 feet away on the right where it stops and hovers, "quivering like jelly." The air temperature seems to drop. For approximately 5 minutes, they see what appear to be several humanoid figures walking across the bright top of the UFO, which is as wide as the house. Intermittently, some of the figures bend down as though looking at something in the part of the object below the rim. Then the UFO begins moving up in a pulsating or jerky movement. The intensity of its light increases and Milakovic feels like his eyes are burning. Thoroughly frightened, Milakovic pushes his wife and son back into the car and speeds away from the scene. (N. M. H. Turner and W. Daniels, "Report of the Encounter between the Milakovic Family and a Flying Saucer in the Hanbury Area of Staffordshire," BUFORA Journal 2, no. 7 (Winter 1968/1969): 4–7; W. 1968, November 23 — 8:05 p.m. An accountant named Jones is driving his 1967 Ford Custom along the road between Newton and Albany, Georgia. When he rounds a bend he sees a brilliant yellowish-white light about 200 feet ahead of him and 50–75 feet above the road. As he approaches, the car radio fades into static. Then the object emits a beam of well-defined light about 5–6 feet wide that illuminates the trees and causes his engine and radio to cut out as it passes over his car. The object changes color to orange-red and ascends at a high rate of speed, disappearing in less than 15 seconds. The car engine starts spontaneously afterward. (Sparks, p. 330; Hynek UFO Report, pp. 189–191; Powell, Scientist, 98–99; Clark IV 1218)

1968, November 25 — 6:00 p.m. Elaine Pelchy is driving with her 2-year-old son and dog on Highway 174 south of Marcellus, New York, when they see an object with five red, blinking lights about 100 feet in front of her car and heading southeast. The radio gets a lot of static and the English setter begins to get nervous, clawing at the window and putting its head over its eyes and ears. The boy starts crying, then the car engine begins to sputter. The object executes a U-turn and moves to the northwest as the lights change to blinking blue and white. Suddenly, the UFO stops and changes to a white, dome-shaped object with a "fluorescent star" next to it. The larger object merges into the star and disappears. Pelchy drops her son off at her mother-in-law's, then returns on the same route. The dog starts to whine again as a light the size of a basketball fluctuates in intensity and zigzags across the sky. She goes home but returns to the scene with a neighbor and the light is still visible and maneuvering. (Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, pp. 40–41)

1968, November 26 — Dusk. Two flight instructors and two student pilots in Cessna 150 aircraft are flying between Winter Haven and Melbourne, Florida, when they see four objects flying in echelon formation about 6,000 feet to their right at 1,500 feet altitude. They are white ovals and seem to be the size of C-130 military transports. After 10 minutes one of the objects descends close to the ground as the remaining objects continue to pace the planes. Some 10 miles away from Melbourne, one of the pilots banks his plane and moves toward the objects, which then take off upward at 2,000 mph and disappear. ("Four UFOs Pace Aircraft," UFO Investigator 4, no. 10 (Feb./Mar. 1969): 1)

1968, November 26 — 5:40 p.m. Three control tower operators (Jack Wilhelm, Jack Reeves, and John Fischer) at Bismarck (North Dakota) Airport observe two swiftly moving round objects traveling in opposite directions. They reverse course and approach each other, hover together, then instantly zoom off to the northeast. Air Force radar at Great Falls, Montana, picks up "foreign objects" at the same time 85 miles northeast of Bismarck. The objects are also seen by Robert Watts, who is flying a Cessna 150. (NICAP, "Air Force Radar Tracks Objects"; "It Was Something But No One Knows What," Bismarck (N.Dak.) Tribune, November 27, 1968, pp. 1–2; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 43–44, 51–52; UFOEv II 130–131)

1968, November 27 — A 41-page paper by George Kocher of the RAND Corporation, "UFOs: What to Do?" is produced as an internal document. It notes the likelihood of intelligent life in the universe, speculates UFOs may well have been around for a long time, looks at some compelling reports, and assesses the difficulty of estimating the number of sightings worldwide "because of the lack of suitable data collection means." (George Kocher, "UFOs: What to Do?" RAND Corporation, November 27, 1968)

1968, November 27 — 7:00 p.m. While on patrol, officer Joseph Trotier of the Belcourt, North Dakota, police department, sees a round, glowing object with purple lights arrayed around its underside, alternately hovering and moving around the sky. As it hovers at 500 feet, the UFO emits a red beam of light toward the ground. Trotier shines a spotlight at the object, which immediately blacks out and disappears. After about 5 minutes it reappears. Moving south with its lights back on. ("Object Reacts to Light," UFO Investigator 4, no. 9 (January 1969): 8; UFOEv II 188)

1968, December — David R. Saunders (along with journalist R. Roger Harkins) explains his version of the Colorado project in UFOs? Yes! He presents a picture of Edward Condon as a distracted, out-of-touch, and stubborn director who consistently refuses to look into plausible data. (David R. Saunders and R. Roger Harkins, UFOs? Yes! Where the Condon Committee Went Wrong, Signet, 1968; Eghigian, After, p. 209)

1968, December —The 1st Amphibian Tractor Battalion of the 3rd Marine Division track 18 incidents of unidentified "helicopters" or UFOs (as well as two in November) near the Demilitarized Zone in Vietnam through the joint Army–Air Force–Marine Western Pistol project. (Clark IV 1169)

1968, December — The American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics announces that it has formed a UFO Subcommittee to study the UFO phenomenon objectively. Joachim P. Kuettner of ESSA Research Laboratories is the chairman; other members include Jerald M. Bidwell of Martin Marietta, Glenn A. Cato of TRW Systems Group, Bernard N. Charles of Aerospace Corporation, Murray Dryer of ESSA Research Laboratories, Howard D. Edwards of Georgia Institute of Technology, Paul MacCready of Meteorology Research, Andrew J. Masley of Douglas Missile and Space Systems Division, Robert Rados of NASA Goddard Space Flight Center, and Donald M. Swingle of the US Army Electronic Command. It announces in Astronautics and Aeronautics that the UFO issue "cannot be resolved without further study in a quantitative scientific manner and that it deserves the attention of the engineering and scientific community." ("AIAA Committee Looks at UFO Problem," Astronautics and Aeronautics, December 1968, p. 12)

1968, December 26 — The Spanish Air Ministry's press office issues a release inviting citizens to report UFO cases to the air force. A few days later, Second Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Mariano Cuadra Medina issues the first regulations in Spain on how to handle UFO reports. The information is rated confidential. (Swords 423)

1968, Late December — 11:30 a.m. Traumatologist Sebastian José Tarda is on vacation in Patagonia and leading a group of secondary school students on a motorboat field trip on Nahuel Huapi Lake, Argentina. Tarda is taking photos of the lake shore near Puerto Blest, but does not notice anything unusual. When one slide is developed, it shows a blurry white object against a mountainous background. An analysis by the Argentine UFO group Circulo de Investigación Cientifico Espacial states that the image is not caused by a lens flare, damaged emulsion, or a known object. Another analysis suggests that the object moved while the shutter was depressed. Ground Saucer Watch considers it a lens flare. ("UFO Appears in Photo over Nahuel Huapi Lake, Argentina," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 3, no. 1 (February 1982): 1–2; "Dr. Tarda 1968 Photograph Judged Lens Flare by GSW," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 3, no. 2 (April 1982): 3)

1969

1969 — The CIA's Operation Often is initiated by the chief of the CIA's Technical Services Branch, Sidney Gottlieb, to "explore the world of black magic" and "harness the forces of darkness and challenge the concept that the inner reaches of the mind are beyond reach." As part of the operation, Gottlieb and other CIA employees visit with and recruit fortune-tellers, palm-readers, clairvoyants, astrologers, mediums, psychics, specialists in demonology, witches and warlocks, Satanists, and other occult practitioners. (Wikipedia, "MKOFTEN")

1969 — Gérard Lebat founds Groupe d'Études des Objets Spatiaux, which publishes GEOS International from July 1969 to July 1970, then Les Extraterrestres from November 1970 to October 1979, then Hypothèses Extraterrestres from January 1980 to July 1981, in Rebais, Seine-et-Marne, France. (GEOS International, no. 1 (July 1969)); Les Extraterrestres, no. 9 (Nov./Dec. 1970); Hypothèses Extraterrestres, no. 13 (January 1980))

1969 — In Passport to Magonia, Jacques Vallée proposes a radically revisionist argument that UFOs are better understood when related to folk traditions about supernatural creatures (elementals, fairies, angels, demons) than to astronomers' speculations about life in outer space. He says science cannot adequately deal with such matters, although he does not specifically disavow the scientific method. He sees the UFO phenomenon as a "resurgence of a deep stream in human culture known in older times under various other names." It is the first book to question the ETH and the first to lay the groundwork for the psychosocial hypothesis, which sees UFOs as largely the product of unusual mental states and perpetuated by social acceptance. He argues that ostensible otherworldly manifestations are fantastic images propelled via psychic technology from humanity's future to generate myths and religions that will change fate. In time the book leads to a new school of ufology whose advocates hold that UFOs and other anomalous experiences are internally generated and shaped entirely by cultural processes as opposed to nonhuman intelligences. Jerry Clark writes that the "genius of Passport, a genuinely brilliant work, is its success in placing UFOs into not only cultural but experiential context." (Jacques Vallée, Passport to Magonia, Regnery, 1969; Clark III 464, 881–882, 939–942, 1214; Eghigian, After, pp. 248–249; Clark IV 510, 975–977, 1050–1052, 1390)

1969 — Contactee Ted Owens writes How to Contact Space People. Owens, who calls himself the "PK Man," attributes his psychic and precognitive abilities to UFO occupants who operated on his brain when he was a child, a modification that made him half-human, half-alien. He claims to be in two-way contact with saucer intelligences. (Ted Owens, How to Contact the Space People, Saucerian, 1969; Margaret Sachs, The UFO Encyclopedia, Putnam, 1980, pp. 235–236)

1969 — Spanish ufologist Antonio Ribera receives his first Ummo communication, a letter postmarked from Paris, Franca. An Ummo cult has begun to form, and books—both journalistic accounts and anthologies of Ummo writings—find an avid readership. (Clark III 1185; Clark IV 1359)

1969 — A family of four working on an archaeological project in Great Sand Dunes National Monument, Colorado, allegedly watches a jet intercept a seemingly disabled cylindrical object that passes 500 feet above them before crashing into the sand. The UFO is retrieved by the military. (David B. Clemens, "High Strangeness in a Colorado Valley," MUFON UFO Journal, no. 313 (May 1994): 13–14; Clark III 341; Clark IV 377)

1969 — Night. During its extended deployment to Vietnam with the 7th Fleet, the destroyer USS Leary is navigating fishing waters in the Gulf of Tonkin. Ensign Will Miller is alerted by the lookout about a possible light from a fishing boat in the water ahead. But the light suddenly moves from above the water to below the surface and heads rapidly toward the ship at 45° to the bow, passing below the vessel. The sailors run to the starboard side to see whether it will emerge, but it does not. Nothing is tracked on radar or sonar or by the ECM system. (Good Need, pp. 284–285)

1969, January — John Magor begins publishing the quarterly Canadian UFO Report in Duncan, British Columbia. It persists through the summer issue of 1979. (Canadian UFO Report 1, no. 1 (January 1969))

1969, January 6 — 7:15 p.m. Future president Jimmy Carter is preparing to give a speech at a Lions Club meeting at Leary, Georgia. One of the guests calls his attention to a strange object visible about 30° above the horizon to the west of where he is standing. Carter describes the object as being bright white and about as bright as the moon. It appears to have closed in on where he is standing but stops beyond a stand of pine trees some distance from him. The object changes color, first to blue, then to red, then back to white, before appearing to recede into the distance. Carter feels that the object is self-illuminated and not solid in nature. Carter's report indicates that it is witnessed by about 10–12 other people and is in view for 10–12 minutes before it passes out of sight. Skeptic Robert Sheaffer concludes that the object is a misidentification of Venus. Ufologist Allan Hendry does calculations and agrees with the assessment of the object as Venus. Jere Justus thinks it might have been a barium cloud produced by rockets launched from Eglin AFB near Valparaiso, Florida. (Wikipedia, "Jimmy Carter UFO incident"; [case report to Hayden C. 1969, January 8 — The National Academy of Sciences releases its review of the Colorado project report, giving its enthusiastic approval. In a letter to Assistant Secretary of the Air Force Alexander H. Flax, Frederick Seitz expresses the hope that the review would "be helpful to you and other responsible officials in determining the nature and scope of any research effort in this area." ("UFOs Visitors from Another Planet?" *Bryan (Tex.) 1969, January 8 — Science reporter Walter Sullivan writes that the soon-to-be-released Colorado project report will debunk the extraterrestrial hypothesis and dismiss "demands of some scientists and laymen for a large-scale effort to determine the nature of such 'flying saucers.' Such a project, the report says in effect, would be a waste of time and money." Sullivan dismisses the project's critics as "UFO enthusiasts." (Walter Sullivan, "U.F.O. Finding: No Visits from Afar," New York Times, January 8, 1969, pp. 1–2; Clark III 1198; Clark IV 1372)

1969, January 9 — The Colorado project report is released to the public in a 965-page Bantam Books edition. (Edward U. Condon, scientific director, Scientific Study of Unidentified Flying Objects, Bantam, 1969; [HTML version]; Clark III 1198; Eghigian, After, pp. 208–210; Clark IV 1372)

1969, January 11 — Keyhoe, David R. Saunders, and McDonald hold a press conference at the National Press Club in Washington, D.C., to criticize the Condon report. ("The Truth about the Condon Report," UFO Investigator 4, no. 9 (January 1969): 1–2; "Condon Report Rejections Increase," UFO Investigator 4, no. 10 (Feb./March 1969): 1; Lloyd Mallan, "The Condon Report: Fact or Fiction?" Science and Mechanics, May 1969, pp. 38–40, 86–90; Jacobs, UFO Controversy in America, Signet ed., 1976, pp. 216–217; Eghigian, After, p. 209)

1969, January 17 — 3:24 a.m. A NASA employee is awakened in his home at Crittenden, Virginia, by a loud hum like an electrical transformer going bad. Looking out the window, he sees an elliptical object, about 30 feet wide, flying 100 feet above the ground. Around its base is a ring of rectangular amber-lighted windows, one of which is blinking in time to changes in the pitch of the hum. The object rocks gently as it moves and makes a slow turn to the west, fading from sight. Blue Book investigators try to convince him he has seen a helicopter, but there is no evidence of traffic that night. They label the sighting "unidentified," the last report so designated in the blue Book files. (Kevin D. Randle, The UFO Casebook, Ballantine, 1989, pp. 135–138)

1969, January 21 — The Lucens reactor in Vaud, Switzerland, suffers a loss-of-control accident that leads to a partial core meltdown and massive radioactive contamination of its cavern, which is sealed. (Wikipedia, "Lucens reactor")

1969, January 22 — Elements of the Ninth Marine Division go more than a mile into Laos to protect the flanks of a major combat operation. The New York Times reveals the operation on February 12. Though American combat involvement in Laos is not officially acknowledged until 1969, the US is known to have organized, trained, and equipped a clandestine army of Laotian irregulars since the early 1950s, under the direction of the CIA. (Seymour M. Hersh, "Secret 1969 Foray into Laos Reported," New York Times, August 12, 1973, p. 1, 5)

1969, January 25 — 12:30 a.m. A young couple is driving near Plattville, Illinois. The woman sees a bright object shaped like an ice-cream cone low in the sky ahead, traveling big end first. They get within a quarter mile and the object turns point up and only 30 feet off the ground. Security lights on a nearby farmhouse go off. The object, now seemingly 2–3 stories tall, spins and flashes, and the car engine and lights go off. The front end of the car lifts 3 feet off the ground. The UFO moves away and the car drops and regains its power. (Michael D. Swords, "Messing Around with the Force," IUR 31, no. 4 (March 2008): 16)

1969, January 27 — Gordon Lore, frustrated with Keyhoe's absences and lack of concern for NICAP's operation, vents his feelings in a 9-page confidential memo to the staff. He acknowledges that the negative effect of the Condon Report would be "difficult to successfully refute," but it is clear that NICAP's administrative problems are long-standing and getting worse. He appeals for harmony, effectiveness, and putting the organization's needs above their own. (Gordon Lore, [memo to NICAP staff], "Complaints and Problems," January 27, 1969, page 1; Powell, Keyhoe, 380–381)

1969, January 29? —10:00 a.m. A woman is gathering herbs near Matadepera, Catalonia, Spain, when she hears a loud whooshing noise and sees a metallic object moving toward her from some trees. It changes course quickly and abruptly to avoid hitting a power line. The object is about 10 feet long, 5 feet wide, and 8 feet high, tapering toward the rear. It is colored bright green and yellow in splotches and spots. On the bottom she sees a yellow-orange circle surrounded by a black ring. Once past the power line, the object rises rapidly and disappears over low houses and pine trees. A local researcher finds four curious raised lines of earth at the site, as if they were raised by something tunnelling underneath, although they do not resemble mole burrowings. (José Maria Casas-Huguet, "A Possible Landing at Matadepera," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 12 (December 1972): 1–3)

1969, January 31 — After a series of visual sightings and radar trackings of UFOS "of helicopter speed and altitude" beginning in October 1968, the US Air Force and Army set up another UFO observation network in the West Central Highlands near Pleiku, Vietnam, using pulse acquisition radar, continual wave acquisition radar, and illumination radar. The system picks up 365 unidentified tracks through April 1969. The UFOs tend to disappear when approached by aircraft (Clark III 1052–1053; Clark IV 1167–1168)

1969, February — 2d Lt. Carmon L. Marano replaces Lt. Col. Hector Quintanilla as head of the moribund Project Blue Book. (Sparks, p. 14; Clark III 937; Clark IV 1047)

1969, February 7 — 7:30 a.m. Tiago Machado, 19, wakes up at his home in Pirassununga, São Paulo, Brazil, and hears a neighbor shouting about a silvery-blue object landed on a hill on the grounds of the Zootecníca. He watches it for a time, then goes in to get binoculars. He goes off to the hill and approaches the object until he is about 33 feet away. It is a disc made of silvery metal with a dome on top. It is about 13 feet in diameter and stands on three legs. A door opens and two men come floating down to the ground. Machado can see two other beings inside. The men walk toward him, making signs. They are wearing silver diver's suits, have black teeth and thin-lipped mouths, and one eye is lower than the other. Each has a kind of burn or cicatrice on each cheek. Machado is nervous, so he lights a cigarette. The beings apparently think this is funny, so he tosses the cigarette pack toward them. One of them leans sideways and stretches out his hand. The pack floats 8 inches up to his hand and disappears. Suddenly one of Machado's friends calls out to him, and the beings walk back to the UFO, still facing him, and jump up to the door. The last one in pauses and pulls out a kind of weapon, points it at Machado, and a flame like a welding arc comes out of the barrel and floats toward him, hitting him in the thigh. He feels faint and paralyzed as the UFO takes off. His friends carry him to a neighbor's house and find a red swelling on his leg. Later, investigators find three imprints in an equilateral triangle at the site, each about 5 inches in diameter. Soil samples taken show no radioactivity. ("Brazil in Throes of Big Flap," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1969, pp. 1, 5; Nigel Rimes, "The Pirassununga Landing," in Charles Bowen, ed., UFO Percipients, special issue no. 3 of FSR, September 1969, pp. 39–45; "Caso Tiago Machado," Portal Fenomenum, June 15, 2016; Brazil 109–114)

1969, February 13 — McDonald speaks on "UFOs: A Challenge to Observation" at the American Meteorological Society in Washington, D.C. (James E. McDonald, "UFOs: A Challenge to Observation," February 13, 1969; Story, p. 415)

1969, February 16 — Night. A M. Meingault, the caretaker of the Château des Martins in Bignoux, Vienne, France, hears two of the mares and three colts galloping about in a panic in their field. He investigates and sees a pair of brilliant, pale-green, shining eyes at a spot between a clump of bushes and the paddock fence. He estimates they must be fairly large to be seen at a distance and appear to be just under 4 feet above the ground. He goes inside to get a gun, then walks around the field. The horses are still galloping, this time through a thicket that they normally would not enter. Although it is a very dark night, he gets the fleeting impression that there is a shadow following the horses. Meingault fires several shots in the air to scare away any attacker. Even though the animals still haven't settled down, he goes back inside and to bed. The next morning, the horses still seem disturbed and have damaged the fence considerably in more than 10 places. (Jean-Claude Baillon, "Eerie Night at the Château des Martins," Flying Saucer Review 16, no. 4 (July/August 1970): 24–26, 34)

1969, February 18 — Morning. Barbara Smyth, a teacher in a small town in Alberta, is driving to school when she sees on her right a "gigantic, bright pinky-red coloured" object "about seven times the size of a steel granary of 14ft. diameter." It looks like two rounded layers divided by a thin blue line. There are two flashing white lights on the top and a tent-like structure that pulsates and changes color from silver to fiery yellow. The UFO starts spinning counterclockwise and jumps over to the next hill. Suddenly, her car is no longer under her control as it floats down a very bumpy road. After three minutes the UFO disappears, and the car returns to normal. (W. K. Allan, "A UFO and the Car Which 'Floated Along,'" Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 6 (August 1971): 8, iii; Clark III 250; Clark IV 290)

1969, February 18 — McDonald presents "UFOs and the Condon Report: A Dissenting View" to the Pacific Missile Range Section of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics in Point Mugu, California. (James E. McDonald, "UFOs and the Condon Report: A Dissenting View," February 18, 1969; Story, p. 415; Patrick Gross, "Scientists Take Position")

1969, February 19 — 12:30 p.m. Two telephone linemen are working atop a pole near Lebel-sur-Quévillon, Quebec, when the see a gray, metallic cylinder with four fins at its end moving slowly west to east over the trees and about 150 feet above the ground. The object is 100 feet long and only 15 feet in diameter. The men watch it for a few minutes as it glides slowly out of sight. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, p. 72)

1969, February 20 — Keyhoe writes a confidential letter to NICAP staff that he delays delivering until March 19. It endorses Gordon Lore's earlier memo, but it also airs his own problems and errors and guilt. (Donald E. Keyhoe, "Confidential Letter from the Director to Members of the NICAP Staff. Not to Be Copied or Xerox'd," February 20, 1969, page 1; Powell, Keyhoe, 383–386)

1969, February 26 — 2:30 a.m. In Lins, São Paulo, Brazil, several people traveling by car along the Avenida da Saudade, see an oval, yellowish-golden object with a halo near a cemetery wall, about 3,200 feet away. The object, the size of a station wagon, tilts with one side lower than the other. Later that day, a watchman, José Alves da Silva, also observes the same object in another part of Lins. Two days earlier, on February 24, multiple witnesses had reported seeing a vivid red ball above the town center. (Walter Buhler, "Brazilian Cases in 1968 and 1969—4," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 5 (1971): 9, 13)

1969, February 26 — 10:20 a.m. Two truck drivers, R. J. Johnson and P. C. Wheelock, along with a motorist named Dan Littleton, observe an unidentified object moving across Interstate 20 near the Hallsville access road east of Longview, Texas. The object is above treetop height and travels north at around 40 mph. It appears as a small, dense, nearly black cloud with a gray portion drooping forward and downward, roughly the size of a small Ford or Chevrolet. The object moves horizontally, with its trailing gray haze at the front. No planes, helicopters, or explosions are present. ("Three People Saw It," Longview (Tex.) Morning Journal, February 27, 1969, p. 3)

1969, Early March — Secretary of the Air Force Office of Information representative Maj. David J. Shea attends a meeting in the Pentagon in which "there was no doubt that Project Blue Book was finished." (David J. Shea, "NCAS Presentation," September 8, 2018; Clark III 926; Clark IV 1036)

1969, March 3 — The US Navy establishes its Fighter Weapons School (Top Gun) to teach fighter and strike tactics to selected aviators and officers at Naval Air Station Miramar [now Marine Corps Air Station Miramar] in San Diego, California. Its focus is on combat training against MiG fighters, now that MiG testing at Groom Lake, Nevada, has been successful. (Wikipedia, "United States Navy Strike Fighter Tactics Instructor program")

1969, March 4 — 6:40 a.m. William Overstreet, 50, is driving his truck on Missouri J between Elmer and Atlanta, Missouri, when he sees a bright reddish-orange light about 100 feet in diameter and floating along at 40 mph. It begins to follow the road and beams a strong, cone-shaped white light on to the road from a height of 50 feet. Overstreet can feel the heat. The object changes from red to a blue sphere surrounded by a red ring. He attempts to drive through the beam, but his motor and radio die when he gets to within 6 feet. The beam moves away a bit, he tries again, and the same thing happens. The UFO moves about a mile away, turns back to red, switches off the beam, and cruises away. (NICAP, "100′ Object Affects Radio and Truck Engine"; "UFO Reports in Missouri Area," Kansas City (Mo.) Star, March 6, 1969, p. 4A; "Light Beams with EM Effects Reported," UFO

1969, March 4 — 10:00 p.m. RCMP Constable R. J. Shannahan is on foot patrol near 24 Sussex Drive, the Prime Minister's residence in Ottawa, Ontario. He looks up and sees two bright flashing red lights above and slightly inside the gates to Rideau Hall. One light moves east and is lost to view in one minute, while the other moves west and is visible for 5–6 minutes. No jets are scrambled, and there is no indication that radar installations are asked about unidentified targets. (National Research Council of Canada, FOIA documents, Part 3, pp. 187–193; National Research Council of Canada, FOIA documents, Part 27, pp. 159–165; Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 75–77)

1969, March 6 or 10 — 10:30 a.m. A woman is driving with her St. Bernard dog between Glenwood and Lancaster, Missouri. The dog becomes agitated and she sees a bright blue-white beam of light illuminating the road and a domed disc 1,000 feet in the air. The dog jumps into the front seat and become quite panicked. She tries to drive through the beam, but the car slows from 50 mph to 8 mph but manages to get to the other side when the car picks up speed. (Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, p. 32; Ted Phillips, "UFO Events in Missouri, 1857–1971," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 8 (December 1971): 11; UFOEv II 38–39; Michael D. Swords, "Messing Around with the Force," IUR 31, no. 4 (March 2008): 15–16)

1969, March 10 — 10:10 p.m. Police Chief Lavern Janzen is driving west of Westhope, North Dakota, when the interior of his car suddenly lights up. Looking up, he sees a disc shaped like a World War I helmet pass overhead and stop about 700 feet ahead, some 100 feet in the air. The object has a glowing blue-green dome and a bright white body with a revolving red band. The object wobbles back and forth while hovering. At one point it emits a 10-foot-diameter beam of light onto the road. Janzen gets out of the car but is afraid to approach any closer. He smells an odor like burned rubber. After 15 minutes the object ascends at a 60° angle and flies out of sight to the south. ("Light Beams with EM Effects Reported," UFO Investigator 4, no. 11 (May 1969): 3–4; UFOEv II 189)

1969, March 13 — Hynek submits a UFO research proposal to Col. George R. Weinbrenner, USAF Foreign Technology Division Commander, in which he reveals that out of the approximately 10,000 reports in the Project Blue Book files, he estimates that 1,000–3,000 (10%–30%) are "interesting" unexplained cases ("unknowns"). (J. Allen Hynek, "Preliminary Proposal for Subject Investigation," March 13 and 19, 1969)

1969, March 14 — Day. Col. Robert M. Tirman, an Air Force flight surgeon stationed in Thailand, is flying as a passenger in a Boeing KC-135 Stratotanker. The plane is at 15,000 feet when the pilot and crew notice a black cylinder hovering in a vertical position about 2 miles away. The pilot circles closer and determines that it is not a balloon. After he radios back to his base, fighter aircraft are scrambled but cannot locate the object. (Jacksonville (Ark.) Daily News, March 27, 1969; "AF Colonel, Air Crew Encounter Giant UFO," UFO Investigator 4, no. 11 (May 1969): 1; "Colonel Describes 'Giant Black Metallic Cylinder' As AF Crew Tracks UFO," Skylook (July 1969): 14; UFOEv II 81)

1969, March 17 — Two pilots, Herman Slater and Ben Ripley, are flying a Cessna 150 between Phoenix and Lake Havasu, Arizona, when the pilot in the right seat rises up and sees maybe 2 dozen oval, white discs on the left side of the plane, flying very low and in a rough formation. Each has the hint of a blister near the front. The speed is 200–300 mph, and the only maneuver they make is pitch and roll, all done simultaneously, in unison. For 20 seconds, both pilots watch the objects pass below their aircraft and beyond. ("Two Phoenix Pilots Claim Sighting UFOs in Skies," Phoenix (Ariz.) Gazette, March 21, 1969, via UFO Newsclipping Service, no. 1 (May 1969): 8; "Large UFO Formation over Arizona," APRO Bulletin, March/April 1969, pp. 1, 4; "Flying Formation Seen by Pilots," UFO Investigator 4, no. 11 (May 1969): 4; Michael D. Swords, "We Know Where You Live," IUR 30, no. 2 (January 2006): 11–12)

1969, March 18 — The US begins a covert SAC bombing campaign, Operation Menu, in eastern Cambodia that lasts until May 26, 1970. An official USAF record of US bombing activity over Indochina from 1964 to 1973 is declassified by President Bill Clinton in 2000. The report gives details of the extent of the bombing of Cambodia, as well as of Laos and Vietnam. The Menu bombings are an escalation of what has previously been tactical air attacks. Operation Freedom Deal immediately follows Operation Menu. Under Freedom Deal, B-52 bombing is expanded to a much larger area of Cambodia and continued until August 1973. (Wikipedia, "Operation Menu")

1969, April — Hynek writes a review of the Condon report for the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, calling it a "strange sort of scientific paper [that] does not fulfill the promise of its title…. [It] leaves the same strange, inexplicable residue of unknowns which has plagued the U.S. Air Force investigation for 20 years." (J. Allen Hynek, "The Condon Report and UFOs," Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists 25 (April 1969): 39–42; Clark III 1199; Eghigian, After, p. 210; Clark IV 1373)

1969, April 5 — 7:25 p.m. Three male teenagers are parked in a remote area near West Nyack, New York, when a light approaches and they get out to see a craft emitting a light beam. They lose consciousness, except that one later recalls seeing the object land and shine the light beam on them. They recall an oval object about 50 feet in diameter, as well as humanoid beings about 5 feet tall with large round heads, large black eyes, and pale gray skin. Most wear form-fitting, gray-green coveralls; one who acts as an examiner wears a turtle-neck garment. Within the craft, the examiner peers intently into one of the teens' faces. He feels that he has been "ripped to pieces" and put back together again but does not feel any pain. The same teen has spontaneous recall, including trying for several minutes to start the car without success at about 10:15 p.m. (Budd Hopkins, Missing Time, 1981, pp. 111–123; UFOEv II 533–534)

1969, April 12 — 11:00 a.m. During a Fouga Magister aircraft training mission at Pori Airport, Finland, a Finnish Defence Forces flight controller tells pilot-in-training Tarmo Tukeva to investigate seven air balloons that are floating at approximately 5,000–9,800 feet above the airport. Tukeva reports that the objects are ball or disc-shaped but cannot determine how far away they are. Tukeva sees the objects accelerate away from him "at great speed." Indeterminate radar images are also later reported 125 miles away in Vaasa. A second pilot-in-training, Jouko Kuronen, overhears the radio communications between the flight controller and Tukeva and sees the UFOs as well. According to the Finnish Armed Forces magazine Ruotuväki, the reports are similar to other cases occurring over bodies of water during ongoing military exercises and may have been due to "transnational spy planes or aircraft." (Wikipedia, "Finnish Air Force UFO sighting"; "Ruotuväki: Ilmavoimien lentäjät tekivät merkittävän ufo-havainnon 60-luvulla," Ilta-Sanomat, May 8, 2012; "1969: Pilots Report 7 Yellow Spheres at Pori Airport, Finland," UFO Casebook, August 13, 2013; "Unsolved UFO Mystery, the Pori Spheres of 1969: What Really Happened?" 1969, April 14 — 11:30 p.m. Edwin H. Bohl Jr. and a companion 5 miles east of Hill City, Kansas, watch a multi-colored object approach to within 100 feet of their car. The car engine fails. The object hovers at 75 feet above the ground for 3 minutes, then slowly moves away. The car then restarts without trouble. ("Them Thar Critters Are on the Loose," Salina (Kan.) Journal, April 17, 1969, p. 12; "Logan Man Spots Unidentified Flying Object East of Town," Hill City (Kan.) Star, October 13, 1971, p. 1B; Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1982, p. 46)

1969, April 17 — Morning. T. J. Hefferman of Bungawalban, New South Wales, wakes up and notices that his dogs are "strangely subdued." Outside, he finds a flattened area in a sacaline (Reynoutria sachalinensis) forage crop on his property. A roughly circular area is flattened in four distinct patches, the largest 60 by 15 feet. All the stalks lie in one direction, north to south. The previous night, two men working night shift on a flood mitigation dredge a quarter mile north of the farm had seen a glow in the sky, and a neighboring farmer had seen two "toplike objects" moving about for a number of nights. G. Testa, an independent investigator from Lismore, visits the site on April 20 and takes 25 feet of 8mm color film to document the damage. (Clark III 1138–1139; Bill Chalker, "1969: The Great UFO Daze of Oz," The Oz Files, September 19, 2020; Clark IV 1295–1296)

1969, April 20 — 7:30 p.m. A woman out walking at Harwood Island, New South Wales, sees and hears a large patch of 2-year-old cane rustling and waving on a still night. A powerful beam of light switches on across the top of the cane path, and it slowly turns in a half circle before going out and being replaced by a "low beam" and "cabin lights." A UFO is above the cane and she feels a powerful force lifting her up and pulling her toward the object when the "high beam" is on. The helmet-shaped object is 20–28 feet long and 22 feet wide. At its closest the UFO is 40–50 feet away. It disappears suddenly. (Clark III 1139; Bill Chalker, "1969: The Great UFO Daze of Oz," The Oz Files, September 19, 2020; Clark IV 1296)

1969, April 20 — 11:00 p.m. Robert and Wilma Phillips are driving west on State Highway 11 about one mile west of Browntown, Wisconsin, when they see a bright yellow-orange light to their right. When they stop the car to watch, the light approaches and hovers near the right side of the car. Wilma describes it as shaped like a kettle drum with diffused light emanating from the base. Robert turns off the car so he can hear a high-pitched "tweeting sound" the object is making. Phillips restarts he car and moves slowly forward to observe the object, which tips sideways and paces them as it changes color to orange-red and bright red. The diffused light dims and they can see the UFO is about 20 feet across and 10–15 feet thick. It remains about 20 feet in the air and never more than 100 feet from the side of the road. The object follows them to the outskirts of South Wayne where it turns and quickly disappears to the north. ("Car Buzzing Incidents Continue," APRO Bulletin, May/June 1969, pp. 6, 8;

Geneva Saalsaa, "UFO-observation i Lafayette distriktet, USA," UFO-nyt, 1969, no. 8 (December 1969): 323–324)

1969, April 22 — 8:00 p.m. Three witnesses are driving in heavy rain near Hammond, Ontario, when they see an object like a huge "drinking cup turned upside down." It has two bright lights directed horizontally and appears to have a row of portholes with pink light coming from within. They estimate it is 5 feet off the ground, 20 feet long, and 200 feet away. They can hear a whining noise like a generator. After 15 minutes, the object turns and zooms over some nearby power lines, over the trees, and out of sight. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, p. 77)

1969, April 23 — 2:00 a.m. Virginia A. Guinn and a boarder are awakened by loud howlings and yowlings from the dogs and cats at her farm in Silver Spring, Maryland. Going outside, the witnesses see a round UFO "as large as two rooms" that is a bluish-white color like the glow around a welder's arc. The object is moving beyond the barn to the north-northeast. They heard a humming noise and the object blinks out and the animals quiet down. Guinn discovers later that morning that the horses in the barn had broken free of their stalls and knocked harnesses off the walls. (Donald E. Keyhoe and Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., Strange Effects from UFOs, NICAP, 1969, p. 32)

1969, April 25 — 7:30 p.m. A woman and her 11-year-old daughter are travelling by taxi past Roberts Park in Greenacre, New South Wales, when they spot a "Japanese lantern" above some trees. One minute later, as the taxi turns a corner, they see it again, 100–130 feet away, apparently in the same spot. The driver stops the taxi, and they can see what looks like a metallic craft, approximately 33 feet in diameter, with the appearance of "two soup bowls joined rim-to-rim." There is a steady red light on top. The object seems to be noiselessly rocking backwards and forwards, at a frequency of 1–2 rocks per second. A "depressing blue glow" can be seen through a window that takes up most of the upper part. A humanoid figure is apparently operating controls near the window. Another figure is pointing at the witnesses. A third seems to be walking toward a back door. All three are apparently human-sized and are either wearing tight black clothing, are black skinned, or seen in silhouette. After 15 seconds or less, the driver speeds off down the road, drops the couple off, and drives off quickly without taking their fare. At 8:00 p.m., the woman and her daughter return to the park. The UFO is not to be seen. (Bill Chalker, "1969: The Great UFO Daze of Oz," The Oz Files, September 19, 2020)

1969, April 26 — Condon speaks publicly for the first time after the end of the Colorado project in an address to the American Philosophical Society in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on "UFO's I Have Loved and Lost." He concludes by saying, "Let me say that where corruption of children's minds is at stake, I do not believe in freedom of the press or freedom of speech. In my view, publishers who publish or teachers who teach any of the pseudosciences as established truth should, on being found guilty, be publicly horsewhipped, and forever banned from further activity in these usually honorable professions." (Henry W. Pierce, "Professors Threaten Own Free Speech," Pittsburgh (Pa.) Post-Gazette, May 10, 1969, p. 21; Edward U. 1969, May — Rod B. Dyke launches the monthly UFO Newsclipping Service in Seattle, Washington, which soon becomes a primary source for media reports on UFOs and related phenomena. The service is largely run by Lucius Farish as co-editor in Plumerville, Arkansas, beginning in July 1977. Farish publishes it on his own from January 1991 until November 2007, when Dyke reacquires it and keeps it going again with co-editor Chuck Flood until December 2008. The final editor is David Marler, who runs the service from January 2009 to August 2011, when it ceases publication. (UFO Newsclipping Service, no. 1 (May 1969); Clark III 1156; Clark IV 1312)

1969, May — John A. Keel begins publishing an unscheduled, free newsletter titled Anomaly in New York City. It continues until April 1974. (Anomaly, no. 1 (May 1969))

1969, May 1 — 5:30 p.m. An illuminated triangular object moves soundlessly from south to north over Negru Vodă, Romania. After 20 minutes of hanging motionless it disappears swiftly to the east. (Hobana and Weverbergh 161–162)

1969, May 2 — Engineer Belavan of the fishing vessel Roncal obtains five sonar tracks of two underwater objects in the Pacific Ocean off Lambayeque, Peru. (J. J. Benítez, OVNIs: S.O.S. a la Humanidad, Plaza y Janes, 1979, chapter 12; J. Antonio Huneeus, "USOs in Chile and Peru," Fate 56, no. 1 (January 2003): 6–7; Carl Feindt, "Report #1389," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 332–333)

1969, May 4–9 — 3:00 p.m. A 24-year-old Brazilian soldier named José Antônio da Silva is fishing by himself at Bebedouro (apparently a small lagoon in the Área de Proteção Ambiental do Carste de Lagoa Santa) near Matozinhos, Minas Gerais, Brazil, when he begins dozing off. He perceives figures moving around him, and he feels himself shot with something that paralyzes his legs. Two small humanoid beings, joined by a third, drag him off into a strange machine shaped like two saucers joined together by a thick, vertical cylinder. The machine lifts off, and after a long interval it lands. Da Silva is carried by his armpits into a large quadrangular room, where he finds himself with his original three captors and a fourth being—also humanoid, with red hair and a beard that comes down to his waist—who seems to be their leader. He remembers afterward that all four have mouths that look like fishes' mouths. The room is made of stone. Inside, on a low shelf seemingly fashioned out of stone, da Silva sees the bodies of four human men lying stretched out side by side. Naked, rigid, and positioned on their backs, the bodies bear no visible wounds, but it is obvious that they are dead. One is a well-built black man and another has light brown skin. Two others, more slightly built, are Caucasian, one of them very blond "like a foreigner." The beings do not speak any Portuguese but, using pictures, the leader manages to convey to da Silva that they want him to be their guide and weapons provider for what he supposes is a subsequent invasion of Earth. He refuses, fingering his crucifix, which the angry leader rips from his hand. Out of nowhere, da Silva sees appear in front of him a human figure who stands motionless, gazing at him in a friendly fashion. The figure, about five and a half feet tall, is Caucasian, slender, bearded with long fair hair, and dressed in a friar's cassock. Amazingly, the little men seem oblivious to his presence. Speaking in Portuguese, the figure gives da Silva certain "revelations" that he afterward insists on keeping secret. He apparently knows who the figure is but he does not reveal that either, saying only that he wasn't Jesus. The figure vanishes, and the beings who have abducted him start quarreling among themselves. They carry da Silva back to their machine; there follows another flight, another landing. Da Silva awakens in the dawn of what turns out to be May 9, four and a half days after his abduction, some 300 miles to the east of the place where he had been abducted. He supposedly bears the physical marks of his ordeal—wounds on his neck, lameness in one leg—for days afterward. 1969, May 11 — 2:00 a.m. Near the village of Chapeau, Quebec, on L'Isle-aux-Allumettes in the Ottawa River, farmer Leo Paul Chaput is awakened by his dog barking. He looks out the window and sees a brilliant light close to the ground. The light source seems to be a domed craft with a flat bottom (like a World War I helmet) about 500 feet away. He looks away briefly, and the object is gone, although he can hear the diminishing sound of a motor. When Chaput gets up in the morning, he finds a large circular indentation in the ground, 600 feet from his house. The impression is 32 feet in diameter and is surrounded by a ring of scorched grass 2.5 feet wide. Inside, the vegetation is not damaged, but there are three holes that form a perfect equilateral triangle, 15 feet on a side. The holes are 8 inches in diameter and 3 inches deep. He finds a second, slightly smaller circle to the southwest, again with scorched grass and 3 indentations. A third ground marking, a semicircle, is near the second. 1969, May 12 — The DARPA Pandora Project committee discusses plans to move forward with eight human subjects who will be exposed to microwaves similar to the Moscow Signal and then given a full battery of medical and psychological tests. The committee recommends "gonadal protection be provided" to the male test subjects; however, human testing is not pursued. The program is shut down later in 1969, with an effect of the signal on behavior and/or biological functions deemed "too subtle or insignificant to be evident." (Wikipedia, "Moscow Signal")

1969, May 18–20 — Evening. A localized power blackout cuts off electricity at the Lester Kaiser farm near Rising Sun, Indiana, for 2 hours. The next night, George Kaiser watches a hairy, muscular, bipedal creature that flees upon being seen. It leaves tracks showing three toes and a big toe. On May 20, a neighbor sees a glowing, greenish-white UFO as it hovers for several minutes. (John Keel, Strange Creatures from Time and Space, 1970, pp. 94–95; Patrick Gross, URECAT, May 29, 2007; Clark III 556; Clark IV 614)

1969, May 22 — 11:00 p.m. Graham Longey sees a large, brilliant, circular white object hovering a few feet off the ground at Glenorchy, Tasmania. Windows encircle its midsection. It begins to move rapidly upward, and by the time he dashes out of his house it is gone. On the site, Longey finds an elliptical area of burned grass 18 feet by 12 feet. A small tree nearby is scorched and has limbs broken. He notices an oily smell. (Clark III 1139; Clark IV 1296)

1969, May 23 — 6:35 p.m. A 13-year-old boy in Cloverdale, Western Australia, notices a moving light to the south and about 10° above the horizon. He calls his mother, who sees a steady red light on top of a more diffuse blue-white light darting haphazardly in a zigzag pattern but in general moving to the north until it disappears behind their house. The witnesses shift their position and can still see the light hovering in the northwest. The light is now seen as circular with hazy edges and about half the diameter of the full moon. At about 7:00 p.m. it moves at high speed to the north. The mother calls the radar station at Kalamunda, which simultaneously gets a request from Perth Airport to check out an unidentified echo on their meteorological radar. The Kalamunda operator sees a large echo some 9 miles away, which reappears for short durations on 5 further occasions and is last seen at 7:42 p.m. (Swords 397–398; Bill Chalker, "1969: The Great UFO Daze of Oz," The Oz Files, September 19, 2020)

1969, May 28 — McDonald presents a talk that is critical of the Colorado project at the Sacramento, California, section of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics. (James E. McDonald, "A Very Creditable Effort?" May 28, 1969; Story, p. 415)

1969, May 31 — The Midwest UFO Network (later Mutual UFO Network) is founded in Quincy, Illinois, by Walter H. Andrus Jr., who leaves APRO and takes many of its members with him. It is conceived as a grassroots organization with state and local leaders overseeing activities and investigations. Allen R. Utke, associate professor of chemistry at Wisconsin State University, is selected as the first MUFON Director (Clark III 784; Clark IV 866)

1969, June — Although President Richard Nixon does not trust J. Edgar Hoover, he accepts the FBI's help through an "intelligence letter" program, codenamed INLET. This program is not only intended to provide the president with domestic and international security issues, but also, "items with an unusual twist or concerning prominent personalities which may be of special interest to the President." Nixon orders seven wiretaps on his staffers. (John Greenewald, "INLET (Intelligence Letters) Reports, 1960s and 1970s," The Black Vault, May 7, 2020)

1969, June 5 — 4:00 p.m. FAA controller James V. Beardsley is acting as an observer on American Airlines Flight 112 traveling at 39,000 feet from Phoenix, Arizona, to Washington, D.C. At a point within the St. Louis, Missouri, air traffic control area, he and the co-pilot notice a formation of four objects flying in a square formation and approaching the aircraft from directly ahead. The formation, with one large object and three smaller ones separated by about 20 feet, passes within 300 feet on the left side of the plane about 1,000 feet above them. Beardsley describes the larger object as shaped like a hydroplane, about 18–20 feet long, and the color of "burnished aluminum." The crew of a United Airlines aircraft 8 miles behind them and the pilot of a National Guard plane 12 miles behind also see the objects. ("FAA Controller Recounts '69 Sighting," UFO Investigator, February 1972, p. 2)

1969, June 10 — McDonald gives a public talk sponsored by NICAP in Washington, D.C., on "UFOs Unsolved: A Scientific Challenge." (James E. McDonald, "UFOs: Unsolved: A Scientific Challenge," June 10, 1969; Story, p. 415)

1969, June 11 — McDonald meets privately with representatives on the Air Force Office of Scientific Research in Arlington, Virginia, urging a new look at the UFO problem. (Story, p. 415)

1969, June 17 — 2:00 a.m. Kaneto and Kioko Nobutoshi witness a "brilliantly illuminated window" hovering in the air in Ibiúna, São Paulo, Brazil. It appears to be 30 feet in diameter, 10 feet high, and illuminates a small part of the ground. The sighting lasts 45 minutes, with the object stationary all the time. It then vanishes. Later examination of the ground underneath reveals a circle of flattened grass, 25 feet in diameter, swirled counterclockwise, with some small secondary swirls. (Hans Bemelmans, "Reports from Ibiuna," Flying Saucer Review 16, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1970): 15–19; Terry Wilson, "1969: Ibiuna," Old Crop Circles)

1969, June 17 — Turkish Air Force pilot Süleyman Tekyildirim is ordered to intercept a UFO above his base in Turkey in a US-built F-5A Freedom Fighter. He flies above it, thinking it is a meteorological balloon because it looks gray and like an upside-down light bulb. However, it moves to his left and takes off at fantastic speed. He tries to reach it, but it eludes him and speeds away. (Good Need, p. 299)

1969, June 19 — 12:25 a.m. Radio/TV engineer Robin Peck is driving a van just north of Bircham Newton, Norfolk, England, when his headlights and motor fail. He looks under the hood, feels some "static electricity," and his hair stands on end. He looks up and sees a bluish, upside-down-mushroom-shaped object hovering 100–150 feet over the trees on a nearby farm. It has an orange glow around it. Peck feels that the air is electrified. His luminous wristwatch glows intensely and unnaturally. After about one minute the object takes off and disappears rapidly. The van's electrical system returns to normal. (Peter Johnson, "Auto-Stop near Docking," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 5 (June 1971): 1–2; UFOFiles2, p. 81)

1969, June 19 — 11:50 p.m. Arthur Hendry, 17, is getting ready to cycle home near Docking, Norfolk, England, when he hears a strange whistling noise above him that intensifies and becomes a powerful throbbing. His muscles feel frozen or paralyzed as if he is receiving a severe electric shock. After a few seconds the noise stops, and he feels normal again. (UFOFiles2, p. 81)

1969, June 20 — 9:35 p.m. Vernon L. Kleman and other Coast Guardsman on the southern shore of Lake Michigan observe several multicolored, maneuvering lights moving at various speeds around Michigan City and Gary, Indiana, and Calumet City and Chicago, Illinois. At 10:15 p.m., Klemen and three other Coast guardsmen at Michigan City see a brilliant white object over the lake. It seems to have a rotating rim with red, green, and yellow lights around its center; after a minute it diminishes in size and brilliance and vanishes. At one point a similar object enters the water for 4–5 seconds then travels straight up at a huge speed. Members of the Michigan City police (Lance M. Hilberg and Tony C. Ragle) and Port Authority police (Robert G. Howington) also view 9–10 objects over about 2 hours. The Chicago Coast Guard Station confirms that there are no known aircraft in the area. ("Submerging UFOs Reported," UFO Investigator 5, no. 1 (Sept./Oct. 1969): 1, 3; Dolan, USO1, 333–336)

1969, June 26 — 2:30 p.m. Sr. Benedito, a justice of the peace, is walking along a trail about 4 miles northwest of Ibiúna, São Paulo, Brazil, when he hears a humming noise like a swarm of bees. He sees an odd object rocking from side to side that suddenly drops into the brush out of sight. Thinking it is an accident, he approaches to within 20 feet and sees the landed object, which then ascends, hovers a moment, and takes off in a gentle climb. He hears the humming sound again and feels a blast of air as it moves away. The Brazilian Air Force investigates the landing, and UFO investigator Hans Bemelmans finds some scorched grass in the thickly tangled brush. (Hans Bemelmans, "Reports from Ibiuna," Flying Saucer Review 16, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1970): 15–19)

1969, Summer — Evening. A woman in Wheatley, Ontario, sees lights in the sky moving close to the surface of Lake Erie. They enter the lake, the water glows briefly, then an object exits the lake silently. ("Woman Sees Object Fly into Water," UFOs Northwest, December 1, 2006; Dolan, USO1, 339)

1969, July — After a series of UFO sightings and landing traces are reported in the area around Ibiúna, São Paulo, Brazil, the Brazilian Air Force informs local officials who are investigating the reports that they must not "under any circumstances give any information on UFO activity to any press, radio, or television reporter or representative. This is a matter of national security, and all press releases will be made by the Brazilian Air Force Public Relations Department." (Hans Bemelmans, "Reports from Ibiuna," Flying Saucer Review 16, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1970): 15; "Brazil: Censorship of UFO Reports," Flying Saucer Review 19, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1973): 29)

1969, July or August — 1:00 a.m. A US Marine private named Earl Morrison is on guard duty with other soldiers in a bunker near Da Nang, Vietnam, when they see a black, naked woman with bat-like, glowing wings moving through the air toward them. It flies about 6–7 above their heads. She soon starts flapping her wings and flies away. ("Don Worley, "The Winged Lady in Black," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 10 (June 1972): 14–16; Clark III 779; Clark IV 860)

1969, July 4 — 7:30 a.m. Ed Moore is fishing at Duck Pond (only about 12 feet deep) near Ossipee Lake, New Hampshire, when he hears a loud splash in the water behind him. He looks around and sees a patch of disturbed water about 55 feet away and a silver, oval-shaped object rising vertically with a humming sound several hundred feet above him. It remains hovering at several thousand feet for another hour. Other observers see an object hovering above North Moat Mountain about 12 miles to the north. (Raymond E. Fowler, UFOs: Interplanetary Visitors, Exposition, 1974, pp. 217–218; Dolan, USO1, 336–338)

1969, July 4 — 8:00 p.m. Two children, Mauricio Gnecco and Enrique Osorio, in Anolaima, Colombia, see a glowing object about 900 feet away. It approaches to within 180 feet and the children run over the hill to tell other children and adults. Thirteen people, including their father, return to see the object. Arcesio Bermúdez takes a flashlight with him and returns in terror after seeing a small person and a craft that lights up and flies away. Within 2 days, Bermúdez loses all appetite, his skin temperature drops, blue spots appear on his skin, and his stools become bloody. Within a week, two Bogotá physicians, unaware of his UFO experience, concludes he has gastroenteritis. Within hours of his exam, Bermúdez dies. His doctor claims he has previously been in good health. His injuries suggest a fatal whole-body ionizing radiation dose of 300–500 rems. Likely only X-rays, gamma rays, or neutrons could travel a distance of 45 feet through the air. ("UFO Observed at Farmhouse in Colombia," APRO Bulletin, July/Aug. 1969, pp. 1, 4–5; Story, pp. 23–25; "Colombia: Arcesio Bermúdez, the Man Killed by a UFO," Inexplicata, December 14, 2015; Clark III 253, 950; Cristian Ávila Jimenez, "La misteriosa muerte de columbiano 3 días después de ver supuesto OVNI," El Tiempo (Bogotá), August 20, 2021; Clark IV 293, 1064)

1969, July 5 — 10:53 a.m. A family in a chartered fishing boat on Valdez Arm, Alaska, notices an orange tint in the water. Suddenly the water 40 feet from the boat explodes into the air, and the water for 300 feet around the splash turns orange. A disk-shaped object with windows and lights shoots into the air to a height of about 1,000 feet. However, only one of them remembers seeing the object, which is about 25 feet in diameter. (National UFO Reporting Center, "NUFORC UFO Sighting 32366," October 31, 2003; Dolan, USO1, 338–339)

1969, July 11 or 18 — 8:30 p.m. Economics student Tim Oliver is near a golf course on the outskirts of Beaufort, Victoria, Australia, when he sees a red "star" over a hill about a mile away. On closer inspection, it proves to be a hovering UFO. He quickly goes home, and by the time he returns with his mother in the family car, the UFO has been joined by another identical object. They are moving about 20 mph to the southeast, 50 feet in the air, 200 feet apart, and nearly parallel to some high-powered electrical lines. As they drive to right outside the golf course, both UFOs apparently respond to their presence by turning toward them but soon resumed their parallel course when Oliver turns the car engine off. Oliver walks to within 50 feet of the leading object. Each is about 30 feet in diameter, saucer-shaped, with an upper flat-topped cupola and about 24 square windows through which comes the bright red light. They are completely silent. Both he and his mother (who has watched from the golf course fence) see the UFOs disappear to the southeast, still flying parallel to the power lines. (Bill Chalker, "1969: The Great UFO Daze of Oz," The Oz Files, September 19, 2020)

1969, July 12 — Contactee Paul Solem, who has been speaking to Shoshone-Bannock Indians at Fort Hall Indian Reservation in Idaho about a migration of Indian peoples and the coming of a True White Brother, publicly calls for the appearance of the flying saucer beings. Many people, including Idaho State Reporter Barbara Boren, see two "star-like moving lights" high in the air. (Barbara Boren, "Blast Rocking North America to Start Indian Migration, Says Self-Styled Seer," Pocatello Idaho State Journal, July 16, 1969, pp. 1, 8; Clark III 1094; Clark IV 1211)

1969, July 13 — Early morning. Edgar Paquette and Mrs. Leo Edwards are driving near Petawawa, Ontario, when they see a bright star that lights up the Ottawa River next to them. Convinced the light is following them, Paquette turns off the headlights, which makes the object appear to hesitate. But he gets out of the car, causing the interior light to go on, and the object descends to within 60 feet of the ground. When he starts signaling it with a flashlight, it comes even closer, and Paquette sees that it is 8 feet in diameter with two legs beneath it. Both of them panic and drive home, dragging their teenage children out of bed to look at the light. Ontario police officers Jack McKay and Grant Chaplin follow the light for 38 minutes as it travels at a high altitude. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 83–84)

1969, July 13 — 11:00 p.m. Patti Barr and Kathy Mahr, two teenage cousins, hear a loud roaring noise at Van Horne, Iowa, while upstairs in their house. They look out the window to see a reddish-orange ball of light rotating and spinning counterclockwise above the adjacent soybean field. The next morning, they tell Pat's father, farmer Warren Barr, who then discovers a 24-foot-diameter, nearly bare oval in the soybean field. The plants' leaves are severely dehydrated, dry, and brittle. This case was investigated by several groups at the time; localized intense heat or radiation is listed as most likely cause. 1969, Mid-July — Bernard O'Brien is cutting grass in a field with his tractor near Manotick, Ontario, when a small cloud of smoke rises from the ground as he passes over a particular spot. He notifies the field's owner, John Fox, who comes out for a look. Fox finds three near-perfect circles in the field, two together and the third nearly 150 feet away. Each of them are rings of affected grass 15–20 feet in diameter and about a foot wide. Grass is flattened inside the circle, but the rings themselves are dark and contain a crystalline substance. Peter Millman of the National Research Council claims that the circles are caused by the fairy ring mushroom (Marasmius oreades) because an analysis of the crystalline substance shows no evidence of mineral content or radioactivity. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 187–190)

1969, July 16 — 3:30 p.m. Sylvia Annola, 10, sees a large gray object with blinding lights descending above a well on her family's farm near Abee, Alberta. She looks directly at the object, which is only about 10 feet away, and experiences a temporary loss of vision. (Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Sightings, Landings, and Abductions, Methuen, 1979, pp. 50–53)

1969, July 21 — The Apollo 11 Lunar Module lands the first astronauts on the moon, Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin. (Wikipedia, "Apollo 11")

1969, July 21 — Around 5:22 p.m. EDT. Shortly after the Lunar Module completes its pass behind the moon and before redocking with the Command Module, the Apollo 11 astronauts allegedly have a conversation about seeing several alien spacecraft on the lunar surface. However the story is made up by a pseudonymous writer for the National Bulletin tabloid newspaper. (Stuart Nixon, "UFO Base on the Moon: Fact or Fiction?" UFO Quarterly Review 1, no. 3 (July/Sept. 1973): 13–20; "UFOs on the Moon: Apollo 11 Crew Sees, Photographs Alien Spaceships," UFO Investigator 10, no. 4 (July 1979): 1; Clark III 599; Clark IV 658–659)

1969, July 29–31 — Mariner 6 and 7 complete the first dual mission to Mars, flying over the equator and south polar regions, analyzing the atmosphere and the surface with remote sensors, and recording and relaying hundreds of pictures. The mission's goals are to study the surface and atmosphere of Mars during close flybys, in order to establish the basis for future investigations, particularly those relevant to the search for extraterrestrial life, and to demonstrate and develop technologies required for future Mars missions. (Wikipedia, "Mariner 6 and 7")

1969, August — 1:45 p.m. James D. Appleman is driving on the Pennsylvania Turnpike when he notices a dome-shaped, metallic object hovering in the clouds ahead. He stops the car and gets his camera out of the trunk, but by that time the object is gone. ("Did a Twin Photograph a Twin UFO?" CUFOS Associate Newsletter 2, no. 1 (January 1981): 1)

1969, August 22 — The National Amateur Astronomers Association hosts an open forum in Denver, Colorado, "Science and the UFO," with presentations by James A. Harder, R. Leo Sprinkle, J. Allen Hynek, David R. Saunders, James McDonald, and Frank Salisbury. When asked how many of the 500 people assembled have had a UFO sighting, about 75 hands go up. (Gene Cooper, "Six Scientists Urge New 'Flying-Saucer' Study," Denver (Colo.) Post, August 23, 1969; Pasquale Marranzino, "Can't Shoot Down Flying Saucers," Denver Rocky Mountain News, August 25, 1969, p. 39; "Scientists Urge New UFO Studies," Fate 23, no. 4 (April 1970): 38–48; George W. Earley, "Astronomers Raise Their Hands," IUR 24, no. 4 (Winter 1999): 29–30)

1969, August 29 — 6:20 a.m. Norman Vedaa and a passenger are driving along Interstate 80S [now Interstate 76] about 70 miles east of Denver [putting them roughly near Fort Morgan, Colorado]. They notice a brilliant, yellow-gold object hovering high in the air. They manage to take two photographs before it speeds away. Ground Saucer Watch concludes from its density profile in the photos that it is a solid object. (William H. Spaulding, "Observational Data of an Anomalistic Aerial Phenomenon," Flying Saucer Review 22, no. 1 (May 1976): 12–17)

1969, August 30 — Afternoon. Future ufologist Bill Chalker, 17, is relaxing on a surfboard in the middle of the Clarence River in Grafton, New South Wales. He notices streams of fine filament coming down out of the sky over the river. He collects some samples, seeing no spiders, but the material dissipates into nothing. He later learns that other people, including his parents, watched an elongated white UFO moving at right angles to the filament fall. (Bill Chalker, The Oz Files, Duffy and Snellgrove, 1996; Keith Basterfield, "Angel Hair: An Australian Perspective," IUR 27, no. 1 (Spring 2002): 7; Clark III 124–126; Bill Chalker, "1969: The Great UFO Daze of Oz," The Oz Files, September 19, 2020; Clark IV 152)

1969, August 30 — 7:30 p.m. Ion Hobana is at the North Railway Station in Bucharest, Romania, when he sees a triangular object rise from behind the station building. It is a dull orange color and moves with one of its sides facing forward. Three smaller globes trail it in a straight line. The object travels to the right and disappears after a few seconds. (Hobana and Weverbergh 179–180)

1969, August 31 — Day. An RAAF Canberra bomber chases but fails to catch a UFO over northern New South Wales. The plane is dispatched from RAAF Base Amberley near Ipswich, Queensland, after hundreds of people in Kygole and along the Darling Downs report the object, which is shaped like an aluminum Zeppelin. Some witnesses observe the object for 3 hours as it hovers above towns and farms. The UFO speeds away when the Canberra tries to close in on it. ("RAAF Plane Chases UFO," Sydney (N.S.W.) Mirror, August 30, 1969, via Australian Flying Saucer Review, no. 2 (July 1970): 10–11; Perth (W.A.) Independent, August 31, 1969; "RAAF Chase UFO over Darling Downs," UFOIC Newsletter, no. 26 (December 1969): 4)

1969, September 4 — A farmer, Bert O'Neil, discovers a circular patch of dead and silvery-white manuka plants (Leptospermum scoparium, tea tree) in the midst of otherwise green and lush growth on a remote section of his farm near Ngatea, New Zealand. Near the center of the circle, he finds three ground indentations, positioned so as to form the inside points of a triangle. Off to one side is the taller stand of tea tree, also bleached and dead. He remembers seeing this from afar three weeks earlier, arousing his curiosity. The dead scrubweed within the circle is still standing and undisturbed. It looks as if some large object has come down from the sky and landed on three long stilts. At first, O'Neil only discusses his find within the family, but the news quickly leaks to the local radio and press. (Harold H. Fulton, "The Ngatea Mystery Circle, 1," Flying Saucer Review 16, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1970): 27–28; Harold H. 1969, September 6 — 7:00 p.m. Gloria Bomford is with her two daughters at a playground in the John Rabson Park in Reading, England. She notices a faraway object that seems to grow larger and moves in a steadily descending flight path toward the park, seemingly to land there. It now looks like two saucers joined together at the rims and is about 300 feet high and 30–40 feet in diameter. It hovers, and several black, knob-like protuberances emerged on its right-hand side. It then rises vertically, speeds up, and disappears. (Peter J. Wroath, "Huge Low-Level UFO over Reading," Flying Saucer Review 16, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1970): 6–8)

1969, October — NICAP obtains a copy of a chapter of a textbook in use at the US Air Force Academy, Introductory Space Science, for the academy's Physics 370 course. The last chapter is on "Unidentified Flying Objects" and concludes that the "UFO phenomenon appears to have been global in nature for almost 50,000 years" and considers the "unpleasant possibility of alien visitors to our planet, or at least of alien controlled UFO's." It recommends keeping an "open and skeptical mind." (Introductory Space Science, Volume II, chapter on UFOs, pp. 455–467, reprinted in Quest Publications, "Official Government UFO Intelligence Papers Document Package 6," pp. 3–18; "Air Force Text Favors UFO Study," UFO Investigator, October 1970, p. 1; Ted Hubbard, "Air Academy Text Book Urges More Study of UFO Sightings," *Lemoore (Calif.) 1969, October 3 — After 8:00 p.m. RCMP Constable S. B. Barrie and his wife Vivian are driving 5 miles west of Rennie, Manitoba, on a poor highway in bad weather. He stops to clean mud off the headlights and notices a light to the east hanging just off Highway 44 and over the trees. He continues driving and he sees the light as a light-pink inverted saucer moving with a jerky motion. Now only 500 feet away, it seems to be 20 feet in diameter with an odd white tail that snakes toward the ground. Suddenly the car's windshield wipers stop working, the headlights go out, and the engine stalls. Barrie gets out of the car and the object zooms silently to the southwest and is lost to sight. He senses the air has a strange, heavy odor, but he is able to get the car started again. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 81–82)

1969, October 8 — A large area of St. Louis, Missouri, is blanketed by a pure-white, sticky substance ranging from dime-size to 10-foot-long streamers. The majority of it sublimates on ground contact. The Smithsonian concludes it is caused by ballooning spiders, even though only one spider specimen is found. When a sample is tested by Wayne E. Black of the St. Louis County Health Department, he finds the samples test negative for protein, the basic composition of spider web. (Washington Post, March 28, 1970; "A Classic Case of 'Angel-Hair,'" Pursuit 3, no. 4 (October 1970): 72–73)

1969, October 10 — 7:00 p.m. Ivan McConnell is driving on Aylwin Road one mile west of Kazabazua, Quebec, when he spots a white, cone-shaped object above his car. It is about 8 feet in diameter, about 200 feet above the ground, and seems to have a flag with a "skull and crossbones" insignia on its end. It moves away at "terrific speed" soundlessly. ("UFO Flying the Jolly Roger," Saucers, Space, and Science, no. 58 (1970): 11)

1969, October 12 — 12:20 a.m. Donat Francis and Ronald Mullin are checking the discharge pipelines along a waste disposal dam two miles from Murdochville, Quebec, when they notice a "shooting star." The men are about a half mile away from each other. Francis notices a noise like a motor first, then sees a star-like object about 200 feet in the air and approaching swiftly. The object makes a couple of turns around the dam then heads off to the east. As it leaves, it ejects a blue flame before picking up speed. Francis says the object is shaped like a half-moon with a blue windshield in front and twin propellors behind. ("Strange Phenomenon Fits Descriptions of Flying Saucers," Saucers, Space, and Science, no. 58 (1970): 11)

1969, October 20 —Brig. Gen. Carroll H. Bolender, USAF Deputy Director of Development, writes a draft document saying that the "continuation of Project Blue Book cannot be justified either on the ground of national security or in the interest of science." Bolender adds that "reports of unidentified flying objects which could affect national security are made in accordance with JANAP 146 or Air Force Manual 55-1 and are not part of the Blue Book system." This is a clear indication that Blue Book is only a front for a classified UFO project. (Brig. Gen. C. H. Bolender, "Unidentified Flying Objects (UFO)," October 20, 1969; Swords 336)

1969, October 24 — 12:43 a.m. A Chilean Navy destroyer is moving north at 20 knots in the South Pacific Ocean about 350 miles south of Valparaiso, Chile. The radar officer reports a target rapidly approaching the ship, apparently moving 213 miles in one minute, which would indicate a speed of 12,780 mph. At 12:47 a.m., the target is only 12 miles away, and it suddenly breaks into six targets. The officer in charge and five other personnel can now see one massive and five smaller lighted objects approaching the ship. The large UFO looks like a big box with semicircles on the side, and it is bigger than the ship, which is 360 feet long. The five smaller objects are egg-shaped, bluish, and no more than 8 feet long and 5–6 feet wide. At about 6,000 feet from the ship, the smaller objects move away from the larger one, three to portside and two to starboard, and begin flying in ellipses between the ship and the large object. At 900 feet away, the officers can hear the object make a humming noise.

The ship's power and instruments go dead as the large object passes overhead. Bright red lights under the UFO seem to be moving back and forth inside the craft, visible through a half-circle on the bottom. "Corn cobs" with green or turquoise pulsating lights are on the side. When the UFO is 600 feet away, the power comes back on. The smaller objects, never coming closer than 1,500–3,000 feet, fly around the ship and join up with the large object on the other side. All 6 objects vanish about 2 miles away. At least 8 minutes have passed, with three radar technicians tracking the UFOs. The ship's commander orders everyone to keep silent about what they have seen. The sighting is deleted from the ship's log. The six witnesses are debriefed for two days in Valparaiso by two Chilean Navy officers and four Americans who are allegedly naval attachés with the US Embassy. 1969, October 24–27 — The Turkish Air Force is inundated with reports of UFOs over Ankara, Turkey. Jet fighters are scrambled from Mürted Air Base [now closed] northwest of the city and close to within 7.5 miles, but the objects always pull away and climb higher. Even the base commander, Ercüment Gökaydin, flies with the interceptors to 35,000 feet, but the UFO is at a height of 50,000 feet. It is a silvery, oval disc. The jets take gun-camera film, which has never been released. One pilot says the object has three round portholes. (Good Need, p. 299)

1969, Late October — Before 12:00 midnight. The naval destroyer USS Josephus Daniels is sailing north along the Cuban coast from Guantanamo Bay Naval Base. Crew members see a brilliant silver disk rising above the horizon, many times larger than the moon. It hovers for 15 minutes. (Carl Feindt, "Report #880," waterufo.net; Dolan, USO1, 340–341)

1969, October 27 — NICAP Assistant Director Gordon I. R. Lore Jr. writes board member Joseph B. Hartranft Jr. an 11-page letter outlining the organization's difficulties. He alerts the board of directors to the growing financial crisis brought on by Donald E. Keyhoe's failure to keep adequate books and records. He urges the hiring of a business director. In the summer he had gotten permission from Keyhoe to fire five of NICAP's eight employees as a cost-saving measure. (Clark III 794; Clark IV 874)

1969, October 30 — 3:10 a.m. J. F. Cudby, a security guard at Waipukurau Aerodrome, New Zealand, is checking buildings when he sees some lights reflected in a glass door. He turns and sees a 60-foot in diameter circular object with lights hovering low above the airport. His guard dog becomes unusually excited. Cudby runs to his van about 20 feet away and shines a spotlight on the object, which speeds away, making a high-pitched whining sound. He examines the ground beneath where the object had hovered and finds that it is hot and dry. An independent witness, W. T. Grant, confirms the sighting. He sees a circular object hovering about 100 feet off the ground. It then rises and accelerates away to the south. ("New Zealand," Flying Saucer Review 16, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1970): 31–32; UFOEv II 213–214)

1969, October 30 — 10:00 a.m. Mr. and Mrs. Chapin are driving at their mine site near Redding, California, when they see a rattlesnake in the road. As they get out to go to the mine and kill the snake, they find the area oddly hot. They notice a disturbance in the brush some 60 feet away in a flattened area of mine tailings. An egg-shaped object rises noiselessly a few feet off the ground and takes off down the canyon, swaying but not striking small trees. Soon it zooms upward at a sharp angle and is out of sight in seconds. They find a shallow, oval, depressed spot less than 2 inches deep and 10 feet across in the mine tailings. A conical pile of unusual-looking sand is also discovered, and two days later they find a metallic glob about the size of a fist nearby. They have the material analyzed in 1977. Scattered about in the unusual sand pile are irregular bits of pale-green glass-like material made of nearly pure silicon. The metal glob is completely black on the outside and 77% copper in the interior, combined with tin and traces of silver, chromium, and other metals. Both are considered foreign to the geology of the mine site. ("The Redding, California CE II Case," IUR 3, no. 3 (March 1978): insert)

1969, November — English ufologist John Rimmer looks ahead to ufology in the 1970s and predicts that "the Great Revelation will not take place." Sensational tales will be told and the public will remain largely unconvinced. Perhaps "more new and unexpected elements will be introduced into, and emerge from, the whole UFO problem, rendering it not only more complex, but considerably more interesting." (John A. Rimmer, "The Seventies: A Prognostication," Merseyside UFO Bulletin 2, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1969): 65–67; Eghigian, After, pp. 217–218)

1969, November 8 — Australian physicist O. H. "Harry" Turner has been working with other scientists to set up a "rapid intervention team" for the RAAF to investigate UFO physical evidence. In a memo to the director of the Joint Intelligence Bureau, he indicates he is working with John Morton of Australian National University, John Symonds from the Australian Atomic Energy Commission, and Michael Duggin of the National Standards

Laboratory. The plan is soon dropped by the JIB. (Bill Chalker, "The Australian Government and UFOs," IUR 22, no. 3 (Fall 1997): 21; Swords 396–397; Coulthart 2023, p. 64)

1969, November 9 — The D-21 drone makes its first reconnaissance mission over China, launched from a B-52. It flies over the Lop Nur Nuclear Test Base in Xinjiang but strays off course into Siberia and crashes. (Wikipedia, "Lockheed D-21"; Jacobsen, Area 51, p. 223)

1969, December 3 — The NICAP board of governors demands Keyhoe's resignation. He retires, under protest, at age 72. Leading the effort is board chairman Col. Joseph Bryan III, who takes over as acting president. ("Major Keyhoe Retires," UFO Investigator, May 1970, pp. 1, 3; "NICAP Redeploys," UFO Investigator, May 1970, p. 1; Clark III 794; Powell, Keyhoe, 388–389; Clark IV 874)

1969, December 5 — Bryan dismisses NICAP Assistant Director Gordon I. R. Lore Jr., replacing him with G. Stuart Nixon as secretary-treasurer. ("Major Keyhoe Retires," UFO Investigator, May 1970, pp. 1, 3; Clark III 794; Powell, Keyhoe, 389; Clark IV 874)

1969, December 9 — Richard H. Hall, who had been NICAP's assistant director up to 1967, cancels his membership and circulates a protest letter. (Clark III 794; Clark IV 874)

1969, December 17 — Air Force Secretary Robert Seamans announces the termination of Project Blue Book, based on the Condon report, the NAS endorsement, and "past UFO studies." He repeats the Bolender wording that Blue Book "cannot be justified either on the ground of national security or in the interest of science." Technically, Blue Book does not terminate until January 30, 1970. Blue Book records are moved to Maxwell AFB in Montgomery, Alabama, in a building that requires security clearance to enter. Eventually, the files, minus the witness names, are consigned to the Modern Military Branch, Military Archives Division, National Archives, Washington, D.C. (Sparks, p. 3; Office of Assistant Secretary of Defense, "Air Force to Terminate Project 'Blue Book,'" December 17, 1969; "Air Forces Closes Study of U.F.O.s," New York Times, December 18, 1969, pp. 1, 41; "The Book Is Closed," UFO Investigator, May 1970, p. 3; Clark III 926, 1200; David J. Shea, "NCAS Presentation," September 8, 2018; Eghigian, After, p. 214; Clark IV 1036, 1374)

1969, December 18 — Condon is quoted in the New York Times that his investigation "was a bunch of damn nonsense," and he is sorry he "got involved in such foolishness." ("Air Forces Closes Study of U.F.O.s," New York Times, December 18, 1969, pp. 1, 41)

1969, December 26–27 — The American Association for the Advancement of Science holds a special two-day segment on "Unidentified Flying Objects" at its annual meeting in Boston, Massachusetts, at the Sheraton Hotel. The program is arranged by Thornton Page (NASA Manned Spacecraft Center), Philip Morrison (MIT), Walter Orr Roberts (University Corporation for Atmospheric Research), and Carl Sagan (Cornell). Rising to the occasion, James E. McDonald presents an excellent critique of the Air Force and Colorado project investigations as well as an in-depth examination of the RB-47 and Lakenheath-Bentwaters cases. Donald Menzel attempts to show that all UFO sightings can be explained, even though some of his "explanations" are complex. Morrison discusses the nature of hard evidence and concludes that reliable UFO reports would stand up both in a court of law and in the rigors of science. Cornell University Press publishes the proceedings, UFOs: A Scientific Debate, in 1972. (James E. McDonald, "Science in Default: Twenty-Two Years of Inadequate UFO Investigations," December 27, 1969; Walter Sullivan, "Scientists Seek Air Force U.F.O. 1969, December 28 — A man named Patric is driving from Midland to Windsor, Ontario, on heavily snowed roads after an accident has blocked the main highway. Suddenly, his car engine, headlights, and radio fails, and he crawls to a halt in front of a star-like glow with a prismatic, multi-colored aura 100 feet ahead. Inside the glow is a domed object. A loud humming noise commences and the object shoots into the sky. The car comes back to life, but Patric inexplicably reaches Windsor one hour late. (Jenny Randles, "The Twelve UFOs of Christmas," Fortean Times 374 (Christmas 2018): 29)

1970 — Ivan T. Sanderson publishes his last UFO book, Invisible Residents, which compiles reports of unusual objects seen in or around bodies of water. He speculates that such cases need not involve the presence of extraterrestrials, but possibly an indigenous intelligence that evolved independently in the oceans. (Ivan T. Sanderson, Invisible Residents, World, 1970; Clark III 1028; Clark IV 1143)

1970 — John A. Keel writes UFOs: Operation Trojan Horse, in which he presents a theory that UFOs are produced by ultraterrestrials—nonhuman beings who are able to manipulate matter and our senses and who in the past manifested themselves as fairies or demons. (John A. Keel, UFOs: Operation Trojan Horse, Manor Books ed., 1976; Wikipedia, "Operation Trojan Horse (book)"; Clark III 882, 940–941; Eghigian, After, p. 252; Clark IV 976, 1050–1051)

1970 — The CIA is testing a small drone aircraft in the shape of a bird at Groom Lake, Nevada. Called Project Aquiline, the agency wants to fly a reconnaissance UAV over key intelligence targets, such as ICBM sites and nuclear test grounds in the Soviet Union and China, without detection. At least one of the prototypes is flown from Area 51 more than 20 times. The project is cancelled in 1971 before deployment and has never been declassified. (Wikipedia, "Project AQUILINE"; David Hambling, "Area 51's Robotic Spy Bird," Wired, November 6, 2007)

1970? — An 11-year-old girl in Adelaide, South Australia, is abducted by little beings while she is sleeping with her two sisters. She is taken to a room for a medical examination, followed by an educational film and a discussion session. Details begin to emerge the next morning and continue to do so in a long series of nightmares that continue for another nine years. She has episodes of sex with small humanoid aliens at their initiation and she undergoes regular gynecological examinations aboard the UFO. She thinks they are collecting "fluid" and "messing around with my ovaries." She has two pregnancies that she considers out of the ordinary, and in both cases they end in spontaneous abortions. (Keith Basterfield, "An Australian Abduction," IUR 16, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1991): 4–6, 22; Keith Basterfield, "Abused by Aliens," Fortean Times 58 (July 1991): 48–51; Clark III 1064; Clark IV 1180)

1970 — A retired physicist who claims to have worked on the Manhattan Project tells Leonard H. Stringfield in 1990 that he was working on Project Blue Heaven at Edwards Air Force Base in California in the late 1960s and early 1970s. The project is set up to examine a UFO and its crew that had landed at or near the base and are kept in a secure building for evaluation. The 12 or so occupants have eyes of one color like a dog's and blood that "looked like oil," and they are about 5 feet tall. They are dressed in a "silvery-looking material" that contain "elements that we don't have on Earth." The UFO has no seams, rivets, or welding and has a dome on top. Allegedly no one can cut a hole into it. He claims the project is still active in 1990 and it is run by the Department of Defense. (Leonard H. Stringfield, UFO Crash Retrievals: The Inner Sanctum, Status Report VI, The Author, July 1991, pp. 203–210)

1970 — The crew of a US Air Force C-5A Galaxy transport, flying at 500 mph at 37,000 feet, encounters a UFO over Moula Idris, Saudi Arabia [=Moulay Idriss Zerhoun, Morocco?]. An RAF officer on detachment is flying the aircraft, and he describes the object as like two saucers joined together, surrounded by red, green, and yellow and flying at 75,000 feet. (Good Need, pp. 298–299)

Early 1970 — 10:00 p.m. A peasant in the Taijiang(?) District of Fujian province, China, sees a metallic, pan-shaped object land behind a hill. It radiates a brilliant green light, and a strange musical tone emanates from it. After he reports it, the local army commander mobilizes hundreds of soldiers who attempt to surround the object. After about one hour, the object emits a bright white light and takes off vertically. (Wendelle Stevens and Paul Dong, UFOs over Modern China, UFO Photo Archive, 1983, p. 56)

Early 1970s — 2:30–3:00 a.m. Two young men in Furnace Creek, California, are followed by a red ball of light the size of a beach ball. They get scared and run ahead to their house, slamming and locking the door behind them. The ball stops at the edge of their yard, hovering and oscillating in size. After 4–5 minutes, the ball moves away and creates a vortex, causing stones to rise and circle in the air. They can hear the sound of the stones hitting together. Then the light blinks out, and the rocks crash down onto the road. (Michael D. Swords, "Timmermania: A Step Too Far into the Timmerman Files?" IUR 27, no. 4 (Winter 2002–2003): 9)

1970, January — English ufologist John Rimmer criticizes ufology for focusing too heavily on the extraterrestrial hypothesis, arguing that natural phenomena and subjective explanations should also be considered. He concludes, "The ETH must not be considered as the only explanation, with the assumption that if it is not the UFO subject then [it] becomes something else, of less intrinsic interest." (John A. Rimmer, "A Look at the Alternatives," Merseyside UFO Bulletin 3, no. 1 (January 1970): 4–6)

1970, January 1 — 5:00 a.m. Registered nurse Doreen Kendall is looking out a window at the Cowichan District Hospital in Duncan, British Columbia, and sees a bright, Saturn-shaped object about 50 feet in diameter hovering one story above her, about 60 feet off the ground and 40 feet away. It has a row of lights around its middle. She can see two humanoid figures in dark, tight-fitting clothing and wearing headgear in the upper portion. One stands at an instrument panel, with the other behind it. The second being looks directly at Kendall, then touches the first being, who moves a lever, apparently causing the craft to tilt down and provide a view of its interior. Kendall calls for other witnesses, who arrive in time to see the UFO leave. In 2023, Dan Hughes claims that the UFO was an inflated plastic bag lit by candles that he and two friends launched, but that explanation has been contested. 1970, January 6 — Keyhoe is interviewed by telephone by radio broadcaster Alan Douglas in a show titled "Have Flying Saucers Left?" He fudges a bit about his ousting from NICAP, saying there was "some confusion," that a reorganization had been planned, and that he might be handling "technical matters." ("Profiles in Ufology: Major Donald E. Keyhoe, Dr. James E. McDonald & Frank Edwards Guide," November 21, 2013; Powell, Keyhoe, 391–393)

1970, January 7 — 4:45 p.m. Two skiers, lumberjack Aarno Heinonen and farmer Esko Viljo, at Imjärvi, Finland, watch a disc-shaped, buzzing UFO approach them and hover. It is so close to Heinonen that he could touch it with his ski pole. From an opening in the center of the object's bottom, a bright light beam is emitted, creating an illuminated area of 3 feet in diameter on the snow beneath it, edged with black. A red gray mist descends again; when it clears, both men can see, only 10 feet away, a 3-foot tall humanoid creature standing in the illuminated area, carrying in its hands a black box with a pulsating yellow light. Its arms and legs are very thin, its face pale like wax, and its nose hooked; it wears a light green coverall with darker green knee boots, white gauntlets, and a conical metallic helmet. Then the mist again descends, and long red, green, and purple sparks float out from the lighted area. A sort of flame rises from this spot and enters the UFO; then the mist and the UFO vanish. After this experience, Heinonen finds his right leg numb, and he vomits and passes black urine; Viljo also suffers severe physiological effects. Heinonen claims, two years later, a series of contacts with a female spacewoman. 1970, January 21 — The UFO Subcommittee of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics sponsors a panel that meets in New York City to discuss differing viewpoints on UFOs. Among the panel members are Hynek, McDonald, Thornton Page, Gordon D. Thayer, and Philip Klass. The subcommittee, led by Joachim P. Kuettner, consists of scientists with no previous position on UFOs and reaches several middle-of-the-road conclusions. It criticizes the NAS position that the ETH is the least likely explanation and rejects McDonald's position that it is the "least unsatisfactory." It criticizes the Condon report, in which the conclusions do not match the data, and recommends a moderate-level, ongoing study of UFOs. ("UFOs, an Appraisal of the Problem: A Statement by the UFO Subcommittee of the AIAA," Aeronautics and Astronautics 8, no. 11 (November 1970): 49–51; Clark III 101–102; Clark IV 129–130)

1970, January 29 — A Uruguayan professor of socioeconomics takes a photo of a cigar-shaped object in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Analysis shows that it was probably a streetlamp. ("A Street Lamp, or Sign, Or," CUFOS Associate

1970, January 30 — 3:30 p.m. Project Blue Book's doors close as its office is staffed for the last time. The files have been packed in boxes and are on their way to the Air Force Archives at Maxwell AFB in Montgomery, Alabama. ("The Book Is Closed," UFO Investigator, May 1970, p. 3; Clark III 926; Clark IV 1036)

1970, March 28 — 11:00 p.m. About 30 UFO spotters gathered on Cradle Hill, just outside Warminster, Wiltshire, England, see a flashing purple light. One of their sensors buzzes, indicating a strong magnetic field, and one observer (Norman Foxwell) takes photos that appear in the July/August 1970 Flying Saucer Review. But the UFO is actually a light beam from a high-intensity purple spot-lamp operated by a group of UFO debunkers, among them physicist David I. Simpson. Foxwell himself is part of the skeptical group (having pre-exposed a spurious UFO image), as is the individual who operates the bogus magnetic-field sensor. The hoax is revealed six years later. 1970, March 29 — UFO-Sverige is formed as the first nationwide UFO organization in Sweden; it is essentially an association of 20 UFO groups in different parts of the country. The secretary's office is located in Skånninge. It publishes the magazine UFO-Information from 1969 to 1980, then UFO-Aktuellt beginning in 1980. 1970, April 9 — 4:00 p.m. Max Krauss is walking along a country road near Schemmerhofen, Baden-Württemberg, Germany, when he hears two dull but loud bangs. He turns and sees a transparent ball with 8 radial spokes floating down the road close to the ground. About 16 inches in diameter, the ball is rotating anticlockwise on a vertical axis. Suddenly it stops and makes a right-angle turn toward a small stream and stops rotating. Something like a hose-pipe extend from the center and bends itself back and upward, writhing like a worm, then reaches down into the water. The hose then is drawn back in, the center part of the ball turns milky, and the outer shell turns blue. Then the ball starts rotating again, passes across the road into a field and vanishes. (Hubert Malthaner, "Mystery Flying Object Rolls along a German Road," Flying Saucer Review 18, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1972): 15–17)

1970, April 15 — 1:38 p.m. Raúl Galan, a news photographer for La Capital in Mar del Plata, Argentina, takes a clear photograph of a domed disc. ("The above photo," Skylook, no. 93 (August 1975): 1; UFOEv II 287–288)

1970, April 29–30 — Around midnight. Several independent groups of witnesses to the west of Lake Anten, Västra Götaland, Sweden, watch a red, glowing sphere fly around the lake and neighboring areas. It occasionally sends out a beam of light to the ground. Some of the observers get the impression that the beams originate on the ground rather than from the object. The next morning a few of the observers get into boats and sail to the spot where the sphere was seen hovering. In one corner of the garden of an isolated farmhouse named Enebacken, they find three round marks, one foot in diameter and 1.5 inches deep, burned into the ground in the shape of an equilateral triangle. A UFO group in Gothenburg, Sweden, takes soil samples to a laboratory for gamma-ray testing and finds significant non-background radiation at a peak that seems to derive from cesium-137, a radioactive isotope. (Sven-Olof Fredrickson, "A Landing near Lake Anten?" Flying Saucer Review 17, no 1 (Jan./Feb. 1971): 13–17)

1970, May 5 — Although the Air Force is no longer involved with UFOs, the Foreign Technology Division at Wright-Patterson AFB in Ohio continues to contract Hynek's services as a "special consultant" on atmospheric phenomena. He reports to Col. George R. Weinbrenner, whom he visits every once in a while in Dayton. He continues with the contract through 1974. (Jennie Zeidman, "I Remember Blue Book," IUR 16, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1991): 12, 23; Thomas J. Carey and Donald R. Schmitt, Inside the Real Area 51, Tantor Media, 2013, pp. 203–213)

1970, May 14 — 9:45 p.m. A graduate engineering student in Bangor, Maine, notices two nocturnal lights in the Ursa Major constellation moving in a counterclockwise circle around a common center at a constant velocity. They abruptly stop moving, leaving them in a north-south position. After a short time, they move away from each other, then the light moving south suddenly halts. The other light is moving slower than a meteor but faster than a jet aircraft. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 48–49)

1970, May 15 — 10:30 p.m. Dorothy Simpson, a clerk in a motel in a suburb of Saint Louis, Missouri, allegedly checks in four small, strange-looking people, two adults and two children. They seem confused about eating, elevators, and television. In the morning they have disappeared from their room. (John E. Schroeder, "The Strangers among Us," The UFO Enigma 7, no. 7 (June 1987): 3–6; Clark III 91–92; Clark IV 119–120)

1970, May 29 — John L. Acuff, an experienced manager but not a UFO researcher, becomes the new president of NICAP. He is the former executive director of the Washington, D.C.–based Society of Photographic Scientists and Engineers [now the Society for Imaging Science and Technology], which has cooperated with NICAP on photoanalysis but also has military and CIA connections. Acuff and G. Stuart Nixon dismantle the NICAP system of affiliates and state subcommittee system that have promoted the organization for years. Regional members are told to operate independently from one another; cooperation is discouraged. Criticism of the government's UFO policy is no longer permitted and NICAP turns into a mere "sighting collection center." Nixon is appointed executive director. 1970, June — Contact (UK) begins publishing The UFO Register, a journal edited by J. B. Delair that focuses on sightings and data. It continues sporadically until 1995. (The UFO Register 1, part 1 (June 1970))

1970, June —The Centro de Estudios Interplanetarios in Barcelona, Spain, begins publishing Stendek, edited by Joan Crexells. It is published through December 1981. (Stendek 1, no. 1 (June 1970))

1970, June — Jader U. Pereira, a jurist and secretary of the São Paulo, Brazil–based Grupo Gaúcho de Investigação de Objetos Aéreos Não Identificados, publishes the results of a two-year analysis of 333 UFO cases from around the world for the previous 20 years involving occupants. He classifies the entities in terms of body type and size, skin color, hair, and clothing. He finds a great deal of variation, but nearly 96% of the accounts involve occupants that are basically human in form. (Jader U. Pereira, "Les Extra-terrestres," Phénomènes Spatiaux, no. 24 (June 1970): 14–20; Eghigian, After, pp. 149–150)

1970, June — 12:45 a.m. A truck driver is approaching Emerald Beach, New South Wales, when he sees a bright light on he ocean side of the highway. A circular object rises from behind some woods 1,600 feet from the road. It hovers for 30 seconds at an altitude of 66 feet. Relative to the trees, the object appears to be about 33 feet in diameter, and flames seem to shoot from its base. It slowly returns to the ground, where it is partially obscured by trees, but it continues to emit beams of light from its top and sides. Fearful, the driver leaves the area. Ufologist Bill Chalker accompanies the witness to the landing site, where they discover six circles of dead grass of varying sizes and burned trees. (Bill Chalker, "Physical Traces," UFOs 1947–1987, Fortean Tomes, 1987, p. 190)

1970, June 7 — 1:30 a.m. Four individuals—Michael A. Marando, Dennis Pilichis, Earl Neff, and Iris Pilichis—are driving about 20 miles north of Sebring, Ohio, on State Highway 14. They first observe a bright light to the left of the road and think it is a tower, but binoculars show no structure. Eventually, the object comes toward the road and they can see it is an equilateral triangle, moving flat side forward, with red and green lights on the front and a small white light in the rear. It is moving very slowly, never more than 20–25 mph, with no sound. The UFO eventually ascends high into the sky and hovers there for some time. (Cleveland Ufology Project case file)

1970, June 11 — Early morning. The crew of Thor Heyerdahl's papyrus boat, the Ra II, watch a bright object move across the sky for several minutes and disappear in a "bright orange flash." Navigator Norman Baker relays the report via shortwave radio as the vessel is making its way westward across the Atlantic from Safi, Morocco, to

Barbados. ("UFO Spotted from Ra," Ottawa (Ont.) Journal, June 15, 1970, p. 25; "UFO Reported by Heyerdahl Crew," APRO Bulletin, July/August 1970, p. 9)

1970, June 13 — MUFON holds its first annual conference in Peoria, Illinois. Shortly afterwards, Walt Andrus succeeds Allen Utke as MUFON director. 1970, June 27 — 11:40 a.m. Aristeu Machado, his wife and children, and João Aguiar of the Brazilian Federal police, see a metallic, domed disc resting on the surface of the Atlantic Ocean about a half-mile off the coast of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Two humanoid figures are standing on the rim. After a while the object skims the surface of the water and takes off, lights flashing from the underside. Once airborne, the wife can clearly see the two occupants sitting inside. (UFOEv II 460; Brazil 128–130)

1970, July — Afternoon. John and Mary Pilichis see a huge cigar-shaped object over their home at Rome, Ohio. At the same time, their daughter Bonnie and a friend are at a swimming pool about one-half mile away when they see 3 silvery discs flying end-to-end in the direction of their home. The parents then see the discs as well. The cigar and the discs form a line and move into a large, peculiar cloud. After 3–4 minutes, the cloud begins to break apart, with no UFOs showing. (Ohio UFO Reporter, Sept./Nov. 1971; Herbert S. Taylor, "Cloud Cigars: A Further Look," IUR 30, no. 3 (May 2006): 12)

1970, July 4 — 3:00 a.m. A 33-year-old Port Monmouth, New Jersey, housewife wakes up and sees a "big round ball" with an "eerie white glow" hovering over the meadows across the street. She watches it bouncing back and forth for 15 minutes as a series of red lights flash in sequence across it. The size is about 25–30 feet wide. The streetlight has gone out and comes back on when the object leaves. Her son and brother-in-law later find three imprints 30–40 feet apart in the shape of a triangle in the meadow. They also find circles impressed in the grass, the largest 15–20 feet in diameter. Then they find tracks "going to the creek like they had dragged some small round thing into the ditch" as well as "two sets of a dozen imprints which were about two feet apart. They were curved like raindrops. It was very visible, the grass was all crushed down, there was mud on the banks of the creek, and there were signs of the tracks in the mud." One week later, the light returns and crosses the field across the street. The family television, the car ignition, and the telephone behave strangely for days afterward. (Berthold E. Schwarz, "The Port Monmouth Landing," Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 3 (May/June 1971): 21–27; Clark III 251–252; Clark IV 291)

1970, July 23 — President Nixon makes it clear that he wants a major effort against domestic dissidents. At an Oval Office meeting in June with the Inter Agency Committee on Intelligence (H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, Tom Charles Huston, J. Edgar Hoover, Richard Helms, Adm. Noel Gaynor, and Lt. Gen. Donald W. Bennett), Nixon hears suggestions for expanded mail openings, resumption of illegal break-ins, electronic surveillance, and expanded counterintelligence. He approves the plan in July but will not sign it; neither will Haldeman or Ehrlichman. The plan was originally put together by Huston. Hoover torpedoes it when he announces that he will go along with it as soon as he gets written authorization from Nixon for all those break-ins and wiretaps. (Wikipedia, "Huston Plan")

1970, July 25 — 5:30 p.m. A witness comes across a landed domed disc, about 20 feet in diameter and 10 feet high with windows in the dome and portholes in its side, sitting on 4 legs near Jabreilles-les-Bordes, Haute-Vienne, France. He is blinded by a yellow-orange light beam and paralyzed by fright. As the object ascends with a whistling sound, he feels a wave of heat. At 330 feet altitude, the object jumps vertically and disappears behind a mountain. Four imprints are found forming an irregular figure on the hillside. (MM. Gaille, J. Gorce, and J. F. Gorce, "Atterrissage près de Jabreilles-les-Bordes (Haute Vienne), part 1," Lumières dans la Nuit, no. 113 (August 1971): 11–14; MM. Gaille, J. Gorce, and J. F. 1970, August — Day. A group of Russian hydrologists are conducting research on a motorboat on Kronotsky Lake, Kamchatka Krai, Russia. Suddenly, about a half-mile away a dome of water rises up and a gray-colored oval object rises up. It is roughly 165 feet in diameter, rises to about 500 feet, and hovers nearly overhead. The engine of the motorboat stalls. The team watches for another 90 seconds before they row away, but the object moves away at reat speed and disappears. The boat's motor starts working again. (Stonehill and Mantle, Russia's USO Secrets, Flying Disk, 2020, pp. 82–83)

1970, August 7–12 — Evening. Contactee Paul Solem, who has managed to convince a number of Hopi Indian elders, among them Chief Dan Katchongva, that he is a true prophet heralding the coming of a True White Brother, publicly summons his space brother friends telepathically for 15 minutes in Prescott, Arizona, where UFOs have been reported over the previous few days. After Solem announces that "they're here," a "star" appears that had not been there before and Solem receives a message from space brother Paul 2, who tells him that the saucers are appearing because of a Hopi prophecy. Others see zigzagging lights in the sky over the next few nights, and Prescott Courier photographer Chuck Roberts takes a time-lapse photo of one. (Jerome Clark, "Indian Prophecy and the Prescott UFOs," Fate 24, no. 4 (April 1971): 54–61; John A. Keel, "America's First UFO Experts: The Hopi," UFO Report, Summer 1974; Armin W. 1970, August 13 — 10:50 p.m. Police officer Evald Hansen Maarup is driving 5 miles south of Haderslev, Denmark, when he is surrounded by a bluish-white light. His engine stops and the car lights and radio go out. Heat inside the car increases. He sees a conical light coming from the bottom of a large, silent, domed gray object about 30 feet long and 60 feet away. After a few seconds, the light beam slowly rises and is drawn back into the UFO, leaving darkness in its wake, a process that takes about 5 minutes. It speeds away vertically within a few seconds. 1970, August 14 — 8:45 p.m. Residents of Little Heart's Ease and St. Jones Within on the Southwest Arm in Newfoundland watch a blood-red fireball 8–10 feet long with a trail of lighter color for about 5 minutes as it passes overhead to the northeast. It makes a rushing noise before it crashes into the water near the mouth of the harbor at Little Heart's Ease. When the RCMP arrive to investigate, they go out in a boat but can find no submerged object. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August North, 2022, p. 102)

1970, August 16 — 12:30 a.m. A man, his wife, and two children are returning home from the beach at Matalascañas, Seville, Spain, when they encounter a moving, dense vapor cloud about 6 feet above the ground on the road between Aznalcázar and Pilas. Every time the cloud moves away from them, the car's headlights go out. ("Observaciones Ibéricas de Junio a Septiembre de 1970," Stendek 1, no. 2 (September 1970): 4–5)

1970, August 16 — 4:00 p.m. Julián Arribas Abella, his wife, and his 4-year-old son are on the beach at Burriana, Castellón, Spain, when he sees an object flying silently at great speed and high altitude on their left. It disappears in less than 40 seconds. About 10 minutes later, another object appears moving in the same direction for the same duration, and all three of them see it. His wife describes it as a "cotton ball spinning in the air," and his son calls it a "whirlwind." After another 10 minutes, a third object appears that is more elongated, light gray, and apparently spinning. Later, they see a fourth object that passes closer to them, and they see that it is completely round. Its speed and color are identical to the others. ("Observaciones Ibéricas de Junio a Septiembre de 1970," Stendek 1, no. 2 (September 1970): 4)

1970, August 18 — Around 5:05 a.m. Patrick Carré is driving through Le Puits d'Edme, Yonne, France, when he notices a bright object on the ground to his left. He pulls up toward it and sees that it has a basin-shaped top, is a gray metal color, and is about 30–40 feet in diameter. The lower part is a rust-colored, cylindrical column about 3 feet high. The basin has a series of round white disks, each 15 inches in diameter, irregularly scattered around it. He can't stop because the heat from the object are too intense, and he begins to feel afraid of getting near it, so he drives on. The next day he visits the spot and finds traces of burning and a circle of flattened and withered grass 30–40 inches in diameter. (Henry-Jean Besset, "A Landing at Puits-d'Edme," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 5 (June 1971): 5–7, 12)

1970, August 29 — 11:15 p.m. Several witnesses in Enebacken, Sweden, see a bright, round, red light maneuvering around the ground, emitting beams of yellow-white light. Three round landing marks in a triangular formation are found in the garden of Richard Johansson's small farm near Lake Anten. Soil samples are taken and analyzed, with the results showing an increased level of gamma radiation in the test samples from one of the landing marks. (Sven-Olof Fredrickson, "A Landing near Lake Anten?" Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1971): 13–17)

1970, August 30 — 11:30 a.m. A 7-year-old girl in Vincennes, Indiana, sees a metallic disc in the east-northeast hovering over Wheatland Road. She tells her parents, and her father goes outside and sees it too. He re-enters the house to get his 7x50 binoculars. The object is about a quarter of a mile away and looks like a squared-off conning tower about 30 feet in diameter. They watch it for 90 seconds, after which it leaves in a swooping dive to the north-northeast. (NICAP, "Domed Disc Observed in Broad Daylight / MADAR Connection")

1970, August 30 — 9:45 p.m. Almiro Martins de Freitas is working as a guard at the Barragem do Funil electrical power plant in Itatiaia, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, when he notices a row of 15 blue and yellow lights outside. After he leaves the powerhouse, he hears an explosion and the lights go out for a few seconds, after which he sees above the dam the object they are coming from about 165–200 feet away. He crawls across the dam to get closer and reaches a point 50 feet away. The object looks like a rectangle or flying wing. De Freitas draws his .38 pistol and fires a shot at it, whereupon the lights grow brighter and he hears the sound of a turbine engine. He takes another shot, and the object emits a bluish-silver ray that causes him to feel heat and a prickling sensation. He closes his eyes, and when he opens them, he is temporarily blinded. The lights on the object dim and brighten in a specific sequence. De Freitas fires another shot and, like the others, he can hear a ricochet. Other guards reach him and have difficulty taking him to the hospital. He regains his sight two weeks later. ("Man Blinded in UFO Encounter," APRO Bulletin, Sept./Oct 1970, pp. 1, 5; "Man Shoots at UFO…UFO Blinds Man," Flying Saucer Review 16, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1970): 23, iv)

1970, September — 9:00 p.m. While walking home from a high school football game in Jessup, Pennsylvania, Frank Scassellati, 16, observes a glowing white, apparently metallic, silvery disc in the southeast sky moving from left to right. Around the dome on top is a row of rectangular windows; three spheres and a flat circle are visible on the underside. The object moves out of sight behind local terrain. Though he does not report the sighting to any authorities, Scassellati says that a few nights later he notices a limousine parked outside of his house with four men in black suits and hats sitting in it. They reappear for several nights but he has no interaction with them. (Center for UFO Studies, [case documents])

1970, September 8 — Dusk. A farmer near Zillah, Washington, is dismounting from his tractor when he sees a triangular object hovering in the air. Steel gray in color, it has a red light at each of its bottom corners and white lights in its center. It eventually moves upward and out of sight. ("Sighting Advisory," UFO Investigator, January 1971, p. 1)

1970, October 5 — 4:15 a.m. A farmer turns on his yard lights in Walsh, Illinois, and prepares to feed the cows when he notices a circular, red light beam, fuzzy and surrounded by fog. Initially thinking it is the moon, he recalls that there is no moon that night, as the crescent moon has set. He sees an object with a beam of light extending upward and another beam reaching down to the ground, eventually shining on him. He estimates the object's position to be over the treetops near a pond, about 600 feet east of the barn, at an elevation of approximately 40°. He compares its size to a volleyball held at arm's length. The UFO gradually fades from view. Later, five cows are found on the other side of a three-strand electric fence, with one of the strands broken. However, no one can determine how the cows had crossed to that side of the fence. (NICAP, "Walsh IL, October 5, 1970"; "Illinois Farmer Watches Red UFO with Beams of Bright Light," Skylook, no. 36 (November 1970): 6–7; "Object over Illinois Farm," APRO Bulletin, Nov./Dec. 1970, pp. 1, 3)

1970, October 5 — 4:15 a.m. Mrs. Hubert Paul in Warrensburg, Missouri, looks east and sees a yellow-orange object resembling the full moon. The object is silent and estimated to be 15°–20° above the eastern horizon. She observes it expanding, with a haze forming on the southern third of the disc, and at one point, an antenna-like structure extends from it. The investigator, Ted Phillips, expresses skepticism, suspecting the object might be a NASA plasma experiment linked to the Argo-D4 Javelin rocket, which launched at 5:05 a.m. Eastern Time for a plasma mission, reaching an apogee of 559 miles. ("Yellow-Orange Object Seen at Warrensburg and Knob Noster, Mo.," Skylook, no. 36 (November 1970): 6)

1970, October 6 — 8:15 p.m. Mrs. Dennis Billings spots a lighted UFO while gathering toys in her front yard in Decatur, Alabama. She screams for her husband and he joins her outside. She points to the object moving from north to south before it veers east. He retrieves his camera and captures one photograph of a second similar object that appears shortly after the first, although his second attempt yields no visible image. The couple notes a dark mass behind the lights of the UFO. ("Object Photographed in Alabama," APRO Bulletin, Nov./Dec. 1970, pp. 5–6)

1970, October 11 — 2:15 a.m. Roger G. Jayo is driving north to Bay City, Michigan, on Michigan Highway 15 when he observes two brightly lit, disc-shaped objects traveling overhead, producing no sound and moving between 100 and 150 mph. The radio in his car buzzes with static during the sighting. Jayo reports the incident to the Bay County Sheriff's Department, which takes the report seriously and contacts military officials. However, no unusual activity is detected by radar equipment. ("Two Low Flying Saucers Seen in Michigan," Skylook, no. 37 (December 1970): 1–2)

1970, October 24 — 1:00 a.m. Gerald Adams and Donna Martin are parked on a dirt road 3–4 miles north and a half-mile west of MacGregor, Manitoba. They notice a bright light approaching from about a half-mile away. When it lands 150 feet from them, they notice it is an oblong object 8 feet in diameter with 9 "rods" and a red light on top. Adams takes Martin home but returns to the site. The object has moved farther away and is hovering above the ground. As he drives closer, he sees a humanoid entity about 4 feet tall dressed in a helmet and a silver metallic uniform crossing the road about 50 feet in front of him. He brakes, but the entity has gone. The UFO slowly lifts vertically from the ground and speeds away to the northwest. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 146–150, 160)

1970, October 29 — 5:40 p.m. Reidar Salvesen is driving about 2 miles east of Helleland, Rogaland, Norway, when a dazzling light forces him to stop the car. He looks up and sees a globe about 60 feet in diameter approaching noiselessly. It stops about 18 feet in front of the car and hovers for 50 seconds about 30 feet up. Suddenly the object shoots straight up into the air, causing Salvesen to fall on the pavement. He hears a sharp crack caused by his front windshield shattering. About 3,200 feet in the air the globe changes to a fireball, which quickly disappears. After sweeping up the shards of windowpane glass, he drives on, but feels a numbness in his tongue a few minutes later. He also has an abrasion on his hand from falling down, but the skin sloughs off as if burned, and he has a redness around his eyes when he returns home. His travel clock starts keeping time badly. ("I Met a 'Flying Saucer,'" Scandinavian Newsletter, no. 1/2 (April 1971): 4–7; Anders Liljegren, "Strange Norwegian Encounter near Helleland," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 4 (April 1971): cover, 4–7; UFOEv II 214–215)

1970, November — The UFO Subcommittee of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics publishes a formal statement in its journal Aeronautics and Astronautics. It recommends "a continuing, moderate-level effort with emphasis on improved data collection by objective means and on high-quality scientific analysis" as the "only promising approach" to solving the UFO problem, and sharply criticizes the Colorado project's conclusion that studying the subject will not add to scientific knowledge. ("UFOs, an Appraisal of the Problem: A Statement by the UFO Subcommittee of the AIAA," Aeronautics and Astronautics 8, no. 11 (November 1970): 49–51; J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974, pp. 249–251; Clark III 1199; Clark IV 1373–1374)

1970, November 1 — 10:30 p.m. Stewart Wilkinson and his wife are driving on the Trans-Canada Highway just west of Pense, Saskatchewan, when they see an disc-shaped object with a beam of light extending down to the road. It follows his car about 20 feet to the right at an altitude of 10–15 feet. At one point it moves ahead and hovers above a truck parked a half-mile away. When he comes alongside the truck, the object moves to the left side of his car about 30 feet away and almost on the ground. Wilkinson slows down and comes to a stop, and the object follows suit, hovering for another 10–15 seconds before disappearing into the lights of Moose Jaw to the west. It has followed his car for 12 minutes and 10 miles. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 85–86)

1970, November 5 — 9:00 p.m. Albert Formiller is fishing for bass in Cholla Bay, Sonora, Mexico, when he sees a light in the sky coming from a saucer-shaped object, which stops and hovers about 200–300 feet above the surface. A light from a tube on the bottom illuminates a broad stretch of water about one half-mile wide. It changes from a broad floodlight to a sharp spot on the surface, apparently as it is raised or lowered. After a few minutes, a cloud forms around the object. After 5 minutes, the searchlight is turned off and a similar light appears on top of the UFO, illuminating the upper part of the cloud. The object then moves west and is visible for 20 minutes in all. (Carl W. Feindt, "Beam of Light into a Body of Water," IUR 33, no. 3 (December 2010): 23)

1970, November 6 — University of Michigan sociologist Donald I. Warren publishes the results of his analysis of links between UFO reports and social position in Science magazine. His "status inconsistency theory" indicates that UFOs are more likely to be reported by white males whose low income, education, or occupational status "produces a high level of saucer reporting." These individuals, he writes, are frustrated with their relative status in society and are suspicious of conventional authority, and they find recognition and status by publicly opening their lives to an extraordinary experience. (Donald I. Warren, "Status Inconsistency Theory and Flying Saucer Sightings," Science 170 (1970): 599–603; Eghigian, After, pp. 241–242)

1970, November 16 — Evening. One adult and four teenagers are leaving a basketball game at Beckemeyer (Illinois) Elementary School when they notice a triangular object with orange and white lights moving in an erratic manner to the south. They watch it for 10 minutes, and a smaller object emerges from the triangle. ("UFO Sighted," Breese (Ill.) Journal, November 19, 1970, via UFO Newsclipping Service, no. 20 (December 1970): 2)

1970, November 17–20 — At a Radar Meteorology Conference in Tucson, Arizona, McDonald presents a paper on "Meteorological Factors in Unidentified Radar Returns." (James E. McDonald, "Meteorological Factors in Unidentified Radar Returns," November 1970; Story, p. 416)

1970, November 20 — A busman named Melvyn Batty is walking along Frodingham Road in Scunthorpe, England, when he sees a wingless, silver, dome-shaped object moving swiftly from west to east. On the same dat, his 7-year-old daughter sees a sphere moving around in the sky. ("Dome-Shaped Scunthorpe UFO," South Lincs UFO Study Group Newsletter, no. 32 (Summer 1971): 1; Nigel Watson, "Hearing the Good News," Fortean Times 438 (December 2023): 28)

1970, November 22 — Night. Graham E. and his family are staying in a house on a headland that overlooks a beach in the Kiama, New South Wales, area. Graham awakes when a light enters his room. He looks out the window, toward the beach he sees a UFO that projects a "perfect cylinder of solid light" about 30 feet long and 2.5 feet in diameter. The bluish-white beam moves down and touches a trailer, pouring over it like water. The trailer lights up for 3 seconds, then the light fades away. The UFO then projects another light beam downward that illuminates a public rest room at a campsite. A third light beam detaches from the object at a 45-degree angle and illuminates a 40-foot section of beach. A few other people also see the lights and react to them. Graham apparently dozes off, then wakes up to see the object just above the street near the house, overlooking the beach. He blacks out again and the object is still there. He walks up to it and looks through a window on the side. He can see two men wearing silver coveralls; suddenly they look directly at him, smiling. Graham panics, yelling to people in the house to get down. He hears a loud noise that causes the refrigerator and washing machine to vibrate before the UFO leaves. (Bill Chalker, Hair of the Alien, Paraview, 2005, pp. 207–211; Clark IV 1215–1216)

1970, November 28 — In response to a question from MP Neil Kinnock, Minister of State for Defence Antony Lambton tells the House of Commons that the average cost of answering each UFO inquiry is about £9. (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1970, November 29 — 6:30 p.m. A 17-year-old student at Oizumi High School is riding his bicycle home at Tatebayasi, Gunma Prefecture, Japan, when he sees 5–6 objects flying in formation on a straight path from northeast to southwest. Seconds later, a solitary object appears to the north and approaches swiftly. The student parks his bicycle and runs up some steps to a raised enclosure for a better view. The single UFO changes course and circles several times, descending slowly. It then hovers, climbs, and disappears. The student gets back on his bike and sees a bright flash of white light to the southeast, which startles him and he pedals home quickly. The student returns the next day to the enclosure, which is actually a raised tombstone. He finds four circular patches of flattened grass. (Takao Ikeda, "A Close Encounter in Tatebayasi," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 10 (June 1972): 10–11, 13)

1970, December 14 — 1:30 a.m. Belgian writer Julian Weverbergh and his wife are awakened in Bucharest, Romania, by a bright red glow, which changes to white. A spherical light is hovering above a bus before disappearing. (Hobana and Weverbergh 271)

1970, December 25 — 4:00 a.m. A V-shaped formation of 10 silver-gray circular objects is seen in the sky over Braintree, Massachusetts. They are silent and appear twice over the area within a 5-minute period. (Raymond E. Fowler, UFOs: Interplanetary Visitors, Exposition, 1974, p. 357)

1971

1971 — Unhappy with NICAP leadership, Raymond E. Fowler (and most of his Massachusetts Subcommittee) transfers his allegiance to MUFON. (Clark III 517; Clark IV 566)

1971 — A secret computer database of the NORAD Unknown Track Reporting System (NUTR) that logs air defense unknowns is launched and maintained for assessment of "airspace sovereignty." (Clark III 801; Clark IV 893)

1971 — John A. Keel writes Our Haunted Planet, in which he speculates that ultraterrestrials are exploiting humans by using psychic manipulation to foment hate and confusion. (John A. Keel, Our Haunted Planet, Fawcett, 1971; Eghigian, After, p. 252)

1971 — Spanish Jesuit priest and paranormal researcher Salvador Freixedo publishes the first of many books on the religious aspects of UFOs. (Salvador Freixedo, Extraterrestres y creencias religiosas: Cuando los OVNIs aterrizan los dogmas vuelan, 1971)

1971 — John Shepherd begins beaming multiple genres of music, especially world music, into space from his hobbyist station in rural Michigan with the aim of contacting extraterrestrials. Calling his operation Project STRAT, he continues it through 1998. (Allison Hussey, "Meet the Man Who Used Kraftwerk, Fela Kuti, and Other Fascinating Music to Try to Lure Aliens to Earth," Pitchfork, August 25, 2020; Internet Movie Database, John Was Trying to Contact Aliens (2020))

1971, January 3 — 6:15 a.m. Maun and Matta Talana are drinking coffee when they see a brilliant light approaching from the lake outside their home at Saapunki, Kuusano, Finland. It is about 33 feet in diameter and moving against the wind. Their electricity goes off briefly. Looking out the window, the Talalas see their whole yard bathed in light caused by a huge fireball about 60 feet away, which rises up and disappears after a few seconds. Around 8:30 a.m., their son Timo asks them what the marks are in the snow outside. He has noticed a spot of hard green ice that is not covered with snow. Mauno takes some green ice and melts it into dark green water. The melted area is about 20 feet long by 10 feet wide, in the middle of which are ice needles as big as fingers with a ball of ice on top and some soot. The following day, he tells the newspaper, which sends a photographer to the site. UFO researchers from Oulu arrive on January 6 and take samples from the melted area and measure radiation, with ambiguous results. (Elis W. Grahn, "Saapunki UFO and Green Ice," Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 2 (March/April 1971): 2–3, 27; "Green Water from Saapunki: Result of Water Sample Analysis," Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1971): 26–27; Ahti Karavieri, "The Saapunki UFO: Results of Investigations," Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1971): 23–26)

1971, January 7 — Two boys independently observe a metallic object with an orange glow flying over Dennis, Massachusetts. It descends and disappears over some trees and looks as if it is about to fall into Scargo Lake. One boy sees a hole in the ice on the lake; steam is rising from it, and the water in the hole looks agitated. NICAP investigator Walter N. Webb visits the lake on January 10 and reports that the hole "was formed by a rather sudden melting process." ("NICAP Probes Crashed Object Report," UFO Investigator, February 1971, p. 1; "NICAP Probes Crashed Object Report: Search Still Hampered by Bad Weather," UFO Investigator, March 1971, p. 3; Clark III 339; Clark IV 375)

1971, January 23 — The Porto Alegre, Brazil, newspaper Correiro do Povo notes UFO sightings are recurring in a rural location close to the federal capital of Brasília. An unnamed local peasant is quoted as saying that the "state governor" shows up regularly and looks for "little stones" in the nearby woods. Always dressed in black, he arrives via an airplane "made of two dishes, like, one atop the other, and when it goes up in the air it changes color and then disappears quicker than a flash." (Gordon Creighton, "South American Roundup, 1971, Part 1," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 10 (June 1972): 8; Clark III 730–731; Clark IV 811–812)

1971, January 25 — 9:30 a.m. Gunar Gruenzner is taking photos of the scenery near Praia da Armação beach in Florianópolis, Santa Catarina, Brazil, when he claims to see an intense light beginning to descend. He snaps a photo but can no longer see the light. The photo shows a circular light with a dark aura. Probably a film defect. ("Observations diverses à l'étranger: Photographie au Brésil," Lumières dans la Nuit, no. 120 (October 1972): 13–14; Wim van Utrecht, "Shiny Cigar Photographed over Brazilian Beach," Caelestia)

1971, February — The Borderline Science Investigation Group is founded in Lowestoft, Suffolk, England, by Ivan A. W. Bunn. It publishes Lantern, a newsletter that continues for 40 issues through late 1982. (Lantern, no. 3 (Autumn 1973))

1971, February 5 — 3:00 p.m. Petter Aliranta and Esko Juhani Sneck are working in the woods around Kangaskylä, near Kinnula, Finland, when they see a 15-foot object descend to a clearing 50 feet away. As it lands, a small entity just under 3 feet tall glides to the ground from an opening on the underside. Through 3 windows on the UFO, three more entities can be seen. The entity approaches Aliranta, who turns on his chain saw. Suddenly, the being turns around and heads back to the UFO. As the humanoid is rising back up into the air, Aliranta grabs it by the heel of its boot with his bare hand. It burns him like a hot iron, and he has to let go. The burns are clearly visible 2 months later. The humanoid gets back inside, and the UFO takes off with a hum. Before the two men go back, they look at markings in the snow. At the end of each landing foot there had ben a round plate. These plates have penetrated the full depth of the snow (1.3 feet), leaving four round prints forming an even square 6.5 feet on each side. Circular footprints left by the entity are clearly visible, about 6 inches wide. The journalist who published the story, Mauno Ihantia, is interviewed by Radio Jyväskylä on November 23, 1990, and confesses that the case was an April Fool's Day hoax invented by him and others. (Wikipedia, "Kinnulan ufohuijaus"; Keskisuomalainen, April 1, 1971; Tapani Kuningas, "The Humanoid at Kinnula," Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1971): 18–19; Patrick Gross, URECAT, April 5, 2007)

1971, February 12 — 7:00 p.m. A family from Grenoble, France, that owns a second home in Bastia, Corsica, has just set up a camera on a tripod to take photos of the property when they see a strange object in the sky and take three photos of it. The UFO seems to be in front of some small white clouds and there are tree lines as reference points. The object appears to be a disc with a dome and some superstructure. (Joe Brill, "1971 Corsica Photos," Skylook, no. 81 (August 1974): 1, 4–6; "1971 års Corsica-foton," UFO-Rapport, 1976 no. 4 (November 15, 1976): 13–15; UFOEv II 289)

1971, February 23 — 7:00 p.m. Thousands of people in Turin and other places in Piedmont, Italy, observe a conspicuous red cloud in the western sky, just above the crest of the Alps, moving majestically and changing shape slowly. Someone takes a photograph of it from Caluso. The following day, the French Office National d'Études et de Recherches Aérospatiales announces that the cloud was caused by a Tibere, an experimental three-stage rocket for atmospheric reentry tests. ("Mezza città con gli occhi al cielo per il timore della nube rossa," La Stampa (Turin), February 24, 1971, p. 3; "Ecco la foto della nube rossa," La Stampa (Turin), February 25, 1971, p. 5; "Caso I.E.F. 23–24/2/71," Notiziario UFO, no. 38 (March/April 1971): 17–25; Sofia Lincos and Giuseppe Stilo, "La lunga notte della nube rossa," CICAP, November 5, 2020)

1971, February 28 — Michel M. Jaffe embarks on a motorcycle ride from his home in Mountain View, California, toward Bodega Bay. While riding near Hayward, Jaffe observes an unusual object consisting of two brilliant spheres, each about 12 inches wide, connected by a hazy white linkage, with a trailing link. The leading sphere appears red, while the following one is blue or possibly green. The object maintains a consistent distance in front of a small twin-engine aircraft, diving and maneuvering in sync with it. Jaffe watches the object for about four seconds before it moves behind him, making further observation difficult. When he eventually stops to watch, the object and the aircraft are already too far away. Later, he conducts experiments to recreate the brilliance of the object using mirrors, lasers, and lights but cannot replicate it. He rules out common explanations such as kites or reflections. (Michel F. Jaffe, "Personal Observation," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 5 (1971): 11–12)

1971, March 2 — James E. McDonald testifies as an expert in atmospheric physics at the House Committee on Appropriations hearings on the Concorde supersonic transport and its potentially harmful effects. His opponents question his credentials and ridicule him as someone who believes in "little men flying around in the sky." (Clark III 701; Clark IV 797)

1971, March 8 — The Citizens' Commission to Investigate the FBI burgles an FBI field office in Media, Pennsylvania, takes several dossiers, and exposes the FBI COINTELPRO program by passing this material to news agencies. (Wikipedia, "Citizens' Commission to Investigate the FBI")

1971, March 14 — 4:00 p.m. Five silver objects, four of them in a box formation with a fifth leading, are seen over Christies Beach, Adelaide, South Australia. Filaments fall. (Keith Basterfield, "Angel Hair: An Australian Perspective," IUR 27, no. 1 (Spring 2002): 7)

1971, March 15 — 3:10 p.m. Several silvery-white balls are seen in the air over Maslin Beach, Adelaide, South Australia. White "fairy floss" is found on the ground that tends to melt and disappear when picked up. It is extremely light and tenuous. (Keith Basterfield, "Angel Hair: An Australian Perspective," IUR 27, no. 1 (Spring 2002): 7)

1971, March 18 — UFO-Sundbyberg is formed as a breakaway group from the Solna Astronomical Association. After one month, the name is changed to Stockholms UFO-Center because only a few of the members are from Sundbyberg. The first chairman is Leif Johansson and among the most active are Lennart Johansson, Tony Eckardt, and Sune Nordwall. The last issue of its magazine SUFOC is published in January 1973, and the organization gradually changes into a meditation and channeling group. (Håkan Blomqvist, "Ufoföreningen som blev en meditationsgrupp," Håkan Blomqvist's Blog, May 6, 2024)

1971, March 29 — Night. Pierre Calafat and André Bouchard are driving up to a house (Les Nourradons) they have rented near Draguignan, Var, France, when they notice a reddish disc flying around a vineyard and about 500 feet away. They park in the driveway and observe the object making zig-zag movements. Then it stops about 30 feet above the ground and only 160 feet away from them. Two minutes later it performs a roll and heads off to the west. On September 11, investigators find some fresh marks at the site that must have been made recently. One mark is a perfect circle with a diameter of 18.4 feet; the grass is discolored inside and flattened along the periphery. A smaller circle is found nearby. (J. C. Dufour, "A French Repeater Case: Events at Les Nourradons," Flying Saucer Review 19, no. 3 (May/June 1973): 3–5)

1971, April — Industrial Research magazine publishes the results of a survey in which 80% of its members reject the Condon report, 76% believe that the government is concealing UFO facts, and 32% accept the ETH. (Keyhoe, Aliens from Space, Signet ed., 1974, pp. 234–235)

1971, April — UFO Research Associates in Washington, D.C., begins publication of the UFO Research Newsletter, edited by Gordon I. R. Lore Jr. It runs until September 1980. (UFO Research Newsletter 1, no. 1 (April 1971))

1971, April — Hoover terminates the COINTELPRO program, but the FBI continues to use similar tactics from time to time. (Wikipedia, "COINTELPRO")

1971, April — James McDonald shoots himself in the head, leaving him blind, and is committed to the psychiatric ward of the V.A. Medical Center in Tucson, Arizona. He has been depressed about his disintegrating marriage. He signs himself out in June. (Clark III 701; Clark IV 797)

1971, April 2 — After 10:00 p.m. Following several sightings of a bright light in the sky at West Kempsey, New South Wales, Australia, an aboriginal man at Greenhill sees a hairless face pressed up against his kitchen window. Immediately he is "sucked out" through the window and falls 7 feet to the steps below. Frightened but largely unhurt, he runs away and his wife pursues him. She takes him to the hospital where a cut on his hand is treated. (Eileen Buckle, "Defenestration at Kempsey," Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1971): 20–21)

1971, April 14 — CIA Director Richard Helms gives a rare public address in which he insists that the CIA does not surveil domestic mail. However, the HTLINGUAL program, which is still in effect until 1973, does so. The New York City component of the program alone examines more than 2 million mailed items every year, photographs 30,000 envelopes, and opens 8,000–9,000 letters. (Wikipedia, "HTLINGUAL")

1971, April 14 — 8:00 p.m. Dennis Donaldson and Marion Lang are driving through Callery, Pennsylvania, when they notice a bright yellow-white light paralleling the car, then crossing the road ahead. Donaldson slows the car to watch and sees that the object is following the contours of nearby hills. He pulls off onto a side road. Suddenly they encounter a white, luminous object about 25–30 feet in diameter, like two bowls placed rim to rim, hovering a few feet off the ground about 250 feet away. The air smells unnaturally sweet and clean. The lower portion of the craft has three round portholes, and the upper portion has five rectangular windows. A mist is visible around it, illuminated by light from the object. At about 8:20 p.m., the object emits a shaft of white light from its top part. Reddish flickering light is visible from the windows. When they see the silhouettes of two humanoid figures, apparently 10 feet tall, in the rectangular windows, they drive away in fear. Schmidt, "Callery UFO and Occupants," Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1971): 3–5; Center for UFO Studies, HUMCAT Index 1971, p. 16; UFOEv II 215–216)

1971, April 23 — 8:30 a.m. Jill French, a schoolteacher in the mountains of Kempsey, New South Wales, Australia, spots a fiery orangish-red ball of light that glows white and trails behind it a very long cigar-shaped object, flying from the east to the southwest. At the same time, to the northwest in Collombatti, three 13-year-old boys see a silvery ovoid UFO with four legs or landing gear flying overhead. The legs have what appear to be landing pads at the ends, and the object emits flames and exhaust. 1971, April 30 — 7:45 p.m. Hugo Abrahamson is watching TV with his son and daughter in Åsenhöga, Gnosjö, Sweden, when the daughter notices something moving past the window. It seems to be a metallic domed disk with a flat bottom, about 33 feet in diameter. A rotating green light is on the dome. It is moving low to the ground at about 37 mph and passes behind some treetops. (Sven-Olof Fredrickson, "Recent Observations over Southern Sweden," Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1971): 9–10)

1971, May — Oswald G. Villard Jr., Antony C. Fraser-Smith, and R. P. Cassam write an article at the request of the Office of Naval Research and the Advanced Research Projects Agency that explores whether long-delayed radio echoes could be attributable to an extraterrestrial probe. They consider it possible but inefficient. (Oswald G. Villard, et al., "Long-Delayed Echoes: Radio's 'Flying Saucer' Effect," QST 53 (May 1969): 38; Oswald G. Villard, Antony C. Fraser-Smith, and R. P. Cassam, "LDEs, Hoaxes, and the Cosmic Repeater Hypothesis," QST 55 (May 1971): 54–58; Michael D. Swords, "Radio Signals from Space, Alien Probes, and Betty Hill," IUR 29, no. 4 (July 2005): 12–13)

1971, May — The Société Belge d'Étude des Phénomènes Spatiaux is established in Brussels, Belgium, by Lucien Clerebaut. It publishes the journal Inforespace from 1972 to 2007. (Comité Belge d'Étude des Phénomènes Spatiaux, "Qui sommes-nous?"; Inforespace, no. 1 (1972); Wikipedia, "SOBEPS")

1971, May — 6:00 a.m. A 16-mm film is allegedly taken of retrieved UFOs at Holloman Air Force Base near Alamogordo, New Mexico. It supposedly shows "three disc-shaped craft," one of which lands and the other two fly away. A door opens on the landed vehicle and three human-sized beings emerge with an odd, gray complexion and pronounced noses. They wear tight-fitting jump suits and thin headdresses that appear to be communication devices. In their hands they hold a "translator." A Holloman base commander and other Air Force officials go out to meet them. 1971, May — 7:30 p.m. Alojz Krz comes across a UFO sitting on three legs in a shallow hollow in a field near Stara Cerkev, Slovenia. He approaches within 65 feet of it, and it frightens him considerably. Around 8:00 p.m., 17-year-old Angela Rajhs is bicycling in the same area and watches the landed object for 4–5 minutes. As she is cycling away, the object takes off, turning in a wide spiral. Rajhs returns to the scene with her parents the next day and finds several pointed holes in the ground about 6–8 inches in diameter. The nearby grass seems burned. (Milos Kremelj, "Close View of Landed Craft," Canadian UFO Report 4, no. 4 (Summer 1977): 9–10; Milos Krmelj, "Landing in Yugoslavia," Flying Saucer Review 24, no. 3 (Nov. 1978): 6–7)

1971, May 6 — 9:30 p.m. Valerie Newman and her mother are sitting in their home on Leigh Lane, Wimborne, Dorset, when they hear a sound like a washing machine speeding up. Ten minutes later, they hear the same sound. Around 10:15 p.m., her husband opens the front door to take the dog out for a walk, but the terrier refuses to set foot outside. The next morning, in an adjacent field they notice an area of flattened grass in an elongated heart shape, with two smaller egg-shaped flattened areas close by. (Leslie Harris, "What Was It That Landed at Wimborne?" Flying Saucer Review 17, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1971): 30–31)

1971, May 23 — 12:30 p.m. Rudi Nagora and his wife are driving near Sankt Lorenzen ob Eibiswald, Styria, Austria, for a Sunday outing. Nagora gets out of the car and hears a whizzing sound and sees a silver, metallic object overhead moving in a zigzag pattern. He takes 11 consecutive color photographs of it over a 10-minute period. (Colman VonKevicksky, "The Rudolph Nagora Photos and Analysis," Official UFO, Fall 1976, pp. 26–28; Richard F. Haines, "An Analysis of Multiple UAP Photographic Images (May 23, 1971, Austrian Alps)," JUFOS 9 (2006): 31–70)

1971, May 24 — 12:10 p.m. Retired artist Julio Suárez Marzal is in the first-floor dental office of Walter Griehl on the Avenida Pedro Molina in Mendoza, Argentina, when they see a flattened, Saturn-shaped object about a half-mile away to the south. Griehl goes to retrieve some binoculars and misses most of the sighting. It is an incandescent dark orange in color and moving from east to west. It begins floating down with a rocking movement and approaches to within 230 feet. Suárez Marzal sees that it is revolving because of a small circular mark on its rim. A dense cloud issues from the object and surrounds it, turning it pearly gray with a faintly bluish sheen. As it gets closer, the circular mark seems to extend like a bronze-colored cylinder and has a handle-like protuberance on top. At one point it moves away to the northeast and disappears for 4 seconds but reappears even closer, only 130 feet away. It remains stationary for 10 seconds, and the cylinder seems deliberately pointed toward the short-wave antenna on the nearby central post office. He estimates it is 18–20 feet in diameter. It continues rocking and changes shape from a globe to a hat to an oval. Then after being visible for 90 seconds it takes off suddenly to the south, leaving a trail of vapor. 1971, May 25 — 2:00 a.m. Mr. C. Archer is woken up in his home at Lynchford, Tasmania, by his dogs barking and a strange humming noise like a generator. He can't see anything outside and after 30 minutes the humming stops. The next day, a flattened area of grass and blackberries is found about 600 feet from the house. It is about 30 by 15 feet with a spiral pattern in the middle and 6 regularly placed indentations. Later, another set of similar indentations is found, roughly in the shape of a triangle. (W. K. Roberts, "Burst of UFO Activity in Tasmania," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 9 (October 1971): 13)

1971, May 27 — Harry Turner, physicist and head of the nuclear division within the Australian Joint Intelligence Office, authors a secret report on UFOs, warning that UFO pronouncements from the US military are not to be trusted because they could be a "cover for the real U.S. programme for developing vehicles that emulate UFO performances." Turner alleges that the CIA Office of Scientific Intelligence studies "UFO reports with the intention of determining the UFO propulsion methods." Turner's proposal for an Australian UFO rapid-response team is met with disinterest. (O. H. Turner, Scientific and Intelligence Aspects of the UFO Problem, Australia Dept. of Defence Joint Intelligence Organization, Minute Paper 3092/2, May 27, 1971; Guillaume Fournier Airaud, "50-Year-Old Report Backs Pentagon Whistleblower's Claims on UAP," UAP Check, June 12, 2023; Graff 263–264)

1971, May 29 — 4:00 a.m. Warren McCarthy is fishing with three teenage boys at Buffumville Reservoir near Oxford, Massachusetts, when they notice a bright, blue-white light approaching from the west. It is making up-and-down, side-to-side jerking movements. As it comes closer it takes on a rectangular shape, and they can see a dark, oval body with pointed ends at its base. The object approaches to about 300 feet from them across the narrow reservoir. The object suddenly flips on edge, taking on a circular shape, and 7–8 glowing ports are visible around the bottom, then it moves rapidly away and disappears. Moments later, another light appears and moves above the treetops on the opposite shore, then recedes. ("Black Disc Sighted in Massachusetts," UFO Investigator, July 1971, p. 3)

1971, June or July — 8:30 p.m. The aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy is completing an Operational Readiness Exercise in the Caribbean Sea when an incident occurs following an 18-hour period simulating General Quarters. Yeoman Third Class James M. Kopf is in the Communications Center monitoring messages on various teletypes. Suddenly all the messages begin coming in garbled and he hears that all ship communications are out, including the radar, compasses, and electrical systems. A signalman from the deck tells them over the intercom that something is hovering above the ship. Kopf and others rush topside and see a huge, pulsating, orangish sphere stationed silently above the ship at a 60°–70° angle. The object remains about 20 minutes, but Kopf sees it only one minute before General Quarters sounds and he needs to return to his battle stations. The two F-4 Phantom jets on high readiness alert cannot take off. Soon the messaging returns to normal and the crew stands down after 2 hours. Kopf thinks only about 18 men witnessed the object out of the 5,000 on the carrier, because everyone is exhausted from the exercise. He hears that commanding officer Capt. Ferdinand B. Koch is frustrated by the event, but two days later Koch reminds the crew that certain events are to be considered classified. (Good Need, pp. 285–288)

1971, June 7 — Evening. Esther Clappison sees a light through her windows in Rosedale, Alberta, and goes out onto her porch and sees a rectangular object on the ground. One end of it is open, revealing a diffused, white light. Two human-like forms are moving about inside. A third figure is outside in a crouched position, picking up rocks. They all appear to be wearing drab-green coveralls. She goes inside briefly, but the object is gone when she returns. ("Roadside Visitors," Canadian UFO Report 2, no. 4 (1971): 5–7; W. K. 1971, June 13 — 11:40 a.m. James E. McDonald is found dead along a shallow creek in Tucson, Arizona, of a self-inflicted gunshot wound. A suicide note nearby notes his domestic problems. ("James M'Donald, a Cloud Physicist," New York Times, June 16, 1971, p. 48 Ann Druffel, "Remembering James McDonald," IUR 18, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1993): 4–6, 23–24; Ann Druffel, Firestorm,: Dr. James E. McDonald's Fight for UFO Science, Wild Flower Press, 2003, pp. 516–520; Clark III 701; Clark IV 797)

1971, June 13 — The New York Times begins publishing excerpts of the Pentagon papers, leaked by former military analyst Daniel Ellsberg, which detail the secret history of the US political-military involvement in Vietnam from 1945 to 1967. (Wikipedia, "Pentagon Papers")

1971, June 29 — 3:00 a.m. A man is hiking in Delamere Forest east of Chester, England, when an "electric blue light" appears ahead and moves toward him, dancing erratically in and out of the trees. He walks toward it but before taking 20 steps he finds himself walking calmly back. The object then moves along a mud track and disappears into a small "garage" in the bushes. After wandering around in a disoriented state for some time, he searches for the "garage" but cannot find it. (Jenny Randles, "Born to See UFOs," Northern UFO News, no. 111 (Jan./Feb. 1985): 12–13; Jenny Randles, Alien Abductions: The Mystery Solved, Inner Light, 1988, pp. 110–115; Jenny Randles, "Much More Than Marsh Gas," Fortean Times 311 (March 2014): 27)

1971, Summer — Arthur C. Clarke asks in the Saturday Evening Post, "Whatever happened to flying saucers?" He declares that "flying saucers are dead" and the "hysterical credulity of the late 40s" a thing of the past. Science—the International Geophysical Year, missile and space technology, and radio astronomy—has killed them, he writes. (Arthur C. Clarke, "Whatever Happened to Flying Saucers?" Saturday Evening Post 243 (Summer 1971): 10; Eghigian, After, p. 216)

1971, Summer — John Billingham and Bernard M. Oliver, along with some two dozen additional researchers at the NASA Ames Research Center calculate the hardware, manpower, time, and funding needed to create an experiment that might reasonably locate intelligent signals from space. They focus on the hydrogen and the hydroxyl lines for further study and create a design for coordinating large numbers of radio telescopes to search for Earth-like radio signals at a distance of up to 1,000 light-years to find intelligent life. The proposed design involving between 1,000 and 2,500 steerable dishes of 100m diameter each is shelved due to costs. However, their report becomes the basis for much of the SETI work to follow. (Wikipedia, "Project Cyclops"; Graff 235–236)

1971, July 7 — 6:00 p.m. Spanish physician Guillermo Arguello de la Motta is a guest of his friend Antonio Arocha at San Juan de los Morros, Guárico, Venezuela. They suddenly see two men dressed in black, both wearing red ties and black berets. They emerge from a brand-new red Ford Mustang, at a distance of 1,600 feet from the house.

They stand there waiting for 5 minutes, then begin to put on orange belts, talking together animatedly. Suddenly a shining object appears in the sky, descends, and stops at a height of 2 feet from the ground. It is circular, bell-shaped underneath, and has a "turret" on the top. The object changes rapidly in color from orange to blue and to white. Suddenly a small staircase is dropped from the object, enabling the two men from the Mustang to enter the UFO. The staircase is drawn in, then the object takes off at an impressive speed. (Gordon Creighton, "South American Round-Up, Part 1," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 10 (June 1972): 9)

1971, July 8 — 1:15 p.m. Miner Claude Girard is parked on the road near the bridge over the Hurricana River in Joutel, Quebec, when he sees a circle 15–20 feet in diameter on the surface of the water with a jet of water in the center reaching a height of 20 feet. When the water jet settles down, Girard can see a cylindrical object, 6–8 feet in length and rusty black in color, beneath the surface. It slowly begins to lean to one side and sinks in less than a minute. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, p. 103)

1971, July 17 — 10:45 p.m. Tea planter Parl Abeywickrema, his two assistants Oswin de Alwis and Nimal Dunuwille, and the driver Sirisena Wijesinghe are driving between the Hope Estate in Rikillagaskada, Sri Lanka, and the Rockwood Estate in Hewaheta when they see a bright object larger than the full moon above the hilly horizon. Soon it approaches the car, and Abeywickrema orders the driver to stop. They watch the object, now hovering about one-quarter mile away at an altitude of 1,000 feet. After 10 minutes it silently swoops toward them at high speed and stops 300 feet away at a height of 100 feet. The object is about 25 feet in diameter with two "tapering wings" on either side and casts a fluorescent yellow glow. After a few more minutes, the UFO moves toward the southwest at a 45° angle after drawing its two wings inside the main body. Some 50 witnesses report the same or similar objects in the same area that night, and both Abeywickrema and Wijesinghe report seeing UFOs around 2:00–3:00 a.m. after returning home. (Eileen Buckle, "'Peace-Symbol' UFO over Ceylon," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 7 (October 1971): 11–12; Story, pp. 169–170)

1971, July 29 — A CIA internal memo reports that a citizen named Vartorella has expressed the opinion that the CIA used the Colorado project as "whitewash to cover a CIA-initiated program begun prior to January 1953." The writer runs through a brief history of the Robertson Panel and suggests the following response: "We're sorry, but we have had no interest in the UFO matter for many years, have no files or persons knowledgeable on the subject, and hence are unable to respond to his charges and questions." (ClearIntent, p. 142)

1971, July 29 — Night. A woman living on a farm outside Saint Hyacinthe, Quebec, watches as two dark circular objects with red rotating lights hovering above her potato field. It quickly disappears. The next morning, her husband finds two 11-foot-wide circular patches of crushed and burned potatoes where the UFO had hovered. Investigators estimated the object had burned or irradiated the field from a height of 15 feet. (Claude MacDuff, "July 1971: Quebec in the Darkness," Official UFO 1, no. 6 (February 1976): 16–19, 44; Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Sightings, Landings, and Abductions, Methuen, 1979, p. 143)

1971, August 9 — 9:00 a.m. Capt. Vicente Lopes Buono, flying an airliner between Pratinha and Sacramento, Minas Gerais, Brazil, reports that his plane is paced for 20 minutes at 7,920 feet altitude by a glowing orange disc ("like two round basins, one on top of the other") over mountainous terrain. Sgt. Falcão, flight controller at Uberaba airport, suggests that he investigate the object. When the pilot tries to move closer, the object maintains a constant distance, then suddenly increases its speed and disappears. ("Brazilian Pilot Reports Pacing," UFO Investigator, August 1971, p. 1; "Disc Accompanies Aeroplane," Flying Saucer Review 18, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1972): 32; "Press Reports," APRO Bulletin 21, no. 3 (Nov./Dec. 1972): 2, 5; UFOEv II 131)

1971, August 16 — Jan-Ove Sundberg sees a landed UFO in a cleared area above Foyers, Inverness, Scotland, on Loch Ness. Three human-shaped figures in gray coveralls emerge from some bushes and enter the craft, which then takes off. Sundberg snaps a photo, then contacts writer and monster researcher Frederick William "Ted" Holiday, who is looking for a UFO connection with the loch. However, Sundberg eventually confesses that he made up the story. (F. W. Holiday, "Exorcism and UFO Landing at Loch Ness," Flying Saucer Review 19, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1973): 3–7, 13; Roland Watson, "Ted Holiday's Final Days," Loch Ness Monster, May 31, 2008; Clark III 600–601; Clark IV 659–660)

1971, September 3 — G. Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt break into the office of Lewis J. Fielding, Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist. (Wikipedia, "Daniel Ellsberg")

1971, September 4 —8:25 a.m. Pilot Omar Arias is flying a twin-engine Canadian Aero-Commander F680 at a height of 10,000 feet above Lago de Cote, Costa Rica, taking aerial photos as part of a preliminary study for future hydroelectric projects. On board are photographer Sergio Loaiza, a specialist in aerial photography, plus geographer Juan Bravo and topographer Francisco Reyes. Loaiza was using a R-M-K 15/23 camera, specially made for cartography and using high-resolution black-and-white film, strapped on the bottom of the aircraft and taking automatic photos with an intervalometer. No one sees a thing while they are up in the air, but when Loaiza reviews his images, he discovers in frame 300 what seems to be a huge metallic disc against the dark background of the lake. The object does not appear in the previous or following frames. Jacques Vallée obtains a copy of the negative and examines it with Richard Haines and concludes that the photo shows "an unidentified, opaque, aerial object was captured on film at a maximum distance of 10,000 feet. There are no visible means of lift or propulsion and no surface markings other than darker regions that appear to be nonrandom." (Richard H. Hall, "Costa Rican Photograph," MUFON UFO Journal, no. 166 (December 1981): 18; Richard F. 1971, September 5–11 — The US National Academy of Sciences and the USSR Academy of Sciences hold the First Soviet-American Conference on Communication with Extraterrestrial Intelligence at the Byurakan Observatory in Armenia. The organizing committee includes Carl Sagan, Frank Drake, Philip Morrison, Nikolai Kardashev, Viktor Ambartsumian, Iosif Shklovsky, and Vsevolod Troitsky. Some 30 scientists attend and debate the variables in the Drake equation and encourage research in the search for intelligent signals from nearby stars. Attendees Francis Crick and Leslie Orgel speculate on the possibility that life has been seeded on Earth from an extraterrestrial civilization. Thr conference concludes with a recommendation that future research focus on a "searc for signals and for evidence of astroengineering activities." Orgel, "Directed Panspermia," Icarus 19 (1973): 341–346; Iosif Shklovsky, Five Billion Vodka Bottles to the Moon, W. W. Norton, 1991, pp. 257–261; Graff 228–233; Eghigian, After, p. 188)

1971, September 12? —7:00 p.m. Juan Rodríguez Domínguez, 82, who goes by the nickname of Juan el de la Palmareña, is in his hut on the Los Lunarejos farm just over a mile from Aznalcóllar, Seville, Spain, when he sees a bus-sized object landing near an abandoned well 1,000 feet away. More than 50 "soldiers" in blue "uniforms" emerge. They march in formation into a hollow in the field and are lost to view. Juan can now see only five or six "chiefs" standing on a slope and staring in his direction. When they shine a light at him, he ducks behind the hut. A bit later he looks out again and they shine the light once more. Frightened, he flees to Aznalcóllar to inform his employers, who do not take him seriously. He later insists that the object and the "soldiers" have left marks in the ground, but police do not bother to follow up. (Ignacio Darnaude, "An 'Army of Humanoids' Stated to Have Landed in Spain," Flying Saucer Review 20, no. 3 (December 1974): 19–21; Ignacio Darnaude, [case clippings]; Clark III 282; Clark IV 322)

1971, September 19 — 3:30 a.m. Arthur Honke, Alec Honke, and Gordon Campbell are driving north just outside Winnipeg, Manitoba, to do some hunting. They see a bright flash as something passes overhead and in front of the car. It now appears ahead of them on the right side of the road. Honke pulls alongside it and steps out of the car. They can hear a low-pitched humming from the object only about 150–225 feet away. It is shaped like two saucers, one on top of the other, and has flashing green and red lights and one white stationary light. The object hovers for 30 seconds, then starts moving slowly to the southeast. But as the men drive north again, the object begins following them at a distance for about 45 minutes. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 86–87, 152)

1971, September 20 — 10:45 p.m. Engineer Sten Sture is driving on the E4 near Öjebyn, Sweden, when he sees a strong light with vertical beams shining to the ground both in front and in back of his car. He tries to brake the car, but it keeps moving forward, and suddenly everything becomes completely blue-black around him. No lights come from the headlights. He sees the vertical lights again and the blackness seems to lift and rise from the ground, outlining itself against the horizon. He speeds ahead, keeping the black mass in sight until it disappears below the horizon. ("Egendomligt ljussken flyttade bi loch fyrkantigt föremål," GICOFF-Information, October 1971, no. 5, pp. 30–36; "The Strange Force That Moved a Car," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 10 (June 1972): 1–3)

1971, Late September — 7:30 p.m. Chen Chu, a member of a People's Liberation Army unit stationed in Dingzhou, Hebei, China, is on assignment in a small valley north of the city when he and other soldiers notice a ball-like object rising slowly to the north of their quarters. It is emitting mist, and after a few seconds it spurts out a large jet of smoke and rises in the air. It hovers a few more seconds then rises to a higher level. Soon it drops down toward the ground and disappears. The unit dispatches a motor vehicle to find the object, but due to the ruggedness of the mountain roads, it turns back after more than 3 miles. (Wendelle Stevens and Paul Dong, UFOs over Modern China, UFO Photo Archives, 1983, p. 72)

1971, Autumn — Gene and Geneva Steinberg begin publishing Caveat Emptor, a newsletter on UFOs and other anomalies, in Charleston, South Carolina. It runs until October 1974, then goes on hiatus until late 1988 when it is again edited by the Steenberg's, this time in New Jersey. It persists until fall 1990. (Caveat Emptor 1, no. 1 (Fall 1971))

1971, October 2 — 6:30 a.m. An ex-Air Force man is driving from Caro to Watrousville, Michigan, and spots a triangular UFO with a large white light at the bottom and many smaller red lights around it. It makes sharp turns at fantastic speed and moves quickly out of sight. ("Sighting Advisory," UFO Investigator, December 1971, p. 3)

1971, October 2 — 7:50 p.m. Two students, Vània, 9, and Vera, 21, are sitting down outside their residence on a busy street in the populous neighborhood of São Cristóvão in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, when they see a luminous, yellow, silent object above a building across the street some 260–300 feet away. They run out into the street to alert others, and the object follows them above the roofs of houses. Another student, Nelson Calmon Schubsky, 23, and his fiancée rush into the street along with many others to see the object. Chbosky has a Leica camera and takes two photos without having time to adjust the settings. The UFO has three luminous appendages (white, yellow, and red) and is rose-colored in the center with a red outline. It pulsates rapidly, changes color, and disappears behind a nearby tower. Chbosky's photos are blurry. ("UFO é Fotografado no Rio de Janeiro (RJ)," Portal Fenomenum, June 15, 2016; Clark III 1007–1009; Brazil 146–149; Clark IV 1121–1123)

1971, October 5 — Early morning. While on the downwind leg of the pattern to runway 20L at the Santos Dumont Airport in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, four pilots on board a single-engine Cessna airplane watch as a "huge star" approaches them on their starboard side. The object descends to their altitude and slows rapidly to their air speed, smoothly changing its direction to fly parallel with them at an estimated distance of 98 feet. It looks like an "inverted dish" with a small rounded protrusion centered on its upper surface that seems to contain oval windows. What appears to be the head of a person is seen in one window looking at them. The UFO is seen for about 85 seconds. The object descends at high velocity toward the water's surface, turns sharply left without any hesitation and disappears from sight in several seconds. The reporting witness is Chief Flight Instructor José Américo C. Medeiros, 23, pilot of the Cessna. (Richard F. Haines, "Airplane Pacing in Rio," IUR 34, no. 2 (Mar. 2012): 3–6, 26–29)

1971, November 2 — 7:00 p.m. Ronald Johnson, 16, is tending sheep on his family's farm at Delphos, Kansas, when he hears a rumbling sound and sees (75 feet away in a small grove of trees) an object become suddenly illuminated with a mass of blue, red, and orange colors. Nine feet in diameter and 10 feet high, the UFO is slightly domed at the top and is hovering 2 feet above the ground. He and his dog stare at the object while the sheep are bellowing. After several minutes, the glow at the base becomes more intense and the object takes off at an angle, clearing by no more than 4 feet a shed attached to the sheep pen. The rumbling is replaced by a high-pitched wail. Johnson is temporarily blinded but recovers his sight a few minutes later and sees the object still there. He runs into the house to tell his parents, and they also see the light in the southern sky moving off into the distance. At the site where the UFO has been is a glowing, gray-white circle where the soil seems to be crystallized. After the parents touch the soil, it turns their fingers numb, persisting for several weeks. Johnson takes a photo of the circle. Seven separate soil analyses are conducted. Soil samples taken from the ring so not absorb water, have a higher acid content, and contain more soluble salts and calcium. They also produce less seed growth than control samples and are coated with a hydrocarbon of low molecular weight that is difficult to remove. A second substance is also found that is composed of white, crystalline fibers. 1971, November 3 — The Ugandan representative to the United Nations, Grace Ibingira, asks the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space to encourage astronauts who encounter UFOs to treat them respectfully. He wants to insert a clause to that effect into a UN statement on space exploration, but his colleagues are unmoved. (Clark III 1189; Clark IV 1364)

1971, November 14 — 1:50 a.m. Farmer Angelo Cellot is just finishing plowing his field near Lachapelle, Lot-et-Garonne, France, when he sees a bright light approaching from the northwest. Soon it is only 130 feet above him, traveling the same speed as his tractor, and lighting up the area with a row of five bright lights. A small red light is on the far right of the row. Cellot stops the tractor and the light descends slowly to about 50 feet. He begins running away down a nearby road but sees that the object is ascending and moving away in absolute silence. It vanishes behind a ridge. (Gordon Creighton, "UFO with Multiple Beams of Light," Flying Saucer Review 18, no. 3 (May/June 1972): 4–8)

1971, November 14 — The US space probe Mariner 9 arrives at Mars and becomes the first spacecraft to orbit another planet. After the occurrence of dust storms on the planet for several months following its arrival, the orbiter manages to send back clear pictures of the surface. Mariner 9 successfully returns 7,329 images over the course of its mission, which concludes in October 1972. (Wikipedia, "Mariner 9")

1971, December 20 — Prior to the launch of a Black Arrow rocket, an unidentified aircraft is seen by a trained meteorological observer over prohibited airspace at the RAAF Woomera Range Complex in South Australia. The RAAF explains it as reentering space debris, although it is impossible to confirm. (Swords 401)

1971, December 25 — At Tooligie Hill, in Tooligie, South Australia, neighbors observe a red ball of light in the night sky. The following day, Robert Habner discovers a 7.2-foot-diameter ring in his wheat field. The ring is nearly 18 inches wide and 4 inches deep, with the wheat swirled counterclockwise around the ground mark. Soil samples taken from the site reveal nothing unusual. ("What Made This Mark? 1971, Last week of December — After sunset. Norman W. Kasting is flying on a commercial airliner between Dallas, Texas, and Denver, Colorado. He notices something approaching the plane from behind on the west side. It passes within a few hundred yards of the aircraft and 10–20 feet below its level, flying faster than the plane. The object is metallic and shaped like an upside-down bowl about 30–40 feet in diameter and 15 feet tall. It has orange or amber lights around the edge. ("Out of the Past," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 5, no. 5 (Oct./Nov. 1984): 5)

1972

1972 — Betty Hill begins making numerous trips to a rural area near Kingston, New Hampshire, where she claims to see 6–7 UFOs every night, often at close range. Saucer-seeking pilgrims join her on these vigils. CUFOS field investigator John Paul Oswald joins her occasionally and is convinced she is only seeing airplanes and, on one occasion, a streetlight. She claims no further abductions or CE3s, but many ufologists think her celebrity has clouded her judgment. (Clark III 586; Clark IV 643)

1972 — Oscar A. Uriondo and Roberto Enrique Banchs found the Centro de Estudios de Fénomenos Aéreos Inusuales in Buenos Aires, Argentina. (Margaret Sachs, The UFO Encyclopedia, Putnam, 1980, p. 55)

1972 — The Centro de Estudos Astronomicos e de Fenómenos Insolitos is founded in Porto, Portugal. It begins publishing a monthly journal, Insolito, in 1975. (Margaret Sachs, The UFO Encyclopedia, Putnam, 1980, p. 56)

1972 — Alberto Romero founds Grupo de Pesquisas Aérospaciais Zenith in Salvador, Bahia, Brazil. It begins publishing Boletim G-PAZ annually. (Margaret Sachs, The UFO Encyclopedia, Putnam, 1980, pp. 136–137)

1972 — Luis do Rosário Real founds the Sociedade Pelotense de Investigacão e Pesquiso de Discos Voadores in Pelotas, Rio Grande de Sul, Brazil. It publishes a Boletim SPIPDV. (Margaret Sachs, The UFO Encyclopedia, Putnam, 1980, p. 296)

1972 — Kilbjørn Stenødegård founds the Norsk UFO Center in Trondheim, Norway. It publishes UFO Forum from 1973 to 1978. The Norsk UFO Center in Bergen publishes Rapportnytt from 1974 to 1981. (UFO Forum, no. 1 (1973); Rapportnytt, no. 1 (1974))

1972 (or early 1973) — A USAF lieutenant colonel [possibly David Fruehauf] is flying a SR-71 spy plane at 78,000 feet out of Kadena Air Base on Okinawa, Japan, when he sees a metallic object flying in the same direction about 5 miles off his starboard side and 5,000–6,000 feet above him. He flies closer and sees that it has shiny metallic edges. When he is about 2 miles away, the object accelerates at a "30-degree angle of attack" and disappears. The pilot estimates its speed as 8,000 mph. (Coulthart 2023, pp. 97, 99)

1972, January — Air Commodore Anthony Norman Davis becomes the first head of the British UFO desk to appear on TV to explain how the ministry investigates sightings. The program is part of the BBC's Man Alive series and includes the "man from the ministry" engaging in debate with a panel of experts and taking questions from the audience. The program is filmed in Banbury, England, town hall following a wave of UFO sightings in Oxfordshire. Davis says all reports received by the Ministry of Defence are "examined with an open mind and without prejudice" but denies that the MoD possesses any evidence that can prove the existence of extraterrestrial visitors. (UFOFiles2, pp. 84–85)

1972, January — Night. High school senior Donna Wilkins is driving in a rural area near Bartelso, Illinois, with a boyfriend when they see lights traveling back and forth in an odd pattern in the distance. Suddenly a luminous triangular object appears right next to them and they speed up. It maintains the same position above their car even though they accelerate to 85 mph. The underside seems to be composed of metal beams. It disappears beyond a tree line as they enter town, ("They Still Keep Seeing UFOs in Carlyle," East St. Louis (Ill.) Metro-East Journal, May 31, 1972, via UFO Newsclipping Service, no. 38 (June 1972): 5)

1972, January 1 — NASA releases its 250-page report on the importance of the search for extraterrestrial intelligence, Project Cyclops. The agency distributes 10,000 copies of the report, the first large-scale effort to study the problem in a coordinated way. However, its proposed $6–$10 billion budget is never funded. (Wikipedia, "Project Cyclops"; NASA, Project Cyclops: A Design Study of a System for Detecting Extraterrestrial Intelligent Life, Ames Research Center, 1972; Robert Dixon, "Project Cyclops: The Greatest Radio Telescope Never Built," in H. Paul Shuch, Searching for Extraterrestrial Intelligence, Springer-Verlag, 2011, pp. 19–45; Graff 234–237)

1972, January 27 — In response to a question from MP John Langford-Holt, the Minister of State for Defence Antony Lambton tells the House of Commons that 9.3% of the UFO reports received at the Ministry of Defence from 1959 to 1970 remain unexplained due to insufficient information. (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1972, Early February — 7:00 p.m. Sarajevo International Airport in Bosnia picks up an unidentified radar target traveling at about 37 mph. It appears visually as a triangular object. When a Jat Airways Convair approaches the target, it accelerates and vanishes. (Milos Krmelj, "Report from Ljubljana, Slovenia," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 13 (February 1973): 13)

1972, February 22? — 6:00 a.m. Dave Snyder and another boy are walking across a field in the southeast part of South Sioux City, Nebraska, when they come upon an object on the ground flashing blue, green, and red lights. Frightened, they run home but return the next day to find a circle of melted snow measuring 25 to 30 feet in diameter. (Lawrence Lacey, "Red Object Hovers Behind Highway Overpass in Nebraska," MUFON UFO Journal, no. 109 (December 1976): 3–4)

1972, March — Victor Marchetti, who has worked as an analyst for the CIA from 1955 to 1969, announces his plans to write a nonfiction book about the agency and completes a draft of an article for Esquire which, according to a later CIA account, includes "names of agents, relations with named governments, and identifying details of ongoing operations." The CIA receives a copy of the article and decides to seek an injunction against its publication. The basis for seeking an injunction against Marchetti is the secrecy agreement which he signed when beginning employment at CIA. The agency presents the agreement and the parts of the draft article it considers in violation of the agreement, to Judge Albert Vickers Bryan Jr. of the US District Court for Eastern Virginia, who grants a temporary restraining order in April. The case proceeds to trial, at which Bryan finds for the CIA and issues a permanent injunction requiring Marchetti to submit his writings to CIA for review prior to publication. Marchetti appeals the injunction to the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, which upholds Bryan's restraint but limits it to classified material. The appeals court also finds that Marchetti is entitled to timely review of materials he submits to the CIA. Marchetti appeals again to the US Supreme Court, but SCOTUS rejects Marchetti's appeal in December. Marchetti continues work on his book with a coauthor, John D. Marks, and signs a book contract with publisher Alfred A. Knopf. In August 1973, they submit their manuscript to the CIA. After reviewing the manuscript, the agency responds with a list of 339 passages that it claims are classified information and demands their deletion. Marchetti and Marks reject the demand and indicate they will go to court to print the manuscript as written. The CIA then withdraws its objections to 171 of the items but stands firm on the remaining 168. The trial is held again before Judge Bryan. This time, however, he rejects all but 26 of the deletions requested by the CIA on the grounds that the information in them is not properly or provably classified. The CIA appeals Bryan's ruling, and ultimately the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals upholds all 168 of the deletions. The book is published by Knopf in 1974 as The CIA and the Cult of Intelligence. It is printed with blanks for deleted passages and boldface type for the 171 deletions that CIA originally requested and later withdrew. It is the first book the federal government of the United States ever goes to court to censor before its publication. (Wikipedia, "Victor Marchetti")

1972, March 3 — The NASA space probe Pioneer 10 is launched to Jupiter and becomes the first artificial object to traverse the asteroid belt and to achieve the escape velocity needed to leave the Solar System. It transmits about 500 images of Jupiter in November–December 1973. During the mission, the on-board instruments are used to study the asteroid belt, the environment around Jupiter, the solar wind, cosmic rays, and eventually the far reaches of the Solar System and heliosphere. If left undisturbed, Pioneer 10 and its sister craft Pioneer 11 (launched April 6, 1973) will join the two Voyager spacecraft and the New Horizons spacecraft in leaving the Solar System to wander the interstellar medium. The Pioneer 10 trajectory is expected to take it in the general direction of the star Aldebaran, currently located at a distance of about 68 light years. If Aldebaran has zero relative velocity, it would require more than 2 million years for the spacecraft to reach it. Well before that, in about 90,000 years, Pioneer 10 will pass about 0.23 parsecs (0.75 light-years) from the late K-type star HIP 117795. Because it is strongly advocated by Carl Sagan, Pioneer 10 and Pioneer 11 carry a 6-by-9 inch, gold-anodized aluminum plaque in case either spacecraft is ever found by intelligent life-forms from another planetary system. The plaques feature the nude figures of a human male and female along with several symbols that are designed to provide information about the origin of the spacecraft. The plaque is attached to the antenna support struts where it would be shielded from interstellar dust. Radio communications are lost with Pioneer 10 on January 23, 2003, because of the loss of electric power for its radio transmitter, with the probe at a distance of 12 billion kilometers (80 AU) from Earth. (Wikipedia, "Pioneer 10"; Wikipedia, "Pioneer plaque"; Carl Sagan, Linda Salzman Sagan, and Frank Drake, "A Message from Earth," Science 175 (1972): 881–884; Graff 241–242)

1972, March 8 — President Nixon legitimizes the use of special access controls and the "special access program" is finally made official. These are security protocols that provide highly classified information with safeguards and access restrictions that exceed those for regular (collateral) classified information. SAPs can range from black projects to routine but especially sensitive operations, such as COMSEC maintenance or Presidential transportation support. In addition to collateral controls, an SAP may impose more stringent investigative or adjudicative requirements, specialized nondisclosure agreements, special terminology or markings, exclusion from standard contract investigations (carve-outs), and centralized billet systems. (Wikipedia, "Special access program"; "Executive Order 11652: Classification and Declassification of National Security Information and Material," March 8, 1972)

1972, March 12 — The tabloid newspaper The National Enquirer announces a $50,000 reward to "the first person who can prove that an Unidentified Flying Object (UFO) came from outer space and is not a natural phenomenon." It has appointed five experts to a blue-ribbon panel that will evaluate all the entries: J. Allen Hynek, R. Leo Sprinkle, Frank B. Salisbury, James A. Harder, and Robert F. Creegan. The deadline for evidence is January 1, 1973. On May 23, 1973, the panel announces that none of the entries examined warranted the full prize, but it has decided to award $5,000 to the Johnson family of Delphos, Kansas, for submitting the 1971 landing trace evidence. The panel awards seven other UFO cases with a portion of the reward, the last going to Deputy Sheriff Val Johnson in 1980. 1972, March 16 — Dawn. Truck driver Luis Bracamonte sees a sparkling mist form over the fields in Parque Granaderos, near General Rodriguez, Buenos Aires, Argentina. As he stops his truck, the mist vanishes, replaced by a blindingly vivid light. When he opens his eyes again, he notices a large oblong machine about 300 feet away, featuring a rim on the upper part and wide projections below. Three men with broad shoulders emerge, walking with apparent difficulty. They have sharp features and resemble Chinese individuals. Approaching Bracamonte, one of them grips his elbow. They speak in an unfamiliar language, but he intuitively understands that he should not be afraid. One of the beings then presents a plaque with two shining symbols and shows it to him. 1972, March 16 — In response to a question from MP John Langford-Holt, the Minister of State for Defence Antony Lambton tells the House of Commons that there are no Ministry of Defence staff engaged full-time in UFO investigations. Reports are examined by appropriate headquarters staff. (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024)

1972, March 19 — 10:00 p.m. A boy named Mario goes out onto his patio at Santa Maria Acuexcomac, Puebla, Mexico, to look for a broom when he sees a bluish light, which gets larger as if it is approaching the ground. He sees that the thing is descending into a vacant lot and, thinking it is a hot air balloon, runs towards it. When he reaches the lot, he sees the thing is a kind of luminous sphere giving off a blue light like that of a welding torch. Mario now becomes frightened and runs to call his mother. As he goes in the house, two neighbors, Zacarian Mendoza and Manuela Carlotta de Mendoza, also see the object. When Mario comes out again accompanied by his mother Josefina, the object, which has been on the ground for 7 minutes, begins to rise up, producing a hum and casting off more blue sparks. Gradually the light and sound are lost in the sky. The next day, Mario goes to the site and finds four deep tracks, about 8 inches deep, separated exactly from each other in the form of a square of 8.2 feet. At an equidistant point in the center of the tracks there is a black burnt mark on the ground. 1972, April 1 — 11:00 p.m. Two students are driving between Cacuso and Lucala, Angola, when suddenly their vehicle's engine and lights fail. They check the batteries and fuses, which are all normal. Then they see two bright lights. Shortly afterward, they hear a whistling noise coming from an object about 130 feet away. It is about 130 feet across, partly lit up, and has three legs hanging from it. It rise to a height of 40 feet, where it hovers briefly, retracts its legs, whistles again, and turns on edge as it moves away. As soon as it leaves, the vehicle's lights come back on and the engine returns to normal. (Herbert S. Taylor, "An Update on Vehicle Interference Reports, Part Two," IUR 34, no. 1 (Sept. 2011): 19)

1972, April 14 — Evening. At least four adults in various parts of Waterbury, Connecticut, spot a triangular-shaped UFO moving silently. The witnesses estimated its width at about 130–195 feet. ("Sighting Advisory," UFO Investigator, December 1972, p. 4)

1972, April 24 — Day. A man in Willow Point, British Columbia, on the Inside Passage takes a photo of a disc-shaped object spinning "like a top" and hovering in the sky above Quadra Island. The object has a dull sheen like dirty chrome and lights flashing around its rim. The UFO wobbles, tilts, and shudders, then shoots straight upward about 1,000 feet. It then takes off to the north on a zigzag course. The photo is blurry, but shows a disc. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, pp. 72–73, 152)

1972, May 26 — President Richard Nixon and Soviet General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev sign the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty at the 1972 Moscow Summit. Under the terms of the treaty, each party is limited to two ABM complexes, each of which is to be limited to 100 anti-ballistic missiles. Ratified by the US Senate on August 3, the treaty remains in force until June 2002 when the US withdraws. (Wikipedia, "Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty")

1972, Summer — Early morning. The Musson, a Russian scientific ship, is in the North Atlantic roughly 300 miles from Bermuda. The electrician, radio operator, and one of the navigators see an elliptical object moving slowly through the cloudless sky at high altitude from north to south. It changes shape to a wheel and then to an elongated, silvery-white ellipse, then it disappears from view. (Stonehill and Mantle, Russia's USO Secrets, Flying Disk, 2020, p. 60)

1972, June — Franklin B. Mead Jr., senior aerospace engineer with the USAF Aerospace Research Laboratories, edits a technical report on Project Outgrowth, an investigation of advanced propulsion concepts developed by the Air Force Rocket Propulsion Laboratory at Edwards AFB in California. An entire chapter of the report is devoted to antigravity propulsion, utilizing the concepts of gravitational screens and a unified field theory. The hardware it describes is "theoretical," but the report indicates that it is worthwhile to determine which materials or metamaterials might change the amplitude and direction of gravitational fields. (F. B. Mead Jr., ed., Advanced Propulsion Concepts: Project Outgrowth, Air Force Rocket Propulsion Laboratory, June 1972, pp. II-135–140)

1972, June — Edward Harris begins publishing Cosmology Newslink, a monthly newsletter on UFO and contactee topics, in Dunmow, Essex, England. It persists until the Summer 1994 issue. (Cosmology Newslink, no. 1 (June 1972))

1972, June 6 — New York City artist and psychic Ingo Swann visits the Stanford Research Institute [now SRI International] in Menlo Park, California, to begin remote viewing experiments. He is brought by Harold E. Puthoff and other scientists to a building where, several floors below, is a heavily shielded magnetometer whose sole function is to measure quarks. One scientist asks him to "perturb" the device. As Swann sits there trying to visualize the magnetometer, a scientist monitoring it tells the group that the needle is moving wildly and malfunctioning. The scene is repeated several more times, each time when Swann is imagining the device. Puthoff is intrigued. He writes up his findings and a few weeks later he is visited by two CIA intelligence analysts who want Puthoff and SRI to investigate remote viewing for espionage purposes. (Wikipedia, "Ingo Swann"; Jim Schnabel, Remote Viewers: The Secret History of America's Psychic Spies, Dell, 1997; Annie Jacobsen, Phenomena: The Secret History of the U.S. Government's Investigations into Extrasensory Perception and Psychokinesis, Little, Brown, 2017, pp. 130–136; Edwin C. 1972, June 17 — 2:30 a.m. The White House Plumbers are arrested in the process of burglarizing and planting surveillance bugs in the Democratic National Committee offices at the Watergate Building Complex in Washington, D.C. (Wikipedia, "Watergate scandal")

1972, June 22 — 2:00 a.m. Javier Bosque, a seminarist of the order of St. Joseph Calasanz, is reading in bed at his room at the Colegio Escolapios in Logroño, La Rioja, Spain, when he notices a bright light outside through the half-closed shutters of his window. To his surprise, the window begins opening by itself and a 2-foot-long, football-shaped, metallic, luminous object enters his room and approaches the foot of his bed. His radio begins to emit a loud, continuous sound. He reaches over and turns on a cassette tape recorder. The object descends from about 6 feet above the floor to 15 inches above it. A beam of solid light extends from the object, touching the radio twice, retracts, then touches the cassette recorder. Bosque grabs the recorder and holds the microphone in his lap. The object ascends to about 6 feet above the floor and moves out the window and up. The radio sound weakens. The 8-minute sound recording is analyzed by laboratories in Spain, Brazil, France, and the US. It contains some pure tones at first, followed by modulations in amplitude. Robert H. Coddington finds, after an analysis of the tape, that it most likely is a recording of the chance reception of an ordinary test transmission from a terrestrial broadcast station and does not match Bosque's narrative. 1972, June 26 — 8:00 a.m. Bennie Smit, the new owner of Braeside Farm 9 miles from Fort Beaufort, Eastern Cape, South Africa, is alerted to a "fiery red ball hovering at tree-top level" by his hired hand Boer de Klerk. Its color changes to bright green and then to whitish yellow, with flames shooting out. Smit dashes home, grabs a rifle, and calls the police. He shoots at the object, but the bullets have little effect. At 10:30 a.m., police sergeant Piet C. Kitching and warrant officer P. R. van Rensburg arrive at the spot where the UFO is still hovering. As the object moves away, Smit fires at it an eighth time; this time he hears a thud, and the object moves up and down and stops changing colors. Smit and Kitching fire at it some more, after which it disappears and reappears about 60 feet away looking gunmetal gray in color and somewhat oval-shaped. After they fire two final shots, the object moves away through the trees around noon. The next day, van Rensburg leads a team of police officers to the site, looking for evidence. They find nine circular imprints of its supposed landing gear found in damp clay soil. On June 28, Brig. A. Vosloo, divisional commander of police for the Eastern Cape, takes soil samples and plaster casts of the imprints. 1972, June 29 — 10:00 p.m. A dark, wedge-shaped UFO passes directly over several witnesses at 200–500 feet altitude in Buffalo, South Dakota, at a slow speed. About 100 feet long, it has two brilliant white lights at the front and two orange-white lights in the rear. It moves with the blunt edge forward and hovers intermittently for 40 minutes. It emits a sound like rushing air. (Glenn McWane and David Graham, The New UFO Sightings, Warner, 1974; Marler 85)

1972, July — J. Allen Hynek publishes The UFO Experience: A Scientific Inquiry, in which he charges the Air Force with indifference and incompetence in its UFO investigations, including a failure to put its case reports in machine-readable form. He also critiques the Condon report and details well-documented reports of six types of UFOs: nocturnal lights, daylight discs, radar/visual observations, and close encounters of the first, second, and third kind. He puts the experiences of observers at the center of the investigation, saying that in his years of talking to eyewitnesses, "invariably I have had the feeling that I was talking to someone who was describing a real event." It is an "articulate challenge to his colleagues to tolerate the study of something they cannot understand," according to a reviewer in Science. (J. Allen Hynek, The UFO Experience, Ballantine ed., 1974; Charles H. Gibbs-Smith, "A Turning Point in UFO Investigation," Flying Saucer Review 18, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1972): 6–8; Joachim P. 1972, July 3 — 9:15 p.m. Maureen Puddy, 27, sees a disc-shaped object on the Mooraduc Road near Frankston, Victoria, Australia. The object is a huge blue disc that hovers above her car. (Keith Basterfield, "Present at the Abduction," IUR 17, no. 3 (May/June 1992): 13–14, 23; Keith Basterfield, "Cold Case Investigation: Frankston, Vic, July 1972, Part One," Unidentified Anomalous Phenomena—Scientific Research, October 2, 2012)

1972, July 4 — 10:10 p.m. Girl guide leader Claudine Dieupart alerts 43 other girl guides and Belgian missionary Rev. Fr. Quertemont, who are sitting around a campfire at Lamonriville, Malmédy, Belgium, to a triangle of white lights moving overhead. They watch the lights for 5 minutes. At 10:30 p.m., several witnesses at a bus stop in Liège view a triangle of bright globes of light moving slowly from west to east. They pass through a cloud bank, illuminating it. About the same time, other witnesses in the western suburbs see a similar display. At 10:31 p.m., a factory worker in Flawinne watches a triangle of three bright lights ascending vertically. At 10:40 p.m., a couple in Spy observe a triangular display of lights surrounded by bluish sparks. At 10:45 p.m. a farmer in Ellezelles notices three bluish beams of light shining down from a luminous cloud. (Marler 85–86)

1972, July 4 (or July 4, 1973) — 11:15 p.m. Capt. Erling Bakke and his wife see a peculiar vessel on the water east of Sundsøya, Trøndelag, Norway. It is black, about 25 feet long, 6 feet high, and traveling about 60 mph. It rises up at a 45° angle, then disappears. (J. O. Sundberg, "Stor Expedition till Nansenfjorden," UFO Information, 1975, no. 3, pp. 8, 9–10; Ole Jonny Brænne, "Observations of Unidentified Submarine Objects in Norway," IUR 20, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1995): 13)

1972, July 5 — 12:10 p.m. A M. Legrand in Belgium is parking his car when he notices a dozen whitish objects flying about randomly at a low altitude. A neighbor describes them as vaguely shaped, fleecy, and rotating slowly. They seem to be moving around a dark triangular object. (SOBEPS Investigators, "Belgian UFO Sightings during July 1972," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 16 (August 1973): 1. 3; Marler 87)

1972, July 7 — 7:50 p.m. J. Erasmus watches a small object hovering above the post office in Port Elizabeth, South Africa. It changes color from yellow to white. He calls the newspaper, and photographer Geoffrey Allen is able to take several photos through a telephoto lens from the roof of the newspaper building. The object appears to break into two at times. It disappears by 8:45 p.m. One of the photos shows an umbrella-shaped light. (Charles Bowen, "South African Mini-Wave, 1972: Part 1," Flying Saucer Review 18, no. 5 (Sept./Oct. 1972): 5–7)

1972, July 10 — 10:15 p.m. Rafael Aranda is driving his Renault 8 at 55–60 mph on a back road approaching Alcaracejos, Córdoba, Spain, when suddenly the car slows down. He pushes the accelerator to the floor, but cannot make the car go any faster than about 40–50 mph. He becomes aware of a bright light in the sky like a great white light bulb that is directing a beam of light at his car. The object, about 3–5 feet in diameter, is rotating in a clockwise direction and moving on or near the ground to the right of the highway, partly concealed by oak trees. As he continues to drive, Aranda finally loses sight of the object and his car begins functioning normally again. The next day he takes the car to a Renault dealer for an examination, but the mechanics can find no explanation for the loss of power. (Vicente-Juan Ballester Olmos, A Catalogue of 200 Type I UFO Events in Spain and Portugal, CUFOS, 1976, p. 38; UFOEv II 277)

1972, July 11 —2:00 p.m. Edward Blumberg is driving with his family along Queen Street in Cyrildene, Johannesburg, South Africa, when the notice a white object shaped like a teardrop high in the sky. It is hovering and has some "legs" trailing from its base. They reach home and are able to view it through binoculars. The object slowly tiltsto the east until it reaches a horizontal position. A flash of light is emitted from its front, and the object seems to flatten as it quickly moves off to the east. (Charles Bowen, "South African Mini-Wave, 1972, Part 2," Flying Saucer Review 18, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1972): 14–15)

1972, July 19 — 10:35 p.m. Herbert and Mady Mathar and their two children are walking in Faymonville, Belgium, when they see a red-orange point of light slowly moving toward them. Closer, they see that it is hat-shaped. Mathar runs inside to get a camera and takes two photos before the object disappears. Ballester Olmos and van Utrecht conclude that the photos show the Moon setting in the southwest. (Vicente-Juan Ballester Olmos and Wim van Utrecht, Belgium in UFO Photographs, Volume 1 (1950–1988), FOTOCAT Report no. 7, 2017, pp. 99–113)

1972, July 25 — 9:15 p.m. Maureen Puddy sees the same object she had seen on July 3 at almost the same spot. This time it seems to drain power from the car, causing it to stop, the car steering itself off the road. A voice in her head tells her, "All your tests will be negative. Tell media, do not panic. We mean no harm." Several months later, she is "mentally" abducted into a room where she sees an entity. This event occurs while two other people are present with her, but they only report that Puddy lapses into unconsciousness. On a later occasion, the entity appears as she is driving the car. 1972, July 27 — The Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Oceans and International Environment holds hearings on Senate Resolution 281, proposing an international treaty to ban weather modification as a weapon of war. Dartmouth environmental scientist Gordon J. F. MacDonald opposes the bill, saying that research needs to be unfettered, but he mentions weapons that might use electrical waves, created by the differential between the ionosphere and the surface of the earth, "that would be tuned to the brain waves…. About ten cycles per second…. You can produce changes in behavioral patterns or in responses." Res. 281, pp. 72–76)

1972, August — Ingo Swann returns to the Stanford Research Institute in Menlo Park, California, as do the two CIA intelligence analysts. With Swann in a Faraday cage, the SRI team conducts a series of what's-in-the-box tests in which office supplies hidden inside a box are presented to Swann, who is asked to identify the objects inside. During a lunch break one of the CIA agents walks outside and collects a small brown moth, capturing it alive, and sealing it inside a box. When Swann looks at the box, he sees "something small, brown, and irregular, sort of like a leaf…. Except that it seems very much alive, like it's even moving." (Annie Jacobsen, Phenomena, Little, Brown, 2017, p. 136)

1972, August — The Archives for UFO Research (Arbetsgruppen för Ufologi) is founded in Södertälje, Sweden, by Håkan Blomqvist, Kjell Jonsson, and Anders Liljegren. Its specialized research library for UFO literature is established in 1974, and in 1979 AFU moves to Norrköping. It publishes Ufologen from 1972 to 1974 and the AFU Newsletter from March 1975 to October 2008. In April 2013 it changes its name to the Archives for the Unexplained. Its holdings in 2020 include a reference library of more than 20,000 titles, more than 50,000 magazine issues, some 500,000 clippings, and more than 50,000 European UFO cases. 1972, August 9 — 2:30 a.m. A married couple, both college professors, are camping out in a garden in the backyard of some friends' home just off the road to Nîmes at Saint-Jean-du-Gard, Gard, France. The woman is walking outside and sees a shiny white ball the size of a small car sitting in a nearby parking lot. She hears footsteps behind her and sees a dark shape about 4 feet tall in the shape of a parallelepiped topped by an oval where a head would be. It has 2 white circles for eyes, but no visible arms or legs. It turns toward her and she feels an extraordinary fear. After a few seconds, she runs back inside the tent. (Patrick Gross, "Saint-Jean-du-Gard, France, August 9, 1972")

1972, August 10 — 2:29 p.m. An earth-grazing meteor passes 35 miles above the Earth's surface, entering the atmosphere above Utah at 9.3 miles/second and passing northward, leaving the atmosphere over Alberta. It is seen by many people and recorded on film and by space-borne sensors. An eyewitness to the event, located in Missoula, Montana, sees the object pass directly overhead and hears a double sonic boom. The smoke trail lingers in the atmosphere for several minutes. 1972, August 12 — 2:00 a.m.–5:00 a.m. About 30 young members of the Taizé Community in Taizé, Saône-et-Loire, France, are having a discussion in a rustic theatre circle to the northwest of the community buildings. Renata Faa is the first to see a star-like object come out of the sky in the west. It lands on the ground on a ridge facing them. Eventually, after more yellow lights appear on the object, they see it as cigar-shaped and about 100 feet long. Five other white lights emit luminous beams that extend progressively across the ground. Two cupolas are visible on its left side. Three small white discs appear on the right side, apparently emerging from the main object, and perform complex maneuvers. Some of the witnesses feel a tingling in their fingertips and knees. Faa and three of the other witnesses decide to walk through the fields and approach the object. Around 3:00 a.m., a multitude of red particles appear in the air around the approaching witnesses and in the ground around them. The lights on the object constantly change their patterns of display and movement. The four witnesses see a dark mass like a haystack on their left about 30 feet away. A small red light is moving haphazardly around it. When one of them shines a flashlight on the haystack, the beam travels horizontally for a bit then is directed perpendicularly upward. Finally, toward 5:00 a.m., the large object rises up and moves off to the south, following the terrain. (J. Tyrode, "Taizé: A Case Right out of the Ordinary," Flying Saucer Review 19, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1973): 16–21; F. Lagarde, "A Few Words about Taizé," Flying Saucer Review 19, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1973): 22; UFOEv II 217–218; Clark IV 1216)

1972, August 19 — 2:00 a.m. A series of sightings involving 50–60 witnesses takes place in Colby, Kansas. The first call to police is made by John L. Calkins who, awakened by barking dogs, goes to his front door and sees three objects hovering nearby, making shrill, high-pitched whistling sounds. The larger object has six flashing, red and green body lights. He also hears beeping sounds. The sightings continue until 6:20 a.m. Police Sgt. Paul Carter, while patrolling at 2:07 a.m., sees an object with red and green flashing lights approach from the northeast. He radios Officer Dennis Brown and begins to follow the object southward. It stops and hovers 10–15 feet above a pasture about a quarter-mile away. He estimates it is 30–35 feet long and 18–20 feet tall. Suddenly the object emits an intense, blinding white light that illuminates the landscape, including jackrabbits sitting in the field. Despite the bright light, Carter gets a glimpse of a shape "like a cereal bowl turned upside down." It makes a whooshing noise and shoots up and out of sight in 3 seconds. Brown, who is approaching, also sees it speed away. After that, the UFO is seen heading southeast. Police in Oakley watch it through binoculars. Officers Earl Wood Jr. and Duane Nelson can see six body lights on a large object. Three on the front are white and those on the back flash red and green. W. L. Johnson of Colby sees an object from his front yard at 6:08 a.m. It has orange-red flashing lights, moves from the southwest to the south, hovers, moves north, turn toward his house, and gains altitude. At this point it changes to blue-green, moves southwest, hovers for a few minutes, then climbs and disappears at 6:20 a.m. ("Colby Cops and UFOs," Flying Saucer Review 18, no. 6 (November/December 1972): 30–31; Bob Gribble, "Looking Back," MUFON UFO Journal, no. 232 (August 1987): 20; UFOEv II 191)

1972, August 28 — 3:00 a.m. Eduardo Fernando de Deugd [or Dedeu] is driving from Médanos to Bahía Blanca, Buenos Aires, Argentina, when someone waves him down to ask for a ride. He asks if the hitchhiker is going to Bahía Balance, but the man's reply is unintelligible. He is wearing a coat with a turned-up collar and a large round cap. He has a jaw so elongated that it comes down almost to his chest. Further efforts to communicate prove futile. As de Deugd nears the city, his car lights go off suddenly. Ahead of him is a huge object with a blue light in the middle and two smaller white lights on the sides. As he steps out of the car, a flash of light strikes him and he feels heat, so he ducks behind his open door. The object is moving to the left and the stranger is gone. The passenger door is open and the handle is broken and lying on the floor. The object vanishes. (Jane Thomas, "The Hitch-hiker from Space," Flying Saucer Review 18, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1972): 23–24; "Further Details about the 'Hitch-hiker' from Space," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 14 (April 1973): iii–iv; Clark III 281–282; Clark IV 321–322)

1972, August–October — Numerous UFO sightings are reported throughout rural areas of Puerto Rico, as well as in San Juan and Ponce. People travel to the small town of Adjuntas, where the objects are seen frequently. One Friday night, the mayor of Adjuntas is traveling with a group of people in three cars along a lonely stretch of road in

Barrio Garzas when he sees three bright discs moving through the sky. Their light changes in color and intensity. Sightings also center on the town of Utuado, where the Air National Guard has scrambled F-104s to chase the objects. A teacher at Utuado High School is driving back from town with his brother when they see a bright light off in the bush 300 feet from the road. They get out of the car and approach the light, which is sitting in a clearing. It is a flattened disc about the size of a small house and has a set of small, dark rectangles evenly spaced around its edge. It is brilliantly lit and its colors are constantly changing. They watch the object for a few minutes until it vanishes like "someone turning off a light." (Salvador Freixedo, "UFOs over the Caribbean," Flying Saucer Review Case Histories, no. 14 (April 1973): 9–10; Henry Cordova, "Encounter in Puerto Rico," IUR 25, no. 1 (Spring 2000): 20–21)

1972, Early September — Just after midnight. Vasile Cărăbuş, a night watchman at an agricultural cooperative in Valea Plopului, Romania, sees a yellow star with a trail crossing the sky. It then hovers and appears to land in an orchard on the Odaia hill about 1 mile away. A couple days later, Cărăbuş and other locals visit the orchard and find a circular area 15 feet in diameter where all the stems are broken off about 3 feet from the ground. In the center of the circle is a mound of earth about 2 feet in diameter and 15 inches high. In the middle of this is a round hole at least 6 feet deep, around which are three identical impresions 4.5 feet apart. Hundreds of curious onlookers visit the site, among them engineer Justin Capră, who detects a substantial increase in gamma radiation in the center of the circle. Ufologist Călin Turcu notes that the vegetation on the mound of earth is completely absent for the next 4 years and frail after that. (Hobana and Weverbergh 276–279; Romania 34–35)

1972, September — 8:00 p.m. While commuting home by train from nearby Debrecen, Hungary, workers see about 7 luminous, orange-colored ellipses floating high above Nyírábrány. The phenomena are still there as they are walking home from the train station. The lights are as bright as the full moon and remain in position in a formation of three rows. The spectacle lasts for 30 minutes. The display is seen for the next four evenings in a row in the same part of the sky west of the village. On the last night, one of the lights disappears but returns to the same position in the formation. (Karoli Hargitai, "The UFO Phenomenon in Hungary," IUR 14, no. 2 (Mar./Apr. 1989): 13)

1972, September 10 — 12:45 p.m. Greengrocer Allan James is checking a load on his truck prior to descending from the top of a hill west of Georges Creek, New South Wales. He notices a huge, cigar-shaped object with smaller objects emerging from each end. They group into an arrowhead formation before moving southeast. The large object then climbs at a high rate of speed and disappears. The duration is about 10 minutes. (Eileen Buckle, "Is Kempsey a UFO 'Window'?" Flying Saucer Review 21, no. 6 (April 1975): 3–4; Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects: A Further Look," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 26)

1972, September 14 — 4:20 a.m. An unidentified target is detected on radar at the Palm Beach (Florida) International Airport by FAA air traffic controller C. J. Fox. Fox describes the contact as a "good clear target." The object is tracked for over an hour when at approximately 6:00 a.m., NORAD is alerted. Two F-106 jet fighters are dispatched from Homestead AFB [now Homestead Air Reserve Base] in Miami–Dade County to locate and identify the object. The UFO disappears from radar scopes shortly before the jets arrive. At the airport, FAA watch supervisor George Morales views the object through binoculars and describes it as silver-white in color and cigar-shaped. Officials at Miami International Airport, which also tracks the strange object, report no aircraft are known to be in the area where the UFO was spotted. (NICAP, "Ground/Visual; Two 106's Scrambled")

1972, September 14 — 4:00 p.m. David Owen is sitting on his patio in Bateau Bay, New South Wales, when he notices a distinct "red arrowhead" moving from southwest to northwest in a slow climb. After watching it for several minutes, he takes a color photo with his Instamatic, which shows a disc reflecting light. ("Australian Arrowhead Photograph Reveals Unseen Possible UFO," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 2, no. 2 (February 1981): 1–2)

1972, September 14 — 8:00 p.m. A married couple in Houston, Missouri, watches an unusual bright object after their portable TV is disturbed by interference. It is larger than a star and persists for several minutes before it disappears in a burst of speed. At 3:00 a.m. they are awakened by their dogs barking at something in a nearby woods. They see a bright flash of light at ground level. The next morning, they find an evergreen tree about 300 feet from the house that is yellow on one side and normal-looking on the other. Next to it is a 20 feet x 14 feet oval area of depressed grass. In the center are three small imprints, each showing an extension or "toe." The imprints are about 2.5 inches long; one is 1.5 inches deep. A blackened area in the shape of a triangle is in the center of the imprints. (Ted Phillips, Physical Traces Associated with UFO Sightings, CUFOS, 1976, pp. xi, 86)

1972, September 15 — 5:50 p.m. University of New England student Bill Chalker is crossing the campus of the Earle Page College in Armidale, New South Wales, when he joins two other students who are watching a silent, metallic, egg-shaped object moving north to south at the speed of an airplane. It is in view for 15 seconds before it is obscured by campus buildings. It has an apparent angular size at arm's length of one inch. (Bill Chalker,

1972, September 20 — 12:45 a.m. A man is driving near Rougemont, Quebec, when he sees a Saturn-shaped object about 100 feet in diameter moving with a pendulum motion toward Mont Rougemont. It climbs to the top of the hill and settles in for 4 minutes. He watches it increasingly brighten from a row of windows at the upper dome and glow pink on the bottom side. He flashes his lights at it, and it rises and dives at his car, passing just 30 feet above it. The engine stalls, the radio goes off, and the headlights dim. A wave of heat passes over him, then the UFO races away. (Philippe Blaquière, "Le cas de Rougemont," UFO-Quebec 1, no. 1 (1975): 4–6; Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Sightings, Landings, and Abductions, Methuen, 1979, pp. 144–146; Michael D. Swords, "Messing Around with the Force," IUR 31, no. 4 (Mar. 2008): 29)

1972, September 21 — 5:40 a.m. Teodoro Merlo, maintenance man for the Ika-Renault factory in Santa Isabel, Córdoba, Argentina, is making early rounds at the plant. He enters a previously locked washroom and sees a man sitting on one of the basins who is nearly 8 feet tall and wearing a close-fitting, dark-blue, one-piece garment tight at the wrists. It has a bald head with high, pointed ears, and very white skin. As Merlo approaches, the light by the janitor goes out and a light near the entity goes on spontaneously. Merlo hears a noise like "a metal object striking glass," and the entity disappears. (Oscar A. Galíndez, "Argentina: Los fenómenos antropomorfos de Santa Isabel," Stendek, no. 15 (December 1973): 15–30; Oscar A. Galíndez, "The Anthropomorphic Phenomena at Santa Isabel, Part 1," Flying Saucer Review 21, no. 2 (August 1975): 11–15; Oscar A. Galíndez, "Argentina: The Anthropomorphic Phenomena of Santa Isabel," Inexplicata, September 22, 2011)

1972, September 25 — 1:00–1:30 a.m. Near Anderstorp, Sweden, a witness is driving his Opel at 25 mph when the car radio stops working. A couple minutes later, a very bright blue-white light appears behind the car, enveloping the entire vehicle in light at the same time as all electrical equipment in the car ceases to work. The headlights go out and the engine and wipers stop. The light persists for 5 minutes, and the temperature inside the car rises. Suddenly the light is gone, and the electrical system works again. The car starts at the same time as the witness smells a strong odor of ammonia or ether. The witness drives home quickly, terrified. (Herbert S. Taylor, "An Update on Vehicle Interference Reports, Part Two," IUR 34, no. 1 (Sept. 2011): 19)

1972, September 27 — 11:13 p.m. Enrique Moreno is delivering documents to the Ika-Renault factory in Santa Isabel, Cordoba, Argentina, when the fluorescent lights in the engineering room go on and off three times. There is an accompanying noise like that of a turbine lasting for several seconds. Driving his motor runabout outside the plant he briefly glimpses "a sort of rainbow very near the ground," but thinks no further of it until he suddenly encounters a tall figure, glowing a bluish green, moving among a pile of chassis beside his route. As he approaches within 100 feet, the figure swings around, in a stiff mechanical way, to face him, and at the same time his engine falters then quits when he comes opposite the being. This humanoid figure, strongly built and about 7.5 feet tall, has eyes like yellow light bulbs, large pointed ears, a square chin, and a slit-like mouth. The face appears pale green, but this may be due to a reflection from the clothing, a one-piece, luminescent, bluish-green tight-fitting coverall with a broad silvery belt. Moreno feels an intolerable humming in his ears, a sensation of heat, and itching over his entire body. There is also the smell of burning oil. His arms and legs are paralyzed. After 30 seconds of this confrontation, his motorcycle shoots off to the left, seemingly under its own volition at high speed, and the witness is returned to the Security Office without his conscious control. He arrives there at 11:30 p.m., but his wristwatch has stopped at 11:13 p.m., leaving 15 minutes unaccounted for. Moreno is in a highly agitated state, and subsequently suffers nausea and pains in the neck, as well as a burning sensation in his eyes. At the encounter site, two rectangular "footprints' 8 x 16 inches are found and the soil there is warm to the touch. Also at 11:30 p.m., A lady named Quiroga, who lives on the outskirts of the Ika-Renault factory, sees a luminous object that, by means of a "crystal tube" recovers a humanoid figure. At roughly the same time, Norberto Grosso, a houseowner in Barrio Colón (a suburb of Córdoba), is driving with his wife when he sees a luminous body rising up from the plant. He initially thinks that it is a radiosonde balloon, but he is struck by the speed at which it climbs into the sky, vanishing vertically "in fractions of seconds." Around 12:00 midnight, many residents of Villa El Libertador (a suburb adjacent to the Santa Isabel plant) report seeing a luminous globe rising rapidly from the southeastern area of Córdoba, where the Ika-Renault plant is located. 1972, October — Harry Belil begins publishing Beyond Reality, a newsstand magazine devoted to parapsychology and (sometimes) UFOs, in New York City. It continues through November 1980 and publishes several special UFO issues. (Beyond Reality, no. 1 (October 1972))

1972, October 1 — The CIA awards the Stanford Research Institute [now SRI International] in Menlo Park, California, a contract for $49,909 for an eight-month research project on remote viewing. It is given the name Biofield Measurements Program. (Annie Jacobsen, Phenomena, Little, Brown, 2017, pp. 136–137)

1972, October 2 — A letter from the Canadian Department of National Defence states that UFO reports received by the Canadian military are passed on to the National Research Council to determine whether a scientific investigation is warranted. It notes that "certain reports suggest that they exhibit a unique scientific or advance technology that could possibly contribute to scientific or technical research." (Good Above, pp. 193, 467)

1972, October 8 — 12:00 midnight. Security guard John Byrne is patrolling Cairo Mill, an old factory at Waterhead, Lancashire, England, that has been converted to an electronics system testing facility for jet aircraft. Near the bicycle shed he hears a deep humming noise like a generator inside a closed room. The sound bores into his head. He looks up and sees a huge object parked at a height of 300 feet adjacent to the tower end of the mill. It resembles a glowing bell shape turned on end with the flat base vertical to the sheer wall of the tower. The object is giving off a blue, fluorescent glow that falls like a curtain of solid light. Byrne watches for several minutes until the object turns sharply on edge and moves straight up into the sky until it is only a blob of light. (Jenny Randles, "Beam Me Up," Fortean Times 381 (July 2019): 30)

1972, October 9 — 7:30 p.m. Ralph and Grace Clapp are driving along Middle Country Road near Selden, New York, when they see a bright white light. It is joined by a red and a green light. They continue driving, and around 7:55 p.m. at the top of a hill west of Coram, the white light hovers into view above the treetops to heir left. Grace sees rectangular windows and no wings on a triangular object that is at least 100 feet across and moving slowly and continuously through the sky. 1972, October 23 — 6:30 p.m. Capt. Daryle Brown and two copilots are flying a Wardair airliner at 22,000 feet some 180 miles northwest of Churchill, Manitoba, when they see a bright streak of light approaching from the west. As it comes closer, it appears to be a bullet-shaped object larger than a Boeing 727 and adorned with a cluster of multicolored pulsating lights. Brown notifies the 15 passengers aboard and turns out the interior lights so they can see the object better. Almost a dozen portholes are visible, while red and yellow lights are flashing on the top. At the rear of the object is a fog-like cloud and orange sparks. It takes up a position about 2,500 feet in front of the jet and on the same flight path. The object shines a beam of light at the airplane, bathing it in light that is bright enough to read to, and stops in mid-air directly in front of the jet. Before Brown can take evasive action, it moves off to the right. A dense fog engulfs the object as it disappears in the distance. (Jeff Holt, "Rencontre avec un UFO dans le Grand Nord Canadien," UFO-Quebec, no. 9 (1977): 13–14; Yurko Bondarchuk, UFO Sightings, Landings, and Abductions, Methuen, 1979, pp. 167–169)

1972, October 28 — 10:15 p.m. Cpl. Juan Fuente Figueroa and four other Uruguayan Navy seamen are stationed at the lighthouse on Isla de Lobos, off Punta del Este, Uruguay. Fuentes goes to inspect the electrical generators and discovers some odd lights, which prompts him to retrieve a handgun from his room. When he returns, he notices an object in the shape of an inverted bowl with several white, yellow, and violet lights on top of a 20-foot terrace. An entity is next to the object and two others (one much taller) are descending from the UFO. They all notice Fuentes and face him from about 89 feet away. He raises his gun to shoot but feels strangely paralyzed and confused. The beings reenter the UFO, which moves straight up emitting a humming noise. When it reaches a height of 150 feet, it tilts, belches a bright fireball, and silently disappears at tremendous speed to the southeast. (Willy Smith, "Alien Encounter at Isla de Lobos, Uruguay, 10-28-1972," UFO Casebook; Willy Smith, "UFOs in Latin America," UFOs 1947–1987, Fortean Tomes, 1987, pp. 106–109; Clark IV 686)

1972, November 7 — Contactee Gabriel Green runs for US President as a candidate of the Universal Party, with Daniel Fry as his running mate, on the ballot in Iowa. The party offers solutions recommended by extraterrestrials for national and international problems. He gets less than 200 votes and subsequently retires from public life. (S. D. Tucker, False Economies: The Strangest, Least Successful, and Most Audacious Financial Follies, Plans, and Crazes of All Times, Amberly, 2018, chapter 3, excerpted in "Taxing Credulity," Fortean Times 367 (June 2018): 52–55)

1972, November 10 — 11:00 p.m. A 19-year-old is riding his Yamaha 250cc Twin motorcycle near Heathfield, East Sussex, England, when suddenly the headlights dim and go out and the engine fails, emitting an "electrical arcing" odor. He looks up and sees a white blob about 100 feet away hovering above some trees. It is about 60 feet high, 30–40 feet in diameter, and glowing white but fuzzy in appearance. After a few seconds it zooms away at about 100 mph in a straight line and is lost to sight. The motorcycle starts by itself. (Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1981, p. 55)

1972, November 11 — Shortly after 12:00 noon. A group of children in Mesa, Arizona, notice a strange object hovering in the sky while playing in a garden. A neighbor, Lee Elders, observes the object for an extended period and takes several photographs. The object remains visible for so long that some witnesses eventually leave to watch a football game on TV. The object is later identified as a tethered helium balloon sold by Edmund Scientific Company. (Wendelle C. Stevens, "Domed Cone UFOs," APRO Bulletin 26, no. 1 (July 1977): 1, 3–4; Wendelle Stevens, "1972 Mesa UFO Sighting," OpenMinds, May 3, 2011; Vicente-Juan Ballester Olmos, "UFO Photographs: Portraits of a Myth?" p. 41; Curt Collins, "The Two Arizona UFOs and Lester Bannick," The Saucers That Time Forgot, December 8, 2022)

1972, November 12 — 8:00 p.m. Three soldiers (Petrus Nel, Fanie Rosseau, and Gerrie Buitendag) are guarding a petrol dump at Rosmead, East Cape, South Africa, when they see a red light moving in circles above the tennis court adjacent to the primary school. At nearby Middelburg police station, Sgt. John Goosen and Constable Koos Brazelle are looking towards Rosmead with binoculars and see an odd light above the town. School Principal Harold Truter sees the light moving vertically up from his home near the tennis court. The tennis court is found churned up with huge chunks of surface tar dug up, so he calls the Middelburg police about it. Goosen and Brazelle respond. There are 5 holes in the court, the largest 10 feet in diameter. Two spike holes are also found. The only entrances to the court are still locked up and there are no vehicle tracks inside or outside. A eucalyptus tree at the end of the court has suddenly begun to die and appears scorched. District Police Commandant Col. B. J. van Heerden unsuccessfully tries to duplicate the damage with shovels. (Charles Bowen, "Landings and Humanoids Reported in Cape Province," Flying Saucer Review 19, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1973): 12–14; "The Case of the Damaged Tennis Court," APRO Bulletin 21, no. 4 (Jan./Feb. 1973): 6–8; Jenny Randles, UFO Conspiracy, Cassell, 1987, pp. 100–101)

1972, November 13 — Two witnesses watch an unknown aircraft maneuver along Sognefjord, Vestland, Norway. Thirty Norwegian Navy vessels, plus NATO forces, are already investigating a mystery submarine reported in the fjord. The same night, four other witnesses observe a "bright object" on the water. (Ole Jonny Brænne, "Observations of Unidentified Submarine Objects in Norway," IUR 20, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1995): 13)

1972, November 17 — 8:50 p.m. Two RCMP officers see an object 12 feet in length heading northwest near McIvers on the Bay of Islands, Newfoundland. It disappears in the water with a loud splash. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, p. 102)

1972, November 20 — 1:00 p.m. An unidentified submerged object is seen near Kyrkjebø, on Sognefjord, Norway, as it heads away from Mårenlandet toward the fjord's southern end. Around 1:15 p.m., it is seen by five police officers on Kvamsøy. Norwegian Navy frigates drop mines on the object. (Ole Jonny Brænne, "Observations of Unidentified Submarine Objects in Norway," IUR 20, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1995): 13)

1972, November 20 — CIA chief Richard Helms comes to Camp David to an interview with Nixon about what he thinks is a "budgetary matter." Nixon's chief of staff, H. R. Haldeman, also attends. Helms is informed by Nixon that his services in the new administration will not be required. On Helms's dismissal William Colby later comments that "Dick Helms paid the price for that 'No' [to the White House over Watergate]," distancing the CIA from the scandal. Helms begins a CIA clean-up, closing down Operation Often and other sensitive programs. (Wikipedia, "Richard Helms")

1972, November 21 — Night. Four witnesses see four rockets shooting up from the water at Hermansverk, Vestland, Norway. They are silent and resemble small red balls of light. They are also seen the following day, and the Norwegian Navy fires an antisubmarine missile at the intruders. (Ole Jonny Brænne, "Observations of Unidentified Submarine Objects in Norway," IUR 20, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1995): 13)

1972, November 28 — 2:00 p.m. A witness at Glenelg, Adelaide, South Australia, sees lengths of glistening material wrapped around a signpost and on looking up sees that more is falling from the sky. He collects a small sample of the thickest section, but the strands dissolve in his fingers. (Keith Basterfield, "Angel Hair: An Australian Perspective," IUR 27, no. 1 (Spring 2002): 7)

1972, November 30 — 11:15 p.m. A motor mechanic named Maxwell is out testing his vehicle in Murray Bridge, South Australia, when the engine dies and lights go out as he is coming over a rise in the road. The lights come back on but vary in intensity several times. He decides to stop the car. To his left he sees a "diamond shape with the top cut off" noiselessly sitting on the ground 148 feet away in a paddock. His car radio starts making a noise like a

"computer on TV," a constant rhythm. He tries the ignition key but nothing happens, not even the oil light comes on. He tries the wipers and the electric air horn but they do not work either. He locks all the doors and winds up the windows and just sits there for the next 45 minutes. After this time the object leaves, and he finds he can restart the car. An inspection of the vehicle the next day reveals no cause for the electrical problems. (Herbert S. Taylor, "An Update on Vehicle Interference Reports, Part Two," IUR 34, no. 1 (Sept. 2011): 19–20)

1972, December — Night. Romanian Air Force pilot and writer Lt. Col. Doru Davidovici is at an unnamed military base in Romania when he sees an oval UFO flying parallel to the ridge of a roof. It traverses 50°–60° of horizon in 45–50 seconds and disappears among some trees. It is egg-shaped, a white-violet color as if wrapped in a cloud of bright light, and leaves a long trail behind, but it changes to red-orange before disappearing. Radar at the base tracks the object flying north to south at 3,700 mph at a height of 43 miles. (Romania 103)

1972, December 3 — 11:30 p.m. Four witnesses in Hinojos, Huelva, Spain, see a fiery, square-shaped object flying close to the ground, lighting up the terrain. The headlights in two cars die. The car with a gasoline-powered engine also stalls, but the car with the diesel engine keeps running. (Herbert S. Taylor, "An Update on Vehicle Interference Reports, Part Two," IUR 34, no. 1 (Sept. 2011): 20)

1972, December 13 — 7:04 p.m. Fritz Abbehusen is watching TV in Dias d'Ávila, Bahia, Brazil, when his set experiences some interference. He goes out on the porch and sees a huge, round luminous object descending to a hill approximately 3 miles from his home. After a while, he goes to get binoculars, and with these he can see that the luminous shape is hovering a several feet above the ground. Its lower part is glowing like a neon light, while the upper part has a row of orange-red portholes. His wife Margarida and servant join him to look at the display. Suddenly, three blinking lights emerge from the object. One of these lights slowly moves in the direction of his house. After 15 minutes, the moving light has arrived within 165 feet in back of the house. Three small beings emerge from it, wearing what appears to be a one-piece suit of whitish or light-gray color. The beings keep their elbows close to the body when walking, as if on tiptoe, raising their knees exaggeratedly at each step. They go away, but the big object remains on the hill until around midnight. At one time it emits a beam that sets the brush on fire. (Center for UFO Studies, HUMCAT Index 1972, p. 58; Patrick Gross, "Dias d'Ávila, Brazil, December 13, 1972")

1972, December 24 — 3:00 a.m. The Romanian ship Moldoveanu is in the Labrador Sea off Labrador, Canada, when the crew notices a shiny object headed at high speed straight toward their vessel and flying low over the waves. It stops above the ship, changing its shape and color. After an hour, it shoots into the sky and disappears. (Hobana and Weverbergh 279)

1972, December 24 — 9:40 a.m. L. J. Reeves is stationed at the PIN-1 Distant Early Warning site at Clinton Point, Northwest Territories, on the Amundsen Gulf. He sees an object like a bright star that moves west to east, stops, then continues on and fades into the distance after 5 minutes. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, p.73)

1972, December 30 — A man driving on the A4155 from Henley to High Wycombe, England, rounds a bend and sees an object resembling a vertical cone. What seem to be fluorescent strip lights run down the side, and it emits an intense, high-pitched whistle. The next thing he knows, he is driving through Marlowe in total silence with no memory of how he got there. Some 90 minutes have vanished from his memory. (Jenny Randles, "The Twelve UFOs of Christmas," Fortean Times 374 (Christmas 2018): 29)

1972, December 30 — 10:20 p.m. Ventura Maceiras, 73, is sitting by a fire next to the wooden shack where he lives in Tres Arroyos, Buenos Aires province, Argentina. He hears a loud noise like angry bees coming from directly overhead and he sees a red-orange object, 65–82 feet in diameter, flooding the area with a powerful light. In the top is a spherical cabin with two windows and inside is a being, visible from the waist upward, wearing gray clothing made of cylinders joined together. The object tilts down toward him and he notices a second occupant looking over the shoulder of the first one. In another window is an emblem or banner with a crowned seahorse and several symbols. A flash of light temporarily blinds Maceiras, engulfing one of his cats (which disappears for 48 days), and the object starts turning blue-green, moves forward, and descends so it is only about 15 feet above the ground. Then it speeds away to the northeast, leaving a strong smell of sulfur. The observation is only 20 seconds. Most of the tops of nearby trees are scorched or burnt. Three or four hours later, Maceiras has a severe headache that persists for 2 weeks. He also develops diarrhea, nausea, and vomiting, which lasts for 4 days, as well as other odd medical symptoms. By February 10, Maceiras claims that four new teeth are appearing in his gums. He also develops some psychic abilities and claims another visitation by the occupants. 1973

1973 — NORAD now has infrared sensor satellites covering 100% of the earth's surface from geostationary orbits on a 24-hour basis. (Clark III 807; Clark IV 899)

1973 — Most Project MKUltra records are deliberately destroyed by order of CIA Director Richard Helms. A cache of some 20,000 documents survives Helms's purge, as they are incorrectly stored in a financial-records building and discovered following a FOIA request in 1977. These documents are fully investigated during the Senate Hearings of 1977. HTLINGUAL and the NSA's Minaret programs are shut down to avoid exposure during the Weathermen trial. (Wikipedia, "MKUltra")

1973 — Dr. Joseph C. Sharp of Walter Reed Hospital in Bethesda, Maryland, while in a soundproof room, allegedly hears spoken words broadcast by "pulsed microwave audiogram." Broadcast in a range between 300 MHz to 3GHz, Sharp is able to identify words that are broadcast without any form of electronic translation device—by direct transmission to the brain. (Jim Keith, Mind Control, World Control: The Encyclopedia of Mind Control, 2014, p. 220)

1973 — The Midwest UFO Network changes its name to the Mutual UFO Network and focuses on building a national grassroots UFO investigation network.

1973 — David Duquesnoy founds the Association des Amis de Marc Thirouin in Valence, France, named in honor of the founder of the first UFO organization, Commission Internationale d'Enquêtes sur les Soucoupes Volantes, in France in 1951. It begins publishing UFO Informations, edited by Michel Dorier, in March 1974 and continues it through 1983. (UFO Informations, no. 1 (March 1974))

1973 — Suomen Ufotutkijat ry, the Finnish UFO Research Association, is founded in Tampere, Finland. Over the years it has published a Quarterly Report, an Annual Report, and a member newsletter Ufotutkija beginning in 1997 (now called Yhteydeksi). (Wikipedia, "Suomen Ufotutkijat"; The UFO Research of Finland Annual Report, 1981)

1973, Early January — 3:30 a.m. A family on holiday is driving along the Princes Highway near Sussex Inlet, New South Wales. The mother draws the attention of the others to a light ahead of them, which seems to move to the left then approach their car. It then reverses direction and takes up a parallel position in the direction they are driving for the next 15 miles. It seems very large and flying close to the ground. It now seems to be disc shaped with two red searchlights beneath it and a row of portholes. One of the witnesses, an army officer, sees some figures through the portholes. At a point near the turnoff to HMAS Albatross naval base at Nowra, the object suddenly vanishes, instantly relocating to a high altitude. It then moves in a large arc around Nowra and then heads out to sea, where it is lost to sight. Later that morning, one of the group investigates a disturbance at their campsite at Shoalhaven Heads. She joins a large number of holidaying campers at the ocean edge. The disturbance is apparently due to a number of helicopters passing low over the campsite, heading out to sea. She observes the helicopters above a fiery mass in the water. She thinks that this object is UFO-related and that the helicopters are involved in an attempted retrieval. They report the sighting to HMAS Albatross and are told that the base radar had been affected by the UFIO during the incident. (Bill Chalker, "The Great USO Show of Oz," TheOzFiles, August 26, 2022; Bill Chalker, "The Rising USO Tide," TheOzFiles, October 25, 2024)

1973, January 1? — After 12:00 midnight. A married couple is driving in Osorno, Chile, when their car stalls just as a disc-shaped object with flashing red and green lights flies overhead. The engine comes to life again after the object disappears. ("Shape-Changing UFO Stops Car," Flying Saucer Review 19, no. 3 (May/June 1973): 29)

1973, January 3 — NASA announces that Project NERVA has been terminated, even though the project to build a nuclear rocket has been proceeding well. Annie Jacobsen claims that some failed nuclear tests that have never been declassified could have been responsible. (Wikipedia, "NERVA"; Jacobsen, Area 51, pp. 311–313)

1973, January 11 — 9:00 a.m. Building surveyor Peter Day is driving near Cuddington, Bucks, England, when he sees an orange light in the north, moving eastwards. He finds a convenient place to stop, wind down the window, and point his movie camera at the object. He captures 20 seconds of the orange blob on color film as it pulsates and passes behind distant trees before disappearing suddenly (in a single frame). A schoolyard full of children in nearby Chilton also see the silent, orange object, and one of the teachers, driving to school near Ickford, also sees the object "like a giant beachball in the sky." Kodak laboratories in Hemel Hempstead examine the film and they declare is has not been tampered with. Kodak then brings together some atmospheric scientists to determine whether the object is ball lightning; they conclude it is not, but they do not know what it is. (Jenny Randles, UFO Conspiracy, Cassell, 1987, pp. 160–161; Jenny Randles, Fire in the Sky: Case History Number 2, The Buckinghamshire UFO Movie Film, BUFORA, 1989)

1973, January 19 — 11:25 p.m. A young man is traveling south on State Highway 18 about 13 miles south of Gaffney, South Carolina, when he sees some flashing colored lights in the road ahead. Moving closer, he sees the lights are on a domed disc sitting in the middle of the road and surrounded by a dozen men, each wearing white coveralls with buttons, buckles, and belts. Each has jet black hair and white gloves. The figures seem to waver, as if through a haze of heat. The object is about 15 feet wide, supported by three legs or struts, and glowing a dark yellow. A ladder extends from a door at the bottom, which is curved like a plate. The flashing multicolored lights are arranged in a band at the base of the dome. The youth turns left on a secondary road and drives away. ("Youth Claims 'Saucer' Landed on Highway 18," Gaffney (S.C.) Ledger, January 26, 1973, pp. 1–2)

1973, January 28 — 6:35 p.m. Seven schoolchildren watch a domed, semicircular object as it hovers above a pond near Knights Grange farm in Winsford, Cheshire, England. ("Schoolgirls Spot Mystery in Sky," Manchester (UK) Evening News, February 8, 1973, via UFO Newsclipping Service, no. 48 (April 1973): 13)

1973, January 30 — After 9:00 p.m. APRO Field Investigator Bill Rogers is driving in Lexington, Alabama, with two companions to look into UFO sightings in the area. Along State Highway 101, he sees a yellow-orange-to-white light moving slowly at treetop level a mile to his right. They get out of the car and study the light with binoculars. After one minute, the light moves up about 40 feet and they see it has an ellipsoidal shape. It then descends as if to land, and the three return to the car and head toward the UFO, which moves behind a hill. One second later it becomes visible again, and Rogers's Geiger counter gives a reading of 400 volts and 250 milliroentgens. When it goes back behind the hill, the Geiger counter reading goes back to normal. This sequence repeats several times with the same readings. The fifth time the object descends, the glow goes out. ("Flap in Alabama," APRO Bulletin, January/February 1973, pp. 11–12)

1973, February 2 — Richard Helms is abruptly dismissed and James R. Schlesinger is named director of central intelligence.

1973, February 2 — 3:02 p.m. Captain Peter Telling is flying a Grand Commander aircraft at 10,000 feet near the radio beacon near Ōhura, North Island, New Zealand, when he thinks he has a fire in the starboard engine. He is assessing the situation when a sphere of intense bluish-white light more than 20 feet in diameter appears about 90 feet away, its brilliant light illuminating the cockpit. The brightness of the light is "much like a welding arc." The object paces his plane for 20–25 seconds, then accelerates and speeds away. While the UFO is near the aircraft, its automatic direction finder and both the gyroscopic and magnetic compasses spin wildly at a speed of about 12 rpm. All directional equipment remains nonfunctional until the plane passes near Whanganui. (NICAP, "Sphere Illuminates Cabin, Instruments Malfunction"; UFOEv II 131–132; Richard F. Haines and Dominique F. Weinstein, A Preliminary Study of Fifty Seven Pilot Sighting Reports Involving Alleged Electro-Magnetic Effects on Aircraft Systems, NARCAP Technical Report no. 3, April 5, 2001, p. 25)

1973, February 3 — 12:00 midnight. Samuel Faria is reading a magazine at his home in Vila Velha, Espírito Santo, Brazil, when he hears a strange chirping sound coming from the garden. He wakes his aunt, Mrs. De Souza, the only other person in the house. Together, they look through the window into the garden and see a yellowish light close to the house, along with several points of light about 20 feet above the ground. They also hear the sound of voices. A knock at the door follows, and fearing it might be a thief, Faria steps into the garden while his aunt switches on the kitchen light. Once outside, he sees a luminous, orange-colored ring hovering about 65 feet above his uncle's radio ham mast, lighting up the garden as if it is midday. The ring, approximately 6.5 feet in diameter, emits intense heat, like a furnace. Panicked, Faria runs back inside. Through a window, he sees what looks like smoke drifting toward the Penha Convent, about 500 feet away. Mrs. De Souza calls a neighbor for help. The neighbor rushes over and they inspect the garden but find the object has disappeared. However, they discover that the radio antenna is severed cleanly, as if cut with scissors. On March 11, Faria reports a second encounter involving an attempted abduction. In May 1974, he a has third encounter involving a humanoid. 1973, February 8 — 4:45 p.m. Richard Coimbra and Kurt Huettner, both 15, are taking Polaroid photographs for a class project in Conejo, California, when they notice a rotating disc-shaped object that remains visible for 30 seconds until it disappears behind trees and clouds. They estimate it is about 88 feet up and one-half to three-quarters of a mile away. They obtain one exposure, which shows a tree line in the foreground. The images measures almost exactly two millimeters in width. It shows an apparent domed disc with a bright spot of light on the underside, with a ratio of 4:1 of length to width. Analysis suggests that the object is no less than 1,000 feet from the camera, at which distance its diameter would be 18 feet; however, a distance of 2,000 feet is considered more likely, and the diameter would then be 36 feet. ("They Did Indeed See Something," Thousand Oaks (Calif.) News-Chronicle, March 20, 1973, p. 5; "Conejo Photo Similar to Others," Skylook, no. 78 (May 1974): 1, 6–7; UFOEv II 291–292)

1973, February 9 — 3:00 a.m. Jim Sutcliffe is driving along the A414 road between Hemel Hempstead and St. Albans, England, when he sees a large, glowing ball hovering 20–30 feet above a field about 300 feet to one side of the road. Other cars have stopped to watch the object. Suddenly it shoots straight up and vanishes. Another witness's car engine cuts out as he approaches the area but starts again after the object departs. 1973, February 13 — Night. A UFO flies above the car of a couple driving through Draytonville, South Carolina, at about twice the height of a utility pole. The object is so close that the man exclaims, "Well, this is it! They're going to pick us up!" As it passes over, the car radio goes dead. ("What Are They Seeing Up There in the Sky?" Gaffney (S.C.) Ledger, February 23, 1973, pp. 1–2)

1973, February 14 — 2:30 a.m. Captain Jim Wheeler and copilot Jerry Maria are flying an unscheduled DC-8 charter cargo flight about 40 miles east of McAlester, Oklahoma, when Maria notices what he first thinks is another aircraft just below the leading edge of the right wing about 5,000 feet away. The object is on the same course and speed, keeping a constant position. Only its steady amber light seems unconventional. Suddenly the object rises straight up like an elevator, makes a sharp turn, and approaches the plane, taking up a position about 900 feet away and slightly above them. It is disc-shaped with a transparent dome on top, its silvery, highly polished surface reflecting the moonlight. Besides some stubby protrusions, no other features are visible. Wheeler switches on the weather radar, and it confirms that something real and solid is there. When the radar beam hits its surface, the object reacts immediately, ascending straight up, then moving sideways over the DC-8 and briefly out of sight. The object reappears quickly, descending straight down and taking up a new position just below the leading edge of the left wing. It then drops below and behind the plane, abruptly reappearing only about 300 feet below them. Looking down into the dimly lit dome, the pilots see two or three shadowy entities moving around. The object then darts out in front and performs various oscillatory motions and another sharp turn before speeding out of sight. It disappears off the radar scope at a distance of 50 miles. 1973, February 19 — President Richard Nixon meets on the 18th green of the Inverness (Florida) Golf and Country Club with entertainer Jackie Gleason. Gleason has long been a fan of UFOs. He later becomes a subscriber to the newsletter Just Cause (Citizens Against UFO Secrecy). Gleason has a collection of 1,700 books on parapsychology, UFOs, and the unknown. Gleason's second wife, Beverly McKittrick, says that Nixon took Gleason to a heavily secured area at Homestead AFB [now Homestead Air Reserve Base] in Miami-Dade County where he views the remains of small aliens in a top secret repository. McKittrick relates this story in an unpublished manuscript of Gleason called "The Great One." Larry Bryant, editor of Just Cause, the newsletter Gleason had a subscription to, files a Freedom of Information Act request with Homestead AFB. Bryant requests documentation on the repository and Gleason's visit there to see the alien bodies. Homestead replies that "no such records existed." Bryant also sends an advertisement to the Homestead AFB newspaper soliciting information. The public affairs officer at Homestead denounces the Bryant advertisement and "forbade its publication." At the same time Bryant writes Gleason providing him with a draft affidavit. He asks Gleason to execute the affidavit so it can be used as part of a growing accumulation of evidence Bryant is collecting in preparation for taking the government to court to release all information on alien crash retrievals. Gleason does not reply. Shortly before his death in 1987, one story says Gleason confirms the story about seeing the bodies at Homestead. The person who Jackie Gleason tells the story to is Larry Warren, who is a member of the Air Force Security Police at RAF Bentwaters [now closed] near Woodbridge, Suffolk, one of two bases in England where in late December 1980, three days of bizarre UFO incidents take place. Warren says that Gleason and Nixon enter a room with 6–8 glass-topped freezers. Inside "were the mangled remains of what I took to be children." On closer inspection, he sees that some of the figures look old and injured. Gleason cannot sleep or eat for three weeks after the visit. The director of the Secret Service under President Clinton, Lewis C. Merletti, claims that the idea of a president escaping his secret service agents only happens in the movies. In response to a question by reporter Joan London about the possibility of the president escaping his protection to go out and secretly do something, Merletti claims, "all Hollywood. There's no sneaking out. It has never happened." Marty Venker, a Secret Service agent who worked with Merletti under Presidents Ford and Carter, however, tells a different story. In his book Confessions of an Ex-Secret Service Agent he explains that not only can the president disappear, but it has happened. Venker states that in the exact year of the Homestead incident with Gleason, 1973, Nixon tries to cut his secret service protection. Venker also states that it was not uncommon for Nixon to try to elude his Secret Service detail. The agents working on the Nixon presidential detail were warned about it. Nixon is familiar with Homestead AFB, which is only minutes from his Biscayne Bay compound. There is no proof that Nixon escorted Jackie Gleason to view alien bodies at Homestead, but everything checked out indicates it could very well have happened. It would have been very easy in terms of distance for the Gleason/Nixon alien event to have occurred. However, it is perhaps more likely that Gleason had been sneaking out on McKittrick for a liaison. 1973, February 20 — Night. A man is driving along Green River Road west of Gaffney, South Carolina, when he sees a bluish-gray light hovering near the road. It suddenly grows brighter, crosses the road, and disappears behind some trees. He hears a sizzing sound, like an acetylene torch, as it rises. ("What Are They Seeing Up There in the Sky?" Gaffney (S.C.) Ledger, February 23, 1973, pp. 1–2)

1973, February 21 — Night. Clearwater High School basketball coach Reggie Bone and five players on his team are driving back to Clearwater after a game. On US Highway 60 near Ellsinore, Missouri, Bone notices a "bright shaft of light beaming down out of the sky." A few miles later, near Brushy Creek, student Randal Holmes notices another light, and Bone pulls over for a closer look. They see lights about 600 feet away from the road hovering over an open field at about 400 feet altitude. The lights seem to be portholes, each a different color: red, green, amber, and white. According to student Cary Barks, they watch it for 10 minutes before the lights rise up noiselessly and disappear over a hill. Around 10:00 p.m., Edith Boatwright of nearby Mill Spring sees a similar object flying low near her farmhouse. 1973, March — NASA engineer Josef F. Blumrich writes The Spaceships of Ezekiel, asserting that the biblical prophet Ezekiel's metaphorical vision of angelic creatures accompanied by wheels drawing God's chariot is actually an account of an extraterrestrial spacecraft. 1973, March 2 — Schlesinger appoints William Colby head of the CIA's clandestine branch.

1973, March 19–20 — Geologists Elwood Wright and Pat Kenney make nighttime observations of the phantom lights from March 14 to 20 on Mitchell Flats near Marfa, Texas, and again on June 15–16. They keep a log of their observations, noting distances, landmarks, and times that the lights are seen. Although some observations are attributable to ranch lights and car headlights, on other occasions the lights maneuver oddly, swinging in arcs, flying in loops, and reacting to the movements of the geologists' car. In these instances, the lights seem to be displaying intelligence. 1973, March 20 — 7:15 p.m. Lucie Vandervoort is looking out a window of her house in Tarcienne, Belgium, when she sees a bright light approaching. It passes over the roof of a nearby house, then banks, makes a 90° turn, and begins to blink as it disappears to the east. Similar objects appear every 10 minutes, continuing until 9:15 p.m. The objects' slow speed allows her to take photos. At one point she looks through her late husband's World War I trench periscope and sees a humanoid figure dressed in shiny, tight-fitting clothes and standing in the front of one of the objects. Only one photo turns out and shows a squarish light against a dark sky. Analysis suggests that the objects were probably aircraft taking off from the military base at Florennes a few miles away, the humanoid figure was imaginary, and the photo was a blurry streetlight. 1973, March 21 — 9:00 p.m. Jean Coleman and Cathy Leach are driving across the dam at Clearwater Lake, Missouri, when an object with a reddish glow surfaces from the lake. It is disc-shaped and rises silently, soaring over a mountaintop. ("Mysterious Lights Keep Piedmont in the Dark," *St. Louis (Mo.) 1973, Late March — 1:30 a.m. University of New England student Graham E. stops to relieve himself along the Bundarra Road near a university ionosphere research receiver in the vicinity of Mount Butler, New South Wales, when he sees 5–6 lights moving slowly in an arc for about 5 minutes. Suddenly, they break formation out of the arc, form a straight line, and speed away to the south. (Clark IV 915)

1973, March 24 — Around 1:15 a.m. Five flat yellow lights are seen traveling in a loose V or arc formation from south to north above Rozelle, Sydney, New South Wales. (Clark IV 915)

1973, March 24 — 7:30 a.m. Arthur de Weerdt is watching a distant airliner in Borgerhout, Belgium, when he notices another sunlit object pacing the aircraft at a higher altitude. Suddenly the object stops and remains motionless for about one minute, then moves at a greater speed, making an angle of 70° before coming to another wobbling halt for about 8 minutes. De Weerdt manages to take a color photograph of the object, which shows a whitish spot. Ballester Olmos and van Utrecht suspect the witness saw a weather balloon and that the photo is the result of a development flaw. (Vicente-Juan Ballester Olmos and Wim van Utrecht, Belgium in UFO Photographs, Volume 1 (1950–1988), FOTOCAT Report no. 7, 2017, pp. 183–196)

1973, March 27 — 12:15 a.m. A man is driving south on Interstate 95 after finishing work at Rhode Island Hospital in Providence, Rhode Island, when he notices a round, orange-red glowing object flying parallel to his car, about 200–300 feet in the air. Maintaining a speed of 55 mph, he sees the object keeping pace with him. Suspecting it might be a reflection in his windshield, he stops his car and steps out. The object halts ahead of him, pulsing silently. Hearing no sound, he gets back into his car and resumes driving. The object continues alongside him for another 15 miles before suddenly veering off and flying west near the State Highway 138 Kingston interchange. 1973, March 27 — 10:20 p.m. Over Highway 21 in Waltham, Massachusetts, a mushroom or jellyfish-shaped object glows white as it hovers and dims, leaving behind blinking white lights. It then streaks away and disappears within seconds. (Raymond Fowler, UFOs: Interplanetary Visitors, Bantam, 1979, p. 357)

1973, March 28 — 7:00 p.m. Two witnesses see an object with a rough triangular shape hovering at about 200 feet above trees on Stony Lane in Exeter, Rhode Island. It glows with brilliant white lights and has smaller green and red lights at the points of the triangle. The object makes a slight buzzing sound as it moves away. ("Flap over Rhode Island," APRO Bulletin 21, no. 6 (May/June 1973): 9)

1973, April — Scottish author Duncan Lunan claims he has identified and deciphered a hidden radio message sent as long delayed echoes by an alien space probe that had been detected in 1927. Published along with an accompanying editorial disclaimer, Lunan maintains that the putative message comes from an object at the L5 point in the same orbit as the Moon, sent by the inhabitants of a planet orbiting Epsilon Boötis. He says the message reads, "Start here. Our home is Epsilon Boötis, which is a double star. We live on the sixth planet of seven, coming from the sun, which is the larger of the two. Our sixth planet has one moon. Our fourth planet has three. Our first and third planets each have one. Our probe is in the position of Arcturus, known in our maps." ("Spaceprobe from Epsilon Boötis," Spaceflight 15, no. 4 (April 1973); Duncan Lunan, Man and the Stars: Contact and Communication with Other Intelligence, Souvenir, 1974)

1973, April — Southeast Missouri State University physics professor Harley Rutledge hears of numerous reports of unidentified lights in the sky around Piedmont, Missouri, and decides to subject these reports to scientific analysis. He puts together a large team of observers (the main participants are electronics engineer James Sage, astronomer Milton Ueleke, and several students) with college training in the physical sciences, including a large array of equipment at 158 different viewing stations: binoculars, RF spectrum analyzers, Questar telescopes, low-high frequency audio detectors, an electromagnetic frequency analyzer, cameras, sound recorders, Geiger counters, and a galvanometer to measure variations in the Earth's gravitational field. The resulting Project Identification commences in April, logging several hundred hours of observation time and 157 documented sightings over the next seven years. This is the first UFO scientific field study, able to monitor the phenomena in real-time, enabling Rutledge to calculate the objects' actual velocity, course, position, distance, and size. Observation of the unclouded night sky often reveals "pseudostars"—stationary lights camouflaged by familiar constellations. Some objects appear to mimic the appearance of known aircraft; others violate the laws of physics. The most startling discovery is that on at least 32 recorded occasions, the movement of the lights synchronize with actions of the observers. They appear to respond to a light being switched on and off, and to verbal or radio messages. Rutledge publishes a final report, Project Identification, on his field research in 1981. 1973, April 9 — Physicist Peter A. Sturrock mails questionnaires to all 1,175 members of the San Francisco, California, Chapter of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics asking their opinions on the UFO phenomenon. He receives 423 responses from scientists who have seen things they thought could be UFOs. (Peter A. Sturrock, "UFO Reports from AIAA Members," Astronautics and Aeronautics 12 (May 1974): 60–64)

1973, April 10 — 9:00 p.m. Anne Marie DeBlasi is driving west on US Highway 1 near South Kingstown, Rhode Island, when she notices an orange-red object moving slowly from the north. About one mile further down the road, it passes directly above her car, and the lights and ignition begin to falter. It then flies off to the west low over the trees. It now seems to be a full 42 feet wide, yellowish-orange with a green vapor or haze around it. ("Flap over Rhode Island," APRO Bulletin 21, no. 6 (May/June 1973): 9)

1973, April 22 — 10:00 p.m. Antonio Pérez Cumbre, 19, is driving on the A-432 road north of Cazalla de la Sierra, Seville, Spain, when he sees a row of four round yellow lights on the other side of a ravine about 980 feet ahead. The two lights on the left are about 3 feet in diameter, about twice the size of the two on the right. He stops and flashes his headlights, and suddenly one of the larger lights generates a bright-violet stripe of light. Pérez turns his car around to flee, but the lights silently pass him on the left. At this point the motor of his SEAT 600 fails. The motor starts again when the lights are completely gone. Later, he sees the lights again hovering 33 feet above the road, and he drives right under them. Still later, he encounters the lights only 3 feet above the road. As he approaches, his headlights seem to be absorbed and do not stretch any further than the object. Pérez accelerates and tries to ram the lights, but when he gets about 80 feet away from them, the object moves rapidly away across the valley to the east-northeast. A couple of days later, two yellow burn marks 30 feet apart are found on the ground where the lights were first seen. 1973, April 27 — Ingo Swann, in a remote-viewing experiment at Stanford Research Institute, concentrates on the Pioneer 10 space probe on its way to Jupiter. Monitored by Harold Puthoff and Russell Targ, Swann yields 13 specific factors about Jupiter, none of which are scientifically anticipated—including the existence of a planetary ring. 1973, April 30 — Night. Four teenagers—Alan Wilcox, Ian Hudson, Patricia Flanagan, and Sue Yabsley—are driving south along the South West Rocks Road between Kinchela and Gladstone, New South Wales, Australia, when they notice an egg-shaped yellow and green object descending swiftly from the sky and disappearing behind some trees. After driving another 600 feet, Yabsley sees a distant glow in a paddock about one mile to the east. Wilcox turns the car around and returns to get a better look, but the headlights black out momentarily. They can see the object, about 3 feet above the ground; it now looks helmet-shaped and is changing colors. They watch it for 5 minutes, then go back to the road and drive home. (Eileen Buckle, "Is Kempsey a UFO 'Window'?" Flying Saucer Review 21, no. 6 (April 1976): 4)

1973, May — A series of meetings takes place between USAF representatives (Col. William T. Coleman and Col. George Weinbrenner) and two well-connected Hollywood figures: documentarist Robert Emenegger and producer Allan Sandler. The colonels encourage the pair to make a documentary on the UFO phenomenon and the question of extraterrestrial life. Not only will they have the military's full cooperation, they will also have access to their files, including those of the Department of Defense. Upon arriving at Norton Air Force Base [now San Bernardino, California, International Airport] the two men are immediately taken to a "clean room used by the CIA," designed so that "there was no way anyone could eavesdrop" on events taking place inside. Here the proposal takes place, including the promise of using 3,200 feet of a May 1971 UFO landing footage at Holloman AFB, New Mexico, that shows several of the "alien visitors" and their meeting with the representatives from the US government. Paul Shartle, chief of requirements for the Norton AFB audiovisual program, promises to get the Holloman footage. Emenegger is told that the military is monitoring signals from an alien group that their extraterrestrial visitors know nothing about. At the last minute, permission to use the film is withdrawn, though Emenegger and Sandler are encouraged to describe the Holloman landing as something that might happen in the future or could have happened. Emenegger goes to Wright-Patterson AFB in Ohio to talk to Weinbrenner, who while haranguing about the need to find out about Soviet Mig-25s, hands Emenegger a signed copy of Hynek's The UFO Experience. (presidentialufo.com, "Disclosure Pattern 1972–75"; Linda Moulton Howe, An Alien Harvest: Further Evidence Linking Animal Mutilations and Human Abductions to Alien Life Forms, Howe Productions, 2d ed., 2014, pp. 137–139; Clark III 357; Clark IV 401)

1973, May — Night. Judy Doraty and her family encounters a UFO along a road near Houston, Texas. She undergoes a period of missing time, and later she is plagued with anxieties, fears, and headaches. In 1978, she undergoes hypnosis and comes to believe she has hidden memories of the encounter. In sessions with R. Leo Sprinkle, she remembers seeing, while in an out-of-body state, two gray-skinned aliens cutting up a squirming calf inside the UFO. (Linda Moulton Howe, An Alien Harvest: Further Evidence Linking Animal Mutilations and Human Abductions to Alien Life Forms, Howe Productions, 2d ed., 2014, pp. 50–61; Clark III 136; Clark IV 163)

1973, May 9 — James R. Schlesinger orders all CIA officials to report on any activities that "might be construed to be outside the legislative charter of this Agency." The CIA Office of the Inspector General compiles these into a 693-page report on "potential flap activities," including surveillance of journalists, Operation Chaos, MKUltra, and mail interception. These come to be known as the Family Jewels. (Wikipedia, "Family Jewels (Central Intelligence Agency")

1973, May 18 — Two men at Miliscola Beach, Bacoli, Naples, Italy, see a bright disc with a dome 165 feet away over the sea. It hovers at a height of 10 feet and then moves closer. Their car engine and lights fail. The dome is bright like a white neon light, and a red light is rotating around it. After 3–4 minutes, the object lifts off and the car can be restarted. (Herbert S. Taylor, "An Update on Vehicle Interference Reports, Part Two," IUR 34, no. 1 (Sept. 2011): 20)

1973, May 19 — Strange, nylon-like patterns are seen in the sky above Gawler, South Australia. After falling, they vaporize when touched. (Keith Basterfield, "Angel Hair: An Australian Perspective," IUR 27, no. 1 (Spring 2002): 7)

1973, May 22 — 3:00 a.m. Onilson Pátero, an organizer of public libraries for the State of São Paulo, Brazil, is just outside Catanduva, after giving a ride to a stranger. First his car radio gets static and the engine begins to fail. Suddenly he notices a blue circle of light about 8 inches in diameter moving around inside his car. It passes in front of the dashboard and he sees it is transparent. Then a beam of blue light shines on him from the top of the hill he is driving up. He pulls over to avoid a collision, but the light keeps coming toward him. Overcome by a sensation of heat and stuffiness, he steps out of the car and hears a buzzing noise. The UFO is a gray structure about 25 feet thick and 36 feet wide, resembling two soup plates attached rim to rim. A tube stretches out from its base toward the ground. Pátero panics and runs about 100 feet when something holds him back. Turning, he sees that a rod of blue light from the UFO is moving above his car. The light seems to make the car transparent, allowing him to see the contents of the trunk, the wheel gears, the engine, and the interior of the body. Pátero faints. An hour later, two young men drive by and see him lying on the ground in gushing rainwater. They speed on into Catanduva and return with a policeman, Clóvis Queiros. Turning Pátero over, he regains consciousness and they take him to the hospital, where he is soon released. However, the next day he feels an itchiness on his back and stomach. Irritated patches of his skin turn purplish blue. Later, these spots turn yellow and eventually disappear. Subsequent medical examinations show no cause for the discoloration, and Pátero seems in good mental health. He experiences another encounter on April 26, which some investigators think might be a fantasy. 1973, May 22 — Truck driver Miguel Angel Gonzalez is driving from Tinajas to Tierra Blanca, Veracruz, Mexico, with a load of asbestos, steel, and concrete when he is forced to pull over because of an engine problem. When he gets out of the cab, he sees some very short men barring the road. He walks toward them, and they run off into the brush on one side of the road. When he returns to the truck, he finds it on fire. The blaze destroys the truck except for a few bits of metal sheeting, glass, and molten metal. 1973, May 24 — 7:10 p.m. About 50 people witness a large illuminated oval object moving at a slight angle above Long Reef Headland near Sydney, New South Wales. One woman claims it looks like it ascended from the ocean, where there have been reports of a stationary submarine object at the entrance to the Dee Why lagoon. (Bill Chalker, "The Great USO Show of Oz," TheOzFiles, August 26, 2022; Bill Chalker, "The Rising USO Tide," TheOzFiles, October 25, 2024)

1973, May 24 — 9:20 p.m. Harley Rutledge and three other members of his Project Identification team at the municipal airport in Farmington, Missouri, see a configuration of four lights (white, red, red, white) flying silently overhead at an altitude of about 2,500 feet. Through binoculars, Rutledge can see the white lights reflecting off a metallic structure that could be anywhere from 368 to 2,600 feet across. The array moves quickly out of sight. (Harley D. Rutledge, Project Identification: The First Scientific Field Study of UFO Phenomena, Prentice-Hall, 1981, pp. 77–99)

1973, May 27 — 2:00 a.m. A Mrs. Geni, 57, is preparing some wedding cake at her home in São José do Rio Preto, São Paulo, Brazil. Through her balcony window she sees a reflection of some kind in her walled-in backyard. When she goes to her porch door, she sees a flying object hovering above the roof of one of the rented buildings on the ground floor in the back some 50 feet away. The object is white-metallic and luminous on the bottom, about 6.5–13 feet wide and 3–6 feet high, with a kind of credenza behind which three entities can be seen. They are small with large round heads, big eyes, protruding lips, dark brown skin, small ears, long flat noses, small arms, and wearing a cap with a ball in the center. Each holds a device like a flashlight that emits a beam of different colors: green on the left, red in the middle, and orange on the right. The object emits a noise like a motor as it sways above the building, then after a few minutes it moves away beyond the horizon. Mrs. Geni goes back to work, but she now has pains in her knees, legs, and head. She screams in pain, and the young woman who rents the building in the back arrives to help. She also has heard the motor noise and confirms that Mrs. Geni's face is swollen with bloodshot eyes that last for 3 days. At about 5:00 a.m., Mrs. Geni suffers a prolapsed uterus, for which she has to undergo surgery on June 8. She gradually loses hearing in her right ear, her vision deteriorates, and spots appear on her skin. A clock in the kitchen begins to behave erratically. In the backyard, a dwarf coconut palm and a jabuticabeira tree (Plinia cauliflora) both lose their leaves prematurely. 1973, May or June — 11:00 p.m.. Lance Corporal Mike Perrin and another soldier named Carvell from Catterick Garrison, North Yorkshire, England, are participating in a radio exercise on Bellerby Moor about 15 miles to the southwest. Perrin parks his Land Rover on the side of a small road to await instructions. The two-way radio begins to crackle, the voices break up, and the set goes completely dead. The headlights also fade and go out. They try switching channels to no avail. Perrin is about the start up the Land Rover when he sees a strange aircraft above and to the left. It flies silently toward them and stops about 328 feet away, hovering 10 feet above the ground. The object is shaped like a rugby ball and has a row of small circular windows through which white lights are flashing. Vapor seems to be issuing from the bottom, and a buzzing sound emanates from it. They notice that a nearby herd of cows seems frozen on the spot. After 5–10 minutes, the object ascends silently and disappears over the woods. The headlights and radio start working again. The next afternoon, they return to the spot and find a burned circle of grass about 30 feet across. (Barry M. King, "Soldiers' Close Encounter on a Yorkshire Moor," Flying Saucer Review 24, no. 1 (June 1978): 23–24)

1973, June — Northwestern University Ph.D candidate Michael Kelly Schutz completes a dissertation in sociology after observing the meetings and interviewing members of four UFO groups in the Chicago area. While some offer a personal message of enlightenment, others seek mainly to offer a platform for paid UFO speakers, while still others envision themselves as investigators. What all the groups share is a commitment to providing a comfortable setting for socializing and support. (Michael Kelly Schutz, Organizational Goals and Support-Seeking Behavior: A Comparative Study of Social Movement Organizations in the UFO (Flying Saucer) Field, Ph.D diss., Northwestern University, June 1973; Eghigian, After, pp. 242–243)

1973, June — Eduardo Calle is driving along a country road near Orense, Buenos Aires, Argentina, when his engine fails. He gets out to inspect and sees a bright round object rise up from a nearby field and vanish at immense speed. Police find a round hole and scorched grass in the field. Fungi of an unfamiliar species are beginning to grow on the spot. (La Crónica (Buenos Aires), June 1973; "Tres Arroyos Round-up," Flying Saucer Review 19, no. 6 (April 1974): 29)

1973, June — According to an informant of Leonard H. Stringfield, a UFO is shot down by a surface-to-air missile from a US Navy destroyer in the Pacific Ocean between Hawaii and the mainland after it is tracked on radar and makes three passes close to the ship. The object falls into water that is about 350 feet deep and is retrieved by a Glomar Explorer, shipped to Hawaii, then sent stateside and finally to Chicago. The informant, an instructor in Gunnery School at the Naval Station Great Lakes in Lake County, Illinois, is assigned to guard the object in a Quonset hut in September 1973, with orders not to let anyone nearer than 300 feet. He glimpses it one time, and it appears to be a metallic, teardrop-shaped craft, 30 feet long and 10 feet high, "with a flange running along its topside from one end to the other." (Leonard H. Stringfield, UFO Crash Retrievals: Status Report III, Amassing the Evidence, The Author, June 1982, p. 89)

1973, June 4 — 2:00 a.m. Jill Cotmore wakes up in her home near Tyringham, New South Wales, with an uneasy feeling. She lights a cigarette and the room is immediately engulfed in a bright light, even though the windows have heavy curtains. It is so bright that she can't even see a cupboard 3 feet away from her. Outside, her horse is going berserk. Suddenly, the light is gone. The next day, she finds the horse frothing, and it had apparently been running around the house during the night. This takes place in the middle of a concentration of UFO reports in the area. (Bill Chalker, "An Australian Chronicle, Part Two," APRO Bulletin, June 1976, p. 4)

1973, June 19 — 7:12 p.m. Physicist Harley Rutledge sees a dull gray object flying slowly near his house in Cape Girardeau, Missouri. It has no wings or tail and is shaped like a stubby bullet. It changes to an olive drab color. After he grabs his binoculars, it disappears. (Harley D. Rutledge, Project Identification, Prentice-Hall, pp. 139–140; Covert 56, 70)

1973, June 25? — 6:30 p.m. Members of the Dorrington family watch a large disc-shaped UFO hovering above Bony Mountain, Queensland, for 15 minutes. The object is surrounded by a greenish glow and there is a rotating red light around its middle. A solid beam of V-shaped green light oscillates up and down more than a dozen times before it retracts into the object. It disappears by moving straight down behind the mountain. (Clark IV 1217)

1973, June 28 — 12:30 a.m. University of Missouri animal care technician James G. Richards, 41, and his daughter Vanea, 16, hear a loud, persistent, thrashing sound outside their house trailer in Columbia, Missouri. Richards moves to the window and sees two bright, silver-white light beams about 5 feet apart from each other and 50 feet away from his window. The beams disappear, and a glowing bright oval form appears, about 12–15 feet in diameter, lighting up the area. The thrashing sound is apparently made by trees moving as if blown by wind, and after the oval form appears, this sound suddenly ceases. As Richards moves from window to window, he notices his dogs lying very still near the corner of the trailer that is nearest to the oval object. The dogs are large security animals that are not easily frightened. Richards thinks it strange they are not barking at all the noise and the bright lights. The object moves away to 200 feet from the window and hovers, and now, less bright to the eye, the witnesses can see a blue band of light and an orange glow extending around the outer edge of the oval. The oval moves back near its original position and disappears by growing smaller before police arrive at 1:45 a.m. Later searches uncover broken tree limbs, damaged foliage, scorched leaves up to a height of 35 feet, and impressions on the ground as deep as 2 feet. 1973, July — David Rockefeller founds the Trilateral Commission in Tokyo, Japan, to foster closer cooperation between Japan, Western Europe, and North America. It initiates its biannual meetings in October in Tokyo. (Wikipedia, "Trilateral Commission")

1973, July — Night. A college student working as a security guard on the island of Hokkaido, Japan, notices a brightly shining object to the north. It vanishes and reappears in a different spot, flashing a green light. Then it spirals downward and flies in an arc, coming down over the waters of a bay. It sucks up water through a prolonged, pipe-like protrusion. Next it flies to within 160 feet of the witness, who sees the shadow of three occupants in two windows. Four or five similar objects arrive and all enter a larger black craft, which then flies away to the north. (Jun-Ichi Takanashi, "Spherical Object off Japanese Coast Sucks up Sea-Water," Flying Saucer Review 21, no. 3/4 (November 1975): 54)

1973, July 7 — 10:00 p.m. A Mrs. Good is closing the curtains of her house at Porthcothan Bay, Cornwall, England, when she sees two dark semi-cigar-shaped objects hovering over the bay. They are positioned on either side of a glowing, symmetrical ring. After a few seconds, the ring enters the left object and the two shoot off at terrific speed upward. The remaining object follows the same path a short time afterward. She reports the sighting to the nearby RAF St. Mawgan, which explains the sighting as "sun dogs." (UFOFiles2, pp. 86–87)

1973, July 12–16 — A fire destroys some 16–18 million official military personnel records at the Military Personnel Records Center in Overland, Missouri. The losses to federal military records collection include 80% loss to records of US Army personnel discharged November 1, 1912, to January 1, 1960; 75% loss to records of US Air Force personnel discharged September 25, 1947, to January 1, 1964, with names alphabetically after Hubbard, James E.; and some US Army Reserve personnel who performed their initial active duty for training in the late 1950s but who received final discharge as late as 1964. None of the records have duplicate copies, nor are there microfilm copies. No index of these records was made prior to the fire. (Wikipedia, "National Personnel Records Center fire"; Kevin D. Randle, "Military Records," IUR 33, no. 4 (May 2011): 5)

1973, July 21 — 9:00 p.m. Yves Rinaldi is driving on the winding D139 road in Gavignano, Corsica, France. About 20 seconds after he passes another car on the steep incline, he feels paralyzed, the engine stops, the lights go out, and his radio dies. He feels overwhelmingly cold and his eyes are watering. Shooting up from the scrubland ahead of him is a bright object, spinning rapidly, that passes over his car and moves behind him. After it is gone, the engine starts up automatically without Rinaldi consciously reactivating it, the lights come on again, and the radio starts playing. (J. C. Dufour and P. de Lormont, "From Our Corsican Notebook, 1," Flying Saucer Review 23, no. 6 (April 1978): 31–32)

1973, July 25 — 1:35 p.m. A Canadian Pacific Air Lines DC-8 is flying west at 31,000 feet above the eastern coast of Baffin Island, Nunavut, when the pilot sees a "large balloon in close proximity" and radios air traffic control to report it. He says it is 200 feet in diameter and 3 miles away and has been paralleling their course for 5–6 minutes at a speed of 575 mph. (Chris Rutkowski, Canada's UFOs: Declassified, August Night, 2022, p. 89)

1973, July 26 — A secret US State Department airgram on "Guidance for Dealing with Space Objects Which Have Returned to Earth" refers to Project Moon Dust: "the designator MOONDUST is used in cases of non-US space objects or objects of unknown origin." (Christopher D. Allen, "Dubious Truth about the Roswell Crash," IUR 19, no. 3 (May/June 1994): 14)

1973, July 27 — A 16-year-old UFO buff finds and photographs some strange marks on the ground near Lago d'Idro, Brescia, Italy. In 1977 he undergoes hypnotic regression and realizes he has been touched by a human shape that makes him lose consciousness. When he wakes up he is being sucked into an aerial object through an opening at its base. He finds himself in a round room with four beings. Then a woman comes in and the entities begin moving around and touching him. He is paralyzed and can only move his eyes. He is then taken to another room and directed to sit on a chair as the UFO lands in the spot where he had been before. He then leaves the object and watches it take off. He picks up his camera and photographs the ground traces. (Paolo Fiorino, Gian Paolo Grassino, and Antonio Chiumiento, "Abductions in Italy," IUR 14, no. 4 (July/Aug. 1989): 15)

1973, August — A Minuteman ICBM missile launched from Vandenberg AFB [now Vandenberg Space Force Base] in Santa Barbara County, California, is descending in the Pacific Ocean near Kwajalein Atoll. Radar scanners at Kwajalein are tracking the nose cone, which has separated from the third stage. At about 400,000 feet, the operators find they are also tracking an object in the shape of an inverted saucer to the right and above the nose cone. It crosses the warhead's trajectory, then disappears below and to the left of it. The object is estimated to be 10 feet high and 40 feet long. ("No Explanation Found for 'Ghost Ships,'" St. Catharines (Ont.) Standard, July 17, 1974, p. 13; ClearIntent, pp. 69–70)

1973, August — 10:30 p.m. Three people are sitting in their front yard in West Seneca, New York, when they hear a low hum coming from an object above their garage. It is a silvery half-egg with glowing orange-and-blue overtones. It begins a slow descent toward the roof, and when it is only 5 feet away, one of the witnesses yells for it to stop. The object stops, hovers briefly, and shoots away straight upward. One of the witnesses hears the same hum at about the same time two days later, and the same object appears, moving down the street. The object is only 3–4 feet above the pavement and covers the width of the road. The witness approaches it, and it stops at the end of his driveway. He walks toward it and gets only 4–5 feet from it without feeling any heat. When his dog barks, he backs away. The object waits a moment, then slowly moves 20 feet down the street, quickly rises, and vanishes rapidly at a 45° angle. (Michael D. Swords, "Unusual Experiences from the Timmerman Files," IUR 27, no. 2 (Summer 2002): 23–24)

1973, Between August 3–6 — Night. A woman and her children are watching the stars in their backyard in San Antonio, Texas. Two "very perfect" cumulus clouds move into view low above them. A perfectly round sphere with a green glow slowly emerges from the top of the cloud on the left. Soon they see lightning going back and forth from the two clouds but never toward the ground. One lightning bolt hits the sphere and red sparks fly out, whereupon the sphere slowly reenters the cloud. The clouds remain stationary for 35–40 minutes until the sphere disappears, then they float on. (Herbert S. Taylor, "Mystery Clouds and the UFO Connection," IUR 29, no. 4 (July 2005): 18)

1973, August 12 — 12:30 a.m. Mr. M. Carr and several others experience slight mechanical trouble with their car near Broxburn, West Lothian, Scotland, as a fast-moving starlike object passes across the sky for 15 seconds. (D. N. Mansell, "Some Recent British UFO Reports," Awareness 2, no. 4 (Winter 1973): 16.

1973, Late August — A wave of UFO sightings begins to take place in the southeastern United States in August and reaches a nationwide peak in September and October, then moving on to Europe in the following two months. J. B. Delair notes an increase in landings, low-level flights, and UFO occupants. (Jacques Vallée, "The UFO Wave of 1973: Some Early Statistics," Flying Saucer Review 19, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1973): 15; J. B. Delair, "Synopsis of the Great World-Wide UFO Wave of 1973," The UFO Register 5, parts 1 and 2 (1974): 8–94; Eghigian, After, pp. 218–219)

1973, August 28 — 10:00 p.m. Journalists Titus Zăgrean and Ion Moise are driving near Budacu de Jos, Romania, when they see a big milky-white light in the sky approaching the road they are on. As it crosses the road, they see it is rotating and about 3 feet in diameter. Moving to the west, it veers sharply to the north, accelerates, changes color to yellow-orange then red, and departs at fantastic speed. (Romania 40)

1973, August 31 — After 12:00 midnight. In Dawson, Georgia, four US government workers stop a police patrol car on State Highway 118 and report seeing two weird objects in the sky. Dawson Police Capt. Rocky Wiggins and Patrolmen Larry Fincher and Gary Ellington see one bright UFO northeast of town and another southwest of town. The lights change colors from white to reddish orange to greenish-yellow. At 12:40, Wiggins calls the Georgia Highway Patrol in Albany, which contacts Naval Air Station Albany, which cannot see any lights or track anything on radar. Sometime between 1:30 a.m. and 2:45 a.m., two more objects are spotted to the northeast near the Lee County line. ("UFOs Invade Southwest Georgia Skies, But Depart Quietly," Albany (Ga.) Herald, August 31, 1973, via UFO Newsclipping Service, no. 53–54 (Sept./Oct. 1973): 19–20)

1973, August 31 — 1:00 a.m. Georgia State Trooper A. I. Cahill is with Sgt. Jerry Crawley and Officer John Harris and others on the Americus, Georgia, police department when they see a bright white light moving sporadically above South Lee Street toward the southeast. Another officer in Leesburg, Georgia, describes it as stationary with "round, with orange, red, green, and blue lights." Robert Welch, a police dispatcher in Camilla, Georgia, watches with seven others a light that hovers for 3.5 hours. ("Unidentified Flying Objects Viewed in Area," Americus (Ga.) Times-Recorder, August 31, 1973, via UFO Newsclipping Service, no. 53–54 (Sept./Oct. 1973): 1)

1973, August 31 — 1:00 a.m. Georgia State Patrolman William Revel and another patrolman are at Dawson Road near Ledo Road in Albany, Georgia, as they watch three UFOs maneuvering in the sky. They appear round and rapidly change colors from bright red to blue to yellow to green to a vivid orange. The largest object is the most active and seems to turn sideways and seems to acquire a "spur" on its left side. The two smaller objects remain on either side of the larger one. After 30 minutes, the smaller object to the right of the larger one moves straight up, stops, and resumes changing colors. A few minutes later, two more objects appear and shoot across the sky beneath the other three. By this time, the witnesses include Lee County law enforcement officials, an Albany city commissioner, and news reporter Suzanne Shingler, who writes that the objects are flashing like neon signs gone mad." Revel continues watching until 3:00 a.m. Reports begin to come in over the police car radio of objects, also changing colors rapidly, being seen all over southwest Georgia. Macon police on Hendley Street see two objects hovering above a sports field, while a fire department unit pursues a UFO as far as Interstate 75 near Hartley Bridge Road before losing it. 1973, September — Jenny Randles and David Rees found the Manchester Aerial Phenomena Investigation Team in the Greater Manchester area, England. It publishes the Skywatch newsletter through early 1982. (Skywatch, no. 1 (September 1973))

1973, September 3 — Early morning. Two policemen in Manchester, Georgia, spot a white, glowing object with blue lights speeding around the sky. Through binoculars, the object appears to have something hanging underneath it. ("UFOs Sighted over Georgia," San Francisco (Calif.) Examiner, September 3, 1973, p. 7; "Cylinder Identified," UFO Investigator, October 1973, p. 3)

1973, September 3 — Night. An unidentified man rushes into police headquarters in Athens, Georgia, and claims that a bright object with four flashing lights had swooped toward his car along a highway. The UFO nearly landed, descending to about 15 feet before it climbed up again. The police think he looks like he has "really seen something," but Lt. Col. Richard Davies, an information officer at Robins AFB east of Warner Robins, Georgia, tells the press that the recent reports are the first he's heard about in a while, but the Air Force is no longer investigating them. ("UFO Scares Heck out of Georgian," Lincoln (Nebr.) Journal Star, September 3, 1973, p. 21)

1973, September 4 — William Colby is named director of central intelligence to succeed James R. Schlesinger, who leaves on July 2 to become Secretary of Defense. (Wikipedia, "Director of Central Intelligence")

1973, September 8 — Night. Two military policemen, Spec/4 Bart J. Burns and Spec/4 Randy Shade, are on routine patrol at Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah, Georgia, when they see a shadowy object with flashing lights moving around in the distance. It is traveling rapidly east to west at an altitude of about 2,000 feet. After about 10 minutes, they see the object coming swiftly toward them at treetop level. It dives toward their car, passes closely above them, and forces them to drive into a ditch. It then hovers about 600 feet away, flashing blue, white, and amber lights as they struggle to get the car out of the ditch. The object disappears when they drive back to headquarters. ("GIs Say UFO Forced Patrol Car off Road," Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, September 9, 1973, p. 23-B; "Wave of Reports Hits Georgia," UFO Investigator, October 1973, p. 1; Randle, 1973, p. 14)

1973, September 9 — 4:30 a.m. A news team from WAGA-TV in Atlanta is interviewing UFO witnesses outside the Georgia State Patrol office in Manchester, Georgia, when someone notices two small "orbs of light" in the distance. One light dims and seems to move away, while the other becomes brighter and displays varying colors. Cameraman Daniel Keever takes about 90 seconds of 16mm color film of the second object. He waits 30 minutes as it hovers and makes another brief exposure. Although the footage merely shows a blob, one of the newsmen says the object looks cigar-shaped with shadow patterns on the surface. ("TV Crew Captures Strange Image," UFO Investigator, October 1973, pp. 1, 3)

1973, September 9 — Night. A deputy sheriff answers a call from Mrs. Hugh D. Beall in Griffin, Georgia, about an object hovering above her house at tree-top level. She says the object is making a funny noise and has gold, red, and green lights on the bottom. The deputy investigates and sees "two red lights descending slowly to earth." Then the lights disappear. ("UFO Chases Military Police," Mount Airy (N.C.) News, September 11, 1973, via UFO Newsclipping Service, no. 53–54 (Sept./Oct. 1973): 8)

1973, September 11 — Chilean President Salvador Allende is overthrown by the armed forces and national police in a coup d'état with the covert support of the CIA. (Wikipedia, "United States intervention in Chile")

1973, September 14 — 2:00 a.m. Roy Lawhorn wakes up in his home in Brooks, Georgia, to a sound like buzzing locusts and a bright light outside his window. He grabs his rifle because the lights looks like it is approaching. He shoots at it 3-4 times, but the light "disappeared into the ground." It leaves a charred spot in the dirt road about 30 feet from the house. Oscar E. Anderson, a soil specialist at the University of Georgia's Agricultural Experiment Station in Griffin, examines the site and notes markings that cover an area 1 foot long by 6–8 inches wide. Underneath the top layer of soil is a wide area of charred earth and organic matter. ("'The Devil': Frightened Farmer Shoots at UFO," Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, September 18, 1973, p. 1)

1973, September 17 — 9:00 p.m. Anne Taylor is walking to her farm in Romford, Essex, England, after walking her three dogs when she sees a green light near the cowshed. She continues watching the light, which starts moving toward her slowly. Her two terriers are whining and cringing. The light approaches to within a few feet of her, about 12 feet above the ground. It is completely silent. Her watch has stopped, and her spine begins to tingle. She hears a jet plane in the distance, and the light goes out. She hears an "electric whirring" and the green ball shoots straight up. Her dogs return to normal behavior, and her watch starts up again when she returns to the house. (UFOFiles2, p. 86)

1973, September 23 — 5:00 a.m. A truck driver is driving to work near Tyler, Texas, when a small "cub airplane" seems to fly directly in front of another car on the highway, nearly causing a wreck. The plane flies up over the side of the road and hovers above some trees. Then it changes into a cigar shape with lights. The driver gets out of his truck to watch. The cigar moves off then returns with a new, round shape. It lights up with many multicolored lights and moves above a nearby house. It makes a low, "loop-loop-loop" thumping sound. Then a large, bright, square light descends and swings from the other object. It approaches the truck, then swings back and forth. He tries to jump back in the truck but apparently passes out. He later notices he has some marks on his hip and shoulder. He does remember seeing the UFO change from a round shape into a triangle, and then move out of sight. (Michael D. Swords, "Unusual Experiences from the Timmerman Files," IUR 27, no. 2 (Summer 2002): 24; Michael D. Swords, "Timmerman's Triangles," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 17)

1973, September 23 — 8:41 p.m. After a local resident reports seeing a UFO hovering above the Tennessee Highway Patrol office at 6348 Summer Avenue in Memphis, Tennessee, deputies Philip L. Pilalas and J. O. Davis investigate and see the object as well. They describe it as a large fixed-wing aircraft flying at 500–1,000 feet with steady white and red lights on each wing. Thinking it is a police helicopter, they flash their spotlight at it. The object flashes back with its white lights. But when the deputies turn on their car's blue lights to see what reaction they get, the object douses all its lights and vanishes with a humming noise. This is followed by a 2-minute unexplained blackout on one of their radio frequencies. Other UFOs are seen in East Memphis and Frayser the remainder of the night. ("Many Report UFO in Shelby County," Memphis (Tenn.) Press-Scimitar, September 24, 1973, p. 16)

1973, September 24 (approximately) — Rose Williamson, her father, and her sister are allegedly harassed for several days by two 7–8 feet tall "space monsters" with pointed ears at their home in Sidney, North Carolina, northeast of Tabor City. The beings float above the ground leaving no footprints and can leap 60–100 feet. Another witness claims to have seen one drinking from a car radiator, and yet another saw one wearing ragged clothes and brogan shoes studded with rhinestones. Williamson is later arrested for firing a shotgun several times at the creature in a public area. A radio disc jockey at WTAB-AM in Tabor City, Ken Williamson (no relation) visits the area early on September 25 and supposedly sees one of the beings. ("'Space Monster' Reports Create Uproar in Tabor City Vicinity," Lumberton (N.C.) Robesonian, September 30, 1973, pp. 1–2; David Webb, 1973: Year of the Humanoids, CUFOS, May 1976, p. 9)

1973, September 29 — A woman hears her dog barking and looks out the window of her home in Hollywood, Florida. For 3–4 minutes she observes a solid, oval-shaped object with slightly obtuse-angled ends. It is glowing red-orange, brighter at the edges than in the center. The object moves back and forth in a pendulum-like motion and its brightness pulsates roughly every 2 seconds, matching the swinging. There are no other known witnesses, but a local newspaper reports a similar colored light seen shortly after this sighting. ("Sighting Advisory," UFO Investigator, December 1973, p. 3)

1973, September 29 — Night. Obion County Sheriff Nathan Cunningham watches three silent UFOs race over his house in Union City, Tennessee. There is a bright glow in the center of each, and red, blue, and green lights are flashing around them. They hover in one area for as long as 15 minutes, then move to another area. He estimates they are about 10–12 square feet in size. An additional 20 witnesses nearby also see the objects. George and Vicki Rogers see a bright red light swoop down low enough to light up an acre and a half of land, nearly causing a seven-car pileup on State Highway 78 near Reelfoot Lake. ("UFOs Spotted in Area," Paducah (Ky.) Sun-Democrat, October 3, 1973, pp. 1–2; "Hundreds of People Are Reporting UFOs: Sightings Increase Daily," Skylook, no. 72 (November 1973): 9)

1973, September 30 — Night. Patrolman Flanning Glover Jr. and other law enforcement officers see a moving light above Collierville, Tennessee. It appears orange at times, then changes back to black. The police shine a spotlight on it, but the light goes out, then reappears in a different place. ("UFOs Play Return Engagements," Memphis (Tenn.) Press-Scimitar, October 1, 1973, p. 19)

1973, September 30 — 9:30 p.m. Jesse Dunnigan and a friend are returning from a movie when they spot a bright light in the sky near his home at 4814 Timberwood Drive North in Columbus, Ohio. They stop to watch the pulsating light, which soon swoops down in a zig-zag pattern and disappears below the trees. The next morning he finds an apparent "landing site" in a field of waist-high weeds about a quarter mile south of Hall Road just west of Interstate 270. ("Man Claims Semi-Oval UFO Landed in West Side Field," Columbus (Ohio) Evening Dispatch, October 1, 1973, via UFO Newsclipping Service, no. 55 (November 1973): 4)

1973, Late September or early October — M. Chubert is riding his motorcycle to work in Puy Verday, Cher, France, when his cycle misfires and stops ad a bright light appears on the road ahead. He sees it is an oval object, with smoke underneath, hovering. A man suddenly appears and walks up to Chubert, putting his left hand on his shoulder and offering "reassuring words." The man is about 6 feet tall and wearing a silvery uniform. A large helmet rests on his shoulders with a snorkel-like tube on the left side. His face seems to be covered with a nylon stocking with slitted eyes, and he is carrying something that looks like a pistol in his left hand. After asking where Chubert is going, the man says he must return to the object and warns him not to get too close. After he enters it from below, the object rises vertically with a sound like a swarm of bees. The motorcycle then restarts manually. (Jean Debois and Dominique Bettini, "Nohant-en-Gout (Cher), Lieu dit Puy-Verday (Octobre 1973)," Lumières dans la Nuit, no. 140 (December 1974): 17–18.

1973, Autumn — Late night. 1st Lt. Walter F. Billings is a deputy crew commander at the Francis E. Warren AFB Golf launch control capsule missile site northwest of Sidney, Nebraska. Over UHF radio, he hears the crew at LCC India, southwest of Sunol, Nebraska, order its security guards to investigate an alarm at one of India's 10 launch sites. The guards find that the inner security alarm has also been triggered, meaning that something has penetrated the security fence surrounding the site. They find a large, bright UFO hovering above the site. One minute later, the UFO moves off slowly for several thousand feet then zooms off at a high rate of speed. All crews on duty that night are told not to say anything to the public or media about anything they heard on UHF radio that night. (Nukes 338–339)

1973, October — J. Allen Hynek and Sherman J. Larsen establish what will become the Center for UFO Studies in Evanston, Illinois, with Larsen's existing Public Education Group as a base. ("Center for UFO Studies Explained," Skylook 76 (March 1974): 6–7; Sherman J. Larsen, "The Founding of CUFOS," IUR 11, no. 3 (May/June 1986): 13–14; O'Connell 293–295; Clark III 627; Graff 252–253; Clark IV 689)

1973, October — Night. Sgt. Michael D. Jenkins of the 96th Security Police Squadron is stationed at Dyess AFB southwest of Abilene, Texas, when a major alert goes off at the base after a large ball of light is reported hovering 100–150 feet above igloo bunkers housing nuclear weapons. Twelve police with M-16s are sent to the Weapons Storage Area, and an incoming C-130 is asked to do a fly-by of the area to get a look at the object. Three K-9 teams that normally patrol the perimeter report that their dogs are afraid and acting up. An order to fire on the object comes from Strategic Air Command Headquarters Offutt AFB near Bellevue, Nebraska. Jenkins hears gunfire and sees a bluish-white streak as the object speeds off. As it leaves, it drops a trail of "angel hair" all the way from the weapons area to the southwest perimeter of the base. The angel hair hangs around on the area ropes and buildings for three days. On the third day it rains and the material dissolves, completely disappearing. (Robert L. Hastings, "UFO Fired Upon As It Hovered over Nuclear Bomb Storage Facility, Says Former USAF Security Policeman," UFOs & Nukes, December 1, 2017)

1973, Early October — Driving home after his cleaning job in Armidale, New South Wales, University of New England student Graham E. travels along the Bundurra Road, then turns left onto the road that leads to the Mount Butler property where he lives. Just as he passes the university ionosphere research receiver, he sees a cigar-shaped object float up directly ahead of him at a tilted angle. He stops the car and watches it for 10–15 seconds, after which it rotates four times and shoots off at an oblique angle. (Bill Chalker, "Confronting UFOs and UAP: Remembering October 1973," The OzFiles, October 22, 2023; Clark IV 916)

1973, October 3 — 6:15 a.m. Eddie Webb is driving a tractor-trailer rig on Interstate 55 near the Old Orchard Road exit southeast of Jackson, Missouri. He sees a bright, turnip-shaped object approaching rapidly behind him and covering both lanes of the highway. It appears to be in three sections: the top and bottom are spinning and aluminum colored, while the center section is steady and made up of glittering red and yellow lights. He wakes up his wife, who is sleeping in the cab, but she can't see anything. Webb sticks his head out the window for a better look and seconds later is blinded by a bright flash that feels like a ball of fire hitting him on the head and face. His glasses fall off, hindering his vision, but he manages to stop the truck. Webb screams that he is burned and can't see. The plastic frames of Webb's glasses are warped by heat, and one of the lenses has fallen out. Mrs. Webb drives him to the Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau, and the highway patrol sends the glasses to physicist Harley Rutledge at Southwest Missouri State University [now Missouri State University] in Springfield for analysis. He finds that the frames have been heated internally from a source that came from the left side. Webb's vision slowly returns, and an ophthalmologist says that his eyes are not permanently damaged. 1973, October 4 — Early evening. Gary J. Chopic, a petroleum consultant, is driving home on the Simi Valley Freeway near Chatsworth, California, when he sees a blimp-like object just above the crest of mountain peaks in Santa Susana Pass. As he drives closer, he sees an elliptical object with a clear bubble dome on top hovering 80–100 feet away in a canyon about 10 feet off the ground, swaying back and forth "like a boat at anchor." A V-like insignia or aperture covers an entire side. A hose-like protrusion about 8 feet long and 1 foot in diameter extends from the bottom. Chopic sees some motion inside the bubble, and a humanoid being appears around the side of the craft, sees him, scrambles back to the other side, and reenters the craft. He hears a clicking sound, and the bubble rotates and retracts. A foglike vapor envelopes the object, and he notices a sweet odor as the craft takes off with a whining or low humming sound and disappears. (*Santa Ana (Calif.) 1973, October 6 — 12:45 a.m. A couple strolling along a country road near St.-Mathias-sur-Richelieu, Quebec, see a bright light like a projector emanating from a nearby field. Later, at 11:30 a.m., the woman is hanging clothes on a line in her backyard when she notices a column of smoke rising from fields in the north. She calls over two workmen doing repairs at her home, and they see a yellowish object like a tent near the smoke. Soon a square, yellow object resembling a bulldozer emerges from the tent and travels about 180 feet to a small spring. Between the two objects, moving around in the field, are five "little people" about 4 feet tall performing various actions. Assuming them to be boy scouts, the witnesses notice they are wearing some kind of helmets and clothing that is the same color as the tent. The witnesses return to their work and 20 minutes later someone notices that the objects and figures have disappeared. The couple's daughter returns in half an hour and goes to check the location. She finds a large, circular patch of burned and crushed grass about 45 feet in diameter, as well as two tracklike marks, each about 6 inches wide. Returning, the daughter feels ill with headache and nausea. A month later, UFO investigators arrive and find additional marks in the shape of a triangle. 1973, October 6 — 6:10 a.m. Cole and Letha Barnhill are wakened by the barking of their dogs, and they see a bright red light outside their home in Hartsville, South Carolina. The light is coming from a round, red object hovering in the sky just below the treetops and not more than 210 feet away. They watch it for 15–20 seconds and then it blinks out. None of the neighbors se it, but about the same time Heyward Byrd is driving to his job at the Sonoco Products Company when he sees a light coming from a bright object to the right of the Carolina Power and Light plant at Lake Robinson. ("UFO Sighted in Hartsville?" Darlington County (S.C.) Tribune, October 18, 1973, via UFO Newsclipping Service, no. 55 (November 1973): 12)

1973, October 7 — Night. Constable Charlie Delk is investigating reports of lights in the sky around Wilson Drive in Petal, Mississippi, when he notices a top-shaped object with yellow lights above Petal High School. He follows it north to the Jones–Forrest County line. Its lights are flashing and it is making noise. Delk follows in further north, but his car dies completely after 3 miles. It remains inoperable for 15 minutes, then starts up again. He continues to follow the light across State Highway 29 and through Ovett, then it makes a double flip and disappears. 1973, October 10 — 7:00 p.m. A family in Niantic, Connecticut, watches two greenish discs and a white sphere maneuvering over a nearby lake. Odd clouds seem to be accompanying the two discs. One disc and its cloud disappear, while the other disc flies in and out of its cloud as if playing "peekaboo." (Herbert S. Taylor, "Mystery Clouds and the UFO Connection," IUR 29, no. 4 (July 2005): 18; National UFO Records Center, "NUFORC UFO Sighting 31579")

1973, October 11 — 4:30 p.m. In Connersville, Indiana, Terry Eversole and his sister see a silver domed disc with a segmented compartment with three green doors on the bottom. After several seconds it shoots off toward the horizon and disappears. At 7:30 p.m., Bill Tremper and about 50 others in Connersville see an oval object with a pale-yellow light on top. It moves across the sky and hovers above a restricted area. It then settles on the ground for some 30 minutes before lifting off, hovering again, and disappearing. (Randle, 1973, p. 21)

1973, October 11 — Dusk. A young mother in rural Tanner Williams, Alabama, calls her 3-year-old son inside for supper. Toddling through the door, he says that he has been "playing with some old monster." She forgets the incident until early the next morning, when the boy declares he wants to go outside and play with the monster again. Then she sees the headlines in the morning newspaper on October 12 about the Parker–Hickson abduction in Pascagoula, Mississippi, only 30 miles away and becomes alarmed. She asks her son what the monster looked like and he replies, "He was all gray and his skin was wrinkled. He had pointy ears." ("Youngster's 'Monster' Causes Stir," Pottstown (Pa.) Mercury, October 19, 1973, p. 1; David Webb, 1973: Year of the Humanoids, CUFOS, May 1976, p. 12)

1973, October 11 — Around 7:00 p.m. Two men, 19-year-old Calvin Parker and 42-year old Charles E. Hickson Sr., both of Gautier, Mississippi, are fishing in the Pascagoula River when they hear a buzzing noise behind them. Both turn and are terrified to see a 10-foot-wide, 8-foot-high, glowing egg-shaped object with blue lights at its front hovering just above the ground about 40 feet from the riverbank. As the men, frozen with fright, watch, a door appears in the object and three strange beings float just above the river towards them. The two become numb and paralyzed as the entities carry them into the UFO. Some kind of "eye" device scans them before they are released 20 minutes later. They first contact Keesler AFB in Biloxi, but no one is interested; then they drive to the offices of the Mississippi Press Register a few blocks away, but it is closed. So they call the Jackson County Sheriff's Office to report their encounter, and they arrive there at 10:30 p.m. At one point during 2 hours of intense grilling by Sheriff Fred R. Diamond, they are left alone in an interrogation room where they are unknowingly tape recorded while they continue to speak to each other about the abduction, emotionally distressed. 1973, October 11 — 7:30 p.m. Randi Stevens, Joel Burns, and three others watch a hovering UFO near Laurel, Indiana. It looks like two saucers put together, and its bottom is segmented. It remains stationary until a truck driver who has been watching it gets into his cab and blows the horn. (Randle, 1973, p. 21)

1973, October 11 — 7:40 p.m. Parole Officer Raymond Broadus, Pascagoula City Councilor Emmanuel P. Sigalas, and an unidentified woman are driving on US Highway 90 west of Gautier, Mississippi, when they see a large, swiftly moving object that descends and hovers a few hundred yards above the ground and meanders toward the Pascagoula River. (Clark III 895)

1973, October 11 — 9:00 p.m. Larry Booth of Pascagoula, Mississippi, finishes watching TV and checks the front door. He sees a huge round object hovering 5–8 feet above a nearby streetlight. It has red lights that are moving in a clockwise motion around it. It slowly moves away. (Clark III 895)

1973, October 12 — 4:00 a.m. A commercial pilot is flying a Piper PA-32 Cherokee Six near Mount Baldy, Arizona, at an altitude of 2,500 feet. He notices a red flashing light on the ground in a remote area, and circles around for a closer look. As he does so, the light begins moving too and reaches a speed about the same as his plane, 170 mph. It is flashing regularly at 2-second intervals. The object is skimming over the ground, apparently following undulations in the landscape. He changes course again to intercept the light, which accelerates instantaneously to 800 mph, moving up and over Mount Baldy, following its contours. The pilot follows it for a few minutes, about 50–60 miles. After about 5 minutes the light makes a right-angle turn and accelerates vertically. After 8–10 flashes, it disappears into the upper atmosphere. (Mark Rodeghier, "Out of the Past: An Incredible Light," IUR 9, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1984): 7–8)

1973, October 14 — 8:00 p.m. Delaware State Police Sgt. James Wolf and Cpl. Edward Martin are landing a helicopter at their headquarters in Dover, Delaware, when they see a light to the northwest in the Cheswold area. It stops moving about 10° above the horizon and hovers. At the same time, a report comes over the police radio about a sighting of a strange light in Camden, Delaware, so they take off again in pursuit to the west, rising to 3,000 feet. At one point they appear to be gaining on it, but then it moves away. After about one minute, the light diminishes in intensity from a dirty white to a faint red and disappears. Air traffic controllers at Dover Air Force Base also see the light, but radar does not pick it up. ("Kent UFO 'Escapes' State Police 'Copter," Wilmington (Del.) News Journal, October 16, 1973, p. 3)

1973, October 15 — 8:45 p.m. Howard Moneypenny, weather service specialist for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration at the Raleigh County Memorial Airport in Beckley, West Virginia, is one of many who see a UFO with flashing red, green, and white lights about 20 miles away from the airport. At one point it hovers for about 15 minutes west-northwest of the facility. An unnamed pilot takes off in a Cessna 182 Skylane to pursue it but he cannot get close. He sees the object change colors several times as it moves away to the west. ("UFO Sighted at Airport," Beckley (W.Va.) Raleigh Register, October 16, 1973, p. 9)

1973, October 15 — Night. Ohio Gov. John J. Gilligan and his wife Mary are driving on US Highway 23 near Ann Arbor, Michigan, when they see an amber-colored vertical beam of light in the southeastern sky. They keep it in view for 30–35 minutes as it fades in and out of view. When asked to confirm the sighting, he tells reporters: "I saw this. It wasn't a bird or a plane." ("Gilligan Spots Strange Object," Hamilton (Ohio) Journal News, October 17, 1973, p. 1; "First Flap in Six Years Resurrects UFOs As National Controversy," UFO Investigator, November 1973, p. 1)

1973, October 15 — 8:30 p.m. Washington Parish Deputy Sheriffs Jerry Brumfield, Ray Martin, and Allen Thomas have several sightings of a pulsating orange object at Pine, Louisiana, that alternately dims as it hovers, swinging like a pendulum. It brightens as it darts around at high speed, occasionally disappearing in a cloudlike vapor. Later, another group of deputy sheriffs pursue five orange-red objects for 12 miles. When a deputy turns on his red flasher light, the objects descend toward his patrol car; when he turns it off, they vanish "like in a cloud." The sightings continue into the early morning. ("Deputies Pursue 5 Orange UFOs; Sightings Persist," Buffalo (N.Y.) News, October 16, 1973, p. 1; UFOEv II 192)

1973, October 15 — 10:30 p.m. Awakened by the barking of their dogs, a farm family sees lights from an apparent UFO in the woods near Berea, Tennessee. James Cline sees an entity with a glowing white head cross the road 50 feet away. The next day, claw-like tracks are found in the road, as well as landing marks 22 feet long by 12 feet wide.

("UFO Lands near Berea, Tenn.," Pulaski (Tenn.) Citizen, October 24, 1973; David Webb, 1973: Year of the Humanoids, CUFOS, May 1976, p. 12)

1973, October 16 — 12:20 a.m. Bill and Donna Hatchett are driving west along a county road south of Mannford, Oklahoma, when they see a bright light approaching quickly from the south and east. They pull their truck over and the light begins hovering near them on the south side of the road about 150–200 in the air. They can hear an intense, low-pitched humming sound and they feel a "stillness" around them. The object, which seems huge, appears to change shape as it hovers, but the light is too bright for them to see it precisely, plus there are three belts of blinking lights that seem to be encircling it. The couple decides to drive away, and the object crosses in front of them and moves off to the northeast, allowing them to notice three red lights on its rear in the shape of a triangle. ("Close Encounter in Oklahoma," APRO Bulletin 22, no. 2 (Sept./Oct. 1972): 8–9)

1973, October 16 — At a press conference in Illinois, USAF Chief of Staff Gen. George Scratchley Brown states that sightings of what were presumed to be enemy helicopters during the Vietnam War took place, always at night, and prompted shooting by US ground forces. A Combat Air Activities file of 16 such incidents between 1967 and 1969, especially around Pleiku in February 1969, documents some of this activity. (Barry Greenwood, "Air Force Vietnam Era UFO Reports Surface," UFO Historical Revue, no. 14 (May 2015): 3–10; Clark III 1051; Clark IV 1166)

1973, October 16 — In response to a question from MP Edward Bishop, Minister of State for Defence Anthony Kershaw tells the House of Commons that of the 1,631 UFO reports received from 1967 through 1972, the majority could be ascribed to aircraft. (Isaac Koi, "UFOs in Parliament (UK)," Isaac Koi—UFOs and Parliament, 2024))

1973, October 16 — 11:30 a.m. Two children, ages 2 and 4, are playing in their backyard in Burbank, California, when they see "something big" land outside. It seems to be an oval object with a pointed dome; at its bottom, there are "rays" beaming down, and it is making a buzzing sound. There are four "monsters" inside that emerge from the object and invite the older boy to look in. At this point, he runs inside to tell his father, a police officer, what he has seen. Meanwhile, their dog is barking furiously outside, which the father thinks is odd, so he goes outside to investigate. He can find no markings at the spot where the boy said the object had landed. (Ann Druffel, "The Burbank Landing and Occupant Report," Flying Saucer Review 21, no. 1 (June 1975): 3–6, 8)

1973, October 16 — 7:30 p.m. Upon arriving home at Albany, Ohio, Mary Geddis sees a "ghost-like" figure floating about 50 feet above the ground at 1,000 feet distance; it is about 4 feet tall and thin, "like a person draped in a close-fitting sheet." It is seen only briefly when she notices a bright white object moving about, and approaches to within 200 feet before going away. The object is about 20 feet in diameter and about 25–30 feet off the ground. Later, as she is making supper, she sees a "little blue-green thing" about 2.5 feet tall and with a face with "spiky things at the tops and the sides of the head" looking in an open door; it has stumpy arms (she sees no legs) and quickly disappears from sight. UFO sightings occur around the same time in nearby Athens, Ohio. (George M. Eberhart, "The Little 'Electric' Man," Flying Saucer Review 20, no. 5 (March 1975): 10–12)

1973, October 16 — 7:45 p.m. A 50-foot-wide bluish object hovers 2–3 feet above US Highway 82, seemingly suspended on a beam of light, near Eupora, Mississippi, 300 feet from a taxicab driven by John Lane. The engine and headlights fail as the object lands. Another object hovers about 60 feet above the first, illuminating it. A "catfish-like" creature emerges with flippers for hands, a wide mouth, and feathers on its back. It holds onto a handrail on the craft and never goes down to the ground. It gets back in and the object rises into the air. The driver restarts the car. However, a few days later Lane confesses that the incident was a hoax. 1973, October 16 — Night. William and Donna Hatchett are driving down a country road near Mannford, Oklahoma, when she sees a bright light coming from the south. They first think it is a security light on a pole, but then realize the object is pacing them and descending. When the Hatchetts stop the truck, the light also stops in front of them. As the object hovers, it gives off a blinding light and a penetrating low-pitched hum. They have a feeling that there are occupants who know everything they are thinking. Donna is so afraid that she twice leaves the truck cab and goes into the back. William manages to persuade her to return, and they set off, the object rising up in the opposite direction. 1973, October 16 — 10:30 p.m. A 33-year-old woman is driving along a country lane near Langford Budville, Somerset, UK, when she sees a bright light ahead and he car loses power. The headlights flicker, dim, and cut out, then the engine sputters and stops. As she looks under the hood, she hears a humming sound that grows louder. As she reenters the car, a robot-like being appears and puts a hand on her shoulder, pressing her down. She sees flashing colored lights and blacks out. When she comes to, she is standing in a field with the robot next to her and the craft in front of them. She blacks out again. The being is tall and dark and appears metallic as light from the object in the field reflects off it. The object is silver-gray and dome-shaped, about 40 feet in diameter, resting on thick legs. Yellow light comes from oblong windows around the middle. On board are three humanoid beings, about 5 feet 7 inches tall. They wear skullcaps and have masks across their faces so that only their round eyes show. They wear light-blue tunics, long gloves to the elbows, and aprons down to their feet. The woman wakes up strapped to a table with a cold surface, legs spreadeagled, and her clothes gone. A light blue blanket has been placed over her. The robot stands inactive against a far wall. Three beings approach the table and examine her using gray-colored instruments. He takes a fingernail paring from her right index finger, a blood sample, and passes a small handheld device over her body that glows brighter and dimmer in various locations. He removes the blanket and performs some gynecological procedures, then covers her with a black blanket. All three humanoids leave the room at once. After a while, one returns, inserts a pin into her thigh that paralyzes and numbs her. When the examiner notices her glance at the robot, he speaks to her in perfect English, explaining that it is a retriever device that performs manual tasks outside the craft. The three men come back into the room, and one removes the pin from her thigh. They remove the restraining bonds from her wrists and ankles and lift her off the table. She sees her clothes on the floor by the robot and then passes out again. When she regains consciousness, she is standing fully clothed next to her car on the deserted country road, dazed and shocked. She climbs into the car and starts up the engine. She does not remember the drive home and arrives there at 2:30 a.m. She and her husband keep silent about the incident for four years. 1973, October 16 — 11:17 p.m. The Mississippi Chemical Corporation's nitrogen fertilizer plant in Yazoo City suffers a complete power failure due to the shattering of a ceramic insulator at one of the substations. Accumulating static electricity causes a gas vent fire at the plant. Just after the fire starts, a guard at the ammonia plant sees two white lights streaking rapidly in opposite directions from behind the facility. John Harris, the manager of radio station WAZF, and his wife see a peculiar bluish light around 10:30 p.m. hovering about 75 feet above a cotton field near their home. They watch the light as it changes from blue to bright red to green and to pale yellow. After about 30 minutes it drifts away in the direction of the ammonia plant. 1973, October 16 — Midnight. Single mother Pat Roach (Patty Price) is dozing on the couch with her 5-year-old son Kent in an isolated house on the outskirts of Lehi, Utah. Suddenly, Kent wakes up screaming that he has seen a "skeleton." Roach has a vague memory an intruder and a bright light. Suspecting a prowler, she phones a neighbor, who calls the police at 12:10 a.m. A few minutes later, officers arrive, talk to Roach, find nothing amiss, and leave. Roach then checks on her other children. Two of them, Bonnie and Debbie, tell her they had seen a spaceman who had come into the house and taken them on a spaceship. Debbie remembers being told not to tell anyone, as well as seeing a line of people waiting to go on board. Disturbed, Roach takes her children and spends the rest of the night at a friend's house. In 1975, Roach sees an article by Kevin Randle on UFO abductions and contacts him. Randle arranges for an interview and hypnosis sessions with APRO's research director James A. Harder. An abduction tale slowly emerges that involves some elements that are little known in 1975, among them the aliens' clinical coldness, their curiosity about human emotion, their interest in gynecology, and human participants in the physical examination. However, Randle now believes that Roach underwent sleep paralysis, was influenced by some abduction accounts over the years, and was led into the narrative by Harder's leading questions during hypnosis. 1973, October 17 — Morning. Edward Deutsch is driving to work along Little Mountain Road near Ringtown, Pennsylvania, when he sees a round object with flashing lights about "as big as a large tractor-trailer tire" hovering and rotating 100 feet above his car. It emits a humming sound. When he gets to the top of the mountain, it lights up the entire car, rotating it 90° so that he is moving toward home. It takes Deutsch about 10 minutes to realize that he has been turned around. ("Area Man Says UFO Turned Car Around," Berwick (Pa.) Enterprise, October 18, 1973, p. 11)

the children, but the boys run away, and the object ascends swiftly and disappears. ("Still No Letup in UFO Reports," Johnson City (Tenn.) Press, October 18, 1973, p. 1)

1973, October 17 — Evening. Paul Brown is driving on US Highway 29 near Danielsville, Georgia, when his car radio suddenly goes wild with strange sounds. He sees a silver, oval-shaped object about 300 feet ahead on the road. He stops and sees two beings with red faces and white hair. Brown grabs a pistol and steps halfway out of his car, but the beings return to the object, which takes off with a whooshing sound. (Athens (Ga.) Banner-Herald, October 18, 1973; "First Flap in Six Years Resurrects UFOs As National Controversy," UFO Investigator, November 1973, p. 4)

1973, October 17 — 8:30 p.m. Reporter Donnie Johnston gets a call from Mrs. Kenneth Hensley saying there is a UFO hovering in the sky above Madison, Virginia. He jumps in his car and drives there in time to see a mysterious light about 20° above the southeastern horizon about 3–5 miles away. It slowly moves from southwest to northwest, then suddenly disappears. This is the third sighting for the Hensleys, who had seen UFOs earlier in the week. (Donnie Johnston, "UFO Seen over Madison," Culpeper (Va.) Star-Exponent, October 18, 1973, pp. 1, 10; Randle, 1973, p. 25)

1973, October 17 — 9:15 p.m. 17-year-old David Bodner sees something very bright in the sky to the northwest in Elkhorn, West Virginia. It passes overhead with a fluttering motion in about 45–60 seconds, pulsing or flashing brightly for about 5 seconds with about 3 seconds between flashes. Bodner takes a photo with his 35mm Pentax camera. The image suggests that the object is subtending an angle of 3.5°, which would make it 120 feet in diameter at a distance of 2,000 feet. A similar object is photographed the same night in Columbus, Ohio, about 170 miles to the northwest. 1973, October 17 — Night. Clarence Ray Patterson is driving home to Pensacola, Florida, on Interstate 10. When he is near the exit to Loxley, Alabama, a UFO swoops down, picks up his truck, and pulls it inside the craft. He claims that six short creatures with claw-like arms take him out of the truck to examine him. They seem to be reading his mind. After 30 minutes, they release him on Florida Highway 297 just outside Pensacola. He immediately drives to the police station to tell his story. ("Pickup by UFO Reported," Pensacola (Fla.) News, October 18, 1973, pp. 1–2; Randle, 1973, pp. 24–25, 113)

1973, October 17 — Night. Herschel Fueston, a policeman in Noblesville, Indiana, is patrolling the area of South Harbor when he notices an object hovering silently 100 feet above the water of Morse Reservoir. It has amber lights and moves directly above his car. Its lights get brighter as it speeds away, and he can see a row of red lights on its underside. ("Noblesville Policeman Sights Strange Object," Jasper (Ind.) Daily Herald, October 18, 1973, p. 5)

1973, October 17 — After 10:00 p.m. Falkville, Alabama, Police Chief Jeffrey Greenhaw responds to a phone call about a UFO on the outskirts of town. On a gravel road, he sees a 5-and-a-half-foot-tall, silver-suited figure in his headlights. He stops, gets out, and talks to the figure, all the while taking Polaroid photos of it. It steps towards him and Greenhaw turns on the red rotating police car light. The figure runs away and although Greenhaw pursues it in his car, it eludes him. The photos quickly become a national news story. NICAP investigator Marion Webb and others strongly suspect this is a hoax. 1973, October 18 — 1:30 p.m. Filaments of a silky transparent material float down from the sky for about one hour over Jackson and other parts of central Mississippi and northern Louisiana, sticking on utility lines and cars. It quickly disintegrates, but some samples are retrieved in Forest City and sent to the state Air and Water Pollution Control Commission for analysis. Balloon spiders are not suspected. Daily News*, October 19, via UFO Newsclipping Service, no. 55 (November 1973): 4; "Photos Taken by Patrolman in Alabama," Danville (Va.) Bee, October 19, 1973, p. B-1)

1973, October 18 — 3:30 p.m. A witness in Hamilton, Illinois, sees a huge gray oval or oblong UFO. A second object appears that resembles the first but seems to be covered in "cobwebs" on its upper surface. About 15 minutes later, "cotton-like" material is found that when handled becomes a "small ball which melted as it was touched." The next morning, a collected sample has totally sublimated. (Brian Boldman, "An Analysis of Angel Hair, 1947–2000," IUR 26, no. 3 (Fall 2001): 19)

1973, October 18 — Early evening. Two youths are on White Oak Mountain southeast of Chatham, Virginia, when they see a bright-white entity, 3–4 feet tall, with a shimmering body and a large head with no eyes. It begins chasing them in an unusual sideways movement. They run back to a pickup truck where an adult is waiting for them. After they get there, they see a green, hazy cloud moving into the sky, headed north. About the same time, some state troopers in Salem, Virginia, see a red ball of fire in the sky. ("UFO 'Thing' Chases Boys on White Oak," Danville (Va.) Bee, October 19, 1973, p. B-1)

1973, October 18 — 11:00 p.m. Army Reserve Capt. Lawrence J. Coyne (with his crew 1st Lt. Arrigo Jezzi, Sgt. John Healey, and Spec5 Robert Yanacsek) is flying an Army Reserve UH-1 Huey helicopter at 1,200 feet from Columbus to Cleveland, Ohio. Healey notices a steady, southbound red light. It looks like the port-wing light of an aircraft but seems brighter and carries none of the other FAA-required lights. He watches it disappear behind the helicopter and doesn't tell the others. A couple minutes later, Yanacsek sees a bright red light on the eastern horizon and watches it for 90 seconds, realizing it is pacing the helicopter. He mentions it to Coyne, who tells Healey to watch it. Soon the light turns and comes towards the helicopter. Coyne takes the controls from Jezzi and puts the helicopter into a descent. He calls Mansfield (Ohio) Approach Control but fails to get a response. The red light is now closing on them at a dangerous rate of speed, possibly 684 mph. Coyne pushes the stick down, forcing the helicopter to descend quickly. When he gets to an altitude of 650 feet above the treetops, Coyne looks up and sees the object covering the entire front windshield. The red light is on its nose and a white light is on the tail of this cigar-shaped, metallic structure. Under the tail, a green beam sweeps a 90° arc and shines through the windshield. It hovers above them for 10–12 seconds before accelerating and heading northwest. The bright white light just snaps out. Coyne looks at the altimeter and realizes they have been ascending and are now at 3,500 feet, but the stick is still down. He pulls the stick up and the helicopter levels out at 3,800 feet. Reviewing his instruments, Coyne notices that the magnetic compass is rotating slowly, while the Radio Magnetic Indicator is functioning normally. They make radio contact with Akron and fly on to Cleveland without further incident. Other witnesses on the ground have seen the incident. 1973, October 18 — 11:30 p.m. A group of people in Wooster, Ohio, notices a bright, pulsing, triangular object with three colored lights at each apex, pulsating at different rates. When the object moves, the red light becomes brighter. It moves right, left, up, and down for 25 minutes. The UFO then dips down and shoots straight up into the sky. (Michael D. Swords, "Timmerman's Triangles," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 15)

1973, October 19 — 3:30 p.m. A woman is driving south on Interstate 75 near Ashburn, Georgia, when her engine suddenly stops and the power brakes and power steering go out. She guides the car onto the shoulder of the road. Stunned and sitting behind the steering wheel, she senses something amiss and looks toward the highway. Right outside her rolled-up window she sees a humanoid dressed in a metallic suit and a bubble helmet with two rectangular slits for eyes. She has difficulty looking at it directly, and after 5–6 minutes the creature moves to the front of the car, then around to the back, its helmet making odd, mechanical movements, before it disappears from view. Shortly afterward, she gets out of the car and raises the hood to attract a passing motorist, but smoke comes billowing out. The engine is so intensely hot that by the time a police tow truck takes her to a garage, the hood is nearly at the melting stage. APRO considers it unlikely that the woman could have raised the hood if it had been so hot. ("Strange Creature Stalls Auto in Georgia: Car Intensely Hot," Skylook, no. 73 (December 1973): 7–8; "Possible Hoax in Georgia," APRO Bulletin 22, no. 6 (May/June 1974): 5–6)

1973, October 19 — NBC News journalist John Chancellor sums up the prevailing views on UFOs among broadcasters on the NBC Evening News: "Many people would like the UFOs to go away. But the UFOs won't go away, and many scientists are taking them very seriously. It's likely that we will hear more and more about the UFOs." ("More and More UFO's #467328," Vanderbilt News Archive, October 19, 1973; Jacobs, UFO Controversy in America, Signet ed., 1976, p. 261)

1973, October 19 — 7:45 p.m. David A. Doby and his wife are leaving to go to a football game when they see a large bluish, oval-shaped UFO hovering above their mobile home in Copeland, North Carolina. Suddenly she sees a 3-foot-tall creature standing in the front yard. It is dressed head to foot in a golden metallic suit. They rush into their car with their young son and speed away. Instead of returning, they spend the night with a friend. The family dog also flees, returning the next day. (George D. Fawcett, "Many North Carolina UFO Sightings Remain Unsolved," Skylook, no. 74 (January 1974): 14)

1973, October 19 — 8:30 p.m. Gabriel Demogue and his girlfriend are riding a motorcycle along a road leading to Malmont, a peak just north of Draguignan, Var, France, when suddenly the girl sees a vivid yellow-orange ball surrounded by a light halo traveling parallel to their bike. They stop to watch the object, which is moving west to east about 1,600 feet from them. It vanishes behind the mountain, leaving a red glow visible through the trees. Demogue contacts a few friends, including Georges Macret, Alain Leca, and Christian Bensa, who decide to drive two cars to the overlook to investigate. Soon Macret notices that the orientation table at the overlook is growing hot and feels a wave of heat passing through him. They all notice a red light below the peak, which descends along a stony track, and they hear the sound of pebbles being displaced and a modulated whistling noise. The light is apparently carried by a humanoid figure more than 6 feet tall, which stops about 80 feet away and picks something up from the ground. The red light goes out and the whistling stops. The observers panic and rush to their cars, but a blinding white light shines on them from the hilltop. Leca drives a few yards then looks back and sees three figures coming down the path with jerky steps. He reverses the car and stops about 15 feet from them, shouting, "Are you good or are you bad?" The three figures seem to be discussing what to do, then continue toward the car, which panics Leca and he speeds away another 160 feet before looking back and returning to the overlook. The other car, driven by Macret, encounters two phosphorescent "red legs" crossing the road in front of their vehicle. The headlights and dashboard light go out. They take a sharp turn in the darkness, narrowly avoiding a crash. Moments later, the lights come back on. After stopping for a while, Macret drives on and encounters the "red legs" again coming from the right, but he speeds ahead at about 40 mph. Suddenly his car is thrown off sideways at right angles to the road, but the car mysteriously positions itself on the road again. (J. Chasseigne, "Remarkable Encounter at Draguignan," Flying Saucer Review 20, no. 4 (January 1975): 12–17.

1973, October 20 — 1:00 a.m. Two women driving in a Volkswagen near Fort Smith, Arkansas, see a glowing object approach them from the south. It descends within 6 feet of their car, at which point the headlights, radio, and engine all fail. The object is about 8 feet in diameter, shaped like a disc, and emits a "computer-like" sound. After about 5 minutes, it moves away quickly. (Fort Smith (Ark.) Southwest Times Record, October 21, 1973; Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1981, p. 59)

1973, October 20 — 2:00 a.m. Sam Richerson and his wife awaken in their home in Campbellsville, Kentucky, when a barking dog disturbs his young son from a deep sleep. When his wife attends to him, she notices a glowing object across the street. They stand and watch the object for 15 minutes. It is a triangular-shaped object the size of two cars hovering at treetop height 300 feet away. (Campbellsville (Ky.) News-Journal, October 25, 1973; Marler 89–90)

1973, October 20 — 6:50 a.m. A conductor on a Louisville & Nashville Railroad train moving northeast out of Mount Vernon, Indiana, sees a bright white light coming out of the north and heading east. When they reach Caborn, Indiana, he notifies the rear conductors, who can now see a bright light (possibly another train) behind them. The train's automatic blocking system is showing a red light, indicating there is a train to the rear. When the train reaches Belknap, the engine stops because a rear diesel unit has apparently overheated. The yardmaster in Evansville informs them that there never was any train behind them. The conductor hits a reset button and the train starts with no trouble. The light in the rear seems to be moving away, and the blocking system turns to an amber signal. (NICAP, "UFO Disables Train"; Randle, Levelland, 2021, pp. 161–162; Randle, 1973, pp. 171–172; "L&N Train Conductor Talks to Researcher Francis Ridge in a Rare Recording about a 1973 Incident," Eyes on Cinema YouTube channel, April 10, 2024)

1973, October 20 — A man and two in-laws watch a UFO pass over Round Valley Reservoir, Clinton Township, New Jersey. Their car engine and headlights give out while the object is visible. ("Saucer Flew over Reservoir, According to a Fisherman Who Couldn't Get Car Going," High Bridge (N.J.) Gazette, October 24, 1973, via UFO Newsclipping Service, no. 55 (November 1973): 5)

1973, October 20 — 8:00 p.m. A witness sees a triangular-shaped object with bright white lights hovering above Milton Road in Alton, Illinois. A second triangle is above the first. ("Latest UFO over Milton (Road)," Alton (Ill.) Telegraph, October 22, 1973; Marler 90, 209)

1973, October 21 — 2:30 a.m. Reafa Heitfeld wakes up in her trailer in Covedale on the west side of Cincinnati, Ohio, and notices a bright light shining outside. The source is a row of six lights forming an arc outside her window, as well as another bright light over the parking lot. Outside the second light she can see a gray "apelike creature" that seems to be fixing something. In the process of calling the police, she hears a loud, deep, booming sound, and the object and creature are gone. Investigator Leonard Stringfield finds that a fire alarm has gone off at the same time in a nearby warehouse only 150 feet away, although firemen can locate nothing that set it off. (Len Stringfield, "Creature Inside Shield of Light," Skylook, no. 87 (February 1975): 3–6; "Bell-Jars and Gargoyles," Canadian UFO Report 3, no. 4 (1975): cover, 1, 5–6; David Webb, 1973: Year of the Humanoids, CUFOS, 2nd ed., May 1976, pp. 16, 29, 64; Clark III 554; Clark IV 612)

1973, October 21 — Science writer Walter Sullivan writes in the New York Times that not since 1947 "have there been such widespread reports of unidentified flying objects or UFO's, in recent days." (Walter Sullivan, "Despite Lack of Data from Pilots and Officials, Reports of UFO Sightings Are Many and Widespread," New York Times, October 21, 1973, p. 65)

1973, October 22 — 2:00 p.m. June Margolin sees a shiny globe dropping web-like substance in large amounts over Sudbury, Massachusetts. It drapes over trees and telephone lines. She collects a sample and puts it in the refrigerator, but the substance still dissipates into strong white threads. The University of Massachusetts field station examines a sample. It is not spider web, but there is not enough of it for a chemical analysis. X-ray fluorescence and diffraction analysis indicates sodium, aluminum, silicon, sulfur, chorine, potassium, calcium, iron, nickel. The substance is 95% organic. Two other analyses indicate slightly different composition. ("UFO 'Angel's Hair' Still Remains a Mystery," UFO Investigator, March 1974, pp. 1, 3; Brian Boldman, "An Analysis of Angel Hair, 1947–2000," IUR 26, no. 3 (Fall 2001): cover; Brian Boldman, "Angel Hair Physical Analyses: A Review," JUFOS 9 (2006): 105–106)

1973, October 22 — 6:50 p.m. A man is farming in Upton, Indiana, when he notices an object that looks like it is going to land. He and his daughter walk toward the other side of the field to investigate. They can see an object with red, white, and green lights near the railroad tracks. As a train passes through, the object dims and hovers near it for one minute, then takes off to the southeast. An object is seen flying above a train at Maunie, Illinois, the same evening. (NICAP, "UFO Hovers over Passing Train")

1973, October 22 — 9:45 p.m.–after midnight. Dewayne and Debbie Donathan are driving toward their home 9 miles east of Hartford City, Indiana, when they see two strange-looking figures 30 feet ahead of them on the road. Four feet tall, they are dressed in tight-fitting silver suits and wear boxlike shoes. They move in a clumsy fashion, their arms flopping oddly along their sides. Debbie accelerates and drives past the figures. The witnesses alert the sheriff's office, and two officers and a civilian friend, Gary Flatter, investigate. They see no figures but hear an odd, high-frequency sound. Around midnight, Flatter hears the sound again south of the original encounter and notes wild animals leaving the area. His headlights pick up two 4-foot figures 20 feet off the side of the road. He can see a hose going from their egg-shaped helmets down to their chests. Three times they rise 3 feet into the air then float down. The fourth time, they fly away, still standing erectly. 1973, October 22 — 11:00 p.m. A senior sales representative for an airline company is sitting on the balcony of his suite at the Holiday Inn, Key West, Florida, along with his sister. They watch a silent UFO fly past them from the west, five separate times, at 10-minute intervals, at different altitudes and in different directions. They think it is the same object each time, on a level flight and a straight course. Three times the object passes directly overhead and disappears behind the hotel. From the front, it looks wing-shaped, but when it passes overhead, they see it is boomerang-shaped. The leading edge appears to be illuminated from within with a soft-blue light. ("Interesting 1973 Case," APRO Bulletin 24, no. 1 (July 1975): 1, 5)

1973, October 23 — Bonnie Collier observes two metallic cigar-shaped objects over Midway, Texas. She photographs one of them. About 20 minutes later, she notices monarch butterflies are getting entangled in "sheets of a web-like substance" falling to earth. She retrieves a grapefruit-sized sample from a mesquite tree and stores it in a box. Some 20 years later, the sample is analyzed by two engineering students at the University of Texas at Austin. A neutron activation survey indicates high concentrations of sodium, potassium, zinc, and lanthanum. Other tests indicate the sample is spider silk produced by a cribellate orb weaver spider. (Brian Boldman, "An Analysis of Angel Hair, 1947–2000," IUR 26, no. 3 (Fall 2001): 14; Brian Boldman, "Angel Hair Physical Analyses: A Review," JUFOS 9 (2006): 106)

1973, October 24 — 9:00 p.m. David Simpson's car engine stops and the headlights go out when an oval object, 12 feet wide by 8 feet high, lands close by near Dobson, North Carolina. He sees a humanoid with balls of fire for eyes looking into the car. After the creature leaves, the car engine and lights come back on without his having to start the ignition. (George D. Fawcett, "Many North Carolina UFO Sightings Remain Unsolved," Skylook, no. 74 (January 1974): 14; David Webb, 1973: Year of the Humanoids, CUFOS, 1976, p. 17)

1973, October 25 — FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley explains in a letter to a resident of La Habra, California, that the investigation of UFOs "is not and never has been a matter that is within the investigative jurisdiction of the FBI." (Good Above, pp. 253, 475)

1973, October 25 — 7:15 p.m. Lt. Commander M—— is traveling south from Naval Communication Station Harold E. Holt, a restricted US National Security Agency station along Murat Road on North West Cape, north of Exmouth, Western Australia, when he sees a large, black object in the sky 5 miles to his west at an altitude of 2,000 feet. After about 20–25 seconds, the object accelerates at speed to the north. It is first seen at about 20° elevation, to the west. M—— estimates its angular size as half a degree. It is initially stationary and there is no associated noise at any point, no trail or exhaust. It is last seen at 45°–50° elevation. At about 7:20 p.m., William Gordon Lynn, an Australian civilian and US Navy employee fire captain, notices a large, stationary, black object in the clear sky. It has a halo around the center, which appears to be either revolving or pulsating. He watches it for an estimated four minutes, after which it takes off speedily in a northerly direction and disappears after a few seconds. He thinks it is about 30 feet in diameter and hovering at 1,000 feet over the hills west of the base. On this same date, the base is communicating a DEFCON III alert to conventional and nuclear forces in the region during the Yom Kippur War (an NSA misreading of a Syrian message to the USSR had indicated a Soviet build-up). (NICAP, "Black Sphere Observed / DEFCON-3 Reached"; Bill Chalker, "The North West Cape Incident: UFOs and Nuclear Alert in Australia," IUR 11, no. 1 (Jan./Feb. 1986): 10–11; Bill Chalker, "The UFO Connection: Startling Implications for Australia's North West Cape, and for Australia's Security," Flying Saucer Review 31, no. 5 (July 1986): 16–18; Good Above, pp. 174–175; Bill Chalker, "UFOs Sub Rosa Down Under, Part 4," 1996; Swords 403–405; Coulthart 2023, pp. 66–68; Bill Chalker, "Confronting UFOs and UAP: Remembering October 1973," The OzFiles, October 22, 2023; Powell, Scientist, 66; Clark IV 912–914)

1973, October 25 — 8:00 p.m. George Kowalczyk, 22, and two 10-year-old boys allegedly see a bright-white, dome-shaped UFO about 100 feet in diameter land in a field near Uniontown, Pennsylvania. "Screaming sounds" emanate from somewhere nearby. The UFO makes a lawnmower-like sound. Suddenly they see two large apelike creatures with glowing green eyes walking along a fence, one in front of the other. Kowalczyk fires a tracer slug with his rifle over the creatures' heads, but they continue moving forward, seemingly communicating by making whining sounds. The tall and closer of the two, about 8 feet tall, is running its left hand along the fence, while the smaller one is struggling to keep up. Kowalczyk fires three bullets into the larger creature's chest. It whines and reaches toward the smaller creature. The UFO vanishes and the lawnmower sound ceases. The area where the UFO had been is now glowing brilliant white. The hairy creatures head toward the woods. A policeman arrives at 9:45 p.m. and finds the landing spot still glowing slightly. They hear something moving in the woods nearby and smell a sulfur-like odor. The officer and the witnesses panic and jump into the police car and drive about 150 feet. Stan Gordon shows up at 1:30 a.m. with four members of his Westmoreland County UFO Study Group. In the company of Kowalczyk and his father, they walk around the field until Kowalczyk undergoes a violent emotional attack, during which he growls like an animal and throws his father and an investigator to the ground. During his attack, he has an apocalyptic vision in which he receives a dire warning from a man in a black hat and cloak. Kowalczyk undergoes hypnosis with psychologist Berthold Eric Schwarz, who says he has visions about the impending end of the world and after the event he "felt like an animal." 1973, October 28 — 1:15 a.m. Truck driver Dionisio Llanca is changing a tire along Highway 3 some 11 miles from Bahía Blanca, Argentina, when a UFO lands and three humanlike beings, two men and a woman, approach him.

Nearly paralyzed by the light from the UFO, Llanca lets one of the beings take a blood sample and later remembers going on board the craft, whose occupants warn him that humans are headed towards disaster. He loses consciousness and wakes up in a railyard 5.5 miles away, then finds himself in a hospital. However, Argentine UFO investigators find major discrepancies and consider Llanca's story an invention devised to make some money. ("Occupant Encounter in Argentina," APRO Bulletin 22, no. 3 (Nov./Dec. 1973): 7–8; "Possible Hoax," APRO Bulletin 22, no. 4 (Jan./Feb. 1974): 11; Gordon Creighton and Charles Bowen, "The Extraordinary Case of Dionisio Llanca and the Ufonauts," Flying Saucer Review 26, no. 4 (November 1980): 2–10; Guillermo Roncoroni, "Dionisio Llanca: El Informe Solari," UFO Press, no. 19 (Jan./March 1984): 32–35; "The Case of Dionisio Llanca in Argentina," Flying Saucer Review 30, no. 2 (December 1984): 25–26; UFOEv II 538–539; "The Abduction of Dionisio Llanca," Above Top Secret forum, February 4, 2016; Clark III 601–602; Randle, 1973, pp. 76–79; Clark IV 660–661)

1973, October 28 — 8:40 p.m. A couple are watching TV with their 4-year-old daughter in their mobile home north of Belpre, Ohio, when suddenly the TV picture turns negative and the sound becomes barely audible. The area in back of their trailer lights up as bright as daylight. The man looks outside and sees an egg-shaped object hovering above a small barn and shining a bright searchlight into it. The barn, about 30 feet long and 20 feet high, is about the same size as the object. The man goes outside, but the UFO switches off the light and moves back behind the barn, but he can see red and green lights around the object, which is hovering again. The woman calls her parents, who live a few houses away, and they arrive in 5 minutes with a large flashlight. Each time they shine the flashlight at the object, it moves up or down as if to avoid it. After the two men watch the object for 30 minutes, the object rises and speeds away to the southwest. ("Possible E-M Case in Ohio," APRO Bulletin 22, no. 4 (Jan./Feb. 1974): 1, 4–5)

1973, October 28 — 11:30 p.m. Karl Fichtinger watches an odd orange-yellow light to the south of Bad Traunstein, Austria, that projects two beams of light that creep slowly upward like a pair of snail feelers. After moving up a short distance, they begin curving outward. After 7–10 seconds when they reach a certain height they stop moving, the two tips turn green for 2–3 seconds, a green mist falls down sideways, and the beams disappear. After 2–5 seconds the process repeats again and again. Around 12:30 a.m. he wakes his friend Johann Pritz in another house and they continue to watch the display for several hours. At 2:00 a.m. the light emits a red "missile" that moves east, stops, turns yellow-orange, and produces a similar pattern of signals. Then they notice a third object in the west that looks more like a dark domed disc, and it is also sending thin feelers up light upward. Three more smaller lights join the one in the east. At 3:30 a.m., the missile in the east stops and takes off to the south but the others remain. The witnesses go home at 4:30, and all the objects are gone by 6:00 a.m. They estimate that the first object has given off 1,200 signals, the domed disc some 550, and the missile a minimum of 360. Researcher Alexander Keul later admits that the observations are made by a "naïve and inexperienced amateur." (Ernst Berger [Alexander G. Keul], "Luminous 'Snails' near Traunstein, Austria," Flying Saucer Review 20, no. 2 (October 1974): 12–18; Clark IV 1215)

1973, November — 1:00 a.m. A witness in Sauk Village, Illinois, is sitting in her dark living room when a light outside causes it to get brighter. She sees a lighted domed disc hovering in the front yard. A central section is filled with alternating blue and gold rectangular lights. It appears to be revolving, except for the dome, which is stationary. Her husband joins her and they continue watching it for 10 minutes. It quickly takes off straight up in 10 seconds. ("Illinois," CUFOS Associate Newsletter 6, no. 2 (April/May 1985): 5, 7)

1973, November 1 — Florence Dow hears a thump on her front porch near Goffstown, New Hampshire, and sees a motionless figure wearing an old black coat and a wide-brimmed hat pulled down over the face, which seems to be covered with masking tape. It motions to her with a gloved hand, indicating that she should come outside. She goes to the front door but by then the mystery figure has vanished. (Raymond Fowler, "The Goffstown Creatures," Official UFO 1, no. 2 (August 1975): 22–23; David Webb, 1973: Year of the Humanoids, CUFOS, 1976, p. 18)

1973, November 2 — 2:45 a.m. Lyndia Morel, a masseuse in Manchester, New Hampshire, leaves work and begins driving on State Highway 114 to her home in nearby Goffstown. On the outskirts of Manchester, she sees an odd light in the sky that is flashing different colors. The light vanishes when she reaches Goffstown, but it reappears twice more, seemingly brighter and closer. Suddenly it appears about 1,600 feet in front her on North Mast Road. She sees that it is an orange-and-gold globe covered with hexagons like a honeycomb, with an oval window on the upper left. The red, green, and blue flashes come from somewhere near the center of the object, and she hears a high-pitched sound. Suddenly she is unable to remove her hands from the steering wheel. She feels that the object is taking control of her and the car and pulling them in. Her car speeds up against her will as she passes Westlawn Cemetery. The object is now only a few hundred feet away, and through a window she sees a smallish humanoid figure standing behind a console. The figure has a round, grayish head, a wrinkled face, a downturned slit of a mouth, and two large eyes with dark pupils. She feels that he is sending her a telepathic message to be unafraid. Somehow, she slows the car and turns into the driveway of a house just past the cemetery. A German shepherd dog runs up to the car door, growling and barking at her. She hits the dog, runs up to the house, pounds on the door, rings the bell, and yells for help as the UFO moves to a position across the street, hovering and watching her, still emitting a high-pitched sound. The residents, Mr. and Mrs. Beaudoin, come to the door and find a terrified woman who is covering her ears and claiming that a UFO is after her. The Beaudoins cannot see or hear anything, but Mrs. Beaudoin calls the police and Goffstown patrolman Daniel Jubinville arrives 10 minutes later to interview Morel. Investigator Walter N. Webb finds that the position of the UFO corresponds too closely to the planet Mars, at least in the later stage of the sighting, to rule that explanation out entirely. 1973, November 2 — Night. Police officers looking into reports of a "strange animal" seen in the area of Midland, Pennsylvania, spot a large, disc-shaped object in the sky overhead. At least 100 other people also see the object. (Stan Gordon, "UFOs in Relation to Creature Sightings in Pennsylvania," in MUFON 1974 UFO Symposium Proceedings, Mutual UFO Network, 1974, pp. 132–154; Clark III 556; Clark IV 614)

1973, November 2 — Dick Cavett features J. Allen Hynek, Carl Sagan, astronaut James McDivitt, Capt. Lawrence J. Coyne, Charles Hickson, and Calvin Parker on the Dick Cavett Show. Sagan mocks the testimony of the Pascagoula abductees as well as Coyne: "I don't mean to attack Captain Coyne, but people who read altimeters hallucinate." (Graff 259–260)

1973, November 3 — Day. At the bottom of a gully in an isolated section of the woods near Midland, Pennsylvania, two hunters find a 42-foot ring impressed in the grass. Investigator Stan Gordon finds a trail of three-toed footprints—11 inches long and 5 inches wide—some 250 yards from the ring. (Stan Gordon, "UFOs in Relation to Creature Sightings in Pennsylvania," in MUFON 1974 UFO Symposium Proceedings, Mutual UFO Network, 1974, pp. 132–154; Clark III 556; Clark IV 614)

1973, November 4 — 12:00 midnight. Rex Snow and his wife Theresa are awakened in their house in Goffstown, New Hampshire, by a brushing sound. He sees two self-luminous, silver-suited beings, 4½–5 feet tall, in the backyard about 60 feet away. They have oversized, pointed ears; dark, egg-shaped eyeholes; large noses encased in the silver coverall; and silver boots with upturned toes. One holds a flashlight-like object, while the other picks up things from the ground and puts them in a silver bag. The family dog is ordered to attack the creatures, but halts about 30 feet away, makes some lunges, then walks back and lies down whining on the kitchen floor. Snow closes the door and watches them walk away into the woods. (Raymond E. Fowler, UFOs: Interplanetary Visitors, Exposition, 1974, pp. 324–326; Raymond Fowler, "The Goffstown Creatures," Official UFO 1, no. 2 (August 1975): 22–23, 103–104; David Webb, 1973: Year of the Humanoids, CUFOS, 1976, p. 19)

1973, November 4 — 12:00 noon. Two teenage boys in Inkster, North Dakota, see a bright light hovering 45 feet above a field. It appears to be a cube-shaped object about 10 feet wide with five red, white, and green lights. The teens can feel static electricity in the air. After 10 minutes, the object flies away. Traces of dead vegetation are found later in the field. (Mark Rodeghier, UFO Reports Involving Vehicle Interference, CUFOS, 1981, p. 60)

1973, November 5 — Afternoon. Members of a farm family in Canby, Minnesota, find one of their cows lying dead in a pasture. Its udder, tongue, ears, and tail have been severed, and hair clippings from the end of the tail lie in a pile near the carcass. No nearby car tracks or footprints are found by police. (Jerome Clark, "Strange Case of the Cattle Killings," Fate 27, no. 8 (August 1974): 79–90; Clark III 133; Clark IV 160)

1973, November 6 — 9:00 p.m. Off-duty patrolmen Gary Steinberg and Thomas Brown are sitting in an unmarked patrol car in Freeport, New York, facing east. They see a bright light in the sky that is not the helicopter they think it is at first. They watch it for 5–10 minutes before it moves away to the southeast. Steinberg tries to get closer in the patrol car, while Brown stays behind and directs him by radio. He gets to within 300–400 feet of it, as it is 700–800 feet in altitude. It now appears football-shaped and 100 feet long. He watches it for 10–15 minutes as it glows silvery blue with an occasional yellow-red pulsating tint. The object then moves off to the southwest, stopping occasionally. A smaller object comes up on his right and drifts up to the larger object and merges with it. The larger object dims in sections (about 16), one after the other, and it takes off to the southwest and disappears in a couple seconds. (Dick Ruhl, "Merging UFOs over Long Island," APRO Bulletin 22, no. 4 (Jan./Feb. 1974): 1, 3–4; Herbert S. Taylor, "Satellite Objects: A Further Look," IUR 29, no. 2 (Summer 2004): 5–6)

1973, November 6 — 9:45 p.m. A USAF security policeman at the eastern portion of Kirtland AFB near Albuquerque, New Mexico, sees a large, glowing object hovering 100 feet above the Manzano Nuclear Weapons Storage

Facility. It is an oblate spheroid, 150 feet in diameter, gold in color, and absolutely silent. Nine other air policemen are alerted, and four F-101 Voodoo Air National Guard interceptors are scrambled from Kirtland. The UFO begins moving east and passes out of sight at treetop level in the Manzano Mountains. (R. C. Hecker, "New Mexico Reports," APRO Bulletin 23, no. 2 (Sept./Oct. 1974): 5; Good Need, p. 321)

1973, November 8 — The crew of a Lloyd Aéreo Boliviano airplane encounters a strange, luminous object near La Paz, Bolivia, and alerts the Bolivian air force. Maj. Norberto Saloman, already airborne on a practice flight in a North American F-100 Super Sabre fighter, investigates and observes a stationary object shaped like a top with window-like openings on its sides. He closes in to 6,600 feet, but the object moves away at incredible speed. As he pursues it. The object suddenly repositions itself behind his aircraft, then goes straight up and vanishes. ("Bolivian Pilot Chases Object Which Looks Like a Top," Skylook, no. 82 (September 1974): 17; UFOEv II 86–87)

1973, November 8 — Around 10:45 p.m. Donna and Rick Bouchard and their three children are driving west in a pickup truck along Ontario Highway 417 north of Embrun, Ontario. Rick sees an object with spinning lights at about 40 feet altitude in his rearview mirror. Suddenly the object dives toward the back of the truck. Rick speeds up to 100 mph, but the object stays right behind, wobbling, with the lights at the bottom rotating around it. At one point the object ascends a bit and disappears behind some bushes, but it returns after a few seconds and approaches the truck at high speed, following them all the way to the Ottawa suburbs, even going beneath the Anderson Road overpass, which is 15 feet high. Hill, Unconventional Flying Objects: A Scientific Analysis, Hampton Roads, 1995, pp. 102–104)

1973, Mid-November — Evening. Two sentries at a lookout post on the perimeter of Istrana Air Base, Veneto province, Italy, see two beings, about 4 feet 11 inches tall, dressed in white. Further away they see an unconventional craft. The beings run to the UFO and speed away. Marks are found at the landing site. ("Italy: Top Secret," Flying Saucer Review 20, no. 5 (March 1975): iii; Good Above, pp. 143–144)

1973, November 16 — 7:00 p.m. Two 11-year old boys are outside in Lemon Grove, California, intending to play in a vacant lot or field in the neighborhood. When they arrive, there is a dark object hovering about 18 inches above the field. It seems inactive. One of the boys cautiously approaches and raps it with his flashlight, making a sound like metal on metal. Instantly, the object's dome lights up in a brilliant red light that illuminates the entire area. It rises three or four more feet off the ground, and a row of green lights light up around its perimeter, flashing in sequence. The thing begins rotating and making a "woooo woooo woooo" sound. The object is easily visible now and appears as a domed disc. The dome is large and tall (about equal to half or more of the disc height) and glowing bright red, then flashing intermittent red. The boys are now frightened and start to run away as the object takes off toward the southwest. At the site are found three marks forming an equilateral triangle within an area of grass swirled in a counterclockwise pattern. A magnetometer at La Posta Astro-Geophysical Observatory in Campo, California, allegedly registers a perturbation at 7:20 p.m. (NICAP, "Object Hovers 18″ off Ground / Magnetometer Perturbation"; David Branch and Robert Klinn, "TV Interference, Fused Phone Lines, Cited in UFO Landing Case," Santa Ana (Calif.) Register, December 5, 1973; "Boys Encounter Landed Object," APRO Bulletin 22, no. 4 (Jan./Feb. 1974): 7–8; Donald R. 1973, November 17 — 6:00 p.m. Johann Pritz notices an oblong object emitting lights upward (similar to those he had seen on October 29) as he is driving near Ulltichschlag, Austria. He drives home to Bad Traunstein and continues watching the display to the south. He gathers several other witnesses in town, and they continue watching until the object fades out after 7:00 p.m. (Ernst Berger [Alexander G. Keul], "Luminous 'Snails' near Traunstein, Austria," Flying Saucer Review 20, no. 2 (October 1974): 16–18)

1973, November 18 — About 6:00 p.m. Four women are driving south from Tracy, Quebec, to Contrecoeur when they see a "watermelon-sized" ball of yellowish light suddenly appear above a pylon a quarter of a mile ahead of them. As they pass, it starts moving westward over the St. Lawrence River. The object seems to change shape as it flies, becoming alternately larger and smaller, dimming and growing in intensity. The light follows them as they weave in and out through wooded areas. Eventually the object is lost to sight as the women drive into Montreal. At one point they encounter a large volume of traffic that seems to be slowed by an odd pink cloud lying across the highway. They also see a small human figure standing in the middle of the road. (Chris Rutkowski and Geoff Dittman, The Canadian UFO Report, Dundurn Press, 2006, pp. 107–108)

1973, November 22 — 2:00 a.m. A woman living in an isolated area near Joliette, Quebec, notices a white object outside her kitchen window. She moves closer to the window and sees a 4-foot-tall being with huge glowing eyes.

Around its head or helmet there is a halo; its shoulders slope at a 45° angle from the head. After 15 seconds, the figure withdraws. She alerts her husband, who goes outside to investigate but only finds the dog "scared to death." The following night the cat is spooked. (Claude Macduff, "The November 1973 UFO-Invasion of Quebec," The UFO Register 7, no. 1/2 (1976): 12–15; Clark III 496; Chris Rutkowski and Geoff Dittman, The Canadian UFO Report, Dundurn Press, 2006, pp. 108–109)

1973, November 28 — A Gallup poll shows that 51% of Americans believe UFOs are "real," as opposed to 27% who think they are "imaginary." And 11% of men and 12% of women claim to have seen a UFO, extrapolating into 15 million Americans. Durant, "Evolution of Public Opinion on UFOs," IUR 18, no. 6 (Nov./Dec. 1993): 12; Eghigian, After, p. 240)

1973, November 30 — 7:00 p.m. Pilot Riccardo Marano is about to land at Caselle Airport, Turin, Italy, in a Piper Navajo, when the controller notifies him that there is a UFO about 1,320 feet above the runway. He sees a luminous, multicolored ball of light changing from violet to blue to dark red. "When I got closer and had a better view, the object at once made off, flying in a most irregular fashion, maneuvering in a way I have seen no plane do, making fantastic lateral deviations, and sudden vast jumps to and fro, as if it enjoyed playing hide-and-seek. Its speed was as high as" 540 mph, Marano says. Col. Rustichelli, commandant of the Caselle military airfield, sees the UFO on his own radar screen. "It was something solid, lit up, like a plane on my radar." Commander Tranquillo, pilot of an Alitalia Air Line DC-9 en route from Turin to Rome, calls to the control tower: "I see a shining thing giving out intermittent flashes of light, four miles from me. I dare not approach. I give way." Commander Mezzalami in another Alitalia DC-9 reports: "I was able to observe the object … notified by the control tower just as I was about to touch down. I had a good view of it.... I can offer no theories as to its significance and can only say that it was something very strange indeed." 1973, December — Kansas is quietly undergoing an epidemic of strange cattle deaths. The incidents first receive wide publicity in the December 22 Kansas City Times, which takes note of the fact that most of the deaths are Black Angus. They have died within a few miles of US 81 in a dozen counties in north-central Kansas. Many show knife marks on the carcasses, including the apparent butchering of sex organs. The lack of blood and footprints is also puzzling. Sheriffs from the affected counties meet and decide that cultists are responsible. But according to the Kansas State University Veterinarian Laboratory in Manhattan, the animals have died of bloat and coyotes have eaten the soft parts. Many ranchers reject the explanation. Mystery helicopters are also linked to the mutilations. (Richard D. Ralls, "Cattle Mutilations Baffle Kansas Farmers, Officials," Kansas City (Mo.) Times, December 22, 1973, pp. 1–2, 16; Jerome Clark, "Strange Case of the Cattle Killings," Fate 27, no. 8 (August 1974): 79–90; Roberta Donovan and Keith Wolverton, Mystery Stalks the Prairie, THAR Institute, 1976; Clark III 133; Clark IV 160)

1973, December — Donald E. Keyhoe publishes Aliens from Space, in which he continues to ignore occupant cases but finally admits that the CIA, not the Air Force, is the primary perpetrator of the UFO cover-up. (Donald E. Keyhoe, Aliens from Space: The Real Story of Unidentified Flying Objects, Doubleday, 1973; Clark III 649–650; Powell, Keyhoe, 395–396; Clark IV 725)

1973, December — The Société Varoise d'Étude des Phénomènes Spatiaux in Toulon, France, begins publishing the journal Approche in conjunction with the Société Vauclusienne d'Étude des Phénomènes Spatiaux in Vedene, France. (Approche, no. 1 (December 1973))

1973, December 3 — James Yorke and his family watch a triangular UFO with colored lights on the bottom for 15 minutes two miles north of Parrsboro, Nova Scotia. It is over Minas Basin and crossing the water very slowly. (Don Ledger, "The Flying Triangle Phenomenon," IUR 27, no. 3 (Fall 2002): 7)

1973, December 6 — 6:45 p.m. Witnesses at Fabrègues, Hérault, France, see a landed domed disc on legs with a brightly lit "blister" on top, flashing red and white lights around the rim and making a humming sound. A door opens and a ladder unfolds, causing the witnesses to flee. The craft changes to an orange glow and chases them. Later, four imprints in a 51-inch square are found, along with ladder marks. The area appears "swept" as if by a blast. (Yves Herbo, "Décembre 1973: Atterrissages avec traces à Fabrègues," Sciences Faits et Histoires, November 21, 2014)

1973, December 8 — While harvesting, farmer Kevin O'Connell finds seven sections of his oat crop flattened into circles 3 miles west of Bordertown, South Australia. They are spread over 20 acres and the largest is 14 feet in diameter. The oats are flattened counterclockwise. (Terry Wilson, "1973: Bordertown," Old Crop Circles)

1973, December 10 — 8:30 p.m. Friedrich Lennartz, an alpine rescue service man and proprietor of the Hochrieshütte in the Bavarian Alps, Germany, and Peter Zettel, a porter, are at dinner at the hut's restaurant when through the large panoramic window they see a flaring light near the cross on Mount Weitlahnerkopf to the southeast. It is lighting up the surrounding terrain. Looking through binoculars, they see that the object is egg-shaped, pointing end up. By comparison to the cross, they estimate its size as 30 feet in diameter and 40–46 feet tall. A yellow dome seems to be at the top. Four rows of colored lights (red, green, blue, white) are rotating counterclockwise around the lower portion. Lennartz signals with his flashlight but gets no response. At 8:50 p.m., he fires a red signal rocket toward the object. In moments, the object emits a red glow that conceals the rotating lights and begins rising slowly, taking 4–5 minutes to clear the mountains. The object is now dazzling red with a yellow dome. It accelerates rapidly toward the observers, traveling 3–4 miles in 10 seconds and stopping over the Klausenberg slope. Loud static drowns out the radio. As the object hovers, the lights begin pulsating like strobe lights. After 30 seconds, it moves south toward the Klausenalmhütte in Austria and hovers above a pasture. At 9:00 p.m., Lennartz hears his dogs whimpering and wanting to be let inside, apparently confused. At 11:40 p.m., Lennartz fires another red signal rocket toward the object, which immediately turns red, speeds upward and disappears in the sky. After it leaves, radio reception is clear again. (Adolf Schneider and Ernst Berger [Alexander G. Keul], "UFOs Invade the Bavarian Alps, Part 1," Flying Saucer Review 21, no. 1 (June 1975): 22–24; UFOEv II 47–48)

1973, December 13 — French journalist Claude Vorilhon experiences an alien visitation when he is telepathically induced to go to the volcano Puy de Lassolas in the Chaîne des Puys in central France. He sees a UFO descending gently from the sky. An alien emerges from it and tells him that he has come for the sole purpose of meeting with him. He states that it is his mission to pass this message on to the people of Earth and reveals that Vorilhon is in fact Raël, the final prophet sent by a race of highly advanced scientists (Elohim) from another planet. For another six days, the alien instructs him in the true meaning of the Bible and explains that humans are the product of alien genetic engineering. Raël establishes the Raëlian Movement, publishes several books, and promotes his message to the world, emigrating to Canada in 1991. Raël develops initiation rituals, meditation practices, congregational gatherings, a code of ethical behavior, tithing, missionary work, and a museum. Eventually he advocates for world peace and human cloning and calls for an end to nuclear testing. 1973, December 15 — A single crop circle is found in a wheat field at Wokurna, South Australia. The wheat has been flattened counterclockwise and there are two bare patches. (Terry Wilson, "1973: Wokurna," Old Crop Circles)

1973, December 19 — 8:30 p.m. Farmer João Rodrigues Terra and a farmhand, Djalma da Silva Faques, are driving to the Cavorä Farm, about 31 miles away from Sidrolândia, Mato Grosso do Sul, Brazil, when they see a low, white cloud, followed by a bright orange, oval object about 100 feet away with a "cap" on its top and bottom. The surface is shiny and metallic, constantly changing colors, and is directing a fan-shaped luminous beam from its top. They have some difficulty starting their pick-up truck, but then can only creep along as the UFO paces them for 10 minutes. Faques sees a small, human figure inside. The truck functions normally as the UFO speeds away, but its new battery fails on December 22 and cannot be recharged. ("Episódio No. 49: O Caso de Sidrolândia, Mato Grosso," SBEDV Special Bulletin, no. 5 (1975): 61–62)

1973, December 20 — 2:15 a.m. Michael Wagner and Robert B. Klinn of Pacific Palisades, California, see a yellow, glowing blob hovering in the south-southeast. Through a telescope, the blob is seen to be a precise arrangement of round, yellow-gold lights. It fades away after 75 minutes. (Ann Druffel, "Santa Catalina Island Recurring 'Cloud-Cigars,'" Proceedings of the 1976 CUFOS Conference, Center for UFO Studies, 1976, pp. 67–68; Ann Druffel, "Santa Catalina Channel Cloud Cigars," IUR 31, no. 1 (January 2007): 15)

1973, December 25 — 9:00 p.m. Madame Jendreaux, a farmer at Les Rivaux, Saint-Bonnet-Tronçais, Allier, France, while checking on her dogs, notices a luminous dome-like object hovering above a meadow around 300 feet away. The dome, resembling a milky-yellow bell or pear, appears semi-transparent, revealing a dark "stove pipe" structure inside, flanked by two vague dark areas. The object, about 6–9 feet in diameter, is positioned just above the ground with nearby treetops silhouetted behind it. Above the dome and slightly to the right, two horizontal yellow neon-like tubes are visible, one above the other. These tubes seem larger than the dome but appear smaller due to their greater distance. The tubes hover above the treetops but remain low enough for Jendreaux to see all three objects without tilting her head. The phenomenon remains stationary throughout her observation. ("Près de St Bonnet de Tronçais (Allier)," Lumières dans la Nuit, no. 177 (August 1978): 25–26)

1973, December 31 — G. Stuart Nixon resigns (or is fired) from the NICAP staff, leaving only John Acuff in charge. (Powell, Keyhoe, 397–398)

1974

1974 — The French government decides to systematically gather UFO reports from the gendarmerie and transmit them to the Centre National d'Études Spatiales (CNES). At the time, the gendarmerie has about 300 reports and is getting 100 new ones each year. A committee of the Institut des Hautes Études de Defense Nationale recommends the creation of a special UFO investigation agency. (Gildas Bourdais, "From GEPAN to SEPRA: Official UFO Studies in France," IUR 25, no. 4 (Winter 2000–2001): 11; Gildas Bourdais, "The Death and Rebirth of Official French UFO Studies," IUR 31, no. 2 (June 2007): 12)

1974 — Perry Petrakis founds the Association d'Étude sur les Soucoupes Volantes in Aix-en-Provence, France, and soon establishes branches in Vevey, Switzerland, and Kalmthout, Belgium. It begins publishing the AESV bulletin through June 1981. AESV continues under the name SOS-OVNI in 1990. (AESV, no. 6 (April 1978))

1974 — Contact (UK) expands to Contact International, after establishing many overseas branches in Turkey, Colombia, and elsewhere. It has an international membership of 2,000. (Story, p. 89)

1974 — John Hind establishes the Irish UFO Research Centre in Belfast, Northern Ireland. It publishes the Irish UFO News from 1976 to 1980. (Irish UFO News 1 no. 2 (July 1976))

1974 — UFO skeptic Philip J. Klass publishes UFOs Explained, taking on some difficult UFO cases but finding none worthy of attention. Ufologists take vigorous issue with his representation of cases and publish numerous refutations that are little noticed outside the UFO community. (Philip J. Klass, UFOs Explained, Random House, 1974; Clark III 659; Clark IV 735)

1974 — The UFO Subcommittee of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics is disbanded. (Story, p. 8)

1974 — Bob Gribble, a Seattle, Washington, fireman, establishes the National UFO Reporting Center, with a hotline phone number that is shared with Federal Aviation Administration offices. ("Profile," IUR 7, no. 2 (March 1982): 15–16)

1974 — John Rimmer has moved from Liverpool to London, England, in 1973, but John Harney moves there this year to work for the Kew Observatory. Merseyside UFO Bulletin continues in London, with Rimmer taking over the bulk of the editorial work. ("History of Magonia," Magonia Archive)

1974 — 12:30 a.m. Two women are driving along Hamilton Road, Quakers Hill, New South Wales, when the car suddenly shakes violently and stops. The radio will not turn on. The driver gets out of the car to get her children out of the back seat when she looks up and sees a massive disc-shaped object at an altitude no greater than the nearby power pole. It is surrounded completely by lights and has a dome in the middle on the top. The object is gun-metal gray and the size of half a football field. It silently moves over the dairy farm next to the road. Then it stops and shoots up into the air. The car starts up with no problems afterward. (Herbert S. Taylor, "An Update on Vehicle Interference Reports, Part Two," IUR 34, no. 1 (Sept. 2011): 20)

1974, January — Don Berliner of the Fund for UFO Research does an exhaustive review of the then unreleased Project Blue Book files at Maxwell AFB, Alabama, which include many witness names that are later redacted for public release. (Sparks, p. 6)
